FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

West Forsyth.—There were larger congregations than usual at Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches last Sunday, and good interest was shown in the services. We observed the ordinance of the Lord's Supper at each service, with the usual number participating.

The pastor was accompanied by his family to the communities of Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches last Saturday and Sunday. Saturday night was enjoyed in the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Long, of Baltimore church. We enjoyed visiting in a number of other homes and having dinner in the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Phillips, also of Baltimore church.

We secured three new subscriptions and one subscription renewal was for Rev. J. W. Doub, and the new subscriptions were from F. L. Wooten, L. W. Hutchins and T. L. Long. We are glad to welcome these new subscribers to the Herald for West Forsyth charge.

Mrs. Jessie Cornelius, (formerly Miss Jessie North), has returned from the Baptist hospital at Winston-Salem, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis. She was at the service at Baltimore church Sunday morning and in her pace in the choir.

Our appointment for next Sunday will be at Union Hill church at 11 a. m. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper will be observed.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Siler City Church.—The first Sunday morning, we were favored with a most interesting program by the Baraca class for the Sunday school devotionals. This class has for its members our very best young men, and Mr. L. L. Wrenn, of one of Siler City's best citizens and a most sincere and consecrated Christian is their very efficient teacher. Now, is there any wonder the devotionals were uplifting? "The Cross" was their subject. "Jesus Keep Me Near the Cross" was sung by the entire audience, then prayer by Mr. Wrenn. A solo, "The Old Rugged Cross," by Mr. Evans Stone, was sung very impressively, and a quartette, "Sometime, Somewhere," sung by Messrs. Diff Cooper, Irvin Ellington, B. E. Fox and Roland Brady, was perfectly beautiful and enjoyed immensely by every one present. The daily readings of the Sunday school lesson were read by different members of the claoss. The third Sunday Mrs. L. L. Woody's class will have charge.

The pulpit was filled by our pastor at the 11 o'clock hour. He read the first 11 verses of the tenth chapter of John, using as his text the latter part of the tenth verse: "I am come that they might have life and have it more abundantly." Theme, "The Bread of Life." This was one of the very best sermons we have heard our pastor preach. At the close of the sermon the Lord's Supper was administered to a large part of the congregation. Our attendance was gratifying at both Sunday school and church services.

The C. E.'s filled the hour at the mid-week prayer service the past Wednesday night with a splendid program. "Faith" was the topic and some very interesting talks were made. A paper written by Charles Stone, 11 years old, deserves honorable mention. It was perfectly grand and would behoove lots of us older people to do half so well as Charles did. The leader, Miss Sallie Smith, asked several questions on faith and these were answered by different ones. Songs suitable for the occasion were sung, and Miss Verda Shaw Fox sang a lovely solo.

Mr. D. G. Fox, one of our young boys, is one of the graduating class this year and will receive his diploma Wednesday night, May 10. We congratulate him. He is also president of the C. E. society.

Enfield.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Methodist Protestant church met in the home of Mrs. J. A. Vice, April 24, at 3:30 o'clock, Mrs. Vick, Mrs. Walter Moon and Miss Aline Locke being joint hostesses. Eighteen members and four visitors were present. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Eli Bellamy. Mrs. Sam Pierson conducted the devotionals. An interesting paper on our schools in India was read by Mrs. Jimmie Rives after which Mrs. E. O. Peeler conducted the Question Box.

The regular business was then taken up. The visiting committee reported 55 visits made, 18 trays, 14 cards and 34 bouquets sent to the sick. We were delighted tohaveMrs. Lucy Rives back with us after a long absence. Committees brought to the attention of the group the following projects: Screening the parsonage, serving a turkey dinner Friday night, April 28th, organizing a Home Circle, selling desserts and collecting coupons from Octagon soap to be sent to the Children's Home at High Point. Hostesses for May will be Misses Mary and Susie Whitaker. The meeting was then adjourned, and a delicious dessert was served by Mrs. Collins Cuthrell and Miss Mary Ellen Vick.

Mrs. P. S. Bellamy, Mrs. Exum Bellamy and Mrs. G. H. Leggett visited Miss Ruth Bellamy at High Point College Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. They attended the play presented by the senior class, which was coached by Miss Bellamy. REPORTER.

First Church, Burlington.—Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Paschall wish to announce the birth of a daughter, Emma Elizabeth, born Thursday, March 4, at Miss Annie Williams'.

The regular services were held Sunday.

Dr. Paschall, pastor, has set aside the month of May in which to emphasize "The Place and Importance of the Home," with the intentions of making the family relationships sweeter and to strengthen the family ties.

Dr. Paschall delivered a most wonderful sermon Sunday morning.

On entering the church, every one was given a small pamphlet entitled, "The Filled Pew." In this pamphlet there were four scenes, under each scene were articles such as follows:

Scene One—The Filled Pew: (a) Father there, (b) Mother there, (c) Children are there, (d) Minister happy, (e) Friendly contacts.

Scene Two—Filled Hearts: (a) Thankfulness to God, (b) Inspiring Ideals, (c) Joy of the Hearthside.

Scene Three—A Filled Life: (a) Influence over children—the best. (b) Others inspired by example. (c) Laying up treasure day by day in character, intellect and spiritual vision.

Scene Four—A Filled Heaven: (a) Will the family circle be unbroken? (b) A crown of life. (c) Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy reward.

Dr. Paschall most wonderfully explained and emphasized these four scenes. He also emphasizde the fact "That we, as American people, are losing too much by living so fast that the home life was being neglected."

After the sermon, the Ladies' quartette, composed of Mrs. Flay Rogers, Miss Lula Riddle, Mrs. Herbert Wade, and Miss Elizabeth Rogers beautifully sang "Will the Circle Be Unbroken?"

The out-of-town visitors present were: Dr. and Mrs. E. I. Knott, Graham.

For the evening worship Dr. Paschall used as his subject "The Girl I Marry," using as the Scripture lesson a part of the 31 chapter of Proverbs. He announced that during the past week he had asked the following questions of a number of young men. "If you were going to marry, what qualifications would you desire your wife to have?"

It was very interesting and helpful to hear him relate the answers which were given him. In every case the young man emphasized "that above all, he wanted to marry a religious girl with a good character." Also, "a girl who was interested in home."

The main auditorium was practically filled for the service, with an unusually large number of young people present.

Next Sunday at the same hour, Dr. Paschall will use as his subject "The Boy I Marry." As many, if not more young people are expected to attend this service.

First Church, High Point.—Last Saturday was a red letter day at High Point College; the Nikanthan and Thalean Literary societies celebrated their fifth annual society day with an all-day program. In the morning Rev. Kenneth Lyons, a graduate of the College and at present a student in Westminster Theological Seminary delivered an address. The annual society debate was held on the question, "Resolved, that the N. C. General Assembly should enact further legislation regulating truck transportation." Jasper Jones of High Point and Joe Coble of Greensboro won over Ralph Jacks and Forrest Wagoner. A May Day fete was held at 5 o'clock in front of Woman's Hall, and Miss Elizabeth Gurley of High Point was crowned May Queen. The festival, May-pole dance, etc., was under the direction of Miss Mildred Russell. Queen Elizabeth was represented by Miss Unity Nash, and Masters Stanwood Kennett and Clarence Ilderton were her pages. Little Misses Nell Marie Humphreys and Gloria Ilderton were buglers, and Garnet Hinshaw carried the May Queen's crown on a pillow. The festivities of the day were brought to a close with the society banquet in the dining hall, which was decorated to represent an old-fashioned flower garden. Lester Furr acted as toastmaster, and Miss Elizabeth Gurley, as toastmistress. The following awards were made; Best Thalean Debater, Joe Coble, of Greensboro; Thalean Efficiency prize, Ralph Jacks; Most Improved Freshman, Edwin Sharpe. Special music was furnished by Miss Dorothy Hoskins and Prof. J. H. Mourane, who sang several selections.

The dates for High Point College commencement are May 27-29. On Saturday, May 27, Class Day exercises will be held on the campus; on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock the Baccalaureate sermon will be delivered in First Church by President G. I. Humphreys; on Monday morning, May 29, diplomas will be presented to the 40 graduates and degrees conferred. The address will be presented by Dr. W. P. Few, President of Duke university.

Arnold J. Koonce, chairman of arrangements for the N.C.C.E. Convention, which will be held June 12-15 at High Point College, announced that plans are about complete for this event. The convention is forunate to secure for its principal speaker on the last day, June 15, the President of International Christian Endeavor, Dr. Daniel A. Poling of New York.

On Sunday morning at the worship hour the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, delivered a helpful and inspiring message on "Jesus Winning Childhood and Youth," a continuation of the Easter to Pentecost series. He said in part: "In speaking of Christ's peaceable Kingdom Isaiah said, 'And a little child shall lead them'. After He came to earth, He said 'Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not; for of such is the Kingdom of God." In selecting his disciples He chose young men. It is sometimes a good thing to see ourselves through the eyes of others. A few years ago when the Japanese government sent officials to our shores to study American ideals and institutions, they were amazed at two features of our civilization: First, the joy and pleasure manifested by our service in the Christian faith, and second, the interest shown in children and youth in our homes, schools, and churches. Unless children and young people are reared and trained in the priciples of Christian living, they will seldom become good church workers. Moody said that it was the devil's masterpiece when any one assumes that children do not understand religion. The State says it is not its business to instruct children in religious education; the church spends on an average of two cents each for religious instruction, ad the home in general does not give the children adequate religious education. It is nonsense to say that young people are driven away from the church by too strict parents who insist on regular attendance upon its services; it is some adult sin that turns them away from God. It is a mistaken idea for parents to say, "As for me, I will serve the Lord, but my children may decide for themselves when old enough whom they will serve, but rather parents should insist on this rule, 'As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord,' and create around our children a spiritual atmosphere that is elevating. When they are old, they will remember the early years of training by Christian fathers and mothers." The choir sang the lovely anthem, "Holy, Holy, Holy," the solo parts being sung by Mrs. J. H. Allred.

The YoungPeople's C. E. society met Sunday evening at 7:15 o'clock, and the topic was discussed by Miss Edith Vance. Mis Esther Pritchard was leader for the Senior C. E. meeting on Monday evening.

The Wednesday evening prayer meeting will be held as usual. It is being sponsored by the Woman's Auxiliary, and the "Pictures of the Old Testament made new." On Wednesday evening he will speak on the Book of Job.

On Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock 70 members of the Woman's Auxiliary assembled at the beautiful home of Mrs. R. W. Riggins, 1117 Greenway Drive, for the monthly meet, ing which was called to order by the President, Mrs. J. C. Whitesell. Associate hostesses were Mesdames R. H. Shaw, Arnold J. Koonce, H. G. Ferree, R. R. Blackburn and Thoma D. Free. Miss Alene Vance played as a violin solo, "Traumerei," with Mrs. Ralph Vance accompanist at the piano. Miss Myrtle Davis conducted a beautiful devotional service on "The Humility of Jesus." the old-time favorite hymn, "I Need Thee Every Hour," was sung. Miss Irene Reynolds read an inspiring sketch of Dr. Schweitzer, missionary to darkest Africa, and Miss Helen Johnston read a graphic description of Miss Martha Berry of Rome, Ga., whose life has touched for good 7,000 boys and girls in the mountains of Georgia. The Berry school which she founded from the estate inherited from her father, has provided training for these forgotten young people and brought light and education into their darkened lives. A quartette, "Steal Away," was then sung by a group from the College, Misses Vera Smith, Grace Koontz, W. C. Ferree, Jr. and Lester Furr, accompanied at the piano by Miss Malinda Connally.

The Executive committee has suggested some changes, and these were fatified by vote of the Auxiliary; as to meetings, the first Monday of each month is left open for Executive committee meeting; on the second Monday the circles will meet, and the General Auxiliary will convene on the third Monday.

It was voted to dispense with refreshments at Auixiliary meetings, but associate hostesses will contribute a quarter each for some surprise. The treasurer, Mrs. Marlette, made a good report, after sending check for $50.00 to Mr. J. B. Spencer, chairman building fund, there is a balance of $99.00. Mrs. R. M. Andrews, secretary Temperance in N. C. Branch, announced that a prize of $5.00 is offered by Mrs. C. W. Whitaker for the best essay on "Why the Eighteenth Amendment Should Not Be Repealed"; all essays must be submitted by June 15. Mrs. S. S. Coe, chairman chicken pie supper, announced that proceeds therefrom amount to $50.00. At the conclusion of business, the hostesses served delicious punch and cakes in the dining room.

Mrs. Riggins and her group enjoyed the distinction of entertaining the largest number and one of the most delightful meetings in the history of the Auxiliary.

A "Tacky Party" will be given by Circle No. 4 of the Woman's Auxiliary on Friday evening, May 12, in the assembly room. They cordially invite all their friends to come in costume and enjoy some hearty laughs and refreshments, all for a dime.

Misses Lucille Pickens of the City Library, and Louise Jennings of High Point Colilege Library will go to Greensboro Wednesday to attend the bi-ennial meeting of the N. C. Library association, which will hold a two-day session at Woman's College. One of the principal problems to be considered will be maintaining service and standards during the time of depression. Mrs. Henry A. White appears on the program.

Mrs. C. C. Robbins was hostess to the Alexander Martin chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, at her handsome home on south of the city on Tuesday afternoon, May 9 at 3:30 o'clock. Associate hostesses were Mesdames C. B. Mattocks, W. D. Simmons, Jr., E. J. Payne, H. A. Millis, F. M. Holley. Mrs. R. T. Pickens, Sr., was re-elected Registrar, having held this office since the organization in October, 1916.

Mrs. J. C. Whitesell and little daughter, Anne, spent last week in Ramseur with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Moffitt

We are much gratified to announce that good news comes from Mrs. R. I. Farmer at Tucson, Arizona, and she is improving.

Jamestown.—The Jamestown Sunday school convention was held April 30 at Mitchell's Grove church, Guilford Charge. It was a day well-spent for those who attended the convention. It was the best attended convenion that has been held in years, I am told. More than 200 attended the convention during the day. Most of the pastors of the township were present, also the teachers and officers from all nine of the churches in the township. Dinner was served on the grounds, picnic style, and enjoyed by all.

Services began at 11 o'clock. The worship service by the pastor or writer. A talk was also made on "Some Helps and Hindrances in the Church School," by the writer. This was followed by a talk on "Some Duties of the Superintendent," by Rev. Mr. Wagner of High Point College. A short business session was held just before the noon hour. The afternoon session opened at 2 o'clock. Worship service conducted by Mr. R. E. Bundy superintendent of Jamestown Sunday school. This worship service was a model for rural Sunday schools. (Our Sunday school ought to devote more attention to the worship part of the school.) We were glad to have Rev. D. W. Allen of the Episcopal church of High Point talk on "Worship in the Rural or Small School." Mrs. Fred P. Ingram of High Point gave an interesting talk on "Teaching Religion to the Child." This was followed by a splendid discourse on "Young People and Their Need," by Rev. Mr. Roy I. Farmer of the First M. P. Church of High Point. The program was closed by a few remarks from the Guilford County Sunday School convention chairman.

Plans are being laid for a county-wide convention to be held in August. Just as soon as the plans are completed announcements will be made through the paper. It is hoped that a reresentative from every school, and every denomination will be present at the convention in August. Look for the announcemet.

Winston-Salem.—Our people were greatly delighted with the Branch meeting and it was a benediction to the community. I have been host to two regular sesions of the Annual Conference, one extra session of Conference and three sessions of the Branch meeting but I am safe in saying that the one recently held here was the most delightful of them all.

Our revival has been held and people are still thinking and talking about the good sermons Brother Surratt preached. He is a delightful man to be with and we enjoyed him in the home as well as at the church. There were a few professions in the meeting and four boys joined the church. They are Billie Hooper, Zeno Groce, and Lindsay and Ernest Tise.

Our fifth Sunday District Rally was held at Pinacle and it was a good one. I have not been able to get away from the thought of how preacher's children contributed to the success of the rally. Mrs. H. C. Nicholson who made such a splendid address is the daughter of Rev. W. D. Fogleman. Mr. B. K. Millaway who so charmed his audience with an address on the Sunday school superintendent is a son of the Rev. G. F. Millaway. Two of the four persons in a quartette, Rev. R. A. Hunter and Mrs. Meyer Hunter are children of Rev. A. L. Hunter, so it really looks like the old saying is not true that preacher's children are worse than other children.

Each morning last week the writer was on the air in a series of devotional services. In addition to a large number of people here in the city who spoke complimentarily of the effort, communications have come in from this county, from Hickory, Lexington, Thomasville, Ashboro and High Point. Having been on the air fifteen times in the past two years, I know that a man has a great audience. There are wonderful possibilites for the radio. When a man faces the microphone he can imagine he can see ten thousad faces turned toward him, made up of all walks of life. But there is one comforting thought that his audience will soon all be in sympathy with his message as the average person does not listen long to anything he does not want to hear. It is easier to turn off the radio than to get up and walk out of a church.

Mothers' Day will be appropriately observed both in the Sunday school and church services next Sunday.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Moriah.—Our Sunday school is improving; we had 111 present last Sunday with a good offering.

Many from here attended the missionary program at Shiloh church on the fifth Sunday.

We are very glad to have Brother E. P. Sharpe out with us again. He is improving nicely and is able to walk with the aid of crutches.

Our pastor was back with us last Sunday after visiting his mother in Virginia.

A program is being planned for Sunday school and church. Our pastor will preach a sermon to the Mothers.

The May meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary met with Mrs. Dote Gladstone on last Wednesday afternoon. A very interesting program was heard with a good attendance.

May the Lord bless the Herald and all its readers. MRS. GEORGE L. GLENN, Reporter.

Cleveland Charge.—Our second quarterly conference was held at Kistler's Church on Saturday, April 22. The sermon was preached by Rev. A. D. Shelton pastor of Fallston charge, and a splendid dinner was served by ladies of the church.

In the afternoon the business of the quarterly conference was transacted in the usual way. A splendid attendance with all the churches on the charge represented.

The reports were not very encouraging, but we are thankful for all that has been accomulished during the conference year. Brothers T. B. Richard, from Lawndale, and A. E. Ledford, from Moriah, were nominated for delegates to the next Annual Conference. The conference also voted to have the parsonage painted on the outside.

Oak Grove Sunday school gave an Easter program on Easter Sunday night. It was one of the best that we have seen. The children did excellently and we are grateful to those who gave their time and labor in making this service possible.

A steward's area meeting for Cleveland, Connelly Springs, and Fallston charges will be held at Hebron church, near Toluca, on the third Sunday in May, at 3:00 p. m., and it is earnestly hoped that we have allchurches in this area represented by at least one steward. We are planning to have some leading laymen to address the meeting.

This week our high schools are turning out large numbers of graduates. Among this group we have our share of fine Methodist Protestant boys and girls from this charge. I hope some of these graduates who have an ambition to go to college will take advantage of the splendid offer to country boys and girls made by High Point College in accepting farm products as part payment for board and tuition. This is a fine idea and it gives the country boy and girl advantages that they would not have otherwise.

C. E. RIDGE, Pastor.

South Winston.—We are glad to report that Sunday school continues to grow. The attendance was splendid last Sunday. We had several new members and also visitors. We are always glad to have visitors, and we want them to feel welcome at all times.

Our pastor, Rev. Atlas Ridge, brought the morning service Sunday. At the night service we were delighted to have with us, Rev C. B. Way and family. Mr. Way delivered a splendid sermon to an attentive congregation. We expect to have the privilege of having him back with us soon.

On Tuesday night, "The Loyal Sons and Daughters Class" are asked to meet at the home of Edward Littleton.

Wednesday night there will be choir practice at the church.

There will be a Mothers' Day service Sunday night at 7:30. Our pastor will be with us at this time. With best wishes.

MABEL BOWERS, Reporter.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Charge.—Sunday evening, Rev. P. E. Bingham, spoke on "The Church." Brother Bingham delivered some splendid messages. We also had a beautiful duet by Mrs. Irvin Hawkins and Miss Evelyn Hawkins was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Baldy Green.

Our Sunday school is moving on as well as usual under our good superintendent, Mr. Edward Hawkins. The fifth Sunday morning Miss Mary Virginia Hawkins, one of the Intermediate pupils, gave a splendid talk on "Making the Right Choice."

June 4 there will be a steward's area meeting at Union Church of Halifax Charge at 2:30 o'clock.

Easter Monday evening the C. E. society was entertained in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Baldy Green.

Don't forget the Loyalty League meeting Friday, May 26th at, Littleton church at 4:30, by L. W. Gerringer.

We extend our most hearty appreciation for the invitation to Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon's Silver Anniversary, June 8, at the Children's Home, High Point.

Mrs. Buck Norris, Mrs. Hattie Woodruff and Mrs. B. S. Hawkins, were the guest of Mrs. Captain Hawkins, Monday.

Sorry to note Mr. Clarence Hawkins is ill.

Remember Sunday is called Mothers' Day it ought to be very happy day to those whose mothers are living to surprise her with a little present or tell her in three words, "I Love You." MRS. CLAUDE HAWKINS, Reporter.

Young Men's Wide Awake Class, Shiloh.—The Y.M.W.A. class of Shiloh had a large attendance Sunday, May 6. We have 71 on roll and had 51 present Sunday.

The business of the class was attended to and the class was turned over to Mr. Evans. He said that no one should try to get an honorable place just for the honor they get out of it, but that a person should try to get an honorable position or any other kind for the good he can do. Too many of the officials of the government today are trying to get the office just for the honor and fame that is in it. They are like James and John.

The next third Sunday being Home Coming at Shiloh the Y.M.W.A. class is trying to have 100 present in our class. Every one who possibly can come and help us out; and if you are not attending somewhere else we would be very glad to have you join with us.

FRANK SHOAF, Class Reporter.

Shiloh.—As has been the custom for several years, Shiloh will observe Memorial and Home Coming Day on the third Sunday in May. We earnestly hope that all the sons the daughters and friends of our beloved church will turn their steps homeward on that day. Your mother church always holds in her heart for you the most sincere and cordial welcome. Sunday school begins at 9:45. At the church hour at 11:00 a. m. our pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler, will preach, after which there will be amemorial service in the cemetery and every grave will be adorned with a bunch of flowers. After lunch on the grounds, the Home Coming service will be held in the church. The Home Coming address will be delivered by Rev. E. C. Roach, pastor of Reeds Baptist church. We are looking for YOU to be there.

The Workers' Council met at the church on Monday night. All departments are working faithfully to carry out their part in the work of the work of the Kingdom. Will report more fully later.

MRS. W. L. SHOAF, Reporter.

Kannapolis.—Our spring revival meeting closed on Tuesday night, April 25. We are very grateful to Rev. J. D. Morris of Fallston, father of our pastor, for his splendid deliverance of some very beautiful and inspiring sermons during this meeting and we feel that it has meant lots to our community for it seems the majority of our membership has been revived and we are very happy to state that there were 15 conversions and our earnest prayers are that these and others might travel the correct road so that at the end of his life they will meet Jesus face to face with all records clear.

In the absence of our pastor on Sunday, April 30, Mr. R. T. Sides, a local preacher of our church, was in charge of the 11 o'clock service which was enjoyed very much and at the evening worship Mr. F. P. Fesperman, secretary of the Y.M.C.A., delivered a very fine talk.

On Monday night, May 1, the Ladies' Aid held its regular general meeting with 25 present, after all business was transacted a very enjoyable social hour consisting of several musical selections and contests which proved a hearty laugh, especially a vocal duet by Mrs. Clyde Fagen and Mrs. Rogers. With Mrs. L. C. Carter, accompanist. Also beautiful vocal solos rendered by Mrs. W. T. Kiser Miss Alta Russell and Mrs. C. B. McConnors, respectively.

As Mothers' Day is fast approaching let us stop in this hurry of life and bow our heads in memory of those who have passed on and then don't forget to raise your head and smile and speak an encouraging word to all those who are with us today.

Several selections of music are being arranged for Mothers' Day, but the program is not finished at this writing.

Our pastor delivered a splendid sermon on Sunday morning taking his lessons from St. Mark and mostly delivered to the young converts.

I am sorry I do not have a correct report of the Senior and Intermediate C. E. society's April monthly business meeting.

I failed to state in the general meeting of the Ladies' Aid that Circle No. 1 enrolled five new members: Mrs. Carrie Braswell, Mrs. Pearl Braswell, Mrs Emma Rogers, Mrs. Emma Wililams.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—S. S. attendance yesterday was 229. Children's Home Day—next Sunday. It is urged that you remember this in planning for the Sunday school collection on Mothers' Day. How fitting to remember orphans in a very substantial way on Mothers' Day—Mothers! Motherless!

Our pastor, Dr. S. W. Taylor, was in the pulpit both services yesterday yesterday expounding the Scriptures in a most edifying manner. These vital messages are attracting large congregations, and we feel sure many persons are blessed in attending church. The absent ones are missing much. At the 11 o'clock service his subject was Paul's words found in his parting message to Timothy, "I know whom I have believed." The text for the evening service was Christ's word, "I am the way."

Intermediate C. E. met at 6:45 last evening with Miss Erma Cockman, leader. The topic discussed was "How Can We Improve Our Christian Endeavor?" Interesting talks were made by Misses Lois Yokeley., Mildred Hutchens and Hazel Woodleaf. Two of the girls rendered a pretty vocal duet and John W. Thacker played "The Sweetest Story Ever Told," on the violin.

"Right and Wrong Ambitions," was the topic for Senior C. E. with Miss Frances Cole, leader. Miss Halcie Welch made an interesting talk which was followed by open discussions. A visitor, Mr. Auvert Smith, was present, he spoke of the registration for the C. E. convention which is slated for High Point College, June 12th to 15th inclusive. Miss Lake Montgomery was apointed registrar.

Our third quarterly conference will be held in the church on Wednesday evening after the second Sunday. Nominees for delegate to Annual Conference are Messrs. J. A. Jones and C. A. King.

Automobile service is organized for next Sunday, Mothers' Day with Mr. John Wimberley in charge. This is being done in order that all persons, especially elderly people, who wish to attend services and do not have a way to ride may be taken by the volunteer cars. Any person desiring to ride please notify Mr. Wimberley (telephone 8333) sometime this week. Flowers both white and red will be given at the door to those needing them, by the Ladies' Aid society.

The C. E. societies will have charge of the evening service at 8 o'clock. A program featuring Mothers' Day is being prpared.

Since our last report, two good Christians have passed from among us into the Great Beyond. Mr. Alfred Pierce and "Grandma" King, mother of Mr. C. A. King. Two good soldiers have fallen from the battlefield of life. We shall miss them. We feel the loss.

Obituaries will follow later, written by our pastor.

High Point is having a full and interesting program in observance of Music Week. Some of our boys and girls are on this program. In the high school orchestra which presents a program on Tuesday at 8 o'clock p. m., will appear Misses Lillian Weisner and Iris Welch, John W. and J. Allen Thacker, in the Junior orchestra appearing on Thursday at 8 o'clock p. m. in the Junior high school auditorium, are Eleanoir Welch and Iris Thacker.

On Sunday, May 14, Iris Welch, flutist, will assist Hubert Liverman, pianist, in a recital in the high school auditorium at 3 o'clock p. m.

Anticch, Mecklenburg Charge.—I suppose the readers of the Herald think our church has been discarded. But I am very glad to say we are still striving to carry on the good work.

Our pastor, Rev. M. C. Henderson, has filled all appointments with real good sermons. Our attendance at church is fine, which goes to show we are well-pleased with him. Our Sunday school is holding its own with much interest being manifested. The average attendance is around fifty.

We have a large crowd of young people in our church and a Bible class is to be organized by them real soon.

I hope our reporter will soon be on her job.

MRS. MAE MATTHEWS.

Lexington, Mt. Carmel.—The regular church service was held at our church on Sunday morning, May 7, by our pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley. His subject being "The Way to Heaven." If we line up to Brother Isley's wonderful sermons much and lasting good will be accomplished in our church this year.

Since our last report death has taken from us one of our oldest and most devoted members, Mr. J. G. Trantham, who after a long illness passed away March 23. He was laid to rest the following day at Shiloh M. P. church beside his wife who passed on to the great beyond about 40 years ago.

Funeral services were conducted by his pastor Rev. C. G. Isley, assisted by Dr. J. C. Leonard, pastor of First Reform church and Rev. A. Odel Leonard, pastor of Second Reformer church, Lexington.

He is survived by two sons: Mr. John H. Trantham of the home and Mr. Arthur M. Trantham of Leaksville, N. C., and one daughter, Mrs. R. M. Fritts of Lexington, Route 5, and one brother, Mr. C. Trantham of Reidsville, N. C.

Our community was again saddened by the death of Mr. John L. Helmsteller on April 12. He had been a patient at a High Point hospital for two weeks before death came. Funeral services were conducted on April 14, at Mt. Carmel M. P. church by the pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley and Rev. C. R. Pless of Monroe, N. C. He was laid to rest beside his wife, who preceded him to the grave six years ago. The beautiful floral tribute attested to the esteem that was held for Mr. Helmsteller.

He is survived by one son Mr. Loyd Helmsteller and three daughters, Mrs. Lena Helmsteller Welborn and Misses Leona and Erma Helmsteller of the home.

We are very sorry that our pastor had the misfortune to break his right arm while trying to start his car on April 29.

Our Sunday school continues to grow, we had 119 present Sunday. The young men and girls classes have on a contest that is proving very successful. It seems the boys are going to win and the girls will have to do the entertaining.

Draper.—We are still working and things are moving along very well. Since our Annual Conference we have received 32 professions of faith. We held our revival last month; it began April 9, and closed April 21.

Brother H. W. Bell did the preaching and he sure did some fine preaching. I don't believe that I ever heard any better.

It was our happy privilege to see one old gentleman saved. He was 76 years of age.

Our Sunday school is doing fine, Brother W. T. Howell is our superintendent, and a good one.

Three years ago our Sunday school enrollment was only 49; now it is near 150.

We held our second quarterly conference recently. Brother N. H. Stewart and Brother W. M. Keaton were named as deelgates to the Annual Conference. Both are able men and I feel sure that either one will do his part.

We are trying to get Herald subscriptions, and I think we will get some yet, for I shall continue to work.

We are still having our Cottage prayer service each Saturday night. It is interdenominational and we have had nearly 100 to attend these services. We also have a union service each fifth Sunday evening with the Missionary Baptist, the M. E. Church and ours.

We have had the co-operation of most all the church since we have been here and I certainly do appreciate it. When you pray remember us.

R. L. VICKERY, Pastor.

Mt. Pleasant Charge.—The work at the various churches on this charge is, I suppose, going normally, but I confess that I do not know what is normal for church work.

The special days are being observed with appropriate programs, but with declining offerings. A unique feature of the Easter program of the Mt. Pleasant church was a pageant written in verse by a young lady of the church. It was said by some to have been the best pageant this church has had for some time.

If a banner were offered for the Sunday school having the largest percentage of attendance based on the church membership, it would easily go to Liberty Grove. I have for a long time thought that the aim of any church should be an average attendance in Sunday school equal to the total membership of the church. At Liberty Grove it is almost twice that! Can this be duplicated in the Conference? But be it confessed it is not, with few exceptions, the members of the church that are doing this. Half of the officers and half the teachers are borrowed, as also about nine-tenths of the pupils. But the fact remains that this old shrine, dating back into seventeen hundred, more than once abandoned, and as often re-opened, is serving a real religious good in this community.

Pleasant Union church will observe Memorial Day the fourth Sunday in May. Mt. Pleasant, the first Sunday in June and Liberty Grove the afternoon of the same date, commencing at 2 o'clock.

T. M. JOHNSON.

Baltimore Church.—Rev. C. B. Way filled his appointment today at Baltimore church. The Sunday school and services were well attended. The Sunday school enrollment is 137; the attendance was 128, there were 14 visitors. There was an estimated church atttendance of two hundred and fifty.

The program was as follows: Song—"Sweet Hour of Prayer." Prayer—by the pastor. Reading—1-5 verse of the sixth chapter of Matthew. Hymn—"Wonderful Saviour." Announcements: Ladies' Auxiilary will meet with Mrs. E. C. Wilhelm the third Saturday in May. Campaign for subscriptions to the Methodist Protestant Herald. Ofering. Text—first verse of the 122nd Psalm: "I was glad when they soid let us go into the house of the Lord." Sacrament., hymn, benediction.

First Church, Charlotte.—The Young People's class of which Mrs. J. H. Moleace is teacher will have its monthly business meeting and social at the home of Miss Rachel Tadlock, Monday eveinng at 8 o'clock.

The Intermediate class, Miss Marie Walter teacher, had a delightful meeting at the home of Marquerite Helms on Nassau Boulevard, Friday eevning. A pleasant evening of games, was enjoyed after which delicious refreshments were served.

The afternoon circle of the auxiliary will meet with Mrs. G. W. Stegall at her home on Kentucky Ave., Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mrs. C. H. Daughtry, the president, will preside.

The first Sunday in June our Children's Day program will be put on. The program is in charge of Mrs. A. L. Haigles, Mrs. G. W. Stegall, Mrs. Rooinson and Miss Mildred Younginer. One very pleasing feature will be the special music.

Mothers' Day will be observed in our church with a special program. The committee will be composed of Mesdames McCall, Stegall, Daughtry and Ledbetter. Flowers will be provided for every person attending and a special effort will be made to have a record breaking attendance.

Thursday afternoon, May 18, at 3 o'cloen, Mrs. A. A. Ledbetter, wife of our superintendent, is entertaining at the Darling Shop with a jig-saw puzzle party. Refreshments will be served and prizes will be received. This money will be used to pay for the yokes used by the choir. Will those invited please keep this date in mind and not make anyother engagement for that date.

Mr. R. S. Garmon made this special request at Sunday school this morning: If any one knows of sickness or trouble in the homes of any of our members, please report it to the pastor, Rev. G. H. Hendry, he will let others know and in this way we will all do a great service. If our members would only remember that we are a big family, of brothers and sisters living here and there and how do we know that we are wanted if they do not let us know.

Rev. G. H. Hendry, our pastor, preached a most earnest and helpful sermon on "How to meet and bear our burdens." There are visible burdens, where we can express our sympathy. Invisible burdens we must each bear with God's help. We are to bear our own burdens, bear one another's burdens and cast our burdens upon the Lord. A large congregation appreciated this wonedrful message.

At our evening service, Dr. Pressley, of Charlotte, will be the speaker in the interest of Prohibition, representing the people. He is a well informed speaker. Young Mr. Fortune, also of Charlotte, a graduate of Central high school, who last year won a medal given by the W.C.T.U. for the best paper on Temperance, will also speak representing the church. Special music will be furnished by Mr. Will McKurion, soloist, who will sing "Arise, I Have Redeemed Thee." Mr. McAlpin will be the accompanist.

The Willing Workers' circle No. 2 of the auxiliary will meet Thursday evening at 8:00 o'clock with Mrs. J. C. Penry at her home on Oak Park Road. A full attendance is requested.

The Senior C. E. is putting on a contest—the captains are: Sigsby Tadlock and Marquerite Dellinger. At the end of the contest the winning side will entertain the losing side with a picnic party.

The third Sunday in this month several of our members will, after Sunday school, go to Stallings church for an area meeting. A picnic will be enjoyed.

Rev Hendry, our pastor, will have the "Morning Watch," (7:30) service over radio station WBT, Charlotte. Tune in and join in the worship of 15 minutes. Special music.

Calvary.—Although Dr. Bates gave you a splendid report of our Anniversary Day with seemingly nothing left to be said, I must add a word since he has asked for my impression of the occasion.

To me it was a wonderful day of worship and fellowship. The message that Dr. Andrews brought to us that morning was one to be long remembered. It is always delightful to have such a dear friend with us and one who was once pastor to a goodly portion of our membership. Dr. Bates has already informed you of the nature of the morning service but I will add that it did make the occasion more wonderful to realize that not one member had passed away since last Roll Call. We at Calvary have so many things to be thankful for and while we were receiving congratulations on every hand we took time to reflect on the past year with all of its blessings as well as signs of depression. Dr. Humphreys brought greetings from other M. P. churches and a plendid address at the afternoon service. The choir rendered two anthems appropriate to the occasion, "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord," at the morning service and "Praise Ye the Lord," in the afternoon. Mrs. Robah H. Fields, contralto, very beautifully sang "Thanks be to God," at the afternoon service. We were glad to have so many friends and visitors from High Point and our Greensboro churches join us in our celebration and wish to thank them heartily for their interest, wishes and every kind word in helping us on to aother happy anniversary.

At 4 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon of this week, Mrs. David Glass, Spiritual Life secretary, is calling a meeting of prayer at the T. F. McCulloch home for the members and friends of our church who are sick. Some of those to be remembered at this time are: Miss Jo Causey, Mrs. John Dixon, Mr. David Glass, Mrs. Ingram, Mrs. Ethel Taggert and Mrs. C. R. Faucette. We wish to ask the readers of the Herald to join us in prayer for these people and to remember Rev. and Mrs. Lowdermilk and Kemp Causey in the care of their sister, Miss Jo, wo has been critically ill for several weeks and confined to her bed since last summer.

Quite a number of our people were present last Tuesday night to hear Miss Elizabeth Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Wililams, give her Junior piano recital at Greensboro College. She performed with utmost ease and grace some very difficult numbers. It was a treat to all who heard Miss Elizabeth play.

The Circles of the Missionary Auxiliary seem to be getting off in a good way on their new year's work. Circle No. 1, with Mrs. Friddle, chairman, had its last meeting at the home of Mrs. J. N. Griswold with 18 members present. Circle No. 2, with Mrs. J. W. Swain, chairman, met at the home of Mrs. J. C. Coe, with 19 members present. The Business Girls' Circle, Mrs. Robah H. Field, chairman, met on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. J. D. Heritage, with Mesdames Field and Heritage as hostesses. There were 13 members present, together with Mrs D. E. Curtis, president of the Auxiliary.

The evening service of Sunday, May 14, will be a song service, consisting of America's most popular hymns, ten, of them in number. Come join us in song.

New Hope.—We met yesterday, May 7 and had dinner on the grounds, and a large crowd. All enjoyed this well-spread dinner. As well as the good messages, Rev. Henderson brought to us, at 11 a. m., Lawyer Funderburk and Mr. Howard Latham, principal of Prospect high school, who made good addresses.

At 2:30 p. m. for our Sunday school the boys were honored for winning in the contest of having the greatest attendance in the past three months. We are praying that the Lord will bless our boys and girls and great good will be realized from each one of them. Lawyer Funderburk's address was to always let Christ be first in our hearts. He told a story of two boys: one let Christ be first always, his friend next and himself last. This boy the Lord blessed in all he undertook to do. If we only would forget this self of ours how the Lord could use and bless us. He told how they clothe the horses that work in the mines where it is dark all the time. And why it was that they had to bring them out in the sun once a week so the horses would not go blind. I am afraid most of us people stayed in a dark world of sins so long that we never get a sight of Heavenly light and things which are prepared for us. We are spirit blind. May God help us to wake up to our duties we owe to self and home.

PASTORS AND PEOPLE

Mr. Latham's address was "What is, Home."

Rev. Mr. Henderson's subject for Sunday night was to "Him that knows to do right and does it not; to him it is a sin." Are we doing things that we know are wrong if so we surely need to quit it. Beer, wines, strong drink and card playing downs the country, but he could not say too much about the rotten stuff that spoils the boys' and girls' lives. The mothers of today have gone blind and asleep and the girls are about to go astray. Smoking and drinking and car-riding at all times of the day. And card playing has taken the day.

I am praying that our boys and girls will become pure and take Christ into their lives. That we parents may do our duty in training them up to guard against evil things and cling to that which is right.

A FRIENDLY QUESTION ABOUT BEER AND REPEAL

This is a friendly message frome some of your neighbors and fellow citizens. If we defeat repeal at the coming election we can change our decision in another election anytime within seven years. If we pass repeal now, the decision cannot be changed.

Would it not be wise, before repeal, to watch the effect of legalized beer on individuals, the home, taxation, law-breaking, the traffic problem and politics? Enclosure omitted i nletter of May 6, for which we desire your full co-operation.

Weaverville Church	2.50
Mt. Zion Church	2.50
Clark's Chapel	.50
Winston, First	2.95

Our thanks to all. Bro. Cowan expects to receive the balance from Clark's Chapel. Winston, First, pays out. Littleton people will join us in gratitude to Mrs. J. B. O'Briant whom we credit for the whole sum.

"I'LL BE ONE OF FIFTY"

So said a brother who is not a member of our church, but who takes, reads and is interested in the HERALD. In his conversation with me he said that he wasn't in a position to lend the amount we are asking for, but that he would be glad to be one of 50 to lend $10.00.

Are there 49 others who will join him? I'll be one of the 49; now where are the other 48? Come along, folks; we can put this thing over if we will. Just drop me a card. When I get the last one, I'll hold up my hand, and tell you I've got enough. Remember, it is a loan, to run six months and to pay 6 per cent. A proper note will be executed, and your money will be safe.

"I'LL BE ONE OF FIFTY!" And remember, the brother who started it isn't a Methodist Protestant—at least, he isn't in name. That's a challenge for you! Will you meet it? If so, say so. AND DO IT NOW! Just drop me a card.

Conformed or Transformed

It is sometimes said that the good is the enemy of the best. Rather does it often become the easiest way out—the line of least resistance. To be a "hale fellow well met" is at times too costly. Small wonder that the preacher, Paul, pungently said, "Be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God." (Romans 12:2.)

Action and change indicate life. Dead objects or lives conform to passing whims or fancies—live ones are transformed to become transformers. The physical and mental devices with which to shun the spiritual part of life are myriad. Human devices may not only leave the soul of man untouched but may stultify it. It is a fatal error to think to improve the exterior or polish the outside while the heart is wicked.

To be conformed is to be made like. It is not progress. It is to follow a form simply to be harmonious. It may or may not be for the better. It may simply be similar to the mob mind or crowd psychology.

But to be transformed, as Paul meant it, is to make advance. It is to change by contact with something new and better. It is to give a different form. Shape, appearance, disposition or course is to be altered. It is a conversion in nature or character. Wood may be painted to imitate stone. But the giants fallen in the Petrified Forest in Arizona have a new texture. Clay is made into porcelain. Camouflage becomes reality. Sinful nature becomes Christ-like.

To yield to the devil's devices, though legislators declare them legal, is to be conformed to his satanic will. The morality of today says to boys, girls, men and women, "Be good, if you can, despite the anti-social environment surrounding you." To imbue youth with ideals of honesty and thrust them into life where deceit prevails is to sacrifice lambs to the slaughter. To expect ministers and sober laymen to advocate total abstinence in homes, Sunday schools, pulpits or public schools and then surround them with the camouflaged, age-old liquor traffic is to invite tragic waste. It is nothing less than a type of immoral intelligence to defend the status quo when it departs from the plain teachings of the Christ of the Bible.

Can the Church of Christ expect to save souls and let every social disorder, industrial misfit and political sacrilege continue? Talk of the preachers sticking to the old-time Gospel! O fie! Read agin the Hebrew prophets! Face again the epigrammatic, stinging whiplash rebukes of evil as they fell from the lips of the Founder of Christianity. True evangelism is not conformity to any evil because legislators with deadened consciences or soggy souls say it is legal. Christ's way of saving souls included conversion of environment. Its dynamic appeal came from its transforming essence.

Christ would not save men nor environment by destruction. Ever is it His desire to transform both. 'Twill always be better for the Christian to follow God and not run with the world. Know you that every device not striking at the root of evil is Pharisaical. Every device leading toward a weaker humanity, either physically, mentally, morally, or spiritually, is a parasite. Not conformity but energetic transformation, and that soon and speedily done, will save America.

Someone said, "It took only one night to get Israel out of Egypt but it took forty years to get Egypt out of Israel." The spirit of conformity leads backward over night in the constructive fight aginst the great destroyer—legalized rum. Unless Christians awake to sound forth Christ's transformation of social environment, it will take a generation to regain the ground already lost. Forth with Christ!

"WORLD MUST HAVE A SAVIOUR"

Premier Mussolini, in connection with the criticism of American policies, declared that he had no faith in democracy.

"Democracy is nothing," he declared. "The people are nothing and can do nothing. In every country they are weary of talk. They need men of action. They cannot save themselves; they need a saviour."

Asked where a saviour is to be found, he replied: "There is no saviour."

"What, then, of the future?" he was asked.

"I foresee a long series of political, economic and military wars," he replied. "There's war now."

Mussolini is not far afield when he sees the complete failure of democracy. The "clay" of democracy is doomed to be broken to pieces. (Dan. 2:34, 35).

He declares that the world must have a saviour but cannot see where one is to be found. A false one will rise up out of the sea of the nations (Rev. 13:1) and reign supreme for a little season.

An omnipotent Saviour is certain to come—the King of kings. "The God of Heaven (shall) set up a Kingdom, which shall never be destroyed . . . it shall break in pieces and consume all . . . kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." (Dan. 2:44).—Church of Christ Advocate.

KNOWLEDGE OF A TRUTH PLACES ONE UNDER OBLIGATION TO LIVE THAT TRUTH

Many years ago I heard Dr. Theodore T. Munger—at that time pastor of the United Congregational Church in New Haven, Connecticut—preaching an installation sermon in a suburban church.

His subject was "The Church"; and he was emphasizing its practical value in the lives of the people. I well remember with what emphasis he said something like this: "All of us men and women greatly need the Church and its services to help us in the task of living good, respectable lives."

I can never escape—even if I wanted to—the impression that sentence made on my mind. Whatever other things the church might do, in whatever other spheres its influence might count, its supreme concern was with the conduct of the people—aiding them in living decent lives.

Now, Dr. Munger was an outstanding progressive thinker in the days when such theological thinkers were not as common as they are now. He was also recognized as a leading preacher of the intellectual-literary type. Yet here he was pointing out as the highest goal of the church not correct scholarly thinking, nor finished literary product for the pulpit, but clean and worthy Christian living on the part of its ministers and members.

It was that sentence from Dr. Munger's sermon that did more than any other single thing to confirm my confidence in his fitness for leadership, and to turn my mind with increasing favor to thinkers and writers and preachers of his type. Lyman Abbott was such a man. So were President Faunce of Brown University, Prof. Charles H. Briggs of Union Seminary, Prof. Bowden P. Bowne of Boston University, Dr. Washington Gladden of Columbus, Dr. Gordon of the New Old South Church in Boston, and others. So are Dr. Cadman, Dr. Fosdick, Dr. Chas. R. Brown, Dr. Chas. E. Jefferson, Dr. Tittle, Dr. Buttrick, and many others.

There are various paths by which people arrive at the goal of right living and become confirmed devotees of the true, the beautiful, and the good in human behavior.

The conduct of one person is commendable because, from early childhood, he has been drilled and disciplined in the habit and practice of living according to high standards. Such training should be included as an exceedingly important part of the child's up-bringing. Parents who fail in this matter are seriously remiss.

There are others who are not greatly indebted to their parents for training in right ways of living. Such parents often have little or no sense of responsibility for thier children. They may be too exclusively engaged with other interests. There may be so many children in the home that the father prefers to spend his free time in a less noisy place, or where the noises are more to his liking; and the mother has become so overwhelmed with the vastness of her tasks that she gives up in despair, and lets things slide.

In some cases the church and Sunday school—with more or less co-operation on the part of the home—does the major part of the training in religion and conduct. The public schools and colleges, and varied other institutions in the community, all have a measure of influence.

But no matter through what individual or group a person gets his habits of right living, he must eventually review his ways of life, examine the reasons for doing as he does, and seek for such rational foundations of life as will satisfy his heart and mind in his present situation.

Here is where early training in reading and thinking comes into use, and is sure to prove of great value. Here is where the power and habit of meditation and reflection should be recognized and practiced. What the Quakers speak of as the "Inner Light"—if one becomes familiar with it and yields to its revelations and guidance—may become of tremendous service in seeking and following the way of the good life.

If we halt in our reading and thinking whenever we come to an idea that we are convinced could, and should, be incorporated into our lives, and—right there—make the proper adjustment before going on further, we shall be in a fair way to make important improvements in our ways of living.

Thought is for action, study is for living, knowledge is for the improvement of life. To know the truth—any particular truth—places us under obligation to live that particular truth.

PACKING MY TRUNK

By Ernest Crutcher, M.D., Los Angeles

I contemplate "traveling into far countries." My trunk is being packed. I have already put into it much I seek to discard. I have been packing and shifting the medley contents for a long time, packing much, I shall find, merely handicaps in the journey, but which, in heedlessness, recklessness, were fatuously crowded in. They already burden. Too much overweight, excess baggage is fatuous in traveling and at the journey's end is a constant care and annoyance.

I already wear some of it and it disfigures me outwardly and hinders progress. Yet so habituated am I to its possession that I shrink from laying it aside, although well aware that it is unfashionable in the land toward which I journey. Without some of it I will not feel natural, and even though it may offend and irritate others, I am reluctant to part with it as it is a part of my very nature, ingrained by use and possession during the years. Some of it clings to me like shells to the sea-god Glaucus. I cannot get it off; it hangs like lint to soft cloth, provoking vexation and unhappiness. It seems instinct, alive and magnetized; hideous, yet hard to part with. Often I fling it away, but it seems to creep back and find its place in my trunk, to exhibit itself at inopportune moments. I wish I could be rid of it. I need room for essentials that may ornament and adorn me when I shall have come into this far country.

It is my spiritual trunk I am packing; the one which is conveying my treasures and accumulations into the spiritual realms. I have gathered many possessions: foolish habits, appetites, irritabilities, impatience, trickeries, dishonesties, falsities of speech or act, duplicities, suavities that cover evil intent, hypocrisies, deceits, vulgarities, unlovely traits and characteristics that are inevitably my own, inalienable and indestructible, carefully packed and snug.

Some of the largest packages in our spiritual trunks are prejudices of divers sort; enmities and envies, sneers and scowlings, superstitions and disbeliefs, fears and cowardices, misunderstandings and sensitivities, hurts and resentments, vengefulness, malice, malevolence, hatreds, narrowness, and starved psyche; heart-burnings and secret motives—these and other hideous, haggard, hag-like excrescences we pack into the bottom, where we hope only ourselves may look.

The finer entities are placed in the tray: harmony, love, affection, kindness, tolerance, patience, sweetness, forbearance, gentleness, long-suffering, forgiveness, benevolences, self-denial; we make these prominent, as we wish them seen.

Most of these accumulations have voices that we hear in the night, or when alone on a mountain, or at sea. Some are strident and coarse; one in particular comes frequently from the bottom of the trunk, a whine. We tried to keep it out, but it was obtrusive and we hugged it at last, and found it indispensable for use when cast down in heart. Now its tones are dismal, for we grow old, are hurt and neglected by our younger associates, friends, or family. It seems to soothe and help when we can take out this whine and listen to its dismal din. Other discordant entities wish to come with it, and we get some comfort out of having them as company. But not for long, for we perceive their folly, yet we keep them, and they are safely packed in our spiritual trunk. They go with us on our journey. They are part of the treasure we laid up, and they, like others, fade not away with command.

Each of us, individually, builds a spiritual trunk. Some are finely done, others are rude, crude, incomplete. Some trunks are large and gross in type, for they must carry vulgarities of appetite in food, drink, drugs, tobacco or other habits. Every physical indulgence carries a spiritual similitude. The spiritual trunk receives its predilection and habit. All are parts of our agglomerated acquisitions. None are left behind. Truly, as Emerson declared, "Things are in the saddle and ride men."

The trunk of the miser, when opened on the spiritual plane, exhibits the most wretched assortment of useless pot-pourri, none of which are available for use. The last state of that man is worse than the first. His penance is very long and arduous. Few on the spiritual plane are in worse condition. His cry is as sounding brass, his plaint as a harsh cymbal.

In the spiritual trunk of Sir Self are many handicaps: arrogance, conceit, pomposity, vulgarity, profanity, self-centration. Verily, much worthless dross has he crammed into his baggage. Excess weight, chiefly, and the tax shall be exacted to the utmost farthing.

Thoughtlessness is one attribute that most of us put in. Our surprise will be amazing when we open our trunk on another plane. Out of it will come much we wot not of as we bundled in our belongings. Evil is wrought by want of thought.

Self-pity takes up a lot of room in most trunks, crowding out some of the finer things we wish to carry along. Much we shall long for will have to be earned in this Afterwhile, for the trunk must be packed anew over there. Our discarding may be done with heartache, perhaps, for habit is second nature and leaves scars on the trunk's exterior. The journey is continuous, and as progress we must gather afresh for our needs, appetites, passions, esthetics, emotions, loves and hates.

That far country towards which we travel is not so far away that we lose our tastes and inclinations on arrival; only, there is quite a lack of substance of a material sort that some of us have fed upon, indulged and reveled in. It would hardly be wise to particularize. Some would doubt because they wish otherwise. Skepticism would be aroused. Anyhow, converts are not sought to these views. But what have you packed in your spiritual trunk that you do not wish to carry to that far country towards which you travel?

MUST I GO EMPTY-HANDED?

"Not at death I shrink and falter,
For my Saviour saves me now;
But to meet Him empty-handed!
Thought of that now clouds my brow."

These words were quoted by a young man, converted upon his dying bed. True, grace had saved him at the "eleventh hour," and he rejoiced in the knowledge of a Saviour's love, but as he looked back upon his past life—so full of possibilities, but wasted in self-gratification—he longed that the years might have been used in the interest of the One he now loved. If only he had known his precious Saviour sooner, and employed his years in His service for His glory! He felt that though saved, and departing to be with his Saviour, he had sent nothing on before.

Reader, have YOU? As a Christian, Heaven has been secured to you at the infinite cost of the Saviour's loving sacrifice, and therefore you will be forever in the Glory to which we are hastening, but do not let us forget that though there is no judgment as to our sins (for the judgment was borne by the Lord Jesus)—there IS the "judgment seat of Christ before which we must all appear.

"Nothing but leaves." Shall it be thus we meet Him? Nothing He can commend! Wasted days, hours and years. Precious time spent in self-indulgence, golden opportunities wasted, gone, gone, forever.

"Must I go empty-handed?
Thus my dear Redeemer meet?
Not one day of service give Him,
Lay no trophy at His feet?"

Regrets can never undo the past, or recall wasted opportunities! Once we have left this world, we have left behind the last privilege of witnessing for the Lord in the world where He is still unwanted, unknown. Surely "It is high time to awake out of sleep." (Rom. 13:11). The days and months are gliding past, the Lord's coming draws near, at the longest too, our stay here is brief, and every day sees opportunities lessening! May we then be alert, redeeming the time, and be able to look forward to the day of manifestation with joy. We can hardly hope to hear Him say, "Well done, good and faithful servant,” but what a deep and inestimable joy to hear Him say, “She (or he) hath done what she (or he) could.” May our hearts be deeply stirred to use the “little while,” in view of the future.—The Milk of the Word.

THE PRAYER MEETING

“It was the mid-week meeting,
The quiet hour of prayer:
The Master of Assemblies
Patiently waited there.
A look of pain and sorrow
Shadowed His face Divine,
‘I cleansed ten,’ He murmured,
‘Where, then, can be the nine?’

“ ‘Have they so soon forgotten
The sins I washed away?
Has not their weakness taught them
The need to watch and pray?
On mountain and in desert,
Beset by Satan’s power,
For them I prayed and fasted,
Can they not watch one hour?’

“They had not meant to slight Him
Because they did not go:
Their hearts had never told them
That He would miss them so.
And so the Master waited
In loneliness and grace,
While they, alas! neglected
The holy trysting place.

“Oh, Saviour dear, forgive us,
We are so slow to come
To seek the blest communion
Of the quiet upper room:
Lord, give us clearer vision,
Thy loveliness to see,
Till naught shall so delight us,
As fellowship with Thee.”

A HAPPY CHILDHOOD

Childhood, after all, is the one really blissful period in existence.

It matters not whether the bairn be born of low estate or cradled in the lap of luxury; there is something in the early years that has little to do with environment but insists on every child having its fair share of a certain type of happiness. I would go farther and assert that the children of the very poor are often far happier than those of the rich.

My old friend, Andrew Carnegie, himself a child of the people, once wisely said: “I pity the sons and daughters of rich men who are attended by governesses and servants. They do not know what they have missed. They have fathers and mothers—very kind fathers and mothers too—and they think they enjoy the sweetness of those blessings to the full, but this they cannot do. For the poor boy who has in his father his constant companion, tutor and model, has a richer and more precious fortune than any rich man’s son can possibly know and compared with which all other fortunes count as little.” With every word of this I most thoroughly agree!

Although as a boy I was very poor, I was rich in the possession of parents whose home influence was always of the best.

Home is the laboratory of character, the one spot where early and lasting impressions are formed for good or ill.

True, I had to make the streets, and the docks, and the old brickyard ponds my playgrounds, but they yielded me much wider area for fun and frolic, for roving in the lands of imaginary adventure and make-believe so dear to the heart of a boy, than ever I could have obtained in the most palatial nursery of the biggest castle in Scotland. They gave me, too, a more liberal education in the give-and-take, the rough-and-tumble of life than I could have got as a high school graduate.

By mixing freely with other children I early came to a knowledge of human nature and the necessity of keeping my own end up. We are told that the “race is neither to the swift nor the battle to the strong.” There may be exceptions to the general rule; in my case it was borne in upon me very early that the “race” is usually won by both the swift and the strong!—The late Sir Thomas Lipton in his Autobiography.

KEEP TRYING

Say “I will!” and then stick to it—
That’s the only way to do it.
Don’t build up a while, and then
Tear the whole thing down again.
Fix the goal you wish to gain,
Then go at it heart and brain,
And, though clouds shut out the blue,
Do not dim your purpose true
With your sighing.
Stand erect, and like a man
Know, “They can, who think they can.”
Keep a-trying!

A BLASPHEMER JUDGED

A few months after the baptism of several persons, a wicked young man took a sheep to the same place in the stream, and with fearful oaths swore he could baptize as well as the preacher. The shore of the stream was a very gradual slope, so there was no apprehension of danger from deep water. Three of his comrades stood on the shore and witnessed his blasphemous performance. Taking the sheep in, and holding it by its fore feet, he pronounced the formula of baptism, and as he leaned over to immerse the sheep, the animal struck him with his hind feet, knocking him into deep water where he was drowned, while his comrades stood looking on. When asked why they did not try to save him they said they were perfectly helpless and could not stir. Let not the tongue be given to blasphemy.—Unknown.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

May—High Point College Month.

June, Second Sunday Children's Day—Offering for Board of Missions.

October—Pay-up month for Annual Conference Budget; Second Sunday in October—Rally and Promotion Day.

Nov. 8-13—Annual Conference—TO MEET WHERE? Think of this, no place to go.

The Tombstone Church

The tombstone marks the resting place of the dead. There lie buried the hopes of life, the expectations of friends and the ambitions that once motivated action. But now all is quiet and still. We stand at such places to weep rather than to prophecy; to record our regrets, rather than to announce our expectations.

But grief is never so poignant when we stand at the grave of a deceased loved one who had lived well a long life; whose golden deeds remain to cheer our hearts. It is rather those who were cut off in their youth or prime and who never had a fair chance at life, that we feel so keenly the pangs of regret.

It is when we visit a church which is dead to all the interests of the denomination—it really does not care enough for the local interests to support them fully. A church that does not want to hear about the missionary and educational programs of the denomination; a church that does not use the literature of the denomination; feels no remorse when told of the dire conditions which face the general boards and institutions of the denomination; a church with leaders whose smug contentment in their local interest obsesses their minds to the exclusion of all the appeals for aid from the general church—such a church is dead. It is a tombstone church. We can only weep when we go to it—no spirit of prophecy comes to us when we face its members. These are they which slay the prophets; like Samson who slew more in his death than he did in his life. Such churches are driving their pastors to grief, destroying them as vital ministers of the gospel—pushing them out of their chosen sphere of service and closing the doors which once stood open to the denomination. Yes, they are dead, and but for the fact that we believe in a general resurrection we would advise that they be not disturbed in their slumbers.

Remember June the Eighth

The Silver Anniversary of the marriage of Dr. and Mrs. Dixon. The program at the Home begins at 10 a.m.; it will be an all-day program. A picnic dinner will be enjoyed. Go; carry your silver offering for the Home. Let's make a great dent on that debt which has been worrying our loyal workers there.

Those Area Meetings

No pastor should fail to co-operate in these meetings. Its purpose is so obvious that all can see it and understand it. The president would gladly attend them all and speak at all of them; but that is impossible, if they are to be held when most needed. And if these meetings are properly conducted they surely will bring good results to the pastors and officials participating in the quickening of interest in the finances of the local church. Hold them and report results to me as early as possible.

Pastor's Report Blanks Mailed

These blanks were put into the mail last Saturday. If you have not received one by the time you read this, let me know and give me the correct address and we shall gladly mail one to you at once.

North Davidson Charge, Rev. O. C. Loy, Pastor

I visited Spring Hill, Canaan and Mount Pleasant churches on this work in the order named. It was not the time of the regular service at either of the first two churches. Programs for Mother's Day were observed at them in connection with the appointment. Good services were held and the interest in them seemed good.

At Spring Hill and Mount Pleasant churches we found buildings which had been erected since we were in this office before. They are splendid and without debt. At Canaan Sunday school rooms had been erected and a well arranged, well constructed parsonage just off the church yard. There is a debt on the parsonage.

As this group of churches now stand it is in many respects a very attractive pastorate. The congregations at all the services were as good as we usually find at our rural church services. The attention was good. Finances are very much behind—only a very small amount contributed on the A. C. B. and a small per cent on pastor's salary. There are but few subscribers to the HERALD on this charge; however, the Sunday schools make the monthly offerings to the Children's Home. One has the impression upon a casual visit to these churches that they are not yet doing their best. Like all the rest of our churches, there must be large numbers who are having but a small share in the progress made here.

Brother Loy is well received and is hoping for better results from the next six months of the conference year; and if the interest of some of the leaders of these churches can become contagious enough he will surely see better results. Of course it will be hard, but if lots of wise planning and plenty of hard work on the part of our church folk were put in, there would be but few churches off the Honor Roll November the 8th.

Plan of Appointments

May 28th—High Point College Commencement; City of High Point churches area meeting in the afternoon.

June 4th—Dedication of Piney Grove church; night at South Winston church. R. M. ANDREWS.

WHEN I AM OLD

When wistful eyes have grown too dim
To trace the far horizon's rim,

And dull ears seldom catch the words
Of loved ones,—never hear the birds,

God, grant me this: though flesh shall fail
And music cease, and beauty pale,

Withdraw not Thy supporting arm,
But still Thy miracles perform!

As fail the things of sense and flesh,
Creator, fashion me afresh

From Thine eternal loveliness,
And clothe me with Thy righteousness!

When these my busy hands grow still,
How sweet to rest within Thy will!

When shadows cloud my earthly sight,
Still glows for me Thy kindly light;

What though my ears hear not the birds?
Ah, lovelier far Thy whispered words!

Lord, all my sunset hours are sweet
When they are spent at Thy dear feet!

INSTEAD OF SUICIDE—CHRIST!

At Bermondsey, outside a certain public house, an open-air meeting was in full swing. An unhappy, partly intoxicated man stood on the footway.

The open-air speaker caught his eye, and, filled with Christ-like love, cried out, "We are going to pray for you, my brother." "Pray for me!" ejaculated the unhappy listener. "What's the use of that?"

Days passed by, and the life of the unhappy man increased in misery. He decided to put an end to his hopeless existence. He set off for a long walk, intending at some suitable place to commit suicide.

He tramped through Southall, Uxbridge, and then nearly to Oxford. He stopped for an occasional "rum" or "port." But these drinks did not drown his sorrow and misery. Nothing could touch the deep heart-thirst of this man, excepting one drink. And that drink he did not understand. He did not know that there was One, called the Water of Life, who could satisfy his thirsty soul. But through the deep valley of life he was being led on to that Fountain.

At last he reached a spot where he felt that, unknown to anybody, he could end his miserable existence.

Then the miracle happened. He says that God spoke to him clearly and definitely. So distinct was the impression that the thought of suicide left him. Instead there came into his tired heart a vision of life. But it was not now associated with the public house and the gambling den. It was associated with that open-air meeting outside the public house, and the Christ they preached.

He returned to London, and the following day found him back near the old spot—the public house. But he was not looking for the public house. He was looking for the church belonging to those open-air workers. He found it. He went in and asked for prayer, and cried out to God for mercy. Mercy there was great, and grace was free. The tired, hungry, thirsty soul found God in Christ Jesus. And, to use the words of the original writer of this heart-gladdening conversion, "Today Mr. Owen is a well-known and respected townsman, and an active worker in the Church, one of the happiest men in Bermondsey, and truly a miracle of grace." —The Elim Evangel.

AFRAID IN THE DARK

Does it make you feel queer when mother kisses you good night and goes downstairs, leaving the door open into the hall?

That was the way Carolyn used to feel. She would pull the bed clothes up over her head and try not to think about the dark. But she couldn't breathe very well with her head covered.

One night just as mother was leaving she said, "Don't forget, darling, that God is here to take care of you even when I go away."

Carolyn hadn't thought of that. Why, if God was watching over her she surely need not be afraid! She looked about the room, and it didn't seem dark and dreadful any more.

"Thank you, dear God; I'm glad You are here. Good night," she said and then cuddled down and went fast asleep.

You do not need to be afraid any more than Carolyn, do you?—Unknown.

AN INDIAN GIRL'S PRAYER

A teacher among the Sioux Indians relates the following touching incident:

An Indian baby was dying. She lay in her father's arms, while nearby stood another little girl a few years older, who was a Christian.

"Father," said the little girl, "little sister is going to heaven tonight. Let me pray." And as she said this, she kneeled at her father's knee, and this little prayer fell from her childish lips:

"Father God, little sister is coming to see you tonight. Please open the door softly and let her in. Amen."

Don't you think God was pleased to hear that prayer? It is just such simple faith in our Heavenly Father that moves His loving heart to help His children. We may take all our troubles to God in prayer, for "He careth for us."—Unknown.

WHAT HOME IS

"I wish I didn't ever have to go home," exclaimed Daisy crossly, her cheeks flushed and her blue eyes full of tears. "Mother always calls us just when we're having the very most fun."

"Seems like it," agreed Billy, "but just wait till we grow up, then we can stay as long as ever we like. All night, maybe."

"I'll stay out two nights," declared Daisy, the tears falling as she followed Billy in to dinner.

They were still falling when she took her place at the table, but mother did not seem to notice. When dinner was over, however, instead of clearing off the table as usual, mother walked to the window and looked out.

"I do believe it's going to be fine enough for us to drive out to Aunt Margaret's. I think this is her afternoon off."

"Off from what?" asked Billy.

"Why, I didn't know Aunt Margaret had a home we could go to," added Daisy, her tears quite dried now.

"Of course she has a home," laughed mother. "A very big one, and you'll find the word HOME right above the front door."

"How funny," giggled Daisy, her tears quite forgotten in the excitement of getting ready, and there, sure enough, right above the door of the big building in front of which the car stopped was the name, "BRIGHTWOOD HOME." Right below the name stood Aunt Margaret.

"Come into my office," she said briskly, "then I'll take you to see some of my family."

"Your family!" exclaimed Daisy and Billy almost in one breath.

"Yes, my big family of boys and girls who have no mothers and fathers, and no home except this one until some kind person comes along to adopt them. Come along, we'll go to the playground," and she led the way to the big grounds behind the house.

"Is it me? Oh, is it me they want?" called one of the three little girls, all dressed alike, who ran up eagerly as Aunt Margaret entered the playground.

"No, please, Miss Walker, isn't it my turn to be 'dopted?" asked another shyly.

"But I've been sick, Miss Walker, and I need a mother most," came from the smallest of the three girls. "Oh, please, isn't it me they want?"

"No, Peggy dear," and Aunt Margaret's tone was so kind. "These are just visitors. Won't you come and shake hands with them? Then perhaps you three will show my niece over the grounds. You'd like that, wouldn't you, Daisy?" And Daisy nodded.

All that the three girls told Daisy, and all the questions they asked, no one but Daisy herself ever heard, but when going home time came, she clutched mother's hand as if she could never, never let it go, and there were tears again in her eyes as she said good-by to her three new friends.

"Isn't—isn't it good to be home, mother?" she said as the car drew up at the door. "I—I never knew our house looked so nice before."

"Ours doesn't need to have the word "HOME" printed over the door, like the big orphan asylum, does it, dear?" said mother.

"Oh, no!" began Daisy. "That wasn't a home at all. A home is where there is a father and a mother and—and love —and—"

"And obedience and thoughtfulness and thankfulness and righteousness, and all the things that God, who gave us our homes, wants us to have in them."

"No wonder those three girls wanted a home so badly," said Billy.

"And a mother, and all those other things," added Daisy quickly. "It's the things that go inside that make a home, don't you know that, Billy?"—Mary L. Ritchie, in Olive Plants.

A WISE GOAT

There have been numerous instances where beasts have been made drunk, but rarely, if ever, have men been able to induce any animal to repeat the experiment. It takes a man to be fool enough to get drunk a second time.

I remember reading of one instance where a monkey was "treated" at a dinner table until he became as hilarious and tipsy as his tempters; but when, next day, he was invited into the dining-room by the gentleman (?) who wished to repeat their mischief, he reluctantly came out of his den with his aching head, resolutely declining the proffered honor.

They urged Jocko to drink, but he would not; and as they were proceeding to enforce their will he slipped out of doors and scampered up to the house roof, and was beyond their reach in a twinkle. They broughh out a gun, of which Jocko was mortally afraid, but he only slipped over on the other side of the roof; they went around the house with the gun, but he scampered back again. At last two guns were procured, one for each side of the roof, and then the poor, frightened creature, rather than be forced to drink, mounted the chimney, let himself down inside it, and hanging by his hands to the top, peeped over the top and defied his tormentors, thus setting them an example that it were well for them to learn to follow.

A somewhat similar story is told in an English paper of a goat which belonged to a British regiment, and was very attentive to public duty

A welcome guest in the mess room, the soldier boys bestowed on him many dainty morsels, which he received with appropriate acknowledgments.

One night it happened that Colonel Price, in a spirit of mischief, proposed that the goat should be offered a glass of liquor. Accordingly, he coaxingly held out his cup, and Billy, after a suspicious preliminary sniff, quaffed off the contents. Another and yet another of the men offered Billy a drink, an invitation he could not think of declining. Finally the large, earthen vessel which held the beer at the head of the table was placed upon the floor, and Billy was directed to help himself, which he proceeded to do with such hearty good will that he became helplessly, unmistakably intoxicated.

The next morning Billy was absent from roll call, and no one could tempt him to leave the stable during the entire day. When the second evening's mess began without him, the colonel was requested to bring the deserter before a court-martial of those who had witnessed his tippling.

It was with difficulty that Billy was dragged into the room, which he evidently remembered as the scene of his disgrace. His appearance was greeted with a cheer, but sadly changed were his looks. His once glossy coat had an unkempt appearance, while the once proud and erect head was lowered in shame.

"Come, Billy, take a drink," said the sergeant at the head of the table.

The words seemed to arouse the animal. He lifted his head, his eyes lit up, his forefoot beat the floor. With a snort, a rush, and a bound, Billy butted full against the large earthen vessel containing the men's evening allowance of ale, breaking it into a thousand pieces. Then with his head once more erect, he stalked proudly out of the room.

Billy had defined his position on the beer question, and no one could doubt just where he stood, and the corporal who told the story said, "Really, Billy was the best blue-ribbon lecture I ever listened to!"

There are some things to be learned from a goat.—Pillar of Fire Junior.

A GREAT CONTRAST

"Can't a fellow have any pleasure in life?" snapped Ralph Wilson angrily at his mother. "I do not see any wrong in going."

"You know it is against my will," his mother replied calmly.

Several minutes later Ralph was on his way to a festival which was being held in an adjacent town. His parents were devout Christians, but in spite of all their teaching and training he had gone wrong. They often prayed and pleaded with him, but it was of no avail. This evening his dear mother had asked him not to go, but in his stubborn way he disobeyed and went.

Twenty minutes later Mrs. Wilson heard the telephone ring, and upon answering it, found it to be the hospital. Ralph had met with an accident and was fatally injured. He could not live longer than several hours. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, Harry, and Mabel (Ralph's brother and sister) rushed to the hospital, and found him lying on a snow-white bed. As they came near his side he said, "O mother, I have been so sinful and disobedient. I'm dying and I'm lost. It is all my own fault. I didn't know hell was so terrible.

"Jesus will pardon, if you only ask. There is no one too hopeless for Him," his mother tenderly replied.

In a few minutes he passed away with the awful words on his lips—"Lost, lost, eternaly lost."

Mrs. Wilson was confined to her bed for several months due to the loss of her son, but finally by the Lord's help she regained her health and was able to be up again.

"Good-by, mother, do not bother with the dishes. Harry and I will wash them when we get back," Mabel kindly said as she and her brother left the house.

Mabel and Harry Wilson were both young Christians who were trying to do their Master's will. This particular afternoon they were going to the county jail where they were to help with the services which were held there every Sunday afternoon. As they were riding along in their automobile, discussing certain passages of Scripture, a car driven by a drunken man collided with them, throwing the Wilson car down a steep embankment.

Mabel was instantly killed and Harry was seriously hurt. They were taken to the hospital and before long their parents arrived. As they approached the bed where Harry was lying he looked into his mother's face and tenderly remarked, "Good-by, Mamma, do not worry. Mabel is already in Heaven and I will soon be there, too. Oh, it will be so wonderful there with no sorrow or care."

He then passed away with the beautiful words on his lips, "I'm saved, save, saved for eternity." It was a great shock to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, but both were comforted with the thought that they would see them again where there will be no parting.

And thus passed the three Wilson children: One to awake in everlasting torment, and the other two in everlasting bliss and happiness.

WHAT LOVE CAN DO

Little Robert had been visiting a family of cousins, and was not anxious to leave the spot where he had been so happy. "I liked to stay there," he told Sister Alice; "they have such a beautiful home."

Alice was five years older than Robert. The remark seemed so odd that she closed her book and stared at him. "Did you say Aunt Emma has a beautiful home? What a funny idea. It's just a plain little cottage. Their furniture is old, and some of the carpets are 'most worn out, and they haven't nice pictures like ours. What makes you think her house is so beautiful?"

Bob thought a minute before he answered: "I guess it must be because everybody is so nice to everybody else, and nobody scolds or teases."

At first the older sister smiled, and then the color rose in her cheeks. She saw that her brother was nearer right than herself.—Publisher Unknown.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

Topic for May 21, 1933

WHAT PARTS OF THE WORLD ARE STILL WITHOUT CHRIST?

Scripture Text: Acts 16:8-13.

Christ's Ideal

It was Christ's ideal when He appeared, to Christianize the world. The task was great and He realized that it could not be completed in a few generations. He appeared to a certain group and revealed to them His plans. They were to carry on his work. It has been carried on from that time, and will continue if we are to be spiritual and moral. Inasmuch as religion and morality are inseparable, Christ is the only source of moral being because He alone can furnish spiritual purity. He is the only begotten Son of the Father, the Creator of the universe. This is the fact upon which we base the necessity of taking Christ to all the nations of the world, and to all localities of every country or nation. Spirituality and morality, therefore, are not obtainable through anyone except Jesus Christ, the Lord of lords and the King of kings.

Historical Effect of Ignoring Christ

Those of us who know our ancient and medieval history, know that empires like Rome and Greece were centers of culture. But when these nations turned their faces from the church they soon reached their downfall. This has been the fate of other nations which have forgotten Christ.

Geographical Places Without Christ

There are geographical places without Christ. The people worship the spirits of mountains, trees, rivers, and all things of nature. These places are in a chaotic condition. Attempts are being made to Christianize these people.

There are some religious teachers and missionaries who try to make us believe that because some Hindus, Chinese, Japanese, and others, are not murderers, but are kind to their neighbors, they are Christians. This teaching is rampant in foreign lands. But we found out that it originated in, or at least developed from, religious circles in the Western world, particularly on the American continent. Fidelity to one's national civil law, or a country's customs, and possessing the habits of being tolerant, kind and friendly, does not make a person Christian. There must be an intimate relationship with the Christ to be a Christian. As the term itself a dsciple ofetaonetaoinemfwypshrdlupetaoinu implies, to be a Christian is precisely to be a disciple of Christ, to belong to Christ. This means that you are dependent entirely upon His grace, and that you exercise your freedom of thought and action within the scope of that grace. There is much room in the grace of God, and we do not need to worry about having no broadness in thinking when limitig ourselves to fidelity and love of Christ, and Christ alone as the Master of the whole life. The nations with a prospective future are those which are yet to accept Christ. These nations must abolish paganism before they can make any progress toward covilization.

A Changing Condition Where Christ Becomes Known

Many changes have taken place in India since Christianity has reached the people. The education and freedom of women in India is a miracle; when we realize that women, in former times, were looked upon as beasts of burden. To find six million Christians in India is a miracle when we consider the forces in opposition to every conversion. The church in India is striving with new life and passion for winning India for Christ.

Quotable Poetry

BROTHERS OF FAITH

In Christ there is no East nor West
In Him no South nor North;
But one great fellowship of love
Throughout the whole wide earth.

In Him shall true hearts everywhere
Their high communion find;
His service in the gold cord
Close-binding all mankind.

Join hands then, brothers of the faith,
Whate'er your race may be:
Who serves my Father as a son
Is surely kin to me.

In Christ now meet both East and West,
In Him meets South and North;
All Christian souls are one in Him
Throughout the whole wide earth.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Porter.—We held our quarterly meeting last Saturday with very much interest. Everything was carried out very nicely.

Rev. J. R. Anderson, pastor, in his kind and pleasing personality, goes at anything in a business way. Everybody likes Mr. Anderson. He is doing a great deal of work toward our church. I wish we could express our appreciation for the good services he has rendered us.

Our Sunday school is increasing. We hope it will still grow and that people will take more interest in the work of the Lord.

West End, Greensboro.—Perhaps the readers of the Herald would like to hear from our Auxiliary. We raised our allotted budget for last year and hope to do as well or better for the new year.

We have the officers all excited and the circles divided ready to enter into the work with "We Will Try" as our watchword. When we try we accomplish the task, but to say we can't, we fail. We have heard the cry of depression so much until we forget that God is over all and is still our Guide. If we would take time to count our blessings we would try to do more to lead others aright.

We have tried different ways to raise our budget, but I find there is no way better than going down in our pockets for the cash; sometimes the amount is small, but God knows just how much we should give and will bless the gift accordingly.

Denton Ladies' Aid Society.—The Ladies' Aid Society of the Denton M. P. Church held its regular monthly meeting Monday evening, May 8th, with Mrs. Rogers. The attendance was very good.

As we entered a rose was pinned on us and a very interesting program was given all in commemoration of Mother's Day. Mrs. A. L. Hill read a sketch on the origin of Mother's Day. Mrs. R. E. Powell read a poem, also a few sayings on what great men have written about Mother's Day. "Mother, Oft I Think of Thee" was sung by Mrs. E. O. Lane, our honor guest. Mrs. Steve Beddington read a poem, after which we were favored with another special song by Helen Cranford and Max Rogers entitled "I'll Wear a White Rose For You, Mother, Dear." Kate Sexton read a very beautiful poem, "Mother's Excuses." "Because She Was a Mother" was read by Mrs. George Haltom. The closing song was sung by Mrs. E. O. Lane, Miss Helen Cranford and Max Rogers. They were accompanied on the piano by Inza Hill.

After a prayer by Mrs. D. M. Sexton the minutes were read and approved. We had one new member, Miss Kate Sexton. When the business meeting was finished we had two contests. Mrs. Coy Kearns and Marjorie Cranford won the prize for the first contest and Mrs. B. L. Morris and Helen Cranford won the prize for the second contest.

Mrs. Rogers and Mrs. Haltom served the refreshments, which were strawberry shortcake and grape juice. Everyone enjoyed it very much. We adjourned to meet next month with Mrs. W. A. Hedrick.

We express our deepest sympathy to those members of our society who are sick and wish them a speedy recovery. We missed their presence and did not forget them in our prayers.

First Church, Concord.—Rev. Mr. Morgan is helping Rev. Mr. Anderson in a revival meeting in Albemarle, and Mr. Anderson came up and preached for us last Sunday. We all enjoyed his sermon very much and we are looking forward to hearing some more good sermons soon, as he will help Mr. Morgan in our revival that will start next Sunday. Rev. Durant Nash preached for us Sunday night. We are always glad to have Mr. Nash with us. Mr. Nash helped Mr. Anderson with the Lord's Supper Sunday morning. We were very glad to have the Lexington quartet sing for us last Sunday. They also sang for the Baracas at the Sunday school hour. Mr. Nash sang a solo for us Sunday night, and Miss Mary Lillie Nash and Lillie Nash sang a duet.

Mrs. T. F. Newton is sick at this time. She spent two days last week in the Concord Hospital, but she is getting along right well now and we hope she will soon be well again. Mrs. Maggie Sides is real sick at this time we hope all our sick folks will soon be well and able to come back to church. Our hearts were made sad when death claimed the life of little Adelaide Blackwelder; also Mrs. Julia Newton. These families have our prayers and sympathy.

Last Thursday night the Baraca class of First Church, Charlotte, came over and gave a good play at the schoolhouse for the benefit of our Intermediate Missionary Society. The play was fine and we are sure everyone enjoyed it and it has been a great help to the Intermediates in starting off their year's work. Mrs. L. M. Williams is chairman of this society.

State Street, Lexington.—We have been having such few reports in the past few months that maybe the people do not understand what is wrong with State Street. Our efficient reporter, Mrs. J. F. Burkhart, has been unable to attend the services and no one else felt as if they were her equal.

We are still striving and working in all the departments of the church. Dr. and Mrs. Maier both seem to be very much interested in State Street and also Bethesda.

In the sermon Sunday morning, May 7th, Dr. Maier gave us a very helpful sermon from Isa. 64:8, his theme being 'Thou Art the Potter, We Are the Clay." He reminded us that it is the same now as in Bible times. We are to be shaped as God so desires.

For the Sunday evening service the subject was "Breaking Up a Home." He especially illustrated this by the way the mother eagle teaches her little ones how to fly and they must get out and do something in the world, and so it is with us.

The Ladies' Auxiliary is planning on doing great things this year. The members of the church have been divided into five circles and we hope each one will feel their responsibility. They met Monday night, May 8, for the second meeting of the year. Mrs. Maier, the president, presided, and there were about 50 ladies and girls present. It was a very interesting and helpful meeting.

Dr. and Mrs. Maier will leave on Wednesday, May 10th, for Pittsburgh, Pa., to attend a General Board meeting of the church. They will also visit relatives while away. Arrangements have been made for the services while they are absent.

First Church, High Point.—Interesting excecises of the commencement of the High Point night school were held last Friday evening in the auditorium of the Emma Blair graded school, when 67 students, ranging in age from 15 to 50 years, received certificates of progress. Before the award of certificates was made in a graceful speech by Mrs. Henry A. White, prominent clubwoman and member of the faculty of High Point College, a two-act play, "Never Too Late," was presented by the pupils. This play was written by Mrs. W. T. Saunders, and presented the purpose of the school. A large number of awards for reading a certain number of books, and for perfect attendance were made to various students. Many people in adult life have been taught to read, write, and use everyday arithmetic and history by this benevolent agency. A large number have kept a record of their progress by making booklets. Mrs. D. A. Neese has been the competent instructor of cooking in this school for two years.

Rev. R. I. Farmer delivered a pleasing address, complimenting this group on their worthwhile work and accomplishments. It is not easy for adult men and women, many of whom work all day and are very tired when evening draws near, to study and recite lessons in the evening, but they deserve much praise and commendation for devoting time to secure the rudiments of an education that in their youth was denied them. This night school is sponsored by the Woman's Club of the city, and is a unique and worthy beneficence.

Another benevolent institution worthy of the highest praise and an honor to the citizenry of High Point, is the Public Welfare work carried on during the past winter, when the unfortunate and needy have been so numerous. Mrs. W. C. Hammond, executive secretary of the board, has carried the heavy burden of responsibility for a larger number of families than usual, and has been a fair and competent officer in her dealings.

An unusual feature of the approaching Commencement of High Point College is the fact that the graduating class is composed of more boys than girls, there being 25 of the former and 16 of the latter. On Tuesday evening, May 23, a concert will be given by the music department on Friday evening, May 25, the annual essay and oratorical contest will be held at 8 o'clock in Roberts Hall auditorium, when two medals will be presented, the orators' medal, given by S. Robinowitz to the senior boys delivering the best oration, and the Charlotte M. Amos medal, given by Mrs. R. T. Amos, for the best essay by a senior girl. Saturday, May 27, is Senior Class Day, when the program will be presented by the seniors. On Sunday morning, May 28, the Baccalaureate sermon will be delivered by President G. I. Humphreys in First church, and the imposing procession of faculty and seniors clad in classic robes and caps will take place. At the evening service Dr. E. A. Sexsmith, chairman of the board of Christian Education, will make a special address to the Seniors. On Monday morning, May 29, at 10:30 o'clock the graduation exercises will be held in the auditorium, when Dr. W. P. Few, president of Duke University, Durham, will speak, and diplomas will be presented and degrees conferred. Among these graduates are two of First church's popular young people, Miss Ina McAdams and C. L. Gray, Jr.

A highly enjoyable feature of Music Week as celebrated in High Point last week was the recital in the college auditorium of Miss Alma Andrews, accomplished pianist and daughter of Dr. and Mrs. R. M. Andrews, and Miss Dorothy Hoskins, an alumna and talented soprano singer. This recital was attended by a large number of music lovers and interested relatives and friends, and the young musicians received many complimets for their artistic grace ad poise. Miss Andrews has completed her junior year in music. The last concert of Music Week was given in the High School auditorium on Sunday afternon at 3 o'clock, when Hubert Liverman and Miss Iris Welch, students of the college, presented a program of beautiful music. Miss Welch plays the flute and Mr. Liverman the piano and trumpet.

On Sunday morning at 11 o'clock after a beautiful address appropriate to Mother's Day given by Rev. R. I. Farmer, Holy Communion was observed with Rev. P. S. Kennett assisting, and a noticeable feature of this service was the large number of young people who joined in this sacred rite. Mrs. John C. Whitesell sang a lovely solo, "I Have a Dream," in excellent voice.

On Monday evening the Senior C. E. Society had as special guests the mothers of the members and the C. E. Society of Calvary Moravian church, Winston-Salem. Mrs. T. R. Ballard arranged the program and talked on "Honoring Our Mothers." "My Mother" was beautifully sung by Mrs. J. H. Allred. A reading, "A Little Parable for Mothers," was presented by Miss Ina McAdams, the part of the mother being taken by Mrs. Blair. Following the program a delightful social hour was directed by Miss Myrtle Davis. Music was furnished by the brass quartet from the High School, and punch and cake were served by Misses Callie Warner, Josephine Ferguson, and Esther Pritchard. Next Sunday, May 21, the pastor will be absent at East Bend, when he will deliver the sermon to the graduating class of the High School, and his pulpit will be filled by Rev. A. G. Dixon, a beloved former pastor who served here nine years from 1908-17. In the evening service of that day, the pastor plans to observe the annual Florence Nightingale service, and the nurses of the city are cordially invited to be special guests.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock for Mrs. James C. Welch, 422 North Wrenn street, who died at the home Friday afternoon, following an illness of several months. She was a member of First church, and was born in Randolph County, November 6, 1878, her maiden name having been Miss Lula May Nance. She and Mr. Welch were married July 4, 1902, and have made their home in High Point since that time. Relatives who survive are the husband, James C. Welch, four sons, Burrus, James V., William, and Guy Welch, and one daughter, Mrs. Leona May Price, all of High Point. At the last rites Rev. Mr. Farmer was assisted by Dr. A. G. Dixon, of the Children's Home, and a mixed quartette, composed of Prof. E. B. Stimson, John Taylor, Misses Margaret Neese and Helen Johnston, sang "Abide With Me" and "Peace, Perfect Peace." The acting pallbearers were Messrs. W. P. Moffitt, Julius Holton, Charles Murphy, William Nance, Paul Davis, and Bruce H. Carraway. Burial was made in the family plot in Oakwood cemetery. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved husband, daughter, and sons by a large number of friends.

The membership welcomes new additions in the following: Miss Gladys Snipes from Orange Circuit, Mrs. W. C. Ferree and Miss Etta Lee Bencini from Wesley Memorial M. E. church, James Edward Johnson, member of the Sabbath school, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Culler, three daughter, Misses Irene, Ethel and Dorothy Alice, and two sons, David and Louis, fom Pinnacle-Mount Zion Charge, (Dorothy coming on profession of faith), Miss Callie Warner, who transfers from one of Rev. G. L. Reynolds' churches on Why Not Circuit, and L. D. Gibson, who married one our popular girls, Miss Lois Snipes.

A letter received yesterday from Mrs. R. I. Farmer at Tucson, Arizona, brings the happy news that she is feeling better and prospects for rapid improvement since the operation for necrosis of the jaw-bone are very favorable. Mrs. Farmer is lonely and, of course, misses the home-folks and her church, and would be delighted to hear from her friends at her new address, 621 East Sixth street. She describes the sunsets in Tucson as unusually beautiful, and the giant cacti, sometimes 40 feet in height, which Harold Bell Wright calls "lonely sentinels of the desert," as unique and weird. She has seen the ranch and home of the author near Tucson. The mountains all around the city, though bare and rugged, have a beauty all their own.

Cedar Cliff, Mt. Hermon Charge.—We have been busy for the past two weeks planning our home-coming day, which was held Sunday, May 14.

We had Sunday school at 9:30 and then at 11 o'clock we started the home-coming service. The Cedar Cliff choir sang two songs, followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Mabry. Rev. G. W. Holmes was the first speaker. He used as his subject "Mother, Home, Heaven." Mr. G. N. Enfield, principal of the Saxapahaw graded school and pastor of Bethlehem church, was the next speaker. Mr. Mabry ended the talks. The choir sang another song and we were dismissed by Rev. G. W. Holmes.

A table 60 feet long was then waiting for us. We had the table spread and the crowd gathered around and enjoyed it. After a hand-shake and talk with all the old friends we went back for the afternoon service. We had all the speaking in the morning and the different choirs were with us for the afternoon service. The following choirs and persons took part: The Bethel choir, two selections and a duet; "I Wear a White Rose For You" was sung by Misses Lottie Lee Foust and Opal Cook; the Glen Hope quartet, two selections; the Central quartet, three selections; Mount Hermon choir, three selections; Swepsonville girls, Misses Nance and Conkling, sang two duets; the Thompson girls, from Mount Hermon church sang a duet. We took an offering for Mr. Easley while he sang and played a song. All of the choirs together than sang "In That Land Where We'll Never Grow Old." Mr. Mabry dismissed us. All the folks enjoyed it and remained to hear more, but some of the folks lived a distance and wanted to leave. We had a splendid crowd, the church being overfilled both morning and evening.

A new piano was sent to us by Rich and Thompson to be used for the occasion, and we hope to keep it. Green and McClure furnished extra chairs. We had lots of pretty flowers in church and cemetery.

We have been having our prayer meeting on Sunday night. The last Sunday night we had it at the church and I guess we will continue to have it there throughout the summer months.

We are planning to have Sunday school a half hour earlier in order that we may go to Mount Hermon to the memorial service.

Forsyth Charge.—Since oor last report we have held our revival meeting at Union Ridge church, with Rev. R. S. Troxler as pulpit help. Brother Troxler preached with great earnestness and his messages were highly pleasing to all who attended. Two new members were received as a result of the meeting. On Sunday before the meeting began we received two splendid members into this church, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. White, from First Church, Winston-Salem. This was the second time I had the pleasure of receiving Brother White into the church, I having received him into First Church during my pastorate there several years ago.

Recently a Workers' Council was organized at Maple Springs Church. The meetings will be held monthly. The revival at this church will begin the fourth Sunday in this month.

I feel that the work on the charge is in a normal condition, with the people a little more hopeful as they begin the second half of the Conference year.

Brothers Harvey Rothrock, of Union Ridge, and Fleet Kimel, of Mount Carmel, are the nominees for delegate to the Annual Conference.

At this writing Brother P. W. Mock, of Union Ridge Church, one of the oldest and most faithful members on the entire charge, is confined to his bed. We are hoping and praying for his speedy recovery.

Winston, First.—Sunday was a beautiful day. How fitting for the weather to be beautiful on a day like Mother's Day! The worship services were very effective and impressive in our church Sunday. Dr. Pritchard preached a wonderful sermon on "Mother's Day."

Mrs. Pritchard was back with us after a pleasant visit with her brother.

Mrs. H. O. Sapp has been attending right often recently; we are so glad she is able to do so.

One of our members has been very ill, but is improving slightly. Miss Pauline Tise is the one of whom we speak. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

The Booster's Class is serving supper to the Worker' Council on Thurday evening. Miss Margaret Smith is chairman of the committee and we think she is carrying out her duty splendidly.

May I personally say "Thank you," to all those in our city and outside, whom I have not had the privilege of thanking face to face, for all the kindnesses shown to me during my illness. I am exceedingly thankful to say that I am back to work and much better.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—Our faithful pastor, Rev. J. L. Love, is still bringing us interesting and inspiring sermons.

At the regular evening services Easter Sunday night the young people of the church beautifully presented the wonderful pageant, "The Lord of Life."

Saturday, May 6, the Area meeting was held here with a representation from here and Fairview. We were indeed glad to have our president, Dr. R. M. Andrews with us.

Our C. E. Society is still trying to press forward. Sunday night Mother's Day was observed by a program which included a play, "Our Queen of the May." Another interesting feature was a duet by little Misses Elaine and Hortense Foster, aged about eight and twelve years, respectively, who sang beautifully in their sweet, childish voices, "A Child At Mother's Knee."

Among the high school graduates of '33 are Marvin Smith and Lottie Herrison.

Miss Emma Lee Poole, a teacher of the community and president of our C. E. Society, has returned to her home in Greenville for her vacation. Miss Lucille Davis, vice-president of the society, is faithfully taking charge.

Best wishes to the faithful editor and the readers of the Herald.

Spring Hill, North Davidson Charge.—Our church work is still moving along very well. The Sunday school continues to grow. On the first Sunday evening of this month there were 165 preset for Sunday school; there are only 182 on roll. For the preaching service on this day there was a greater number present.

On our last preaching service the minister, Rev. O. C. Loy, delivered a very helpful and inspiring sermon on the subject, "Salvation Rejected," using as the Scripture a part of the 23rd chapter of St. Luke. Each one present received much inspiration from this sermon. He expressed the conditions which we all face. Some people reject Christ for material wealth. Many are found in places that Christ would condemn them for if He were here.

Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of the Conference, visited this church on last Sunday.

On last Sunday after Sunday school the Junior Christian Endeavor Society gave a program for Mother's Day. This program was given in honor of the mothers. The program was entertaining, one of the best the Juniors have ever given. The leader for this program was George Haynes. After he had given the leader's talk, Mary Ellen Payne gave a welcome. One of the most interesting numbers was "The Origin of Mother's Day," by Annie Lee York. Grace Haynes read the poem, "Somebody's Mother."

The Senior Christian Endeavor met in regular session on last Sunday evening with Mr. Richard Byerly as leader. The subject for the program was "Why Marriages Succeed or Fail." Mrs. Everett Swaim is in charge of the next program.

Mrs. Fait Griffin was welcomed to church again last Sunday, after having suffered an illness for several weeks.

Liberty, Liberty Charge.—Our work has been going forward in a very satisfactory manner.

Rev. Mr. Love brought a very fine gospel message Sunday evening. His theme, "A Christian Mother," was very appropriate and impressive.

A unique feature was carried out. Children sat in the pew with their mothers. I believe if more families would have their own accustomed pew and the whole family sit together it would be a benediction to the children around which sweet memories would linger throughout their entire lives.

Dr. P. E. Lindley, dean of High Point College, delivered the baccalaureate sermon to the seniors of Liberty High School on Sunday morning. His theme was "The Measures of a Christian Life." This sermon was very edifying and uplifting and full of the most splendid advice to the 24 seniors. Our Methodist Protestants among the seniors are Varnell Allred, Mary Bowman Shepard, Dwight Gregerson, Herman Smith, Dudley Coble and Grier Lineberry. We congratulate them.

Mesdames Joe Swaim and Clarence Highfill were point hostesses to the Philathea class at the home of Mrs. Swaim on Fayetteville street on Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

Beautiful flowers were tastefully arranged in the home. Devotionals were led by Mrs. Mary Hornaday, followed by prayer by Mrs. Fred R. Love. Mrs. Mamie Smith gave a very interesting history of the "Life of Abraham." Mrs. F. A. Shepard gave a splendid account of "The Life of Noah," followed by prayer by our pastor. Then an hour of merry-making games was directed by Mesdames Love and Hodgin, after which dainty refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Misses Josephine and Mozelle Smith.

Our mid-week prayer services are well-attended. May the Lord bestow His richest blessings on these meetings.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Shepard have been quite sick with influenza, but are much improved at this writing.

Rev. and Mrs. Fred R. Love and son visited Mr. Love's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R.H. Love in Concord last week. They also visited other relatives and friends while there.

We are purchasing one hundred new songbooks for our church and Sunday school.

Rev. and Mrs. Love will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Reitzel at their hospitable home Friday evening of this week.

Church members, don't forget to invite your pastor and family into your homes for dinner or tea; much good will be derived by this act of brotherly love to both pastor and people.

Best wishes to our editor and Herald readers.

Kannapolis.—Our Area meeting for Stewards was held Sunday afternoon, May 14, at Concord First M. P. church, with Rev. J. M. Morgan acting as chairman. Twenty-five were present at this enthusiastic meeting, although rather discouragingn financial reports came from each church represented. These reports were followed with an open forum discussion of ways and means of raising church finance. The subject of tithing was brought up and fifteen of the twenty-five present pledged themselves to tithe for one month, and they if they see fit to make it a practice of their life. Six reported that they were already tithing and with great success. This meeting voted unanimously recommendingn each pastor to preach a sermon on Stewardship and Tithing. At Kannapolis, by virtue of a gift from Mr. D. A. McLaurin, we are giving out tithing literature to our people each Sunday, with the hope that our people wil become educated on tithing. Before adjourning the stewards present pledged themselves to more efficient work the remainder of the year.

Our little church at Kannapolis is growing steadily under the handicaps that encumber it. The building and loan payments have become a considerable problem, but the pecliarity of this people is that in an emergency they always rally to the need. But would it not be a better plan to so diligently work so as to prevent such crises?

To date we have received 17 new members into our church since conference, and several others have signified their intention of uniting with us by letter. We are very hapy to welcome these new members into our church and trust that it will prove a blessing both to them and to the church.

We want to thannk these good people at Kannapolis for the fine hospitality shown my father, Mr. Morris, and me during our revival meeting last month. Father received a neat donation and he and mother a splendid linen shower. In this way I express their appreciation.

Our program committee, Mrs. W. T. Kiser and Mrs. C. B. McCommons, are arranging for a Children's Day service the second Sunday in June. A fine program is assured.

We are looking forward to our annual Home Coming which will be the third Sunday in June. The program has not as yet been completed, but is to be an all-day affair, morning and evening, with dinner on the grounds. We trust that many of our good friends will see fit to be with us on this date.

We are anticipating living in Kannapolis as soon as college is out the last of this month. My sister, Miss Gladys Morris, is considering staying with me this summer to do light housekeeping with me.

We ask for your prayers that we may ever push forward in the Master's service.

CLARENCE P. MORRIS, Pastor.

Spring Church Charge.—Sunday, May 14, was a good day on Spring Church charge. At Spring Church Sunday morning Mother's Day was celebrated. Just prior to the sermon a number of children from C. E. Dimick's Sunday school class gave a number of readings bearing on mother, then two girls carried baskets of white and red flowers to the mothers present whose mothers were not living and giving red flowers to mothers who are still blessed with living mothers. The junior choir then sang an appropriate Mother's Day song. This was followed by a special Mother's Day sermon by the pastor. The entire service was impressive. At the evening hour at Pleaant Hill the regular prayer service was held. Mr. Temana Hart was the leader. In connection with the prayer service a short Mother's Day program was rendered. Miss Aubrey Crew had charge of this. Several members of the Christian Endeavor Society gave readings bearing on Mother's Day. Talks on mothers and Mother's Day were given by Mr. John Hart, Mr. M. L. Crew and by the pastor. A number of special songs were rendered by the choir.

We are glad to report that the sick among our number are improving. Mrs. J. W. Magee, who has been confined to his bed for a number of weeks, is able to sit up for a short while.

Mrs. Rose Crew is always cheerful, though much of her time has to be spent in bed.

Master William Robinson, who was stricken with pneumonia April 4, and was carried to the hospital for treatment three weeks ago, was removed to his home last Friday and is getting along nicely. Little Miss Evelyn Grant, who also had pneumonia, has just about recovered. We are thankful all are improving and we hope they will all be able to attend church.

Quite a number of the good folks are still remembering the parsonage family. Since last report the following have contributed to our needs: Mesdames J. W. Crew, Rupert M. Robinson, J. J. Massey, J. M. Dunham, J. W. Magee, W. W. Harris, Jim Woodruff, M. L. Crew, George Balmer, C. E. Dimick and Miss Aubrey Crew; Messrs. M. L. Crew, John Hart, W. W. Grant and Jack Camp. The two last mentioned have given some fine rock-fish twice.

Miss Virginia Grant, of High Point College, spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Grant. We are glad that in a few more weeks our young folks who are away at college will be at home.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Boyce, of Lumberton, spent the week-end with Mrs. Boyce's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Crew, and worshipped at Spring Church Sunday morning. We are always glad to welcome visitors.

MRS. Wm. H. NEESE.

Rockingnham.—Our Sunday school was held at 9:30, May 14, with an attendance above average. We are trying to increase the attendance by inviting some one to come with us each Sunday.

The Mothers' Day program was held at 10 o'clock. The program was splendid showing fine co-operation among the children and their leaders. Preaching services began at 11:00. Rev. C. W. Saunders took his text from the 20th chapter of John "Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed." He preached a very impressive sermon concerning our best friend, Mother.

His text for the 9 o'clock service was taken from Numbers 32:23: "Be sure your sins will find you out."

The appearance of our church on the inside has been improved by elevating the choir and by putting a curtain around it. The Ladies' Auxiliary held a chicken supper at the home of Mrs. W. T. Brown. A good amount was raised, two dollars of which was given on the piano debt. The membership of the Auxiliary is not as large as we would like, but we hope to gain more members and do greater work in the future.

The second quarterly conference will be held here May 24. We are expecting Dr. Andrews to preside.

We are planning to have a Children's Day program some time in June.

English Street Church, High Point.—Our revival began Sunday, May 7, and will probably continue through this week. There have been several conversions; also seven members were taken into the church on Sunday night.

Our Sunday school seems to be progressing. For the past three months we have had an attendance and offering contest between the classes. The class having the highest average attendance receives an attendance banner. An offering banner goes to the class having the highest percentage in offering during the three months. The contest closed this past Sunday. The attendance banner went to the "Scrap Iron" class (Intermediate boys). Miss Tressie Caudle is teacher of this class. The Ladies' Bible Class, with Mrs. A. N. Lineback, teacher, was awarded the offering banner.

Sunday morning at 11 o'clock we observed Mother's Day. Our pastor, Rev. C. H. Hill, brought a most impressive sermon appropriate to the occasion. We were also favored with special music at this time. First was a duet, "Sweetest Mother," rendered by Misses Ernestine and Maxine Kennedy. Miss Myrtle Moore and A. W. Montgomery also rendered a duet, "Precious Memories."

The C. E. Society gave a special program for the mothers at their regular meeting on Sunday evening. Miss Bernice Livengood was leader.

We are sorry to report that several of our number are sick. Mrs. A. W. Phillips is seriously ill at the High Point Hospital. Mrs. J. A. Bowers and Miss Myrtle Cates, who have been ill for the past month, do not seem much improved. We miss all of these at church, and hope for each a speedy recovery. REPORTER.

Mount Pleasant, North Davidson.—The fourth Sunday in April Bro. O. C. Loy delivered a wonderful sermon on the subject, "The Forsaken Christ." Taking for his text John 6:66. Peter said he would never forsake Jesus, but he did. People today do the same; they belong to the church but follow the way of society. The children need pleasures but they do not need the kind they get. Some say, "Christ I will forsake Thee now but after I have had some more of my pleasures I will follow Thee," and several times it is too late when they turn to follow Jesus. The greatest pleasure in the world is following Jesus. Some people have forsaken Christ in political life, if it were not so, there would be no beer sold that is on the market today. Do not forsake Christ now, so when the last mile of life comes you will not have to go alone.

The second Sunday night of this month, Dr. R. M. Andrews was with us and rendered an inspiring message on the "Law of Growth." He brought out some very interesting points.

Our Sunday school is getting along nicely.

On the fourth Sunday of this month, May 28, a Memorial service will be held at this church. The public is invited to attend this service. MILDRED GREEN, Reporter.

Asheboro.—Sunday morning, May 7, Rev. R. C. Stubbins, pastor, preached the commencement sermon at Gray's Chapel, and his pulpit was filled by Rev. N. M. Harrison. At the evening hour all met in the school auditorium where the annual sermon was delivered by Dr. R. S. Truesdale, pastor of the M. E. church. Other ministers of the town took part in the service. On Monday evening the diplomas were presented to a class of 61, this being the largest in the history of the school. Those graduating from our Sunday school and church were Betsy Bulla, Catherine Presnell, Elizabeth Hammond, Arthur Way, Jr., Mazel Lee McCain, Mildred Milks, Clarice Henley, Edith E. Brown, James Holder and Margaret Wilson. Rev. Mr. Stubbins made a brief but beautiful talk last Sunday morning on "The Influence of Parents," after which Holy Communion was observed by a large number. The choir sang an anthem, "Be With Us Yet." At the evening hour Mrs. Jesse Alderman's class in violin presented an interesting program, which included pupils from the different church of Asheboro and some from Greensboro.

Mr. W. A. Wood died on April 24th after a number of years of ill health. He was a member of Mount Lebanon M. P. Church at Randleman. Funeral services were held at Melanchton Lutheran church, near Liberty, on Tuesday afternoon by Rev. R. C. Stubbins, assisted by Rev. Joel B. Trogdon, of Randleman; Rev. W. F. Ashburn, of Greensboro, and Rev. A. O. Lyerly, of Liberty. The family are attendants of our church and Miss Leona Wood is a member.

Our church has lost a valuable member in the sudden death of Mrs. Wiley Ward on Sunday night, April 30th. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Nancy Burroughs, of Ether; her husband, W. L. Ward, a prominent church workers, and seven children: Mrs. Nettie Ward York, Mrs. Frances White, both of Ashcboro; Leonard Ward, Worthville; George, John, Robert and Jesse, all of Asheboro. The funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon in Asheboro church by her pastor, Rev. Mr. Stubbins, and a former pastor, Dr. J. E. Pritchard, of Winston-Salem. Burial followed in the Asheboro cemetery. There were many beautiful floral offerings borne by many friends.

Pine Grove Church, Kernersville Charge.—On last first Sunday morning at 11 o'clock our pastor brought us another very helpful sermon from St. Mark 5:36, using for his subject, "Be not afraid, only believe." He explained very plainly what it will mean to our lives if we will only do as Jesus told Jairus, one of the rulers of the synagogue, who came to Jesus when his little daughter lay at the point of death, begging Him to come and lay His hand on her that she might be healed and live.

On last Friday evening our Christian Endeavor Society held its regular weekly meeting with Mr. Ned Ingram leader.

Our pastor, Mr. Grant, is conducting Bible studies on each Tuesday evening for the Young Men's Sunday School Class.

Dedication of our church and Home-Coming will be held the first Sunday in June; dedication service at 11 o'clock, and Home-Coming in the afternoon. A most cordial invitation is extended to all former pastors, members and friends of Pine Grove Church.

Community Church, Thomasville.—The Y. L. Circle held its regular monthly meeting on last Monday at the home of Miss Pearl Perry. Circle No. 1 met with Mrs. J. N. Myers, and Circle No. 2 with Mrs. L. R. Hall. All reported good meetings.

The service on last Sunday morning honoring "Mother" was very impressive. An interesting feature in the program were readings given by Miss Ruth Bellamy, teacher at High Point College, on "Mother." Rev. Surratt gave an exceedingly fine talk on the subject of the day and special music was rendered by both the Intermediate and Senior choirs.

We had no service Sunday evening as the Baccalaureate sermon was given at the High School for the Seniors, the speaker being Dr. Rondthaler, of Winston-Salem.

On Tuesday evening of this week the men of our church are staging a "Mother and Daughter Banquet." We expect 75 folks to attend and an excellent program is being worked up under the leadership of Mrs. Surratt and Mrs. J. W. Saunders. We know it will be a real "spread," and we are all expecting a good time, especially as the men are to do the waiting on the tables. This is unusual, and the women are wondering just what their men can do. Maybe they have been misjudged, all from lack of opportunity. We'll see.

A round-table discussions was led by Rev. A. D. Shelton on "Evangelizing the Youth," with many taking a part.

A wonderful message was brought by Rev. J. M. Morgan on "Evangelism and the Present Crisis." Remarks were made by Revs G. H. Hendry, A. D. Shelton and T. A. Williams.

The question arose for a place for the next meeting. Rev. E. G. Cowan gave a very hearty invitation to the Weaverville Church. This invitation was unanimously accepted. The time of the meeting is Monday after the third Sunday in August. The chairman, Rev. Mr. Hendry, suggested that we bring our wives, and a place on the program be given them. An afternoon and evening session will be planned.

We regret very much the absence of so many of our ministers in this district, and trust all will plan to attend the next one. We also regret the absence of Dr. Andrews, and we take the pleasure now to ask him to plan to be with us in August.

We would not forget the hospitality of the good ladies of the Lincolnton Church for the wonderful dinner and refreshments which they served in the basement of the church. It was greatly ejoyed by all.

We are trusting that the Lord will give abundant crops.

LOYALTY LEAGUE

Since our last report we have received the following enrollments in the League:

Orange Charge: Eleanor B. Craig, W. A. Davies.

Tabernacle Charge: T. B. Reynolds, Rev. G. L. Curry, Mrs. G. L. Curry, Virginia Curry (Junior League), W. T. Hanner, Mrs. W. T. Hanner.

Burlington, First: Edwin H. Moore, Miss Ila Stafford, T. T. Stafford, Mrs. T. T. Stafford.

Kernersville Charge: Lucile Ingram, Blanche Ingram.

A generous enrollment from Central Church, Thomasville, will be ready for publication next week.

Bro. T. T. Stafford, secretary-treasurer of the League in the Burlington Church, sends $14.74 along with the above list, and assures that other names will be added from that church within the next few days.

Bro. L. L. Wrenn, who is heading the League effort in the Siler City Church, sends check for $12.00, but does not send list of those enrolled. We hope to have that by next week.

It is gratifying to know that the League is growing, and we are very grateful to these charges for their reports, and for the cash they are sending in.

There is merit in this League, and enough, we are convinced, to see us through this crisis. And now that business is "picking up," the League should grow more rapidly. The work is going on in different parts of the Conference, and we expest worth while reports from other charges in the near future. MAY IS HIGH POINT COLLEGE MONTH—a good time to work the League. Let's pile up a big enrollment during these remaining day.

Things to Remember

1. Send all pledge cards direct to the undersigned.
2. Those who enroll in the League keep the Certificate of Membership.
3. Send monthly payments on pledges to Prof. C. R. Hinshaw, High Point, N. C., except when payments accompany the pledge cards. In that case, send the money, along with the cards, to the undersigned.

TABERNACLE MEMORIAL SERVICE

The Tabernacle Memorial Service which for a number of years has been observed on the third Sunday of May has been changed from that date and will be observed on the first Sunday of June. It is hoped that the public will take notice of this change and will govern themselves accordingly. Rev. G. F. Millaway, who introduced the idea of memorial day when pastor of Tabernacle some years ago, will be present this year and will preach the sermon at the 11 o'clock hour. It is hoped that the many friends of Tabernacle will be present on this day.

GEO. L. CURRY, Pastor.

THAT GILES CHAPEL ANNIVERSARY

Even though we are a considerable distance away there is still considerable interest in the One Hundredth Anniversary celebration at Giles Chapel Methodist Protestant church and the unveiling of a monument to Reuben Giles and his wife, who gave the land on which the church stands, which exercises are to take place next Sunday, May 21. Rev. Jesse L. Giles, son of Reuben Giles, married as his second wife a sister of Bros. L. F., M. D., and N. B. Brawell and Mrs. W. T. Collins, of our church here, and both he and his wife are buried at Union Ridge Methodist Protestant church,, which is inside the city of Winston-Salem. Jesse A. Giles, an attorney of Chapel Hill and son of Rev. Jesse Giles, spent his boyhood days at Pinnacle, only a short distance from here, while his father was pastor of our church there; and married a daughter of Emmanuel Culler and his wife, who were leading citizens of this section of the state. Other members of the Culler family live in this city. It is expected that several of our people here will go down to Giles next Sunday.

And while my mind is on this old home church let me say that but few, if any, of our churches have furnished more preachers and ministers than has Giles Chapel. Among them I could mention Rev. Arrington Gray, Rev. Jesse L. Giles, Rev. Jackson Laughlin, Rev. T. T. Ferree, M. D., Rev. Lemuel Davis, Rev. George Laughlin, Rev. W. O. Davis, Rev. Joel B. Trogdon, Rev. H. B. Isley and yours truly. Revs. Gray, Giles, Jackson Laughlin, Ferree, W. O. Davis, Trogdon and I have all served many years in the active pastorate while the others named have not taken regular work. Rev. Jesse Bonkemeyer, who is now a minister in the Congregational Church, was a member of the Sunday school there, though I do not believe he ever joined the church there. Were I to attempt to enumerate the noble band of laymen who have gone out from there it would take more space than the editor could spare. So, why should we not feel proud of the old home church? Needless to say that the thoughts of many of us will be in that direction and we hope to meet many of the old friends there on next Sunday.

This church was on the first charge served by Rev. G. F. Millaway and was on the last charge served by Rev. A. W. Lineberry, D.D. If I am not mistaken, it was on the first charge served by Rev. J. H. Bowman. Mr. J. C. Allred is writing a history of the church and I understand he has the names of all the pastors who have served the church since 1876.

So, you that have gone out from there and are still living, meet me there next Sunday. And while there is a great army that has fallen in the ranks, yet somehow we shall feel that they will be back in spirit form to rejoice over the victories won.

This church is one mile off of state highway 62 that runs from Asheboro to Liberty, and is about four miles northeast of Asheboro.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

* Subsidy paid in full.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

What Happened to That $750?

About the first of April an appeal went out for $750 for the immediate relief of the HERALD, the money to be raised within thirty days, otherwise there was grave danger that the HERALD would have to suspend publication, at least on the once-a-week basis.

Almost two months have passed and the HERALD is still being printed once a week. Some one may ask, How come? If the need was as desperate as that appeal indicated, how can the HERALD go on? Well, it will not take long to give an answer. In the first place, the necessary operating expenses of the printing plant have been materially reduced by the discharge of a portion of the employees, necessitating long hours and undue strain on the part of those remaining to perform the necessary tasks. In the second place, while not half of the amount asked for was received, enough did come in to relieve some of the immediate pressure, and efforts are being made to defer some of the remaining obligations, to be paid off as the money is received from the Subsidy Fund and from the underwritings of the Conference organizations. The North Carolina Branch of Woman's Work made their payment of $100, thus materially aiding in the emergency.

The paper is struggling along—and struggle is the right word—depending on the subscriptions from the charges, on the amount allotted for the Subsidy, and on the amounts allocated to the Conference, the Children's Home and the College. If these can come in promptly the HERALD can continue. We are urging the pastors and HERALD agents to use all possible diligence to secure subscriptions, new and renewals, and if it has not been raised, to raise the Subsidy at once.

There has thus far been a splendid response to the appeal we made in last week's issue to "be one of fifty to lend the Conference $10.00"; yet we are still a long way from the goal, time is fleeting, and the obligations become continually more pressing. If you haven't sent in your pledge, DO SO AT ONCE. No demand will be made for the money until the fifty have been secured.

Full Time to League Work

At the request of the committee, Lebanon has agreed to release the writer from now until the first of July that he may give full time to the League work. This has been done with full approval of the President of the Conference, who is a member of the committee appointed by the Board of Education to promote this undertaking. This action of the Lebanon church is a recognition on the part of our people there of the necessity of this undertaking, and their desire to help in it. The action of the church was not only unanimous, but hearty. This change in our plan of operation has grown out of two facts. First, the possibilities of the League; second, the difficulty of getting it established in the conference. We have full faith that the League is a way of financial deliverance for us, but at the same time we are convinced that it can not be established in the conference without the efforts of a full-time worker. The process of establishing it will be a slow one, too. But it can be done in course of time. And our creditors will be tolerant with us if they know that a plan is working that will ultimately bring in some money. It is my purpose to get out on this mission at once, and to press it with all possible diligence between now and July first. And I covet, of course, the full co-operation of our pastors and people. Without this the effort is already doomed to failure. If the people are of a willing mind, we can do this thing. May it not be said by any one, "The brethren have discouraged our hearts." NOW FOR A UNITED AND ENTHUSIASTIC EFFORT FOR THE LEAGUE.

S. W. Taylor, Director.

PRAYER AND HOLINESS

Prayer and a holy life are one. They mutually act and react. Neither can survive alone. The absence of the one is the absence of the other. The monk depraved prayer, substituted superstition for praying, mummeries and routine for a holy life. We are in danger of substituting churchly work and a ceaseless round of showy activities for prayer and holy living. A holy life does not live in the closet. If, by any chance, a prayer chamber should be established without a holy life, it would be a chamber without the presence of God in it.—Purpose in Prayer.

AN APPEAL FOR THE LOYALTY LEAGUE FROM THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

We are glad to announce to all the readers of the Herald and to all others, who are interested in the success of the Loyalty League, that the Lebanon Church has released Dr. S. W. Taylor from the duties of pastor until the first of July in order that he may devote his full time to the work of the League. On the success of the League much depends. Dr. Taylor has entered wholeheartedly into the work. The work must succeed. Dr. Taylor cannot by himself or with the aid of a few make it succeed as fully as it should. The combined work of all is needed. The League has been growing fairly well but it should grow more rapidly. Now that Dr. Taylor can give his full time and his boundless energy to the work until the first of July, the officers of the Board of Education are writing this letter to urge every pastor and every interested layman to give Dr. Taylor all possible co-operation in this exceedingly important work. With a full measure of co-operation from all the work of the League will succeed. We are counting on you.

We also wish to express our appreciation to the congregation of the Lebanon Church for its generous act in releasing Dr. Taylor until July the first so that he can push the Loyalty League campaign.

Respectfully,
T. M. Johnson, President,
C. R. Hinshaw, Secretary.

WHO WILL SACRIFICE?

A missionary on furlough was invited to a fine dinner where he met a number of confessing Christians, who had been blessed with riches. As he sat beside them at the dinner, he could not help thinking of the terrible poverty and ignorance of the heathen people among whom he labored for Christ's sake. Later, writing a letter to his wife, he said: "Dear Wife, I have had dinner at a great hotel with interesting people. But I saw such strange things! There were some who wore a whole church building; some wore about twenty cottage organs, such as we could make good use of in our village meetings. Others wore as much as twenty libraries, and hundreds of Bibles! I, in my shabby suit, was nevertheless grateful that I did not wear so much that others need!"—Publisher Unknown.

USE OR LOSE

An eastern allegory runs thus: "A merchant, going abroad for a time gave to two of his friends two sacks of wheat each, to take care of against his return. Years passed. When he came back, he applied for them again.

"The first took him into a storehouse, and showed him his sacks; but they were mildewed and worthless.

"The other led him into the open country, and pointed to field after field of waving wheat, the produce of the two sacks given to him.

"Said the merchant: 'You have been a faithful friend. Give me two sacks of that wheat; the rest shall be thine'."

Let us put to good use the talents God has given us.—D. L. Moody.

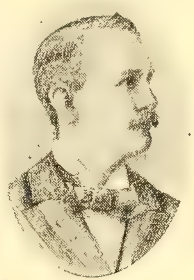
Whence and Why the Anti-Saloon League?

Sometimes Howard Russell is asked how he came to initiate the Anti-Saloon League movement as its founder. Some of the facts relating to the matter he gives as follows:



Mr. H. H. Russell

The Anti-Saloon League was founded at Oberlin, Ohio, May 24, 1893, "to unite the churches against the liquor traffic." As a young lawyer in Iowa from 1878 to 1893, Mr. Russell had prosecuted law-breaking liquor dealers and had learned the criminality and stony indifference to the rights of others, especially the families that were being destroyed by the liquor. He had observed the constant practice of these men to commit perjury in court.

Afterward, during the five years which Russell spent at Oberlin College and School of Religion in preparing himself for the gospel ministry, he assisted the college authorities in keeping liquor out of their college town. He was sent as delegate from Oberlin to temperance and anti-liquor conventions. Also during his last year at Oberlin, 1888, he was requested to represent the Oberlin Temperance Alliance at Columbus, the capital, and he there secured the introduction of a local option bill for townships. Through a friendship between the governor, J. B. Foraker, and himself, he succeeded by Foraker's quiet assistance in getting the Beatty bill enacted into law.

During the five years which followed, when he saw the evils of the liquor traffic in connection with his pastorate, he kept thinking of what had been done in Ohio and was more and more of the opinion that the right kind of state and national organization might bring good results by reduction of the sale and use of liquor. During those years—between 1888 and 1893—Mr. Russell was a home-mission pastor at Kansas City, Missouri, and at the Armour Mission, Chicago, Illinois. What he saw in both cities of the awful results of liquor would make a vivid, pastor's "Tale of Two Cities." Also he knew that the churches had "resolved" over and over against drink. The time to make good on the church resolutions, he believed, was long overdue. The Apostle John has told us: "The Son of God was manifested to destroy the works of the devil." (I John 3:8), and this traffic he knew was one of the most devilish.

In 1893, when Russell inquired he found that members of the Oberlin faculty and business men constituting the executive committee of the Oberlin Temperance Alliance, who remembered the success of his effort five years before, were willing to put Oberlin back of him if he would begin a state organization. Also his wife, aroused by the liquor evils she had seen, and after they had prayed much together, consented. Moreover, two near relatives of Russell were in premature graves from drink, and another just then was fighting for life. These and other facts were to Russell the call of duty.

As God inspired and guided Israel forty years by cloud and fire, so God has led the forty-year war of the churches' ballot-battles through to the Eighteenth Amendment victory and the thirteen succeeding years of far better conditions, taking the country as a whole, than we ever have known under license.

A Judge's Introduction of Doctor Russell

A West Virginia Federal judge who was chairman of an Anti-Saloon League meeting in that state, introduced Howard Russell with remarks in substance as follows:

"It is very rare that one who founds an important and difficult movement lives long enough to see it victorious. This has been the good fortune of our guest who speaks tonight.

"Several things about Doctor Russell I have found in 'Who's Who In America.' One of these is the fact that he was born in Stillwater, Minnesota, when that state was a territory with only about six thousand white inhabitants. This was due to the fact that his father, an Episcopal minister, had been appointed by his church as a missionary to the Sioux Indians. The spirit of love and sacrifice necessary for service as reformer thus came into Russell's life by hereditary inspiration. This and other facts which I have learned have led me into a solemn conviction that this man's life has been guided from early days to the present by the Supreme Being, who, when He desires work to be done, selects some submissive soul to whom, long before, he has given definite guidance in life. That Russell had been a lawyer and then a pastor before he founded this reform, were essential facts in his preparation."

—The drys had to get 12,000 signatures to their petition to have their dry candidates for delegates to the State Ratification Convention put on the official ballot. The law required not only their signatures, but also their street address, county, assembly district, election district, ward or town—a most difficult task. The drys had but little over a weeks to get their petitions signed, after they were printed. Some of the dry leaders thought that it was impossible to get 12,000 signatures in so short a time. The most optimistic of anyone, the editor of The Civic Bulletin, believed that we could get 25,000 signatures, but to the amazement of both drys and wets, more than 82,500 signatures to our petition arrived in time to be filed.—The Civic Bulletin.

Anti-Saloon League Declares Second War Against Alcoholism—Fortieth Anniversary Message from the League's Founder, Howard Hyde Russell

DEAR PASTORS AND PEOPLE, FRIENDS AND COMRADES, OLD AND NEW:

The churches are now in the second war against the liquor traffic. The First Dry War brought victory in 1920, but events of the past year have again plunged our nation and every home into sudden peril. A second and more zealous conflict by our pastors and churches is inevitable. "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink!"

Upon February 7 and 8, at Washington, a National Emergency Conference was held by church officers and by the Anti-Saloon League, Woman's Christian Temperance Union and other organizations. We agreed to unite for war. The Anti-Saloon League was requested to function strongly through its national, state and district departments, as in the past. Our League's 260 employes, 72 offices, publishing house, agents in every state, must speed up! Your help is needed. Please give careful attention:

First—Why We Are Where We Are. (1) Prohibition came when it did as the result of war conditions. Increased education, not less, was needed. But multitudes who voted for prohibition mistakenly thought in 1920, and since, the war was over. Brewers and drinkers persisted. (2) The hearings in 1930 of the Lobby Investigation committee of the Senate revealed a great conspiracy. Files were seized by the government, of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. Letters in these files disclosed that the highly advertised propaganda of alleged popular opposition to prohibition was a promotion scheme. It was financed by 53 millionaires, who controlled 40 billions of property. They fought the Eighteenth Amendment and thus undertook to shift millions of dollars of their income taxes by bringing back liquor revenue. Thus multitudes were deceived. (3) The awful World Depression, which would have been worse here if the old drinking had not been prohibited, brought chaos and confusion and demand for a change. November, 1932, was not a wet mandate but a "change" mandate.

Second—Never Forget! "Where There's Drink There's Danger!" The Bible warns, "At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." Liquor is more dangerous than ever. Now we have a swifter machine-age. In 1930 there were eleven million automobiles; now over twenty-four million. Take, for illustration, these recent drink horrors at Columbus, Ohio:

On Monday, January 2, 1933, Darl Armentrout—fine, sober youth, chief support of mother, unemployed father and five children—started afoot for a job in another city. Mary DeVennish, State University student, in her home on Briggsdale Road, at the noon hour, heard a terrific crash and thought she saw a tree-trunk in the air. It was the body of a man. William Foster, drunk, who drove at terrific speed, had hurled Earl's body sixty feet. Miss DeVennish told the grand jury; a prompt indictment for manslaughter; defendant admitted guilt. The judge gave this murderer "limit of the law."

Earl was killed by this auto.

At 3:00 p. m., on Good Friday, April 14, 1933, Josephine Gordon, 19, was knocked under the wheels of a street car by a drunken driver. She was badly crushed; conscious in her agony, and died three hours later. Josephine was a fine, educated young woman of high purposes and prospects. The driver, then on parole after conviction for previous drunkenness, is now in the workhouse and will be tried for manslaughter. This murderer is a young professional man. Prohibition repealed, the saloons flooding liquor, millions of engines on highways,—whose life would be safe? Your auto changes from a pleasure to a dread. Violent death is imminent. Repeal must be defeated!

JOSEPHINE GORDON

Third—What Is the Matter With Alcohol? Listen to science: The Carnegie Institute has declared: "Alcohol is not a stimulant but a depressant, it is not a food but a narcotic poison. Decreased organic efficiency results from very small doses." Doctor G. H. Richter, of Cornell Laboratory, says: "Alcohol produces reversible coagulation of the cell colloids. This means precipiation of the material, such as is produced in eggs when they are cooked. Whenever coagulation is too extensive or irreversible, death results." Doctor Ernest Scott, Medical Professor, Ohio State University, says the color of normal cell colloids is amber. Alcohol changes them to white. The foregoing scientific facts and an egg in alcohol may well be shown in your Sunday School. Then invite them to sign abstinence pledges.

A raw egg in alcohol

Fourth—What Shall We Do About This? With this nerve-poison threatening to come back to all parts of our nation, you naturally ask, what will the Anti-Saloon League do? Yes, quick action is needed. With your loyal help, this is the League's prompt program:

First: Challenge legality of the beer in Supreme court.

Second: Re-ratify the Eighteenth Amendment by defeating repeal in the states.

Third: Re-enact state statutes which the hysteria of the period has repealed.

Fourth: Re-elect dry congressmen who voted "no" and defeat wet ones. Slogan: "Make next Congress as dry as this is wet!" If we strongly organize and fight we can do it. The first primary (Illinois) is only a year away!

Fifth—A New Department—Lincoln-Lee Chain. A Great Orator Names This Army. Because everything depends upon a new and much stronger enrollment and mobilization than we ever have had, therefore the League invites you who read —EVERY DRY VOTER—to enlist in a new, powerful army. Let the late John G. Woolley furnish the name which he suggested at the Columbus convention in 1913. Mr. Woolley gave as a text for his address: Ezekiel 7:23—"Make the Chain." Here is a brief extract:

" 'Make the CHAIN!'

"Whenever and wherever mean-minded majorities conspire with business and politics in such a way as to produce, condone and facilitate crime in the congested, restless, dangerous centers of population, the standing order of Jehovah to the children of light is: 'Make the CHAIN!'

"A chain is a series of links, so engaged with one another as to exert their strength as a unit. It is never a rival of its component parts, or of links fit to be added. It is a method by which its members can add grappling facility to intrinsic strength and apply it as a power to the load.

" 'Make the CHAIN'!"

Sixth—Two Other Historic Names—Lincoln and Lee. A tall, vigorous man, a lawyer, rode horseback to churches and school-houses in central Illinois, warning against liquor. It was Abraham Lincoln. The pledge he invited people to sign was as follows: "Whereas, the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage is productive of pauperism, degradation and crime; and believing it is our duty to discourage that which produces more evil than good, we therefore pledge ourselves to abstain from the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage." In 1903 — thirty years ago — I found eight persons, near Springfield and elsewhere, who had signed this pledge in Lincoln's meeting in 1846 and had sacredly kept their pledge. In our League's abstinence department, Lincoln-Lee Legion, more than six million have signed this Lincoln pledge.

General Robert E. Lee, like Lincoln, was a life-long total abstainer. Like Lincoln, Lee strongly urged total abstinence to his soldiers, and later to his students when a college president. Lee frequently said: "Abstinence from spirituous liquors is the best safeguard to morals and helath."

EDWARD EVERETT HALE

Seventh—Another Notable Abstainer—Edward Everett Hale. Massachusetts clergyman and author, perhaps best known by his "Man Without a Country," when a Harvard student was one of the few abstainers. While pastor he was an advocate for abstinence and the pledge. Hale's story, "Ten Times One Is Ten," gives a method and slogan. They tell how to forge our dry voters' chain: Ten loving friends of an exemplary young Christian, after his death, multiplied publicity so that the ten passed on the inspiring facts to a hundred, the hundred to a thousand. "Lend a Hand Clubs" and other groups carried the helpful influence to thousands and millions. At last their slogan was known over the whole world: "Look up and not down, Look out and not in; Look forward and not back, and LEND A HAND."

Lincoln-Lee Chain began with links of ten dry voters, a hundred, a thousand! Twenty workers now are rapidly linking tens, hundreds and thousands. Will you become a link? Please "LEND A HAND!" Send for your enrollment blank.

Eighth—Second New Department—The Olympians—Voters of the Future. Theodore Roosevelt said: "Fighting for the right is the noblest sport in the world." Olympians is a good name for the voters of tomorrow linked in service with Lincoln-Lee Chain. Olympians! The word suggests strength, valor, service and, of course, sobriety. An old classical dictionary published more than one hundred years ago gives the ideals of the Grecian olympians and their contests for the olive crown. Modern American young men and women of high school age, who join the Olympians, declare their purpose to abstain from intoxicating liquors and to work for the abolition of the traffic therein.

For full information, program material and supplies, address the superintendent of your State Anti-Saloon League; or O. G. Christgau, National Secretary, care National Headquarters Anti-Saloon League, 43 Bliss Building, Washington, D. C.

Ninth—A Call to Pray. In 1873, the Prayer Crusade against liquor by afflicted women, began at Hillsboro and Washington Court House, Ohio. They prayed in saloons for deliverance from liquor. Many localities were delivered. The three major organizations of the First Dry War began, continued and conquered by prayer. Now let this unite in the prayer of good King Asa: When Zerah, the Ethiopian, came out against Judah with a force of "a thousand thousand,"—twice as great as Judah's—Asa cried unto the Lord: "Help us, O Lord, our God, for we trust in thee and in thy name we go against this multitude. O God, thou art our God; let not man prevail against thee!" Asa won permanent victory, for "the enemy were overthrown that they could not recover themselves, for they were destroyed before the Lord and before His host." Likewise may the hosts linked against liquor in America permanently prevail.

Tenth—What, Then, Is the Lincoln-Lee Chain? Every dry voter, of all creeds and political parties, who knows that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty" from liquor, is needed and is invited to be a "link" in this Chain. The links will be multiplied in every locality up to Hundreds, Thousands, Hundreds of Thousands and Millions. Everyone knows now, in view of what has shocked us during the past year, that a FAR STRONGER, MORE EAGER, BETTER ORGANIZED MAJORITY of the voters of the United States, in Christ's name, must fight to win the constant battles of the ballots until the organized liquor traffic is conquered. The Apostle John, in the first general epistle of John, 3:8, says: "For the Son of God was manifested to destroy the works of the devil." Shall not all exclaim in concert the words of Frances Willard: "I am but one, But I am ONE; I cannot do everything, But I can do SOMETHING; What I can do I ought to do, and with God's help I will do!" "For even the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister!"

Every reader is invited and urged to send at once a request for full information, including recruit's enrollment blank by which to enlist as a member of Lincoln-Lee Chain. Please address letter or post-card immediately, with your name and address, to The Lincoln-Lee Chain, care Rev. Howard Hyde Russell, National Marshal, 79 South Grove Street, Westerville, Ohio.

PUBLIC INTOXICATION REDUCED

Another demonstration of the reduced consumption of alcoholic beverages is in the lessening of public intoxication. Intoxication follows any considerable consumption of alcoholic liquors. Therefore where any considerable amount of alcohol is consumed it is evidenced to a greater of less extent in public intoxication. Any one who travels over this country, or has been familiar with conditions in the slums of our great cities, knows that public intoxication has practically disappeared in America. Drunken individuals were once common in our cities; now an intoxicated person is the unusual.

At campaign gatherings in the wet days the drunks were always evident. On a recent trip with President Hoover, during which he addressed more than 60,000 people in various meetings and at railway stations, not a single intoxicated person was seen in all the crowds or on the streets.

Let one of the most noted authorities in America speak upon the question of the liquor traffic and its human wreckage. Evangeline Booth, Commander-in-Chief of the Salvation Army, says: "In New York, before prohibition, the Salvation Army would collect 1,200 to 1,300 drunkards in a single night and seek to reclaim them. Prohibition immediately reduced this gathering to 400, and now we have no more than seven. * * * Today in our Memorial Hotel, where we house 4,800 men a week, we do not have more than four or five cases of intoxication, or one in a thousand."

Bishop W. N. Ainsworth declared on October 15, at Bessemer, Ala., that in traveling 30,000 miles over the country he had seen only two intoxicated persons.—The Christian Advocate.

THE FAITHFULNESS OF GOD

Want of trust is the root of almost all our sins and all our weaknesses; and how shall we escape it but by looking to Him and observing His faithfulness? * * * The man who holds God's faithfulness will not be foolhardy or reckless, but he will be ready for every emergency. The man who holds God's faithfulness will dare to obey Him, however impolitic it may appear. Abraham held God's faithfulness and offered up Isaac, "accounting that God was able to raise him * * * from the dead." Moses held God's faithfulness and led the millions of Israel into the waste, howling wilderness. Joshua knew Israel well, and was ignorant neither of the fortifications of the Canaanites nor of their martial prowess, but he held God's faithfulness and led Israel across the Jordan. The Apostles held God's faithfulness, and were not daunted by the hatred of the Jews or the hostility of the heathen * * * . "And what shall I more say? for the time would fail me to tell" of those who, holding God's faithfulness, had faith, and by it "subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises * * * out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to fight the armies of the aliens."

Satan, too, has his creed: Doubt God's faithfulness. "Hath God said? Are you not mistaken as to His commands? He could not really mean just that. You take an extreme view, give too literal a meaning to the words." How constantly, and, alas, how successfully are such arguments used to prevent whole-hearted trust in God, whole-hearted consecration to God! * * * How many estimate difficulties in the light of their own resources, and thus attempt little and often fail in the little they attempt! All God's giants have been weak men, who did great things for God because they reckoned on His being with them * * *.—J. Hudson Taylor.

THE BOY WHO RECOMMENDED HIMSELF

A man advertised for a boy to assist him in his office. Nearly fifty applicants presented themselves to him. Out of the whole number he selected one and dismissed the rest.

"I should like to know," said a friend, "on what ground you selected that boy, who had not a single recommendation."

"You are mistaken," said the man, "he had a great many recommendations. He wiped his feet when he came in, and closed the door after him, showing that he was careful.

"He gave his seat instantly to that lame old man, showing that he was kind and thoughtful.

"He took off his cap when he came in, and answered my questions promptly, showing that he was polite and gentlemanly.

"He picked up the book, which I had purposely laid on the floor and replaced it on the table, showing that he was orderly. All the rest stepped over it. He waited quietly for his turn instead of pushing and crowding.

"When I talked to him, I noticed that his clothing was tidy, his hair neatly brushed, his finger nails clean. Do you not call these things letter of recommendation I do."—Unknown.

Davidson Charge, Rev. E. A. Bingham, pastor—I attended a circuit rally at Chapel Hill church. It was an all day service but I could attend only the morning period. The attendance was good. The services were held under the arbor which made it pleasant for the day. Pastor Bingham had arranged to hold in connection with this event the Stewards Area meeting. The stewards were to meet immediately after dinner and there was to be a talk on stewardship and remarks by visiting pastors and others. A full report will doubtless be given by the correspondent from that church. I cannot make much of a report; but from what I gathered the pastor and people are working faithfully on the problems before them and are hoping for better conditions to arise. I hope to visit more of the churches on this charge later in the year.

Giles Chapel's One Hundredth Anniversary

I was at this anniversary for the afternoon program only. A large crowd was present, many more than could get into the house. The day's program will doubtless be given by the local reporter in the HERALD. I was impressed as I departed that possibly only a few members of this church really appreciate the heritage that is theirs. One hundred years of service to a community by a church merits great consideration from those who remain. We think that the local committee and Dr. Pritchard have done well to commemorate this event with the fitting program carried out that day.

Plan of Appointments

May 28—High Point College Commencement; 2:30 P. M., Stewards Area Meeting, Lebanon Church.

June 4—Pine Grove Church, Kernersville Charge, 11 A. M.; P. M., South Winston Church.

POWER

The man who is filled with the Holy Ghost will not be constantly talking and thinking about baptisms of power. Nay, rather, filled with grace that humbles him that he is and has nothing. He will desire that the Lord be glorified rather than that he be used. His cry will be, "Lord, make me usable," rather than "use me."

A sense of the grace and goodness of God in Christ will be so paramount, that priceless as the privilege is of helping others, this can never again become the place whereon we offer the sacrifice of our time and talents unto God. Many of us, alas! have worshiped in that "high place"; many have bowed down to that secret idol, only to find that all power as well as grace has vanished as a dream in the night. That is the Delilah on whose lap many have slumbered, only to awake and find that the Philistines are upon them. They rise and discover that they are as weak as other men.

The subtle temptation to rejoice in God's good gifts, instead of Himself, has entrapped them, as it did good Hezekiah long ago, to make a boastful show to the uncircumcised of all that God has given and done for and through them. Power has been the idol; grace has been dethroned, and they are wretched and miserable, and poor and blind and naked once more.—Dynamic of Service.

HOW IS THIS FOR A DOG STORY?

The St. Paul's "Journal" tells a story that has more than one lesson which men and women ought to find worth while:

Two big dogs, a Newfoundland and a mastiff, got into a fight on a bridge, and being blind with rage, over they went into the water. The banks were so steep and high, they were forced to swim some distance before they could find a landing place. This was no trouble for the Newfoundland who was as much at home in the water as seal, but the mastiff, worn with fighting, made little headway. When the Newfoundland reached shore he turned to look at his enemy and seeing his plight, plunged again, seized him by the collar, and keeping his nose above water towed him to shore. As they shook their wet coats they touched noses in a friendly way and were never known to fight again. Have you got as much of the Christ spirit as the Newfoundland dog had of a kind dog-spirit?—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

HOW CLARA KEPT THE COMMANDMENTS

"I can't love Lena Glenn," said Clara Hobart, wrinkling up her face into something sadly like a frown. "Our Sunday School teacher says we ought to love everybody, 'cause the Bible says so. But how are you to like anybody that just won't be liked. I always say, 'Good-morning' to Lena, just as politely as I know how, and she snaps back, 'Good-morning' in such a hateful way! I almost feel as if I had pulled her hair or boxed her ears. You can't love a girl who has porcupine quills—now, mamma, can you?"

"There must be some way of reaching Lena's heart," Mrs. Hobart answered, thoughtfully. "Perhaps you have been thinking too much of yourself, and of how she treats you, and too little of Lena, and what you can do to help her."

Clara studied over the matter. Lena needed help, certainly; but what could be done for one so unwilling to receive kindnesses?

At last the chance came. Clara came into the schoolroom early one day, and found Lena puzzling over a problem.

"Can I help you?" she asked, pleasantly.

Lena pushed out her tablet and pencil. "I don't understand it," she said.

In a few words Clara explained the problem, and told her schoolmate how to work it.

"Thank you," said Lena, gratefully. "You are real good. I always thought before that you were stuck up."

"Think of her supposing that about me!" Clara said to her mother that night. "But I know why she did. I hadn't been trying to love Lena at all—I had just been trying to make Lena love me!"—J. B. P., in Little Builders.

TAD LINCOLN'S NOBLE STAND

The following touching incident, giving a new glimpse of President Lincoln and his younger son, culled from an article by Wyne Whipple, carries a lesson for today.

One afternoon while Tad was waiting for the President of the executive office, to attend a public function under his escort, he heard his father talking in low tones to a sobbing mother who had come to implore the President to save her son's life.

"He used to be the best boy," she pleaded, "till he got to drinking.'

The President had to tell the mother that he could not interfere in the case. After she had gone out, sobbing and broken-hearted, President Lincoln bowed his head upon the great table and wept in despair. It was some time before he was able to control his emotions. At last he sat erect, clasped his great hands, and repeated those words of Shakespeare:

"O God, that men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains!"

In deep emotion he appealed to his son:

"Taddie, lad, promise me that you will never drink. Didn't you see how that poor women was sufferings?"

Tad nodded.

"I want you to promise me that you will never drink. I won't ask you to sign a pledge, but give me your word of honor."

Tad put his small hand in his father's and said: "Papa-day, I won't ever drink anything but cold water."

"From this time forth and forevermore," added Mr. Lincoln.

"Forever!" Tad added.

"Now, instead of the written pledge, let us say the 'Mizpah.' Repeat this after me, Taddie: 'The Lord watch between me and thee, while we are absent one from another'."

Tad repeated the words, stumbling but once—instead of absent he said "abhunt," for he had a defect of speech; he could not pronounce the "s".

A smile of content now covered the rugged features of the President as he and his son walked out to a carriage waiting for them. As they drove down Pennsylvania Avenue, Lincoln said solemnly to his son: "Keep that pledge and it will be the best act of your life."

Years later, after the world had wept because of the death of the martyr-President, Tad Lincoln, now a tall young man, was staying with his mother in Germany. Abraham Lincoln's widow never recovered from the terrible shock of her husband's assassination.

With her younger son as her constant companion, she had traveled in Europe seeking health. Now for a time she was waiting at Frankfort while Tad went to school.

In the study of German, Tad had set himself to master his vocal defect. By daily practice he had learned to sound the "s", often by repeating to himself the pledge he had made with his father—"While we are absent one from another."

While they lived in Frankfort the water of the city became impure. Mrs. Lincoln pleaded with Tad to drink a little wine for the sake of his health. He refused. Without giving his real reason, he told his mother that he would either drink water or die of thirst. At last Mrs. Lincoln decided to return to America, to keep her son from imperiling his life.

Reaching Chicago, he became ill of typhoid fever. The patient seemed to be unconscious for hours at a time. Once he repeated in a low, solemn voice:

"'The Lord watch—between me and thee—while we are abhunt—no while we are absent one from another'."

Another day when he seemed too weak to speak, he whispered, "'While we are absent one from another'."

He stopped and seemed to be listening; at last his wan face was lighted by a celestial smile and he went on faintly, but quite distinctly: "No—not absent—but here!—present! Papa-day!" Then he assumed the confidential tone he had used when his father's ear was close to his moving lips—"Papa-day, 'I have fought a good fight—I have kept the faith'."—The Junior Class Paper.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

TOPIC FOR MAY 28, 1933

How May We Be True to the Missionary Spirit of Jesus?

Scripture Text: Matt. 28: 16-20.

Ever since the time Jesus told his twelve disciples to go and teach all nations baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; there has been a great missionary spirit among his people. Great hosts of people have started in the paths of the disciples. We are face to face daily with those who fail to be true to the missionary spirit of Jesus. To alleviate this situation we must in some way help the ones who fail. We must do our best among those we are with. There are many ways in which we could use our influence. This will be doing a bit of missionary work. We know there are those who have not obeyed Christ; those who are living a life outside of the church. We should seek them out and speak a word of Christian thought to them. We can make our society a missionary society, at least in reaching those unchurched in our community. If Paul of Tarsus could be true to Christ in spite of the many oppositions he met, we surely can at present.

Be True Through Prayer

There are many people who think they can not be true to Christ because they have no material things to give Him. There are others to whom, in life, prayer occupies a very prominent place. We know it played a very important place in the earthly life of our Lord. Some will say we pray; yes, but do we pray in faith? It is easy to form the habit of repeating a prayer and use no variation. Many people become discouraged because their prayers are not answered immediately. Probably they did not have the right attitude about prayer and only ask, and do nothing to bring about what we have prayed for.

A Bible writer says, "And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep His commandments and do those things that are pleasing in His sight." To be true to the missionary spirit of Jesus we must pray without ceasing. "Prayer changeth things" is surely a true statement. Our faithfulness to Christ will increase if we take the example of Paul.

Give of Our Time

Many people lose every day, between sunrise and sunset, golden hours which could be made profitable by devoting that time to Kingdom Service. Time can be used in many different ways; such as study of God's Word, aiding the unfortunate ones, and doing unto others as we would have them do unto us. Jesus had a busy earthly life, yet He had time to do His Father's will. We, in our feeble efforts, should give our time to the Master's Service.

Quotable Poetry

Strong Son of God, immortal love,
Whom we that have not seen Thy face,
By faith, and faith alone, embrace;
Believing where we can not prove.

Thou wilt not leave us in the dust,
Thou madest man, he knows not why;
He thinks he was not made to die,
And Thou hast made him, Thou art just.

Thou seemest human and divine,
The highest, holiest manhood Thou;
Our wills are ours, we know not how;
Our wills are ours, to make them Thine.
—Tennyson.

LIFE

Life is not getting,
But serving and giving,
Not past regretting,
But present-hour living.

Life is not drifting,
Or empty day-dreaming,
Not heedless shifting,
But worth-while achieving.

Life is not straining,
But freeing and flowing,
Not fulsome feigning,
But love overflowing.

JUST ONE MONTH

Just one month and we will be in High Point or on our way. That is, if we get busy now and begin to make preparations. Some I fear are not going to be there when their name is called. Remember, the 26th of June is the day, and 2 o'clock in the afternoon is the hour. This comes only once this year, and who knows where you will be next year. Young people and Christian leaders, do not miss this opportunity of your life. The price is $5.00 and you cannot get so much that will last so long and have such rich returns elsewhere for less. Save what you so often spend foolishly for chewing gum, cold drinks, tobacco and the like, and thus make it possible for you to add to your Christian training by going to High Point College.

RECOMMENDATIONS

To the Board of Administration:

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

First Church, Charlotte.—Sunday school was well attended with a number of new pupils. The Baraca class, Mr. Frink, teacher, had 24 men present. Sunday school is interesting, with a new feature of each class having a class song and singing one verse each Sunday morning.

The sermon by our pastor on Mother's Day was an inspiring and beautiful discourse.

The C. E. meeting was unusually good. Miss Mildred Younginer was leader. Her program, "Honoring Mother's Day." It was a candle-light service, as each one on the program came forward and lighted their candle and set it on the table. Love, Honor, Cheer, Obedience, Service, Kindness. The mothers were special guests and the service was enjoyed.

The Willing Workers Circle No. 1 of the Auxiliary met with Mrs. J. C. Henry Thursday evening; 19 were present. An enjoyable program was carried out under the direction of Mrs. Hendry. After a short business session delicious refreshments were served.

West Forsyth.—Last Sunday was spent with the people of Pleasant Hill and Tabernacle churches. The pastor and daughter arrived in the community of Pleasant Hill on Saturday afternoon and visited in a number of homes during the afternoon. We had supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Long. From there we went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Bigg, members of Tabernacle church, where we spent the night.

The attendance at both the Sunday school and preaching services at Pleasant Hill was larger than usual. We were delighted to have a male quartet from Davidson county present for the Sunday school and church services. The quartet is known as the Happy Four quartet of Hedrick's Grove Reformed church. They sang one selection in the Sunday school and three selections for the church service. Their music was enjoyed very much. Two of them were entertained for dinner in the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Hunter, and the other two accompanied the pastor and daughter to the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Nichols for dinner. The quartet also sang at the service at Tabernacle in the afternoon.

Pleasant Hill Sunday school is preparing a Children's Day program, which is expected to be rendered the second Sunday night in June.

The appointment at Union Hill church was the second Sunday, which was mothers' Day. The attendance at the Sunday school and church service was unusually good. The pastor was entertained for dinner in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Doub. We spent Saturday night in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nat Poindexter.

Our appointment for next Sunday will be at Harmony Grove church at 11 o'clock. We expect to observe the ordinance of the Lord's Supper in connection with the service.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Mt. Pleasant, Mt. Pleasant.—Sunday Dr. Johnson directed our attention toward the subject of "Faith." The "Faith Chapter," Hebrew 11, was used as the Scripture lesson. Dr. Johnson called attention to the fact that we can't understand it. Just as the muscles develop by exercise so does our faith gain strength by constant use. It is necessary for people to have faith or confidence in their fellowmen, but it is most essential of all that we have faith in God. In an analysis by Dr. Spurgeon, there are three essential factors: Knowledge, Belief and Trust.

Memorial services will be held the first Sunday in June. The graves will be decorated by the children immediately after Sunday school. A program is being planned for the afternoon. It is hoped that old friends will come and enjoy the day.

The first Sunday night in May the C. E. society went to Pleasant Hill Christian church and rendered a program. We are expecting their society to bring us a program in the near future.

The attendance at Sunday school is very pleasing. Still there are some in our community who are not attending any Sunday school, we would be glad to have them with us.

Plans are being made toward arranging for a Leadership Training school to be held at our church the latter part of July.

Siler City.—The third Sunday was a good day for us. We had good attendance at Sunday school. The devotionals were in charge of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Woody's classes. These are the teen age boys and girls A song by the school was sung, after which Mrs. L. L. Woody led in prayer. The lesson was read by Lessie Tillmon and Hubert Stone. A girls' quartet, "List to the Voice," was beautifully rendered by Misses Verda Shaw Fox, Lucille Poole, Joy Holt and Berta Mae Andrew. Charles Stone read a paper of his own composition which was very good. A real treat was in store for us when John Robert Forrester with his violin, D. G. Fox and Hubert Stone with their saxophones and accompanied by Miss Verda Shaw Fox, at the piano, gave a selection, "Living for Jesus," which was enjoyed by every one.

Our special meeting began at the eleven o'clock hour. The old hymn "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord," was our first song. Prayer by our pastor after which a solo, "O Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go," was sung by Mr. Evans Stone. "The Church of the Living God," was our pastor's theme. Text, "On this rock will I build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it"—Matt. 16:18. The pulpit was filled again at the evening hour by our pastor when we heard another real Gospel message from the text—"Woe unto them that are at ease in Zion." Rev. C. L. Spencer, of Granville charge, will be our visiting minister in the rest of the service. We are hoping and praying that we may have a good meeting—one that will ever be remembered by us all.

The Woman's Auxiliary will meet at the church Wednesday of this week at 2 o'clock.

Circle No. 2 met with Mrs. Paul Braxton Monday night, the 15th, and had an interesting meeting.

Circle No. 1 met with Mrs. L. L. Woody Monday afternoon, the 15th. Eight members answered to the roll call with one visitor, Mrs. R. C. Clark, Baptist. This circle served a "Depression Supper" Saturday night, May 20, and fed more than 100 people and turned some away not fed because there were no fragments to pick up. This circle is very grateful to the people of Siler City and the other churches for being so loyal to it.

Sunday our superintendent appointed a committee to look after the Children's Day exercises which will be held some time in June.

Roberta Charge.—Mothers' Day was observed at our church May 14. During the Sunday school period Brother Paul Kriminger, a beloved church worker of Cabarrus county, taught the men and women's classes. After an appropriate song service, Judge Oglesby gave us a wonderful message. He stressed the importance of Religious training in a child's home life. He also said that the best way to do honor to our Mothers is to live a life of worthy service to mankind.

On Saturday night, May 13, we again pounded our pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams. We believe our pastor can do better work when he is kept well pounded (with flour, sugar, meat and not a stick or tongue).

Children's Day will be observed the second Sunday in June. At that time Rev. Sisk will be with us with two quartets. We hope to have Honorable Jake Newell, of Charlotte, to make a talk for us. Mr. Newell has made a visit to the "Holy Land," he is also well-versed in Bible history and we are sure he can tell us many interesting things.

Our special meeting will begin the fifth Sunday in July. Rev. R. S. Troxler will assist our pastor in this meeting.

Miss Mae Blackwelder, one of our most faithful members, is very ill. We miss her so much and we hope she will soon be well again.

MRS. OMEY PENNINGER, Reporter.

Hickory Grove, Guilford Charge.—We are glad to report that our Sunday school continues to grow. The attendance was splendid last Sunday; we had several new members and also visitors. We are always glad to have visitors, and we want them to feel welcome at all times.

Sunday school was opened Sunday afternoon with an interesting Mothers' Day program by the Intermediate class. At 3 p. m. our pastor, Rev. D. D. Broome, delivered an inspiring message relative to Mothers' Day.

An Easter program was held at our church at 11 o'clock, but on account of the rainy weather our crowd was small. Mrs. Clayton Edwards, teacher of the Beginners gave her class an egg hunt on Saturday before Easter. From all reports the children had a grand time.

We are planning to have Children's Day the third Sunday in June. There will be an all day service with a picnic dinner. Everybody is invited to come and bring a basket full of good eats. Also any silver or greenback that is idle.

As our Sunday school is made up mostly of boys and girls, we want to give them every possible chance to take part in Sunday school. When they know they are being recognized they are more eager to work than ever.

Sunday school next Sunday at 10:00 o'clock, preaching services at 11 o'clock.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

REPORTER.

Union Chapel, Granville Charge.—Our attendance at Sunday school last Sunday was very good. We were especialy glad to see so many boys and girls present.

On account of the baccalaureate sermon at Zeb Vance school next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock we will not have preaching, but Sunday school will be at 9:45.

The woman's auxiliary held an executive business meeting at the church Friday afternoon, May 19, to discuss means of raising money and getting new members and added interest.

Mrs. Spencer, our president, is offering a prize of $5.00 to the circle collecting the most Octagon soap coupons and Louisane coffee coupons within the next three months for the Children's Home. A small prize is also offered the child that brings in the largest number.

The auxiliary will hold its regular monthly meeting Friday evening after the fourth Sunday in May with Mrs. A. E. Woodlief.

Our calendar money is coming in very well. We hope to have the twelve months completed soon.

The Loyalty League Committee are getting poor results. They beg for your support and prayers.

MRS. E. C. HUFF, Reporter.

Shiloh.—Today was "Home-Coming Day" at Shiloh and a most enjoyable day it was. The Sunday school had the largest attendance for the year, the number present being 336. We were delighted to have quite a number of visitors, some of them being our own home-folks just coming back to their beloved church home of former years. It was good to have them back again and we were glad to have all the other visitors too. Won't you come again?

Rev. R. S. Troxler preached from Ps. 107:30, "Then are they glad because they be quiet, so he bringeth them into their desired haven." He suggested that we think of our life as a boat on life's ocean. To make a successful voyage, we must have a pilot who understands the winds and the sea, and who is able to steer the boat even in time of storm. We must also secure passage, which is the Bible, the Holy Spirit, and the Church. The third important thing about our voyage is the port toward which our boat is sailing. May we all look to the one safe Pilot of life's boat, even to Jesus Christ who can pilot us into the desired haven.

After the service the Troxler quartet sang Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar." Then the audience quietly marched into the graveyard for the memorial service, which consisted of songs, prayer, scripture reading, and the roll call of the dead.

After lunch on the grounds, the congregation reassembled in the church for the Home-Coming address, delivered by Rev. E. C. Roach, pastor of Reeds Baptist church. The music for the afternoon service was furnished by the Shiloh choir, the Shiloh C. E. quartet and the choir from Union Ridge church. We were so pleasantly surprised to have the visiting singers, but enjoyed their beautiful songs and hope they will come again soon.

Rev. Mr. Roach used the parable of the Prodigal Son as a basis for his message, which was greatly enjoyed.

Miss Mabel Berrier was appointed home-coming secretary and will keep the minutes of the day for the benefit of later years.

Mr. Ray Leatherman was elected as chairman of the cemetery committee, which will see that all graves are put in good condition and the cemetery be in the very best condition before another Home-Coming Day.

MRS. W. L. SHOAF.

West End, Thomasville.—Rev. H. W. Bell has been ill for the past two weeks, but was back with us Sunday night for the regular church service.

The executive committee held their regular monthly meeting Monday night, May 15, at the home of Banner Pierce on Davidson street.

The Junior C. E. society had charge of the midweek prayer meeting Wednesday night.

Friday night cottage prayer meeting was held at the home of Mrs. T. C. Clinard on Davidson street. Vernon Marr was the leader.

Mrs. Ed Briles has been ill for some time at her home on Long street. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

MARY DISHER, Reporter.

English Street.—The interest in our revival meeting which has been in progress for the past two weeks demanded further services. The meeting will continue through this week. Our pastor, Rev. C. H. Hill, is doing the preaching. We have had 14 conversions during the meeting, and 15 have joined the church. Also six were taken in as honorary members. Those taken in full membership are: Misses Margaret Hill, Moliene McNeil, Maden Hill, Mrs. Mattie Minol, Mrs. Cordile McNeil, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Kennedy, Mrs. M J. Cammeron, and Miss Edith Cammeron from a Presbyterian church, Mr. and Mrs. H T. Troxler. Mr. Troxler comes to us from a Baptist church, while Mrs Troxler is from Fairfield church. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Queen come to us from a Baptist church, while his wife comes from a Presbyterian. Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Pegram come from Stokesdale M. E. church Those taken in as honorary members are: Mises Carrie, Eva, and Myrtle Moore, from an M. E. church in Mt. Crogin, S. C.; Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Whitaker from Carthage M. E. church, and Mr. W. P. Ridge from an M. E. church of this city. We were glad to receive all of these into our church and hope that we may not only be a help to them, but that they too may be a help to us.

We had a wonderful service at the morning hour Sunday. It was in the form of a Love Feast. Our pastor conducted this service. It proved to be one of the most impressive services we have ever held.

The C. E. society is still progressing. They plan to give a special program next week. This will be the final tryout of the "Efficiency Contest" which the society has had on for three months. Mr. John Laughlin and Miss Kathleen Embler are in charge of the program. The topic being used is, "Pride, Hatred and Fear, the Three Burdens to Humanity." Those who will speak are Misses Iris and Tressie Caudle, and Carrie Moore. Several of our members plan to attend the state convention which will be held at High Point College in June.

Our hearts are made sad because of the death of one of our members. Mrs. A. W. Phillips, who has been ill for several months, passed away May 22, at a local hospital. Mrs. Phillips was 48 years old, and for several years has been a faithful member of our church. Our hearts go out in sympathy to the bereaved.

Giles Chapel.—I was pleased to be present last Sunday at the 100th anniversary of that great old church. It was a great pleasure to me to meet quite a number of people who were there forty-three years ago, at the beginning of my pastorate. I felt that I loved them still.

Brother J. C. Allred read a brief history of the church; he was thrilled with emotion, and should have been. It was a solemn occasion, and a joyful one. Rev. J. E. Pritchard preached the anniversary sermon—a splendid sermon, too. Brother Pritchard went out from that church to preach the gospel of Christ. The people of that church can but be justly proud of him. Rev. G. A. Laughlin was there with much interest and enthusiasm.

Rev. R. M. Andrews, president of the Conference, preached in the afternoon. I don't know what was the matter with him, but he preached with more force and enthusiasm than I ever heard him before. I think he held the undivided attention of the congregation—although they went through a long program before he preached. He was full of his subject.

Giles Chapel ought to have a memorial service every year.

G. F. MILLAWAY.

Graham.—Since the reporter did not tell you about our Mother's Day service, I will. Brother J. D. Foust had the service in charge and is largely due the credit for the sucuess of the program. The program was largely musical. Special music, "Your Mother is Waiting," by Misses Hazel Amick and Dorothy Foust; "Your Mother is Never Weary," by Mrs. P. H. Amick and Mrs. Cardue McPherson. An anthem, "Mother of Mine," was given by the choir. A poem entitled "My Mother's Hymn," by Bryant, was read by Mrs. S. S. Holt. We had a good crowd and everyone seemed to be pleased with the service.

Our church here had four young people to graduate from high school this year, Misses Evelyn Williams, Dona Parks, Carlene Black, and Mary Lou Oakley. Miss Evelyn Williams expects to enter High Point College this fall.

A Leadership Training Rally will be held at the Graham Methodist Protestant church on the second Sunday afternoon in June at 3 p.m. We are expecting a good attendance of leaders in this district.

Twenty-seven new Heralds are coming to our church this week. Mrs. Lawrence Cheek, with the assistance of Mrs. Henry Evans, has the delivery of the papers and the general management of the whole matter in charge. Since these are not paid-up subscriptions we do not get credit in our quota as given in the Herald. But we are getting the paper into the homes when it was impossible the other way. They pay 5c a week for the paper and they send 4c to Dr. McCulloch. When the expense connected with handling the paper is taken out the remainder of the 1c is turned over to the Auxiliary.

Of interest to Herald readers is the marriage of Miss Lavonia Amick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Amick of Graham to J. D. Wood of Washington, D. C. A telegram states that they were married in New York City on May 22nd at 3 p.m. After a trip to Canada they will make their home in Washington, D. C., where Mr. Wood is in government service. The writer wishes for them a life full of happiness and success.

Mrs. H. M. Sykes and Mrs. W. W. Garrett are sick and need our sympathy, prayers and cheer.

Midland.—An all-day children's service will be held at Love's Grove the second Sunday in June. Dinner will be served on the grounds. Everybody is invited to come and enjoy the children's program and the fine music rendered by the famous Tarlton quartet.

We were at Pageland Sunday with our loyal little band of worshipers. After the services Sister Mangum carried us eight miles out in the country where we enjoyed a dinner fit for a king. Sister Mangum's husband went to his reward a few years ago and left her with a large family to care for. She had proven her efficiency in rearing a fine family of boys and girls that do honor to her goodness.

She is a loyal supporter of her church. She is systematic in her giving. She has planted the biggest acre on the farm for the Lord's acre.

When we went away we found our Lizzie loaded with canned fruits and eats that would have been a creditable pounding for a whole church. She also gave Mrs. Reed a linen shower for the bed that represented days of skilled labor and worth dollars in value. May God bless and reward her and her interesting family.

Rev. Mr. Strader, of the M. E. church, brought to us a splendid sermon at Pine Bluff Sunday night. He is the product of High Point College and did honor to the fine training received there.

Bess' Chapel.—The annual memorial service was held at our church last Sunday morning. One of the largest congregations we have had for some time was present and worshiped with us. All of the services were beautifully carried out.

The Sunday school hour was presided over by the superintendent, Mr. B. L. Heavner. After this the cemetery was decorated.

At 11 o'clock the memorial address was delivered by Hon. L. Berge Beam, of Lincolnton, N. C. Our pastor, Rev. J. D. Morris, had charge of the scripture reading. During the morning we were favored with two solos; these were greatly enjoyed by all. First "My Mother," sung by little Floe Beam; Miss Virginia Beam sang "When They Ring the Golden Bells." Virginia is one of our children who was reared at the Home. She is now a student at Appalachian State Teachers College, Bbone, N. C.

The April meeting of our auxiliary was held at the church; this was the finest and most encouraging meeting we have had during the year. Seven new members were added to our roll. We had several visitors. There is always a cordial welcome to visitors at our church. From Kadesh M. E. church, Belwood, were Mesdames James Roy Peeler, Summey Peeler, Noah Hubbard and Hugh Hoyle. From Friendship church, Fallston, were Mesdames Gantt, Bingham and Martin.

After the business session, which was carried on in the usual way, the social hour was enjoyed in an egg hunt. First prize was won by Mrs. Hugh Hoyle, Belwood, N. C. Second prize was won by Mrs. Bingham, Fallston.

Friday evening of this week the members of the auxiliary will serve a picnic supper to the business men of Cherryville, N. C., at the church.

Raeford, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Z. M. Dellinger, who has been in the Lincoln Hospital for some time, was able to return home this week. He is still very sick. We ask the prayers of our people in his behalf. Mrs. Dellinger is one of our most faithful members. Mr. Earl Beam, who has been ill for some time, was able to attend church Sunday. We were glad to see him back.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Charge.—The regular preaching service was held May 21. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was observed, and Rev. C. B. Way delivered a very helpful and instructive sermon. We were delighted to have a male quartet known as the "Happy Four" from Lexington to sing for us. There will be no preaching service in June, as the township Sunday school convention will be held on that date.

The Woman's Missionary auxiliary held its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. C. G. Hunter Tuesday evening, May 23. The president, Mrs. R. J. Whitman, took charge of the business. The program was conducted by Miss Lena, which consisted of readings by Miss Johnny Speas and Miss Juanita Hunter. A very interesting feature of the program was a cake contest in which all the women took part and enjoyed very much. The next meeting will be held with Mrs. C. E. Holder in June.

Home Coming Day

For a long time we have wished for a Home Coming and a general get-together day at the Children's Home. With the help of a splendid committee and many dear friends, plans are already worked out for Home Coming in connection with an anniversary. The committee and friends are directing in it all, but we know they will pardon this note.

We are expecting a large number of our friends and the friends of the Home to gather here June 8.

We will not prepare any dinner that day, but are rather inviting ourselves and our children and workers to take dinner with you.

We will prepare a long table, but it will be empty until you fill it. We will also have plenty to drink with nothing stronger than lemonade. A fine program is in preparation and we want you to hear it, so come by 10 o'clock.

Park all cars near the boys' dormitory. Boys will direct you.

Please Help

We want all the children who were reared here to come. Join us in helping to get them here. If you know where one is write and ask him to come.

Special News

We are greatly in need of towels, and bed sheets for both single and double beds (regulation size). Thank you and God bless you.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Ward

In the early hours of Monday morning, May 1, 1933, Mrs. Wiley L. Ward, of Asheboro, passed quietly and unexpectedly into eternal life.

She was the wife of W. L. Ward, one of the most useful men in the Methodist Protestant denomination.

Mrs. Ward was a woman of quiet, retiring disposition but one of true love and sincerity. She was fond of all children and was sought after by the children of her neighborhood. She was faithful to her church and ready to do her part in all good work. She left behind her five sons and two daughters: Leonard, George, John, Robert and Jesse Ward; Mrs. Nettie York and Mrs. J. F. White, Jr; her mother, Mrs. Sarah Anne Burroughs, and six grandchildren.

The funeral was held in the Asheboro Methodist Protestant church, being conducted by her pastor, R. C. Stubbins, assisted by her former pastor, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, D.D. The flowers were abundant and beautiful and the many people present testified to the wide influence of her life.

"As a cloud of the sunset, slowly melting in heaven,
As a star that is lost when daylight is given,
As a glad dream of slumber, which wakens in bliss,
She hath passed to the world of the holy from this."

R. C. STUBBINS.

Blackwelder

On Friday morning, April 28th, the death angel came and broke our Cradle Roll Circle, and claimed the life of little Adelaide Blackwelder, one of our twins. Litte Alice and Adelaide were such bright, sweet little girls and have been coming to Sunday school since before they were a year old. They were always anxious to come to Sunday school and being the only twins in our class they had become so entwined in our hearts that we felt like we could not give one of them up; but we know that God never makes any mistakes and we must be willing to bow to His will. Little Adelaide was two years and nine months old, just the age to be so sweet and loving. They never cried or gave any trouble at all in Sunday school. When Adelaide and Alice were at home they were always happy and singing when they were both well and they loved to play hide and seek. Nearly always when one would get sick the other would get sick. About a year ago they both had pneumonia and it looked as though they could not live, but since then they had had very good health until the week that Adelaide died. They were not well, but yet they were able to be up most of the time, and on Friday morning about 4 o'clock Adelaide got real sick and the doctor was called, but he could not save our little Adelaide because her Heavenly Father said, "Come up higher and make heaven more beautiful by your presence." Little Alice and Adelaide had learned to say their little prayer, "Now I lay me down to sleep;" and after they were tucked into bed they would lie for some time and talk about their little prayer. I have had he pleasure of visiting in their home many times, and one thing especially that I noticed was the sweet manners the twins used at the table. When their father returned thanks they would bow their little heads and close their eyes. Their dear Christian mother and father taught them reverence in the home as well as in the church. Mr. and Mrs. Blackwelder have five children older than the twins, and all of the children were so devoted to the twins that they never seemed to grow tired of caring for them. The two oldest girls were especially devoted to the twins. When you would see these girls one would be caring for Adelaide and the other Alice. The one that was so devoted to Adelaide feels like she has lost all, but, dear girl, just picture Adelaide playing the beautiful white throne where there are many, many more sweet little angels singing and waiting and watching for us. Little Alice misses Adelaide so much, and it makes our hearts ache to see how pitiful she is. Our hearts go out in sympathy to the family.

A Tribute of Love

Sunday, April 30, 1933, the sun sank quietly at the close of day making us to know that that day was over. A few hours and the sun again was shining and a new day had dawned bright and clear but it brought with it the shocking news that the spirit of Mrs. Wiley L. Ward had suddenly and as quietly as the sinking sun, taken its departure "Out of the seeming into the true, out of the old life into the new."

Out of the shadows of the night there had dawned for her a new day in the light of her Master's face. Her life on earth ended she had come suddenly into her reward in her Heavenly home.

Quietly, unassuming she had lived her life in our midst and quietly she slipped from earth to awake in Heavenly bliss.

Our church and our auxiliary have lost a good member. Sorrow has come to our hearts and to her husband and children. Yet we sorrow not as those who have no hope for "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." May we gain inspiration for greater faithfulness through the memory of her life.

Resolved, That we extend our sympathy to the family and that this tribute of love be recorded in the minutes of our auxiliary.

Smitherman

John Thomas Smitherman, son of David and Sally Smitherman, was born September 3, 1856, and departed from this life April 18, 1933. His age was 76 years, seven months and 15 days.

September 19, 1880, he was married to Ann Eliza Nicholson, who preceded him to the Glory World six years ago. To this union were born three children, one of which died in infancy.

Most of his life was spent in Yadkin county, North Carolina. He was one of the county's most highly respected citizens. At an early age he professed faith in Christ and united with Baltimore Methodist Protestant church, of which he remained a faithful member until the end.

Two years of his life was spent as a public school teacher. He served his county as register of deeds for four years, while the remaining years of his life were spent as a merchant. "Uncle John," as he was affectionately known by his neighbors and friends, was loved and honored by all who knew him because of his beautiful character.

He was a loving father, an affectionate brother, a good neighbor, a splendid citizen and a genuine Christian. He loved his church and gave liberally to the support of the church and its various organizations. The writer has never had a more interested and better listener in any of his churches than was Brother Smitherman during the past four years.

Surviving are one son, Charlie E Smitherman, of the United States navy, stationed in Florida; one daughter, Mrs. Frank Joyner, of Mooresville, Indiana; four brothers, Anderson, Dock, Wesley, and A. M. Smitherman; four sisters, Misses Nancy and Millie Smitherman, Mrs. George Nicholson and Mrs. Sarah Wilhelm, all of Yadkin and Forsyth counties.

The funeral services were held at Baltimore Methodist Protestant church on Sunday, April 23,, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. Adams, of the Baptist church. Approximately 800 persons were present for the funeral. Only about half of the congregation found room inside the church building.

"Twilight and Evening Star,
And one clear call for me,
And may there be no moaning of the bar
When I put out to sea."

"Sunset, and Evening Bell,
And after that the dark,
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark."

Anderson

Mrs. Julia Anderson, 70, widow of N. W. Anderson, at one time president of the Mars Hill bank, died at her home at Paint Fork Tuesday morning, May 2, at 10:55 o'clock after an illness of several years.

The funeral services were conducted at her home Thursday afternoon, May 4, at 2:30 o'clock. Ministers in charge of the services were the Rev. Earl A. Cook, pastor of the deceased, and the Rev. James A. Corn, pastor of the Paint Fork Baptist church. They were assisted by the Rev. Oscar E. Sams, of Mars Hill College. Interment was in the family cemetery at Paint Fork.

She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Eula Murray, of Mars Hill; one brother, Mr. Gragg Holcombe, of Ivy; and a number of nieces and nephews. Mrs. Anderson was a sister of the late Mrs. T. J. Murray, of Marshall; Mrs. Katherine Swann, of Wiley, Texas; Mrs. Eliza McLean, Bryson City; Mrs. Susan Henderson and Clytrian Holcombe, of Ivy.

Active pallbearers were nephews of Mrs. Anderson: Nat Holcombe, Tom Holcombe, Kenneth B. Murray, Tom Murray, Dick Murray, and Harry Murray. Honorary pallbearers were: Dr. W. F. Robinson, Dr. Locke Robison, J. B. Ray, Garrett Metcalf, Gilbert Metcalf, Kenneth Anderson, Oscar E. Anderson, J. F. Carter, E. Y. Gillis, J. S. Brown, Tilden Metcalf, Lett Metcalf, Fred Angel, Gordon Briggs, Will Phoenix, and Sam W. Angel.

"Aunt Julia," as she was commonly known, was born June 21, 1862. She was the daughter of Joel Holcombe and Rebecca Chambers Holcombe. About 42 years ago she was united in marriage to Nathan Woodson Anderson who preceded her in death one year and six weeks.

Mrs. Anderson was a lifelong member of the Paint Fork Methodist Protestant church. Early in life she was an influential teacher in the public schools of Madison County, and many of the students who were inspired by her have become prominent and useful citizens. The last years of her life were filled with sickness, and she had been an invalid with rheumatism for almost 15 years. She was patient in her illness and a faithful Christian to her death. She leaves a number of neighbors and countless friends to whom she was always the same loving and kind personality.

"Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last."

EARL A. COOK, Pastor.

Pierce

Alfred Pierce, son of Zebedie and Elizabeth Pierce, was born June 1, 1862. He departed this life April 29, 1933. His age was 70 years, ten months and 28 days.

Brother Pierce was born and reared in Randolph county, at what is known as the old Pierce mill, which was owned and operated by his father. This mill is located on what is now highway No. 90.

He was married twice. His first wife was Miss Laura Guyer to whom he was married in 1890. This happy relationship continued until it was broken by the death of Mrs. Pierce in 1903. Three children blessed this union. Erma Bernice, the only daughter died when she was about three years old. The two sons survive; they are: Mr. Clarence Pierce, of High Point, and Mr. Guy Pierce of Dertoit, Michigan.

In 1906 the deceased was married to Miss Lou Ella Grissom, who survives and mourns the passing of a devoted husband.

In his early years, Brother Pierce professed faith in Christ as his personal Savior, and united with Shepherd Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He remained faithful in this church until he came to High Point to live about 35 years ago. He then moved his membership to Lebanon Methodist Protestant church, and was loyal to his church obligations and to Christ until his translation to the church above.

Truly a good man has gone from us—a good husband, a good father, a good neighbor, a good citizen and a good Christian. But we do not mourn as those who have no hope. He left most comforting assurance that he was ready for the better things beyond. We give him up in the confidence that he has gone to be forever with the Lord.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer on Sunday at 3 o'clock in Lebanon Methodist Protestant church, in the presence of a large congregation of sympathizing friends. His body was laid to rest in the burying ground of the church. Our tender sympathies are extended to the family in this bereavement. May the "God of all comfort" keep them until that blessed day of eternal reunion.

S. W. TAYLOR.

THE PRAYER MEETING

"It was the mid-week meeting,
The quiet hour of prayer:
The Master of Assemblies
Patiently waited there.
A look of pain and sorrow
Shadowed His face Divine,
'I cleansed ten,' He murmured,
'Where, then, can be the nine?'

" 'Have they so soon forgotten
The sins I washed away?
Has not their weakness taught them
The need to watch and pray?
On mountain and in desert,
Beset by Satan's power,
For them I prayed and fasted,
Can they not watch one hour?'

"They had not meant to slight Him
Because they did not go:
Their hearts had never told them
That He would miss them so.
And so the Master waited
In loneliness and grace,
While they, alas! neglected
The holy trysting place.

"Oh, Saviour dear, forgive us,
We are so slow to come
To seek the blest communion
Of the quiet upper room:
Lord, give us clearer vision,
Thy loveliness to see,
Till naught shall so delight us,
As fellowship with Thee."

Herald Subsidy Fund

Bethesda, Halifax $2.00

People of Bethesda, we thank you and Brother Fogleman. Acknowledgments of this fund last week were printed on page 14.

50 Minus 10 Leaves 40

A very simple problem in arithmetic. But not so simple when you ask folks to be one of fifty to help the Herald. I have had ten tell me they would. Where are the other forty? You'd be surprised if I told you who some of the ten are. (I will publish the list—a sort of a Roll of Honor—as soon as I get the fiftieth name. Come on folks: $10.00 from 50 folks for six months at 6 per cent. Let's help the Herald out of the hole. But do it now. The hole may fall in.

And if you are not interested in this ten dollar proposition, or can't make it, get busy on that Herald Quota, or on the Subsidy. Send them in and it in, and keep the wheels going round.

VOLUME XXXIX GREENSBORO, N. C., JUNE 1, 1933 NUMBER 28

I Told You So!

The man who fills us with contempt,
As on our daily way we go,
Is the man who chuckles to himself,
"I tol' yer so! I tol' yer so!"

Bill Jones is just that kind of man,
Since he knows all there is to know;
He always says with sneering air,
"I tol' yer so! I tol' yer so!"

When sicness strikes the neighborhood,
And loving friends are stricken low,
Old Bill does nothing but declare,
"I tol' yer so! I tol' yer so!"

He knows what weather there will be,
Cyclone, sunshine, rain or snow,
But waits till things are done to say,
"I tol' yer so! I tol' yer so!"

Some day old Bill will boast no more,
He'll pass away and go below,
While mocking voices jeer at him,
"I tol' yer so! I tol' yer so!"

The Conversion of the Church

We hear a great deal nowadays about the conversion of the world. It is in almost every Christian's mouth, and we cannot be too familiar with the phrase—we cannot be too diligent to promote the thing. It ought to have our daily thoughts, prayers, and efforts. It is the great object of Christianity. But there is another community besides the world, which I think needs to undergo a measure of the same process that the world so much needs. It is the church. While the conversion of the world is made so prominent, I think we ought not to overlook the conversion of the church, especially since this comes first in order. But what do I mean by the conversion of the church? Is not the church already converted? I admit that; may she not need a new conversion? Regeneration is but once, but conversion may be many times. Peter had been converted when Christ said to him, "And when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren."

But why do I think the church needs conversion? I will assign only one reason. It is founded on Matthew 18:3, "Except ye be converted and become as little children." Saint John addressed the primitive Christians as little children. Is there enough of the little child about the church of the present day? Little children are humble, but humility does not appear to be a remarkable characteristic of the church of the present. How confiding little children are, and how ready to believe on the bare word of one in whom they have reason to feel confidence, especially if he be a father! How about the church? "Thus saith the Lord" does not seem to satisfy many now. They want to reason out everything pertaining to the Christian religion, not realizing that religion is in the realm of the supernatural. How docile the little child is! Mary, who "sat at the feet of Jesus and heard his words," was such a child. Simplicity also characterizes little children. How open and artless they are, how free from guile! Such was Nathanael. Whether this trait is conspicuous in the church now, let the reader decide.

It is the writer's opinion that the church in general needs to be brought back to humility and simplicity and love. The object of the church is to make the world like herself. But let her in the meantime make herself more like what the world ought to be. Let her become a better model for the world's imitation.

H. L. Isley.

Our Hope

Now that Uncle Sam has put his stamp of approval on beer, and the wets of North Carolina have concurred, all who desire will drink with ease, dignity, and grace. Our state and our nation have the right to make laws, but neither one has the right to legalize a thing that is inherently wrong. Legalizing beer-making, beer-selling, and beer-drinking, does not remove the evil the wrong contains. Ours is a great government, but with all its dignity and greatness it cannot make a wrong right.

Both state and national governments are piling up huge sums of money from the sale of legalized beer. With this money debts are to be paid, and schools are to be run. Much money formerly spent for clothing, medicine, meat, books, and bread will now be spent for beer. Thousands of undernourished children will enter our beer-supported schools, seeking an education, and will fail because of subnormal development. It is poor policy to build fine school houses, and operate big schools, when to do so saps the life blood of little children.

The only hope for America as I see it, is not in Congress, nor in any subdivision of that august body, nor in any exalted personage connected therewith. Our hope is based on something still higher. If America is saved from the curse of intemperance and vice, that salvation will come through the women of our beloved America. Woman is man's superior, not that we will it, but because God made her so. She may gravitate, however, to man's level, as too many have already done. When the women of our country discover their exalted position in God's universal program, and stand for what is inherently their own rather than dance to the politician's music, then and not till then will we have a nation that is both economically and morally sound. The women hold the key to the fullest measure of influence, ability, personality, and power. Our only hope under God is in the women who positively refuse to condescend from their natural exalted positions. To share with men the beer, the wine, the whisky, that were made for a class weaker than woman's, is to accept the dethronement of womanhood, and the universal gravitation of woman to a plane lower than man's. Prohibition will never be repealed, until the women of America surrender their predominant rights.

The Preacher's Hands

Time was that the most awkward creature known was an overgrown, gawky boy who had outgrown himself and his clothes. Not knowing how to handle his body, so recently grown to such proportions, he would quirk about, pushing one side of himself up and let the other side slump, sousing deep into his trouser pockets his hands and that part of his arms that protruded beyond his outgrown coat sleeves.

But in recent years, since the days of the pulpit chin-high to the preacher with a door closing behind the preacher when he entered, the awkward boy has a close rival in the preacher who does not know what to do with his hands when not needed.

My attention was mildly called to this matter by a small boy who sat in the rear of a church under the balcony. A tall, slender preacher stood erect in the pulpit, his arms hanging straight by his sides. The light through the windows in the pulpit end of the church made a sort of silhouette of the preacher's form. The small boy said to the man by his side, "Look yonder, that preacher has not got any arms." Presently the preacher warmed up, he thrust one arm out like a pionter on a sign-post at a cross roads. "He has got one arm!" commented the boy. More warmth, and both arms went out like two pointers on the sign-post. "He's got two arms!" was the final comment.

Sometimes the preacher holds for a time to the two sides of the pulpit book-board as if to set a prop on each side of himself that he may not swerve either to the right or to the left.

But it is when he walks out from behind the pulpit front for free, easy, and graceful action that the disposing of his hands becomes a real problem. In the days of the Prince Albert coat, he could gracefully thrust them into the rear pockets built in the skirts of his coat. The Prince Albert gone, the preacher now becomes a formidable rival of the boy referred to in the first paragraph.

The only hiding or hanging-out places for his hands are the side pockets of his coat and trousers. However, these are ample—four of them and only two hands. A gentle way to start is to place the open hand flat against his side just above the coat pocket and slip the fingers and as much of the hand as possible into the pocket, allowing the thumb to stick outside at the front corner of the pocket, thus avoiding the appearance of imitating the boy in all the details. This method may, I think, be used with a little less degree of grace in the trouser pocket also.

But the preacher excels when he kinks up his thumb, hooks it in the corner of his pocket—coat or trouser—and lets the balance of his hand hang outside. You are perfectly safe in offering him a dollar if he will do a thing more awkward than that. You may do this and have a much better chance to keep your money and have it when needed than if it had been deposited in a bank.

Once again. Recently I drew more of my "invisible salary" in thirty minutes than I have been able of late to draw of the visible variety in thirty days. A stalwart, handsome, almost seven-footer stood behind the chair he had occupied, resting his hands on the back of it (there was no pulpit) talking to a select group. I was in the group but hardly of it. The speaker added spice at intervals by shifting one and then the other of his hands from the chair-back to his coat pocket and back again. At such time as a hand was in a pocket, it was so balled up as to give the bulged walls of the pocket the appearance of being the repository of an unusually large apple or maybe a cantaloupe. In case he saw the smile I tried to conceal, I indulged the hope that he supposed I still had pleasing memories of the jokes he had used to get us in the mood.

But this warning: Let no one suppose that this wadded up fist inside the pocket can win the dollar by being reckoned more awkward than the thumb-as-a-hook stunt to hang the hand on the outside of the pocket.

T. M. Johnson.

JUNE 8th AT THE CHILDREN'S HOME

We expect you to be there at 10:30, prepared to remain until the program is finished. Bring as many folks as you can with you, with a basket full of dinner and a silver offering.

We want to make this one of the big days in the history of our church in North Carolina and in the life of the Children's Home and in the lives of Dr. and Mrs. Dixon. Remember, it is their Silver Wedding Anniversary. Let's congratulate them on that, and show our appreciation of them, by being there to help celebrate the event. They ask nothing for themselves, as much as they are entitled to it. They, and we, are asking that you make a gift of silver, money, either as individuals or as groups—meaning by that churches, Sunday schools and classes, auxiliaries, and Christian Endeavor societiese. A chest will be provided for your gifts. Every cent that is contributed will be applied on the debt for the running expenses of the Home.

So come, give, eat, listen, congratulate, fellowship. Let's all be there: on June 8, at the Children's Home, from 10:30 to 3:00.

A SIMPLE COURSE OF TREATMENT FOR NEURASTHENIA

By J. Henry Wodehouse, N. D.

According to Black's Medical Dictionary, neurasthenia is a term meaning a condition of nervous exhaustion in which, although the patient suffers from no definite disease, he becomes incapable of sustained exertion. It further states that the condition is closely allied to several unusual mental states, such as hypochondriasis (where the affected person's mind is constantly occupied with a delusion that he is seriously ill) and hysteria, and that there is no sharp line between neurasthenia and hysteria, intermediate cases of every grade being met with.

A fairly wide experience goes to prove that Black's definition of neurasthenia is, generally, a very true one.

The most common symptoms to be noted in sufferers from neurasthenia are a lack of energy, a feeling of pressure at the top of the head, pains in the back, impaired memory, and insomnia. Constipation and digestive disturbances are other factors which frequently go hand in hand with the first-named symptoms.

CAUSES

Neurasthenia arises from a multiplicity of causes, which, on analysis, indicate that, fundamentally, the sufferer's habits of living have been at fault. These are some of the chief causes, and so you can judge for yourself whether habits of living are responsible:

1. Irritation of the nerves through the high-pressure life of today.

2. The added irritation and starvation of the nerves produced by eating unsuitable, unfeeding, and uncleansing foods.

3. The further nerve-irritation and nerve-weakness produced by the abuse of stimulants, such as alcohol, tobacco, strong tea, coffee, and, particularly, drug-containing medicines.

4. Shallow breathing, which deprives the body of oxygen and depresses the nerves because of the accumulation of carbon dioxide.

5. Lack of exercise, which precludes proper breathing, lessens the tone of the blood-circulation (upon which the nutrition of the nerves depends)), impairs elimination of toxins, and lowers the ability to obtain sound, refreshing sleep.

6. Wrong thinking, a very prolific cause of nervous and mental diseases. Fear is the basis of all wrong thinking, but worry, anger, envy, jealousy, bitterness, and despondency are some of its variations. If you think ill you experience ill.

7. Self-pity, the great destroyer of nerve poise.

CONSIDERING THE CAUSES

As no one can readily avoid the high-pressure life of today, we have to emphasize the great necessity for keeping the body in such a state of good functioning that it will withstand the pressure successfully. That can only be done by paying strict heed to obeying, as far as lies in one's power, the dictatees of the Natural Laws of Living.

Scientists may produce "wonderful" specifics from now until the end of time, but they will never be able to sidetrack the Natural Laws, which will forever demand obedience if health is to be maintained pure and unsullied.

As has been so persistently emphasized in this magazine from its very first number, health depends definitely upon proper nutrition and adequate elimination. Therefore, it is the personal duty of every sufferer from neurasthenia to make certain that his, or her, body is properly nourished, as the first and most important consideration. In the course of self-treatment that is to be outlined the matter of proper nutrition will receive due consideration.

The question of the abuse of stimulants does not need enlarging upon. One instinctively knows (but, perhaps, does not admit) that the abuse of alcohol, tobacco, etc., has a deleterious effect upon health, particularly the health of the nervous system. The sufferers who intend to act upon the advice given in this article, and who are sinners in respect to the abuse of stimulants, are advised to make the strongest possible stand to overcome any habit of indulging in them. They should strive to become masters of their bodies!

Shallow breathing may be overcome by cultivating the habit of deep-breathing.

Lack of exercise demands an effort to secure a greater amount by the means to be described later.

WRONG THINKING

Wrong thinking is, without doubt, the most difficult habit to correct; particularly as it is one that is indulged in by all neurasthenic people in varying degree. Paradoxically speaking, however, although difficult to correct, it is in reality easy; by which we mean that, if the sufferer will commence at the right end of the treatment and persevere with persistence and faith, he or she will find the correction of wrong thinking easier of accomplishment than would be thought possible. Unfortunately, most persons prone to wrong thinking do not realize that they are. However, sufferers who are following this discourse need not worry unduly or indulge in intense self-analysis. They need only to follow the treatment, and then, if they are given to wrong thinking, the habit will largely correct itself, without their knowledge, maybe. Many readers will wonder why that should be so. Let us explain by first asking another question. "What causes wrong thinking?" Well, after due consideration of the matter, it is our firm belief that the cause lies in a poisoned condition of the body. Can you imagine a person radiating health a victim to wrong thinking? Such a person would be filled with the optimism that health brings. On the other hand: who is more pessimistic and doleful than, for instance, the dyspeptic? There you have it.

Self-pity, of course, is just a very bad form of wrong thinking, and it may be combated successfully by the treatment about to be outlined.

As will have been realized by those who have followed carefully the foregoing consideration of the causes of neurasthenia, it is imperative in all cases that the system, as a whole, should be cleansed of all nerve-irritating toxins, and that the only way of attaining that object is by way of a cleansing or eliminating diet. The salutary effect of such a simple step in a large number of cases is remarkable, and so all sufferers should adopt the following dietetic regime as faithfully as they can, in the pleasing expectation of much benefit accruing.

The Eliminative Diet

Every sufferer, regardless of his or her physical condition, should start on this diet at the earliest possible moment:

Breakfast—An apple, an orange, some grapes, and a few dates.

Midday—Two pears, one apple, an orange, and some figs.

Evening—Grapefruit (or pineapple), an apple, a pear, and some raisins and nuts.

A different selection of fruits from those given may be taken, at the stated meals, which are merely given as a rough guide. It must be emphasized, however, that only the fruits mentioned may be used, with the exception of any other ripe juicy fruits that may be in season. Bananas are forbidden. If drinks are desired, they should consist only of water, or lemon juice and water, sweetened with honey. As, however, the fruit diet has a large water-content, thirst should not be experienced, and drinks, therefore, will be unnecessary. It is a natural law that one should not eat unless actual hunger is experienced, nor drink unless thirsty.

Milk, tea or other beverages will interfere with the effect of the diet, and so they should not be taken.

The fruit diet should be continued for seven complete days. Those who are constipated will find that the diet will help them; if assistance is necessary, the gravity douche should be used, but only when on the fruit diet.

Those who follow this treatment should make the greatest possible effort to give up all energy-sapping habits, such as indulgence in alcohol, tobacco, and coffee, and not to take medicine in any form.

Following the fruit diet, the sufferer should base his or her future diet on the Editor's monthly Health Menus; or it may be found a good plan to spend a further three days on fruit meals, plus two and a half pints of fresh cold milk each day. Half a pint should be taken with each fruit meal, and half a pint midway between meals. See how you feel!

Exercise

The practice of deep-breathing exercises detailed in the writer's article in the April issue of Health for All should be made a daily duty. See to it that they are faithfully carried out.

The spine-bending exercises illustrated by the Editor in the May 1932 issue of Health for All (still available, we understand) should also be practiced daily. The effect of both forms of exercise will soon be felt in a decided acquisition of physical and mental poise.

Cold wet rubbing of the body and dry friction, following the morning physical exercise, will assist the development of nerve-tone to a great degree. Carry out the cold wet rub by wringing a towel out of cold water and applying it briskly all over the body. Finish off by rubbing the body all over with a dry rough towel or friction brush.

Self-Suggestion

There is, perhaps, no other condition of disease in which harmful self-suggestion plays such a large part. Every one who suffers from neurasthenia seems to be a victim to introspection of a morbid kind. In fact, the victims to nerve weakness are so well-defined by their physical and mental characteristics that one comes to mentally label them as possessing a "neurasthenic" temperament. Observation shows that they are most frequently of the type that are meticulous to the last degree, and it is their intense attention to minute detail that would seem to render them more liable to nerve-weakness than those of less particular natures, because of their great waste of nervous energy.

The obvious remedy is to cleanse the bloodstream as has already been explained, and then to commence a form of self-suggestion to counteract the former wrong thinking. It is safe to say that, if sufferers from neurasthenia would devote as much meticulousness to positive thinking as they do to negative thinking in relation to their health, they would quickly make a very beneficial change in the state of their physical condition.

It is proposed, therefore, that the following phrase should be repeated six times, with great concentration, each night just before retiring: "I am getting better; my nerves are stronger and soon I shall be quite well." Emphasize the italicised words; and each morning, on rising, the sufferer should repeat, just as earnestly, this phrase: "Now for my rejuvenating treatment which is doing me so much good!"

The practice of self-suggestion may seem something very foolish to many, but it cannot be emphasized too strongly that, in all cases where nerve weakness is a factor, self-suggestion along the lines proposed is of the utmost value.

Finaly, nervesufferers are earnestly exhorted to take a brisk walk of at least one mile each day, and to breathe deeply while striding along.

On the face of it, the treatment as outlined may appear too simple to be efficacious. We can only say that if it is carried out exactly as described, the results will be entirely satisfactory.—Health for All.

GIVE TIME DAILY TO SELF-CULTURE

There are no short cuts to wisdom. The acquisition of superior knowledge demands thoroughness, accuracy, and concentration. Desultory reading and fitful study may give you information, but not great knowledge and culture. Ordinarily ability with extraodinary diligence can accomplish astonishing results. Intellectual power is a growth rather than a gift. The inevitable price for real knowledge is laborious application. The use you make of your present mental powers has a vital influence upon your further development. Intellectual culture is not for self-satisfaction or ostentatious display, but for increased efficiency, usefulness, and achievement. The time you give daily to self-culture is a profitable investment.—Grenville Kleiser.

IT IS NOT TOO LATE

——to start that Young People's Choir in your church, although the time is less than a month before the Leadership Training School will begin. One or two rehearsals a week will prepare the average group of young singers to sing two musical numbers not too difficult of rendition. Begin now, and write to me about it.

Good reports have come from those already in action. It is anticipated that some very good religious music will be heard upon the occasion of the contest on the night of June 26th. Although your choir may not have been organized until rather late, you will not be handicapped. A blank form will be mailed to your pastor, director or manager to be filled in with information for the judges, that each choir will have as fair a chance as possible.

Perhaps some of the young people expecting to attend the Leadership Training School, who are not in one of these choirs, would like to have the advantage of a little choir singing during the school session. If so, please let the writer know by card now, or inform him immediately upon arriving at the College, and you will be placed in the united choirs for singing at the evening sessions.

Let us hear from you soon.

E. Lester Ballard.

—Judge Hawkins, Superior Court Judge of Georgia, has ruled that the new beer law enacted by Congress is unconstitutional. He also rules that dry states can forbid the transportation of beer through their territory.

WHEN YOUNG THOMAS LIPTON CALLED ON PRESIDENT HAYES

Few men from the Old World have been as well and interestingly known in this country as the late Sir Thomas Lipton.

He was of lowly origin, tall, vigorous, and active. He built up a large and successful business which he conducted with integrity and generosity.

Equally outstanding is his record as a sportsman. Over and over again he sailed his yacht in the endeavor—not always successful—to win the championship cup. When he won he was a generous winner, and when he lost he was a good loser. Always—winner or loser—he was a good fellow, never failing to win the admiration of both competitors and spectators.

He gives much credit for his success to his mother. "She taught me," he gratefully testifies, "to hold my head high and to have ideals in life. Honesty, courage and truthfulness were her chief tenets in the philosophy of life; she never tired of impressing these essentials on my young mind. Religion, too, played a strong part in the Lipton household. My mother had the ingrained conviction that no matter what might befall her and her dear ones, she and they need fear nothing so long as they feared God."

The recently published autobiography of Sir Thomas makes interesting and instructive reading. He relates in simple, straight-forward manner the incidents and sights observed and thought over through a long and unusually active and successful life. It makes entertaining reading for young and old, and is sure to leave a deposit of good feeling and hope with the reader.

As an appetizer for the reader let me give one incident—hoping this may lead to the perusal of the volume. He had been to Chicago on important business. Having successfully attended to that he decided that he was entitled to a vacation, the first luxury of the kind he had ever allowed himself. We will let him tell the story:

"I had seen a good deal of the Eastern and Southern states as a boy working my way around from place to place, but the conditions were now much more in my favor. I could pick and choose my centers for visitation. Naturally the first place I selected was Washington. And I hadn't been in the famous capital many hours before I shook hands with President Hayes! I wonder how many Englishmen, before or since, have beaten my record for a quick line-up alongside an American President.

"Here is the story. Having learned at the hotel that Mr. Hayes held frequent receptions which were open to all and sundry—a piece of information not strictly correct, perhaps, but one which interested me immensely—and that, in fact, this particular day was a reception day, I promptly hired a cab and drove up to the historical residence which stands second only in my eyes to Buckingham Palace itself.

"There was not a soul in sight when I got to the front door, but I boldly rang the bell, nevertheless. In answer to my summons a man servant appeared, and I asked him quietly if the President was at home.

" 'He is, sir,' replied the servant. 'Will you please follow me?'

"Feeling just a wee bit nervous by the total absence of the crowds I had expected to meet with on an official reception day, I did as I was bid and was duly shown into a spacious room on the first floor. It was tenanted by one single gentleman, very amiable in aspect, whom I took to be a private secretary or, at least, an important clerk. He came forward at once and warmly shook me by the hand. I felt at home on the instant, and we commenced to talk in the freest and friendliest manner. On my annoucing that I came from Scotland, the gentleman expressed his delight and inquired if I happened to know some of his cousins who lived in the Fair City of Perth. He was just about to tell me the family name of his cousins when I broke in with the information that I didn't know Perth, but that I fully intended to open a shop there when I went home. In this way we chatted on various subjects for fully twenty minutes. I got to like him so much and was so thoroughly enjoying his brilliant conversation that I decided to ask him to lunch, and did so in these words:

" 'Sir, I would appreciate the pleasure of your company to lunch in my hotel after I have had the honor of meeting the President. Can you tell me when the reception is likely to begin today?'

"My friend looked at me quizically. 'But I am President Hayes,' he quietly observed.

"I was aghast at my blunder and offered profuse apologies, but the genial President of the United States broke out into hearty laughter, and it was not until later we learned that I had been mistaken for a visitor who had an official appointment with the First Citizen and had been ushered without further ceremony into his august presence! Can you wonder at it that all my life I have had a supreme regard for President Hayes and for all the distinguished men who have succeeded him in this illustrious office?"

All of us would be willing to get into such a predicament, could we be sure of getting out of it as gracefully and with as much enjoyment and credit as did Thomas Lipton.

ONE BIBLE STUDY

We cannot everestimate the importance of a thorough familiarity with the Bible. I try to lose no opportunity of urging people to the constant study of this wonderful Book. People are running to religious meetings and they think the meetings will do the work. But if they fail to bring you into contact with the Word of God, their impression will be gone in three months.

Do you ask: "How can I get in love with the Bible?" Arouse yourself to the study of it, ask God's assistance and He will assuredly help you!

If we feed on the Word it will be so easy to speak to others; and not only that, we shall be growing in grace all the while. Study the Bible carefully and prayerfully. When the Holy Spirit touches the eyes of your understanding and you see Christ shining through the pages of the Bible, it becomes a new book to you.—D. L. Moody.

BEER AND MOTOR ACCIDENTS

The Registrar of Motor Vehicles in Massachusetts is concerned because this year shows an increase in auto accidents of about 10 per cent, though there is a decrease of 8 per cent in the number of cars registered. Has beer anything to do with this increase of accidents?

A "wet" paper says there is no connection between the two. But a correspondent of the same paper takes a different view. He gives some interesting facts and comments that are pertinent. He says:

"It may not be beer alone that is the cause of the increase of accidents, but the general let-down regarding strong drink that followed the agitation for beer. Here are some facts that beer lovers and 'repealers' might think about.

"In this country we have almost eight times as many motor vehicles, according to the population, as they have in England. It is a well known fact that the hazard increases out of proportion as the number of cars is increased. In other words, a thousand cars on a certain road will produce a certain hazard. But double the number of cars and the hazard becomes not double, but several times as great.

"In spite of this fact, England, where there is no prohibition, and with eight times less cars, produces almost three times as many motor vehicle deaths in proportion to the number of cars."

The ugly smells, in front of places where beer is sold and drunk in Washington, are beginning to be noticed. An increase in the number of persons seen staggering along the streets is also attracting attention.

President Roosevelt is beginning to urge that states speed up the ratification of the Amendment to repeal prohibition.

My impression is that the wiser way is to fight for delay in this matter. The people may see that beer is not what it has been cracked up to be. Their second thought may be, "Let us hold on to the Eighteenth Amendment as the best way of dealing with the liquor traffic!"

SUMMER CONFERENCE

Notice

The Pastors' Summer Conference will be held as planned last year—in conjunction with the Training School. The Conference will include the 27th, 28th and 29th days of June.

The program is being arranged and will be published in the HERALD at an early date.

We are hoping to make it a happy and worth-while conference and hope all the pastors and superannuates will do their best to come.

R. C. STUBBINS,
President Summer Conference.

—At a recent conference a minister's wife was called into the cabinet room for a talk with the bishop. "A pathetic case," they said. The quiet little woman explained. "Yes, we are having a financial struggle, but my husband secured a job milking fifteen cows every morning in exchange for one pail of milk for me and the children. God has been very good to us."

FATHER'S FIRST PRAYER

A child from a poor family had an intemperate father, who often used to abuse his wife and children.

This little girl had been to Sunday School and had become pious. The physician had told the father that his girl would die. No, he would not believe it.

Yes, she will, she must die in a few hours.

The father flew to the bedside; he would not part with her, he said.

"Yes, father, you must part with me, I am going to Jesus. Promise me two things; one is, 'that you will not abuse mother any more, and will not drink any more whisky'."

He promised in a solemn, steady manner. The little girl's face lightened up with joy.

"The other thing is, promise me that you will pray," said the child.

"I cannot pray; don't know how," said the poor man.

"Father, kneel down, please. There, say the words after me. I will pray; I learned how to pray in Sunday School, and God has taught me how to pray too, my heart prays, and you must let your heart pray.

"Now, say the words."

And she began in her simple language to pray to the Saviour of sinners. After a little he began to repeat after her; as he went on his heart was interested; he broke out into an earnest prayer for himself; bewailed his sins, and promised to forsake them; entered into a covenant with God; light broke out in his darkness; how long he prayed he did not know, he seemed to have forgotten his child in his prayer.

When he came to himself he raised his head from the bed here he had rested it. There lay the little speaker, a lovely smile upon her face; her little hand was on that of her father's, but she was gone to be with Jesus.—Author Unknown.

KNOWING CHRIST

You may talk about the Lord Jesus, you may sing about ?Him, but do you know Him? Is He precious, is He real, is He near? Can He say of you, "Ye in Me, and I in you?"

The new birth and the baptism in the Spirit are the entrance, the fringe, the gateway, by which you can get to know Him. Not know about Him, but know Him. Angels see Him; angels worship Him; but that does not satisfy Him. He wants to be nearer than that to you. He would have you to be bone of His bone, flesh of His flesh, and one spirit with Him.

Don't have a phantom Christ, a Christ of imagination, a Christ of theory; but have a personal Christ. He said, "Handle Me." To Him that believeth, He is precious. Take to believe. Believe! Believe! Believe! "Unto you * * * that believe He is precious." He is precious to you in proportion as you value the things of earth as nothing. If other things are precious, then He cannot be. Do not belittle Him. Let Him be precious to you. Take time to believe. Take time for realization of His presence in you. "The Kingdom of God is within you." "I in you"—Christ in you. He is not in all in the same proportion. It may be that in some the "incorruptible seed" is covered up. In some it may be sprouting from the ground. Others have larger growth; others have the flower, and others have the fruit.

You may have Jesus in the midst to be just what you want Him to be—the Burden Bearer and Companion; the one dispelling fear. Have Christ within as the One giving courage when you have need.

He once said, "Foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay His head." He is seeking a place in the hearts of His own. He wants to make a nest in you. The Christ of Glory wants to make a nest, a home, in you.

"Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man"—no discrimination—"hear My voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with Me." Any one, any wandering one, any dejected one, any despised one, can respond to His knock. Heaven's best, God's greatest gift, wants to come in. Welcome Him. Everyone, welcome Him now. Believe that He comes in, and He will come in; and from this time forth He will be to you what He never was before.

The homeless One wants a home. He is more anxious to come in than you are to have Him. "The Son abideth" in the house forever (John 8:35). He wants to abide in your heart forever. Take Him for just what you need. Let Him come in as your life, your strength, your health, your wisdom, your courage: "Christ in you, the hope of Glory."

If you are going to be linked to Him in eternity, see that the link is made in time, and that the link is the link of love.

God's Best is wanting to come into you. You say you are not ready, you are not fit, you are not worthy. The Blood cleanses the tenement. The Blood of the Son of Man fits for the habitation of the Son of God. Two things are necessary: first, a willingness to receive, and then the cleansing of the Blood to enable Him to come in. If you do the one, and express your willingness to receive Him, He will do the other. You be willing and He will cleanse, and then He will come in —then believe it is done.—The Old Paths.

THE UNFAILING HELPER

Human friends fail us. The strongest sinew in an arm of flesh will crack; the most faithful heart will sometimes waver; and when there is most need of our friends, we find that they fail us. But our God is eternal and omnipotent; who ever trusted in Him in vain?

Gather up your confidences; make them into one confidence; and fix them all on Him. Lean not here and there—thou wilt grow crooked in thyself, and the staff thou leanest on shall turn into a spear and pierce thee. Lean wholly upon God, and as He is everywhere, thou shalt stand upright in leaning upon Him.—C. H. Spurgeon.

OUR STORY PAGE

TWO LITTLE GIRLS AND A DOLL

One little girl was the daughter of an Apache Indian chief. The other little girl was the daughter of a United States Army officer. The doll had rosy cheeks, blue eyes and had traveled in a box all the way from "back East."

It all happened years ago, when the United States Government was trying to allot certain lands to the Indians. Some of the Apaches were not satisfied with their share, so they made ready for war and gathered from every direction to fight the white man.

"The Apaches are gathering for war," was the message sent to the government. Immediately large numbers of soldiers were ordered to the nearest fort to keep constant watch on the Indians.

The first Apache captured by the soldiers was very small. She was a little girl, who had strayed too far from her wigwam and could not find her way back. The government soldiers found her, tired and frightened, and took her on to their own fort. They tried to show her that they wanted to be friends, but their strange white faces terrified her, and she cried and cried. One soldier after another tried to comfort her, but the more they tried the louder she wailed. The commanding officer did not know what to do next. He shook his head in despair. Then he said to his men, "Wait a minute; I have an idea."

He called his little daughter. "Here's a little girl who has come to visit you," he said, as he led the little lost Apache toward her. She walked shyly up to the little Indian girl, hugging in her arms her new doll, which had come in the box from her friends in the East. As soon as the little Indian saw her doll, she forgot to cry any more, and held out both her arms for it.

At first it seemed there would be another war. The little girls were like their fathers. Both wanted the same doll, as their fathers wanted the same land.

"Won't you let your little friend play with your doll a while?" asked the army officer coaxingly.

Then he waited until his daughter politely handed her doll to the daughter of the Apache chief. After that they were friends. They sat down together, they ate together, and then went to sleep together. When the little Apache awoke some of the soldiers took her back to her father's wigwam, marching under a flag of truce. She was delighted to be back home and ran around showing all her friends the doll which the little "pale face" had given her.

Bright and early the next day an Indian came to the fort to return the doll.

"Did you understand that was a present from my little girl to your little girl?" asked the officer in command. "You are to keep it."

Back in the wigwam the little Apache held up her arms eagerly as the doll was returned to her.

At the fort the soldiers waited for the attack of the Indians. Everything was very still, and soon the message came that the various bands of Apaches were breaking up and going in peace to the land which the government had set apart for them. The soldiers could not understand.

"Seems like the red men aren't going to fight us after all. What do you suppose has happened?"

"Do you suppose it could be the doll that has charmed them?"

The soldiers laughed, for this was exactly what had happened. The Apache chief was so pleased with the doll and the kindness of the white men to his little daughter that he declared the war off.—Southern Churchman.

THE BLIND BOY'S PATIENCE

The other day I went to see a little blind boy. Scarlet fever had settled in his eyes, and for many months he had not seen at all. He used to be a sprightly little fellow, upon the run everywhere. "Well, my dear boy," I said, "this is hard for you, is it not?"

He did not answer for a moment; then he said: "I don't know that I ought to say hard; God knows best." But his lips quivered, and a little tear stole down his cheek.

"Yes, my child, you have a kind Heavenly Father, who loves you and feels for you even more than your mother does."

"I know it, sir," said the little boy, "and it comforts me."

"I wish that Jesus was here to cure Frank," said his little sister.

"Well," said I, "He will soon open little Frank's eyes to see what a good Saviour He is. He will show him that a blinded heart is worse than blinded eyes, and He will cure it, and make him see and enjoy beautiful Heavenly things, so that he may sit here and be a thousand times happier than many children who are running about."

"I can't help wishing that he could see," said Lizzie.

"I dare say, but I hope that you don't try to make Frank discontented."

"Frank isn't discontented," said Lizzie earnestly. "He loves God; and love sets everything right and makes its own sunshine, does it not, Frank?"

"I don't feel cross now," said the little blind boy meekly. "When I'm alone I pray and sing my Sunday School songs, and sing and sing; and God is right here in the room, and it feels light, and—and—I forget that I am blind at all," and a sweet light stole over his pale features as he spoke. It was a Heavenly light, I was sure.—Youth's Evangelist.

THE LAND OF PROMISE

Enter right into the Land of Promise, into the fullness of the Gospel of Christ. The Kingdom of Heaven is open to you, and it is your opportunity to enter in, in a way in which perhaps you have never yet done. The Lord Jesus Christ was not mistaken when He was here upon earth and proclaimed by His herald, and repeated through His disciples whom He sent out, and declared in His own personal ministry, that "the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." It was no error as some would have us think, but most solemn truth.—Rev. H. J. Barker.

GOD WORKING THROUGH US IN EVERY DAY LIFE

(CONSECRATION MEETING)

Scripture Text: I Cor. 3:9-15.

God has appointed man to be a means of converting into His kingdom. We are laborers under God as well as fellow-workers with God. We ought to be very careful in our work as laborers in His kingdom. As God is working through us daily we should do our best in all things. "By their fruits ye shall know them." The work we do should be permanent, for temporal things are subject to destruction. Eternal things are indestructible; and if any man buildeth with things that are eternal his labor shall endure through the ages.

The Final Judgment of Our Lives

Some day we all shall have to give an account of what we have done here on earth. After we depart from this material world and appear in judgment before the perfect Judge, what can we show Him? Has our life been devoted to the satisfaction of material and carnal desire? Have we neglected those things of permanent value in order to satisfy the craving of the flesh? What kind of character can we show? Young people should be very careful these days before they accept some of the advice that is offered by a certain type of educator. There are those who say that the supreme purpose in life is the satisfaction of carnal desire. These men would change the entire educational system in order that their pet dogma might be worked out in the lives of young people. Then they wonder at the increase of crime and blame it on the Eighteenth Amendment. One of the great factors in the modern encouragement of crime is the claims and teachings of those educators who insist that fleshly desire be made the be-all and end-all of life, and that no fleshly desires be curbed whatsoever. Let young people who wish to build for eternity seek that higher desire—the spiritual desire; to be like God as He revealed Himself in the person of His only begotten Son. If all people would do this, we could wipe out crime and sorrow and poverty and sin, and overcome the vicious effects of the new philosophy of education which seeks to destroy the eternal soul of man and reduce him to the status of a mere animal.

Suitable Songs

Holy, Holy, Holy; I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord; My Hope Is Built; Am I a Soldier of the Cross?; Lest We Forget; How Firm a Foundation; What a Friend We Have in Jesus; Rock of Ages.

A Practical Project

Build in each Endeavorer's life a shining, magnificent temple of God, that living in the community others may see its beauty, through which is reflected the dignity of Christ's personality; and others may then think and feel that the secret of power and beauty is God. The temple of God will then be built up.

Quotable Poetry

Though the cause of evil prosper,
  Yet 'tis truth alone is strong;
Though her portion be the scaffold,
  And upon the throne be wrong—
Yet that scaffold sways the future,
  And behind the dim unknown
Standeth God within the shadow,
  Keeping watch above His own.
—Lowell.

The work that we have builded,
  Oft with bleeding hands and tears,
Oft in error, oft in anguish,
  will not perish with our years;
It will last, and shine transfigured
  In the final reign of right;
It will pass into the splendors
  Of the city of the light.
—Adler.

A REQUEST TO PASTORS AND SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS

It is less than a month until our Conference Leadership Training School. We need to secure at least 200 students for the school. I want to request all pastors and Sunday school superintendents to call the school to the attention of the Sunday school and church each Sunday from now until the Leadership Training school. Have your people to raise some money to send one or more young people to the school. It will be money well spent. Have the Woman's Auxiliary to raise money to send one of their members to the school to take one of the special missionary courses. Remember that $5.25 will pay all charges, including textbook and other expenses. Send names to the writer.

SCHOOL OF MISSIONS

As the time draws near for the Leadership Training School at High Point College, we are particularly anxious to know how many of our Methodist Protestant women over the state will avail themselves of the opportunity to take the course in Missions. We think this course will be of inestimable value to the members of the Woman's Auxiliary and we are hoping the enrollment for the course will be large. Rev. T. J. Whitehead, who will teach the class, is not only a good speaker and teacher, but he is really interested in helping our women to get some workable plans and suggestions for carrying on the Auxiliary work in North Carolina.

All of us need to know more about our own mission work and mission work in general, so we are appealing to you to attend the School of Missions. During the class periods opportunity will be given for exchanging ideas and plans and for the discussion of problems. The entire cost will be $5.00 and that includes rooms, board, tuition, registration fee—everything except the price of the textbook. There will be two class periods each morning running over a period of five days.

The Board of Missions has decided to let Mr. and Mrs. Minnis remain in India and the North Carolina Branch members will want to have a large part in helping to keep them there. In addition to learning about missions in general, our mission work in particular, and the discussion of plans, suggestions and problems, let's get together in our School of Missions and work out plans for raising our budget and thus show our love and interest in a material way to Mr. and Mrs. Minnis.

The Grace Church, Greensboro, Auxiliary recently voted to send its president, Mrs. W. C. Ogburn, and pay her expenses. Will each Auxiliary please make a real effort to send one or more and will they also please send me the names of those who expect to attend.

MRS. E. LESTER BALLARD,
Secretary of Missionary Education,

MY DESIRE

I want to be the kind of man
  That God wants me to be,
A man who places principle
  Above expediency.

I do not want ephemeral gold,
  I do not look for praise,
I do not covet worldly fame,
  Nor pleasure-laden days.

I want to humby work and serve,
  And give the best in me;
I want to be the kind of man
  That God wants me to be.

A STATEMENT

Your treasurer received even $16.00 last week. Little more than this amount was received the week before. I have been ashamed to publish an itemized statement of my receipts in the Herald. I do not want to discredit my Conference in the eyes of the general public.

I had to borrow money in order that Dr. Andrews could go to the meeting of the Board of Administration which met in Pittsburgh, Pa., recently. This money must be paid back at the expiration of 90 days; but unless my receipts increase very materially I shall not be able to do so, and my credit will be gone, and so will yours.

GEO. R. BROWN, Treasurer.

ALL INTERESTED PLEASE NOTE

The Dixon-Smathers-Williams family reunion is set for July 4th, 1933, at Flat Rock Church on Flat Rock Circuit. If you belong to the tribe you will add to the pleasure of the day by being present.

A brief memorial service will be held. Mrs. Sarah A. Smothers, J. W. Williams and Mrs. Elmina Williams Garrett will be remembered.

Friends of the family are invited to bring their baskets and participate in the picnic dinner with us.

The brief program is announced to begin at 10:30 a. m. A. G. DIXON.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Denton.—The first Sunday in next month, June 4, there will be a Home-Coming day and Memorial service at old Mount Ebal church near Denton. We have a program that gives promise of a lovely day. Rev. Walter Thompson, of Pilot Mountain, a son of whom this community is justly proud, will preach for us at the 11 o'clock hour. Following this service we will go to the cemetery and decorate the graves of our beloved dead. The afternoon service will be devoted to a sermon by a former beloved pastor, and songs by the Canaan church choir and visiting quartets and duets.

The history of Mount Ebal church dates back some 70 years. This place, up until late years, was noted for its great old-time camp meetings. Only two Methodist Protestant churches anywhere nearby have an older record than this church. Her pulpit has been graced by several of our outstanding preachers, such as Wills, Dunn, Lineberry, Lewallen, Deans, Pegram, Peoples, etc. Her charter members are made up from the names of those whose descendants are the sterling citizenry of this section to this good day, such family names as Sexton, Morris, Gibson, Tucker, Varner, Gallimore, Johnson, Thompson and Cranford.

We think it fitting that the sons, daughters and offspring of those noble characters who carried on in such a grand fashion in every phase of community life and betterment, of whose records and achievements you are justly proud, should have a chance to come back to the ground which was hallowed by your father's and mother's devotion, to honor their dead dust and sacred memory by placing a flower on their graves. So, come. Bring lots of flowers, and a big basket of dinner, and let's have one more good day together. Do not stay away, then wish the balance of your life that you had come. Be on hand by 10:30 a. m.

ROBERT SHORT, Pastor.

Winston-Salem, First.—While it is a little late, yet I would like to say a few words about our attendance record in our Sunday school for the months of February, March and April. As has been previously stated, every member of the school was considered on the honor roll the first Sunday in February, and each person remained on the honor roll until he was absent just one Sunday. One hundred and forty persons were present the first Sunday in February and 58 of these went through the three months without missing a Sunday. Brother W. N. Pegram's class of more mature men and women made the highest percentage of attendance, theirs being 63. The next best record was made by the Baraca Class with Brother C. H. Smith teacher, 61 per cent of these men not missing a Sunday. The family of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Moser made the best record, neither the father nor mother nor either of the three children missed a Sunday. There were several other families of only two or three that did not miss a Sunday. The school averaged 13 more this year than for the corresponding period last year, even though the weather this year was much rougher than it was a year ago.

The most of our sick folks are improving these days. The mother of Miss Leota Loggins, who has been critically ill, is considerably improved. Mrs. Russell Mooney, whose life was almost despaired of a couple of weeks ago, is gain in strength now. Miss Pauline Tise, who was in a hopital here a few weeks ago, is slowly recovering at her home.

Several of our people from here went down to Giles' Chapel a week ago for the hundredth anniversary celebration and were pleased with the day. J. E. PRITCHARD.

Siler City Church.—Our revival meeting closed Friday night. Rev. C. L. Spencer, of Henderson, came Monday afternoon and delivered two sermons each day. We had a good meeting and every sermon was a splendid, soul-stirring message and were enjoyed by everyone who heard them. The Holy Spirit was present in convicting and converting power and seven souls were brought to Christ. We had hoped that many more might have given themselves to Jesus, but we feel sure it was no fault of Mr. Spencer's, as he gave plenty of warning. We all love Mr. Spencer and hope he may come our way again.

Sunday morning we had a good Sunday school, with every teacher and officer present. From Sunday school we went to Piney Grove, our old home church, to a memorial service. This is an annual affair and is on this charge. When we arrived and entered the church, the first one to catch our attention was Rev. T. F. McCulloch, of Greensboro, a former pastor of this church about 40 years ago. In a moment Rev. W. M. Pike, another former pastor, was seated by his side. Now this was a real treat to see these servants of God again and have them at our memorial service. Our pastor, Mr. Isley, then brought one of the most appropriate sermons it has been our pleasure to hear. Every song was appropriate for the occasion and one of the largest crowds that we have seen at this place in many years. Then came the noon hour. Lunch was served, picnic style, on a long table in the grove. This was a real feast, with plenty to eat, and everyone was fed. In the afternoon the Rocky River choir furnished the music, which was very good. Rev. T. F. McCulloch led the devotionals. Miss Sallie Smith, of Siler City, was the first speaker. "Piney Grove Twenty-Five Years Ago" was her subject. This was a splendid talk. She brought out the vast difference in the way things have been done and carried on the past 25 years, most especially in church work, and yet we are serving the same God as our fathers and mothers did 25 years ago. W. B. Cooper's granddaughters, of Greensboro and Asheboro, sang a beautiful duet suitable for the occasion. Revs. McCulloch and Pike both made splendid talks. Rev. T. F. Andrew, of the Friends church, Staley, N. C., was present and made a beautiful talk. The last speaker was Rev. Fred Cooper, of the Holiness church, Asheboro. Mr. Cooper was reared almost under the shadow of Piney Grove church and it was a real treat for him to come back to the church and home of his childhood and stand before the audience and relate the happenings of his boyhood. He could recall many incidents of interest in his home aroud the family altar and in the Sunday school at this place. We all enjoyed this interesting talk as we felt he was one of us and went out from among us to carry on the great work that God has given him to do. We were glad his father, W. B. Cooper, who has been seriously ill, was able to be present and hear his son's talk.

There was a splendid delegation from Greensboro, Asheboro, Sparta, Siler City and other places who always come on this date to pay tribute to those who are sleeping in the beautiful churchyard. Every grave was decorated with beautiful flowers. This was a great day for those of us who could be there, and we are hoping we may be permitted to be there the fourth Sunday in May, 1934.

MRS. J. A. COOPER.

Haw River Church, Glen Raven Charge.—We observed Memorial Day here Sunday. Our pastor, Rev. J. P. Pegg, brought us a wonderful message, which was enjoyed very much by a large congregation. After service we went out to the cemetery and put flowers on all the graves. To begin the service we had the roll call of all our sainted dead since this church was organized. In the afternoon we had the privilege of attending a group meeting of several of the churches. The financial problem was discussed at the meeting. It seemed to be the opinion of all present that the churches of the group would pay all their claims before the Annual Conference.

T. S. COBLE.

State Street, Lexington.—Reports from State Street church have been somewhat irregular during the past few months, not because the work is lagging nor because no important things are happening, but because the reporter has been unable to attend the various services regularly enough to keep in touch.

All branches of the work are going forward and we feel sure this is going to be a successful year for our church in every way. We are all so glad to have Dr. and Mrs. Maier home again after an absence of a little more than two weeks, during which time they attended a group of denominational meetings in Pittsburg and visited relatives and friends of both Dr. and Mrs. Maier in Zanesville, Ohio, Columbus, Ohio, Middletown, Ohio, and Cincinnati. The meeting in Pittsburgh was a very important one, being a joint meeting of the Boards of Administration, Christian Education and Missions. Mrs. Maier is a member of these boards, and as duty called her toward the homes of loved ones of both herself and Dr. Maier, they decided to take advantage of the opportunity to visit a while before returning home.

Dr. Maier was pastor of the M. P. church in Columbus for six years and is held in high esteem by all who knew him there and is loved by the people he served, as is also his talented and lovable wife.

Mrs. Maier spoke in Mount Washington church in Pittsburgh on Sunday, June 13, her subject being "Building a Life."

During the visit of Dr. and Mrs. Maier with Mrs. Maier's mother at Middletown, Ohio, the 77th anniversary of Mrs. Maier's home church was observed. This was quite a happy coincidence.

The Woman's Auxiliary served a delicious dinner in the church dining room Saturday night. About $30.00 was cleared, although two other church dinners were served in town the same night.

Dr. Maier and Rev. Mr. Isley attended the commencement exercises at High Point College Tuesday.

We are grateful to Rev. C. B. Way for bringing us two splendid addresses the two Sunday evenings that our pastor was away.

There has been right much sickness among our people, but all are reported to be improving and we hope all can be back in their places at church soon.

MRS. J. F. BURKHART, Reporter.

Bellemont, Mt. Hermon Charge.—The annual Memorial Services were held at Bellemont on Sunday, May 28. We had two splendid services which were attended by an unusually large crowd. Dr. C. E. Forlines of Westminster, Maryland, delivered the Memorial address at the 11 o'clock service, and Rev. W. K. McGee of Burlington spoke to us in the afternoon. Both services were very inspiring. Another feature that added much to the services was the special music by the Burlington girls' quartet and a solo by Miss Elva Ausley of Graham.

Dr. Forlines took his text from John 4:38—"Others have labored, and ye are entered into their labors." A summary of his address is as follows: Dr. Forlines impressed upon our minds the fact that memory is a very valuable part of our personality. Almost all we enjoy we owe to our memory. Occasionally a person loses his memory and cannot recall the past. He has everything to learn again. Sad is the condition of such a person. We owe a great deal of gratitude to the past, for both realization of the present and the hope of the future are based on memory. If we had no memory we couldn't have experience. We couldn't profit by the labors of others. We are greatly indebted to the past for our material possessions, and for all the conveniences and luxuries we enjoy. A great many men have labored to give improvements to future generations. The building of law and order has taken years and years. It was a long time until the Ten Commandments were given and people have profited from them ever since. Law and government are based on these. They are old but they are very valuable. Our forefathers fought the Revolutionary War to free us from England, and we ',entered into their labors." Our experiences are collected and passed on to our offspring. Therefore, it is necessary and possible for us to educate today because of the past. No one knows how to go into the future unless he has a grip on the past. Christ and His disciples lived and suffered in the past. Through missionaries who labored we have received His teaching. "We owe it to these people who have labored to appreciate what htey have transmitted to us, so that the next generation will know they are indebted to us." We should take what is given us and add our contribution to it. Let us fill our minds with good things and as we grow older our memories will make us happier. Let us serve so that those who remember us will have cause to be grateful to us.

After the Memorial address a short service was held at the cemetery and flowers were placed on the graves.

Rev. W. K. McGee's subject for the afternoon was "What Are You Worth?" He took his text from Matthew, chapter 6. He considered his subject from four standpoints. What are you worth to yourself, to your fellows, to your church, and to the Kingdom of God?

The officers of the Memorial association for the new year are: Mr. Lee Moser, president; Mr. D. L. Linens, vice-president; Miss Ramah Shoffner, secretary and treasurer, and Mrs. Clay W. Holt, corresponding secretary.

The Christian Endeavor society held its regular monthly social at the home of Miss Nannie Coble on Saturday evening, May 20. A large crowd attended and every one had a most enjoyable time.

On Saturday afternoon the Philathea class held its monthly class meeting at the home of Mrs. Cora Hargis.

Class No. 5 held its class meeting at the home of Mrs. Clay Holt on Thursday evening, May 25. A short program was given and then the business session was held. New Officers and committees elected for the next 6 months are: Mrs. Clay Holt, president; Miss Nannie Coble, vice-president; Miss Myrtle Holt, secretary; Miss Mattie Rich, assistant secretary; Miss Margaret Pickett and Mrs. James Stanfield, social committee; Misses Nannie Coble, Helen Sharpe and Maybelle Hill, refreshment committee; Misses Vicie Holt and Dorothy Rich, flower committee. After the business session every one had a most delightful social hour. The refreshments served were ice cream and cake.

Congratulations to Miss Margaret and Mr. Howard Pickett who graduated from High Point College on Monday, May 29.

Calvary, Greensboro.—The month of May has been a busy, and we hope, profitable month with us. And you who read may be interested in some of the happenings and developments.

The second Sunday was observed as Mother'e Day. The pastor preached a sermon especially to the mothers, and we had a good attendance. One infant was baptized. That night we had a song service using "America's Ten Most Popular Hymns," according to the vote taken by Seth Parker, as the basis for the service. An extra large congregation for an evening service. And I think it was well worth while.

The third Sunday afternoon the Stewards' Area Meeting was held at Calvary with a good attendance of the stewards from three of our churches here in Greensboro. Mr. Guy B. Phillips, Superintendent of the Greensboro school system, gave us a good address. That night no service, that being the time for the commencement sermon at the High School; and, since four of our young people were members of the class, we thought it only right that we should honor them by attending that service.

Last Sunday morning the regular service. Last Sunday night we had the pleasure of hearing Dr. Forlines address a rally of the young people. A fine congregation with representatives from several of our churches with a number of the pastors.

The supper meeting of our Brotherhood was held on the third Friday with the largest attendance yet, and a very enthusiastic and worth while meeting. Among the projects to be undertaken are the sposoring of a Boy Scout Troop in the church. (The troop is to be organized this Friday night.) The working out of plans for a playground back of the church. The endorsement of a Daily Vacation Bible School and of a Story Hour. (Committees are meeting this week to work out the details.) The undertaking of the work of painting the church and parsonage. (The parsonage is being painted this week, and as soon as it is finished, we hope to begin on the church).

The Woman's Auxiliary is making good progress. The largest attendance at the last Auxiliary meeting in several months. One of the interesting phases of their work is the holding of cottage prayer meetings under the leadership of Mrs. David M. Glass, the chairman of Spiritual Life. They plan to hold some meetings at the County Home shortly.

We invite those who are in Greensboro over the week-end to attend services at Calvary. You will find a warm welcome.

C. W. BATES, Pastor.

First Church, Concord.—Our revival meeting came to a close last Wednesday night. Rev. Anderson from Albemarle did the preaching for us and he sure gave us some soul-stirring sermons. There did not seem to be very much interest shown among the people until Sunday night, then it seemed that the revival started among our intermediate boys and girls. On that night several of the boys and girls came forward for prayer and on Monday night they went around in the congregation and brought their frieds to the altar for prayer. We know that the meeting has helped us church members.

Last Sunday six new members were received into the church. They are: Miss Sallie Blackwell, Mr. Ernest Wishon, Miss Helen Lowder, and P. B. Lowder and Miss Ida and Jettie Smith. We are glad to have the new members and we hope they will be a great help to us and we to them. Sunday night the Intermediate choir sang very sweetly, "I Am Happy in the service of our King." The most of these boys and girls gave their hearts to Jesus during the meeting and we hope that they can ever be busy in His service. These boys and girls were faithful at every service during the meeting and we feel that it is a great work for us older church members and Christians to so live and act before these young folks that they will feel and know that the church is really interested in them because they will soon be pillars of the church. We know Mrs. Ernest Litaker is very proud of the Intermediate choir she has charge of. The choir and all the boys and girls love her and are willing to do anything she asks them to do. On Mother's Day Miss Agnes Litaker and her Junior C. E. Society gave a very sweet program at 6 o'clock Sunday evening. Miss Agnes is very much interested in the C. E. work and she has a fine bunch of children to work with. She had them well trained for the Mother's Day program and we enjoyed it all.

We were glad to have Miss Edna Nicholson worship with us and also Mrs. D. D. Broome and children. Mrs. Broome is spending some time here with her father, Mr. J. M. Blackwelder. Mrs. Archie Herrin also spent several days with her father and we were glad to have her worship with us.

We were glad to see Mrs. Maggie Mann

Sides back at church Sunday after being sick for several weeks. We are glad that little Alice Blackwelder is very much improved. Mrs. W. H. Scarboro was sick last week and we missed her at church Sunday. Mrs. P. J. Mann is very sick and we fear she will have to go to the hospital. We were glad that Grandma Thomas was able to attend the meeting several nights. Last Sunday Rev. Mr. Morgan gave us two good sermons and a very good congregation was present to hear them. We had a very good crowd at services on Sunday morning but Sunday night our crowd is usually small. Pastor Morgan gave the young converts and the Intermediate girls and boys some good advice. Oh, that we would all become more interested in the youth of our nation. There is so much amusement and different things to attract the young people and yet they are anxious to be at something busy all the time, and they are every ready to work in the church if they know we are really interested in what they are doing. We hope yet to see great results from our meeting.

Lexington, First, and Mount Carmel.—It has been some time since I reported, but the church reporter has kept the Herald readers informed concerning the happenings on our work. Both Sunday schools are still growing in attendance and interest. Likewise, the preaching services are well attended. Our Christian Endeavor is still makig progress, and the young people are still showing interest.

Three new members have been received recently at the First Church, Lexington; Mr. James Marsh, from Second Reformed church; Mrs. Luther Koonts, from Shiloh M. P. church, and Mr. Ernest Hart.

Our ladies gave a supper last Saturday, May 27, First Church, Lexington, and made $15.00, which will go for the benefit of the church. We are proud of what our ladies are doing.

We held our second quarterly conference at Mount Carmel church and the reports seemed very good. We are glad to state that the salary is paid up to date at First Church.

We nominaed G. A. Barber and C. A. Berrier to be our nominees for delegate to Annual Conference. We will vote on them later on.

We are hoping for this to be one of our best years.

C. G. ISLEY, Pastor.

Gibsonville-Fountain Place.—Since our reporters are not giving much of the happenings from our work here this is being sent in with the hope that the readers of the Herald may see that we are still in the land of the living.

Bro. C. W. Bates made the commencement address at our school closing here at Gibsonville, and while it was an unusually hot night, he kept the interest of his hearers in such a way as to bring profit, for it was very practical and helpful.

Our meeting at Fountain Place was a very helpful one. The sermons were all of a high order and the congregation appreciates the messages brought by the different pastors of the city. There were two accessions as a result of the meeting and that makes seven additions this year. Fountain Place is doing well on pastor's salary, as you have seen from President Andrews' report last week.

We have not held our special services at Gibsonville this year yet, but are planning for a revival in the fall. We have received one member here recently.

The attendance at both churches has been splendid this year, and we are hoping that there will be no slump during the hot weather months.

Many tokens of appreciation have been given us recently from the following: Mrs. T. A. Amick, Mrs. W. J. Jennings, Mrs. J. V. Dick, Mrs. Shelton, Mrs. D. D. Glenn, Mrs. W. E. Anderson, Mrs. G. L. Amick, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. George Petty, Mrs. H. P. Lucas, Mrs. P. L. Kivett, Mrs. Allred, Mrs. R. G. Hornaday, Mrs. Kenneth Williams, Mrs. C. L. Jones, Mrs. Smith. We thank you, good people; all these things helped lots.

Our Christian Endeavor at each church is doing good work. The C. E.'s at Fountain Place have bought a new bulletin board and that will be installed this week, we hope.

There are signs of progress notwithstanding the many things that have a tendency to discourage the faint-hearted, and we are hoping that a fine year's work will be reported in the final wind-up of the Conference year.

STEWARDS' AREA MEETING

The Stewards' Area Meeting was well attended. All the churches in this area were well represented, Glen Raven and Fairview being the only ones not having an interested delegation present. Prof. T. E. Stough, of Gibsonville, made a stirring address which was enjoyed by all. He showed by his mastery of the subject of Stewardship that he had made it a study from many angles.

The reports were encouraging and there seemed to be a spirit of optimism among those present that was encouraging. All the pastors of this area were present. We planned for another meeting to be held at Glen Raven church in about three months. The stewards present seemed to think that we can make these meetings profitable. At any rate, we are going to try another one and study the financial problems further.

There seemed to be the opinion prevailing that with the coming of better financial conditions we should be enabled to raise all claims.

N. G. BETHEA, Chairman.

A HALL OF RELIGION

One of the most interesting and outstanding buildings of the Chicago World's Fair, which will open on June 1st, will be the Hall of Religion which is being erected on the Lagoon adjacent to Lake Michigan. In this structure will be the exhibits and the headquarters of Protestant denominationalism. The growth of the Protestant Church during the past century will be depicted by exhibits brought from the various corners of he earth. There will be religious conferences held from time to time, having to do with the many phases of religion, including the present attitude of youth toward religion, changing forms of worship, methods of charity, social service in the church, etc.—Christian Sun.

Thursday, June 8th

The committee is working and planning great things for the meeting here on Thursday, June 8th. We hope you can come.

One good brother said: "Brother Dixon, I'm sorry that I cannot come, but I'm planning to send what it would cost me to make the trip." Fine! Conditions will prevent some coming, but you can send the silver or the silver certificates for the benefit of the Home. Checks are getting fairly good again, and money orders are always good. Thank you and God bless you.

BRITAIN'S DRINK BILL

George Wilson, the political secretary of the United Kingdom Alliance, has just issued his annual analysis of the nation's drink bill. The total consumption of absolute alcohol last year was approximately 36,500,000 gallons, as compared with 84,500,000 gallons in 1913, a decline of about 57 per cent. The total expenditure was 232,500,000 pounds, or an average of 5 pounds, 2 shillings per head of population. The total amount spent during the previous year on strong drink was 259,800,000 pounds. Part of that decline is assuredly traceable to the prevalence of unemployment; but undoubtedly part, too, is due to the increasingly sober habits of our people. As Mr. Baldwin said recently, "Money which used to be spent on beer is now largely spent on other things."—The Christian Advocate, Birmingham, Eng.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

NOTES TAKEN AT THE WOMEN'S MISSIONARY CONVENTION

Among the forward steps taken at the Missionary Convention was the appointment of secretaries corresponding to those in the Branches. The following were appointed: Secretary of Young People's Work, Mrs. S. W. Rosenberger; Spiritual Life, Mrs. J. W. Shell; Education, Mrs. H. W. Maier.

Another forward step was the request that a monthly financial report of Women's Work be printed in the Record. Someone said the women are ignorant (all of them) of our work, and that causes lack of confidence, so this financial statement should be one remedy for our ills.

Life membership was added to our roll.

Year-Book program will begin in April instead of October.

We are permitted to designate money for scholarships and workers, and also for missionaries' salaries.

All missionaries are to be kept in the field, and the N. C. Branch has promised to try to raise $1,000.00 on Mr. Minnis' salary. We hope to do this by special gifts and through Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Societies.

Rev. Wesley Day, one of our missionaries at Kalgan, China, is critically ill with typhus fever in a hospital in Peiping, China. He had been in the hospital three months with an infected arm before he cotracted the fever.

THE "AVERAGE GIRL" ANSWERS

Nashville, Tenn., December 14, 1932.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt,

Dear Mrs. Roosevelt:

An article in our morning paper saying that a statement of yours brought forth a "shocked protest" from a group of women leaders in Topeka, brings forth an equally shocked protest from me. You were quoted as saying that the average girl of today faces the problem of "learning very young how much she can drink of such things as whiskey and gin, and sticking to the proper quantity."

If you have been correctly quoted you surely do not know the "average girl of today." I would not undertake to inform you were I not "an average girl of today."

I am 18 years of age, and was graduated from a standard high school a little more than a year ago, and I am now attending the Nashville Business College. I cannot remember one instance when I have seen a girl of my own age under the influence of liquor, and I can remember seeing but three boys of my own age intoxicated, or even "drinking." I am a member of no dry organization. I am merely an "average girl," who is indignant at hearing girls accused of something of which they are not guilty.

Drinking and such things went out of style with the "post war" group of young people. Drinking and may other things of which we are accused are frightfully old-fashioned. The young people of today are interested in athletics and many other things that require a strong body, a clear brain, steady nerve and quick thinking, and all of these things drink destroys.

The girls ad boys of today enjoy sports and games that challenge the mind. Girls of today are going into the business field because they like it. You cannot be successful in the business field if you are in the habit of drinking. No stenographer can take dictation or do typing who has a "hang-over" headache, nor can she perform many other duties well. Our pride makes us want to do things well.

It is true that in some groups in thickly populated sections, in some large cities, in some communities, such conditions as you spoke of do exist—but you said "average."

Some wet agitators have said they want legal liquor legal for the sake of the young people—that they are drinking any and everything now—that at least it would be pure if it were legal, government-inspected liquor. Let me tell you—we don't need liquor for the sake of the young people. We don't even like the taste of it. We don't like the effects it produces. If the older people want it, let them say so; but they should at least have the courage to say THEY want it, and not try to hide behind a false statement that it is for our sakes. If we, the young people, were allowed to vote on the question, the proposition to legalize alcoholic beverages would be defeated by an overwhelming majority. If the people of voting age can withstand the wet wave just long enough for us, the "average" boys and girls, to get our vote, you may be sure that acoholic beverages will never again be legalized. We can't afford to hazard our future for drink. We do not want it.

You don't know the "average girl," Mrs. Roosevelt. To get the average you must take all of us the country over, and doing that you will find that we may not be saving much but we have our opinions—and they are NOT in favor of legalizing alcoholic beverages, and they are not in favor of the illegal stuff used now. No, the "average" girl does not have to learn how much she can drink, and she doesn't keep within that quantity because there is no need. We do not drink the stuff at all.

Sincerely yours,

OSTA M. UNDERWOOD.

The above-printed open letter to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was written by Osta M. Underwood, an 18-year-old student in Nashville Business College, Nashville, Tenn. In a note to "The American Issue," Miss Underwood says:

"I cannot hope for my letter as wide publicity as Mrs. Roosevelt's statement received. I beg that you will help voice the protest of the "average girl" of the United States by giving this space in your paper."—From the Baltimore Southern Methodist.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Helmstetler

John L. Helmstetler, aged about 64 years, one of Davidson county's best known farmers, residing about four miles west of Lexington, died April 12 in a High Point hospital where he had been a patient for about two weeks.

The deceased was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Helmstetler, and had resided in the county all his life. He was a devoted husband, a loving father, and a staunch friend. He is survived by one son, Lloyd Helmstetler, and three daughters, Mrs. Lena Welborn and Misses Irma and Leona Helmstetler, together with four grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted April 14 at Mount Carmel church by the writer. A large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends bespoke by their assembling the esteem in which the deceased was held.

Brooks

Daniel Iverson Books, son of the late William Henry and Rhoda Pegram Brooks, was born at Kernersville, N. C., October 29, 1866. He was united in marriage with Miss Louise Norton, of Mercer City, California, September 25, 1888. To this union were born four sons and five daughters. Two sons preceded him to the great beyond—one in infancy and the eldest son, Henry Iverson, departing this life July 11, 1928.

Surviving him are the bereaved companion and the following children: Mrs. J. E. Truelove, Mrs. H. L. Ward, Mrs. H. P. Page, Mrs. S. B. Witmer, Mrs. H. L. Lippard, Daniel A. and Rober E. Brooks. Nine grandchildren of tender years also survive a loving and devoted grandfather.

Brother Brooks made his confession of Christ and united with the First Church, High Point, during the ministry of Dr. A. G. Dixon. His membership was still there at the time of his decease, May 25, 1933, aged 66 years, 6 months, and 26 days.

The funeral service was held in the home in Greensboro. The minister of First church was in charge and was assisted by Dr. A. G. Dixon and Rev. Mr. Boring, a Friends minister in Greensboro. His body was laid to rest in the family plot in the Kernersville cemetery there to await the general resurrection in the last great day. For, "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

R. I. FARMER.

The deceased was a loyal and faithful member of the church at Mount Carmel, having been a member there since transferring from First Reformed church a few years ago.

* Subsidy paid in full.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

TABERNACLE MEMORIAL SERVICE

The Tabernacle Memorial service will be observed on next Sunday, June 4. There will be an all-day service. Rev. George F. Millaway, a former pastor, will preach at the morning hour. In the afternoon Dr. W. T. Whitsett is expected to make an address. While the public generally is invited, all ex-pastors, former members, and people who have friends buried in Tabernacle cemetery are extended a special invitation. Let the people come and spend the day together in a good, friendly way. Anyone who can contribute flowers would confer a favor to the occasion. Thanks.

GEO. L. CURRY, Pastor.

"I'll Give the Last Ten"

So said one of the brethren the other day. And I've got some fifteen tens in between. I wonder when I'm going to hear from the balance? If everybody waits for everybody else, it'll be a long time. And we need it NOW. If you're going to be one of the fifty, why not say so and end our suspense? But the rest of you, who may not be able to lend the ten, can do these things:

1. Send in renewals and new subscriptions. If you can't get them for a year at $2.00, ask the folks to subscribe for six months for $1.00. That will help your charge reach its quota.

2. Raise the Subsidy for your church and charge. It costs $5.10 to print 52 copies of the Methodist Protestant-Recorder. The subscription price is $2.00. The difference is made up from certain incomes. The Subsidy for the HERALD which your church is asked to pay is part of the difference between what it costs the printers to print the HERALD and what you are asked to pay for it. And that helps to keep the HERALD going.

Cannot See God

He looks where God has been
And left great tracks in space,
But nought can he see of God,
No, not a single trace.

He looks where God is now
With wonder-moking power,
But fails to see his God
From top of highest tower.

He scans where God will be
And sit to judge the earth:
He sees but empty space
Which fills his mind with mirth.

He's blind and cannot see,
Yet thinks he knows it all:
What wonders will he see
When scales from eyes do fall!

June 24 Is Dr. McCulloch's Birthday

He will be — years old, or young, whichever way you want to put it. I have asked him to lend me his birthday. Of course, I really don't need it since I shall have one of my own before long. But I thought maybe if I had the use of it, I might be able to do something with it. The fact is, I want to lend it to all his friends. You will have to pay for the use of it. It will cost a little bit of time and energy and money, but it'll be worth all it costs you; and will bring large returns in happiness and joy.

I am asking all of Dr. McCulloch's friends, out of our personal appreciation of his life and character, and out of a sense of gratitude for all that his editorship of the Herald has meant to the Conference these 40 years, to tell him so. Not with birthday cards or flowers or candy or neckties, or whatever else might be appropriate under ordinary circumstances. I am asking you to say so with subscriptions to the Herald. The paper is to Dr. McCulloch as dear as life itself. You could please him on his birthday in no better nor finer way than to send in a great number of new and renewal subscriptions. I am suggesting six months subscriptions at $1.00. But, of course, if his friends want to subscribe for a year, and thereby show that much more appreciation, he will not object.

I realize that a great many of his friends do not take the Herald. I am therefore asking you who do take it and who will see this, to solicit subscriptions. Take it up in your churches, Sunday school classes, in the Auxiliary meetings—anywhere you have an opportunity. Pastors, speak of it from your pulpits. And let's make Dr. McCulloch know that he has a host of friends who are interested in him, and who are ready if need be to sacrifice a bit for the sake of the Herald which he so greatly loves and for which he has made so much sacrifice. Get the subscriptions in by June 24, and when you send them in, tell Dr. McCulloch how much you appreciate his services.

Bishop Leete's Palestine

Bishop Frederick DeLand Leete of the Methodist Episcopal Church has several good books to his credit, but none likely to be of wider interest than Palestine, Land of the Light. Every Christian family library needs a book on Palestine as a supplement to the Bible. Knowledge of Bible lands helps to make real and vivid Bible history. Comparatively few Christians can make the journey to the "Land of Light," but there are few who cannot have and read a book on this land of lands. Many books on Palestine have been written, but most of them are now behind the times. Recent discoveries and recent events have made a vast difference. The World War left sleeping in one burying-ground in Palestine near three thousand English soldiers. Archeological discoveries have been made and new and now extinct races of men have been brought to light. Modern inventions have taken their place beside ancient devices. The picture of Palestine needed a new treatment and Bishop Leete has given it with the hand of an artist. Long periods of residence in the Holy Land contributed to his special qualification for this task. He has evidently not spared time or mental or physical energy in doing his work. He has produced a book that will be perennial in its interest to readers. It is a book that will be read and re-read with new interest every time. In visiting Palestine through reading this book the reader has the great advantage of having the author as personal guide to point out and evaluate. He thus sees through the eyes and mind of an expert and enjoys the companionship of a learned friend. It is a book of 279 bright pages and no dull ones. Many passages are of thrilling interest. Neatly bound and well illustrated. Published by Houghton Mifflin Company, New York. Price, $2.50.

YOUTH AND THE CHURCH

Youth down through the ages has been criticized for its reckless and carefree manner. The question that the adult raises is not What have we become as a generation? but What is the future generation coming to? It is the tendency of people as they grow older to forget the faults of their younger days. Although there is this tendency to forgetfulness, everyone should live the best and most wholesome life possible. Self-analysis is the best improver. It seems that people would not need ambitions and aspirations, but human kind has never reached that point of intelligence that makes it able to see and grasp every opportunity that stands in its reach. Not only during the period of childhood and adolescence is this true; but after we reach manhood and womanhood, we remain blind to certain opportunities. Therefore, youth must have ambition, must possess integrity of purpose, and must have faith. Celia Cole writes, "Have purpose, have faith in something, great faith, a faith that lifts you up out of the dust and sends you through—faith in some hobby, some purpose, someone, or some God. Have faith. A body to be strong and free and vigorous needs back of it a mind and heart that have faith."

The sages, Buddha and Confucius, won their disciples through their positive faith in their doctrines. Many of the Orientals worship them today because of the great faith that these men had in their teaching over 2,500 years ago.

The Greeks had great faith in their intellect and statesmanship. From Greece we get some of our best architecture, sculpturing, and philosophy. But, they had too much pride in themselves and often met a tragic death.

The old Romans gained much land and money because they had faith in their own ability. Self-confidence gave them a great part of the known world at that time. With their beliefs in themselves, they, too, became so haughty that often their glorious lives were ended by assassination.

Saint Paul knew exactly what he was pursuing. Before his conversion, his chief aim in life was to persecute the Christians any way and every way possible. After his conversion, his chief aim was to lead every soul that he came in contact with to Christianity. Hhe scattered his doctrines and teachings over many important cities and towns. One of his chief characteristics is his goal in the distance and his unerring path straight toward his ambition.

Oliver Cromwell achieved his greatness through the manifest confidence that he was doing right and in accordance with the will of God.

Gandhi of India is admired and followed by the Hindus and Indians because he holds so unchangingly to what he believes to be the best for his people and to his strict worship of Truth. It has been predicted by somethat if he should die while his influence is so great that a new religion would arise. Although we do not exactly admire his religious and political doctrines, we must respect his good and positive faith.

These examples prove to certain extent, that men down through the ages had to have faith in something in order to succeed. The best policy is to think over problems clearly, decide what is right, and, then, have divine faith in your doctrine. Be positive.

Christians know through experience that the religion of Jesus Christ is the best and the most desirable on earth. It points the way to true happiness; and, after all, that is the one thing that we are diligently seeking. The church, the organization builded on the doctrines of Christ, has a golden opportunity to make this world a Utopia by embracing everyone in its fellowship and by instilling within its members the true doctrines of the Great Teacher.

During the age of adolescence, more vital decisions are made than in any other time in life. Youth is choosing its literature, its comrades, its ambition, and its God. The Church has one great opportunity——to win youth. Then, all the other activities will harmonize with its teaching and its social standards set forth. The only possible way to correct morals, ideals, customs, corruption in religion, or anything that has to do with human society is to bring up sane, well-balanced, clear-thinking youth, taught or caused to realize the standard of perfection. Reformers may arise, but civilization is not license. It takes time for it to change.

Youth has faith in something. But what? There are so many variations that it would be impossible to make a fair estimate. These boys and girls will grow up cherishing their own god—whatever it may be. The Church can lead them to faith in the one supreme God. But will it succeed? There are many branch organizations that are trying, but will the Epworth League, the Christian Endeavor, the Boy Scouts, and the other Christian associations accomplish their purpose? The answer is "No" unless the membership of the Church support them whole-heartedly. There should be superb co-operation; so that the members of the branch organization would deem it an honor and a privilege to be admitted into such a worthy fellowship as the church.

The Church need not try to rival the theater, the dance hall, or the bridge table in amusement. It can not cope. The Church would lose unmistakably. In the Church youth looks for a higher and purer type of entertainment. They seek food for their intellectual and spiritual being; and unless the church gives that it fails to satisfy them. The Church is founded on faith, hope, and love. It must keep these three torches burning bright or else it dies.

The Church is a religion organization. Its chief purpose is to help to convey to civilization the true meaning of life. In relation to the subject of religion, Eleanor Roosevelt writes: "If means that belief and that faith in the heart of a man which makes him try to live his life according to the highest standard which he is able to visualize. To those of us who were brought up Christians that standard is the life of Christ, and it matters very little whether our creed is Catholic or Protestant." If a person must be born and must live among his fellowmen, he reaches higher ideals if he has religion. Although many people do not believe in Christ, when they express their idea of religion and the perfect or ideal life, their statement is usually reproduced from one of the parables or doctrines of Christ.

The Church helps youth to see the life of Christ more clearly. It aids in reaching out and building great hopes for the future and, most important, it leads us to accomplish our aspirations. The human body and mind do not appear strong enough to stand the trials of life alone. The person needs some one, some thing, or some God to aid and keep him alive and vigorous. The human soul needs a vigilant friend. One, in order to succeed, must feel that he has something greater than his own powers to depand on. This faith should be a very essential part of our everyday life, but a little more elevated than the common-place duties of daily routine.

The very fundamental sources of success lie within our attitude towards others, our sense of security, our ideals and ambitions, and our great faith in something. If this faith would lead us through the best and the happiest life, it should be in God. Harry Emerson Fosdick writes: "Every healthy life has two aspects: activity and rest. We can not live completely without both the adventure of energy and the peace of security. "During our life we may render much unselfish service to human society. An immortal name may be established for ourselves. Whatever kind of life we are looking for, if it be for the betterment of mankind, it can be lived more wholesome and more pure by this faith.

The Church is to help us to find this faith. It is trying to lift us up, to kindle leadership fires, and to make us as happy as possible. There is a true joy in Christian living that must come through faith and experience. The Church opens channels through which we may get this experience more easily. Aiding in the distribution of baskets for the needy or visiting the sick, will give youth true joy, gratitude, and appreciation, although this is only one branch of the entire tree of service that the church offers.

Youth is looking for some person to mold itself after. There are many types of outstanding authors, statesmen and professionists. Also, there are many outstanding religious leaders that could be the choice. Some of these leaders have their lives portrayed in the Bible, while others are of modern times, but the greatest teacher that the world has ever known is Jesus Christ. Although youth may find its ideal in any vocation, its moral life may be governed by religious leaders just as outstanding. In the teachings and principles of the church, youth finds a place for aspiration, faith, love, and service. This organization offers the solution for the one true happiness that everyone diligently seeks. There is a true uplifting joy in the divine-sent opportunity of working for others. In the Church will enable youth to visualize its purpose and its deal; then, Christianity will become not a burdensome task, but a perfect pleasure.

High Point, N. C. Lois Hedgecock.

SUMMER CONFERENCE

We are giving this week a provisional program of the Summer Conference. Most all of the speakers have accepted; some few changes to be made yet.

It has been decided to make the registration fee fifty cents this year as our expense will not be as much as usual and, too, dollars are harder to get. The superannuates' meals will be paid for by the Conference.

Further details will be given later.

R. C. Stubbins, Pres. Summer Conference.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S COURSES AT LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

Young people and leaders of young people will be happy to know that a committee has been at work all winter and spring to create new young people's courses for our High Point Leadership Training School. For several years we have been specializing on the Standard Leadership Training courses; but the past several months our attention has been directed to the courses for those fourteen, fifteen, and sixteen years of age. The new courses are called the New Youth Curriculum. There are six units or courses, two for each of the three age groups. Each course is a ten-hour project, and each student will take two courses. There are two courses for those fourteen years of age, two for those fifteen, and two for young people who are sixteen. The courses are required and not elective.

Of the ten sessions for each course, five will probably be formal instruction; the other five will be project work. For instance, the class on Group activities may use one period for planning worship programs together; or they may dramatize a story, or prepare a play or pageant. The new curriculum is experience-centered rather than content-centered; it is an activity program rather than merely imparting factual material.

The two courses for the fourteen-year-old pupils are: "Bible Pioneers" and "Ou rNeighbors;" the first is Bible study and the second Mission study. The pupils will be led to make their own discoveries as far as content material is concerned. The course on "Bible Pioneers" is designed to give the boys and girls an appreciation of the contribution made by the prophets to our Christianity; through this study they will see the way being made ready for the coming of Christ and all that that implies. "Our Neighbors" will lead the students into a discovery of the rural life of the world. Mrs. Curtiss Koontz, of Lexington, will direct this group in this particular project.

The courses for those fifteen years of age are: "Our Denominational Missionary and Educational Enterprises;" this is just what the title implies, a discovery of the work of our own denomination. The entire task of the kingdom will be revealed and an effort made to portray the part our denomination is taking in the world program of Christianity. Rev. Clyde Auman will direct the group in this project. "Adventures in Christian Living" is the title of the other unit for the 15-year-olds. The activity will include a study of the principles of Jesus, standards of Christian living for our own world, Christian stewardship, and life investment or the choosing of a vocation. Rev. H. W. Maier will direct the group with this unit.

"The Bible in the Making" and "Group Activities" are the units for those 16 years of age. The first will include a discovery of background of the Bible as to how it came to us in its present form; a study will be made of the lives of those who have helped to preserve it for us. Rev. Frank Shaffer, Morgantown, West Virginia, will direct this group. The latter will include such project work as building worship programs and conducting worship, staging a pageant or play, directing recreation, etc.

We are eager that we may have a very fine group of boys and girls of this age at the Leadership Training School in High Point, June 26-July 1.

Mrs. H. W. Maier.

HOW CHILDREN ARE MADE TYRANTS

When a child tyrant is spoiling the home, it is well to remember that children are not born tyrants; tyranthood is thrust upon them. Of course some children are more self-assertive than others. In psychological language they have a stronger instinct of self-assertion than the average child. They easily become tyrants when given an opportunity. Nevertheless, to say that they "take after Uncle John or Great-Aunt Susan," who were notorious in their tyrannizing, is merely covering up the real cause of the family difficulty.

No child tyrant will come into the home where the parents are onto their job. Everybody recognizes this in dealing with other people's children. However polite one may be in listening to the explanation of the child's despotism which the fond mother places upon had inheritance from the father's side, back of one's attentive exterior flashes the thought that the mother herself is most likely to be the real cause of the child's waywardness.

It is by no means always the mother that is to blame for this condition; it may be any one who has had a good deal to do with the early life of the child, the father, mother, or one of the grand-parents. It is adult weakness that is at the bottom of the child's tyranny, and the child has been forced into this bad habit by the mistaken treatment that he had received.

The process of unwittingly making a child into a tyrant started when some older person kept trying to insist on instant and absolute obedience in little matters about which the child should never have been bothered. The adult would scold and nag until the child in self-defense rebelled with excited screams or disgruntled whining. To stop this performance the foolish adult would sooner or later let the child have his own way. Once this had happened, the child expected to do as he liked the next time if he only made fuss enough about it. The adult felt less confident of his power to make the little one "mind." The natural result was that the next time the adult came into conflict with the child, the youngster was bolder in his outcry and the adult more upset by it.

This short-sighted adult found it easier or pleasanter to cater to the whims of the little fellow than to attempt the more difficult task of leadership. The child soon fell upon teasing as a magical method of getting almost anything. When the child began to tease, the older person threatened and denied the request, but eventually did just what the child expected him to do—he gave in to the child.

It takes only a few such experiences in early childhood to warp the disposition of the child. Children are shrewder in observing parents than parents are in observing children. The happiness of the child is so dependent on the parent's attitudes that from very early years—one might say from early months—the child becomes wonderfully skilful in interpreting the moods and feelings of the parent. He quickly sees that behind the words of the parent is a lack of firmness, and that persistency on his own part will soon bring what he seeks. So the child starts on the wearing-out policy, his idea being to make the parent so weary of being teased, so literally tired of saying, "No, no, no," that finally the child will hear the "Yes" he wants, even though it is accompanied by a burst of anger. The child takes the parent's anger calmly, since he realizes that it brings him no serious discomfort.

No parent would ever give in to pressure from a child in order to avoid difficulties at the present moment if he could look forward and see that he is starting a line of conduct that will be forever making him more serious trouble. His relation with the child will be one of perpetual bickering; sometimes he will win, sometimes the child will win. Hardly a waking hour will be free from contest, and all this will tell on the disposition of the growing child. Living in an atmosphere of constant friction where it pays to be disagreeable, the child is bound to have an unlovely personality.—Wholesome Marriage, by E. R. and Gladys H. Groves.

OUR 1933 SUMMER CONFERENCE LEADERSHIP SERIES WILL OPEN SOON

Beginning with the Missouri Leadership Training School June 12 and closing with the Hugo (Oklahoma) School, September 10, the Board of Christian Education, through the Department of Religious Education and its 22 co-operating Conference Councils, will conduct the largest series of leadership training schools ever conducted in the Methodist Protestant Church during any one summer. Twenty-five of these conferences have been scheduled and the faculty and curriculum practically completed for each. This is five more schools than were conducted last summer. Our goal is 3,000 students in training for Christian leadership in the local church with a popular attendance of 15,000 in one or more of the services held in connection with the schools.

Tho carry to successful completion such a gigantic task, it will be necessary for our leaders everywhere to work much and pray earnestly throughout the entire series. Although these conferences are conducted under the auspices of the Board of Christian Education, the program is very broad and includes missionary and evangelistic emphasis as well as the Christian Education.

There seems to be no greater opportunity nor more appropriate time to train leaders for service than in times of extended vacations and nation-wide unemployment. Many of our church leaders and youth are idle . We should take advantage of this leisure time to train them for busier days which lie ahead.

Reduced cost. Practically everyone of our schools have made it possible for students to attend this summer at less expense than in previous summers. The standard textbooks which formerly cost the students on an average of $1.00 will be rented this summer for a small fee of 25c. Board has been reduced in most cases. Write to your conference dean or president for definite information as to expenses.

It should be of interest to our entire church to know that this expansion of our leadership training work is done without the use of any World Service funds. The small registration fees and the volunteer work on the part of our accredited instructors, deans and other workers, makes this possible. We earnestly request the prayers and co-operation of our leaders throughout the church for the success of this great undertaking during the coming summer.

For further information regarding these schools please write to your Conference Council leaders, or F. L. Gibbs, Seminary Building, Westminster, Maryland.

BEFORE NEW YEAR

Dear Lord, before this year is born
I give it to Thy hand,
Content to walk by faith what paths
I cannot understand.

Whatever coming days may bring
Of bitter loss, or gain,
Or very crown of happiness,
Should sorrow come, or pain,

Or, Lord, if all unknown to me
Thine angel hovers near
To call me to that farther shore
Before another year,

It matters not,—my hand in Thine,
Thy light upon my face,
Thy boundless strength when I am weak,
Thy love and saving grace;

I only ask,—loose not my hand,
Grip fast my soul, and be
My light of life upon the path
Till,—blind no more,—I see!

SPURGEON AND THE BOOKWORM

C. H. Spurgeon on one occasion went into Scotland and stopped at a wayside inn. There he picked up an old worm-eaten Bible.

He held it up between himself and the sun, and there was just one place that he could see the light clear through. One worm had begun at Genesis, and eaten right through to Revelation.

Mr. Spurgeon said, "Lord, make me a bookworm like that!"

Oh, that we all could just eat into the Bible a little section at a time! But if you study it word by word, you will be enriched. Word studies of the Bible are like picking up pearls and diamonds.—A. C. Dixon.

I AM YOUR SUMMER CONFERENCE

I am your Summer Conference.

I come to you, O youth and youth leaders, through the co-operative effort on the part of a host of Christian leaders!

I am largely the product of the past. My origin and growth is associated with such untiring leaders as Hubbell, Feeman, Dixion, Sexsmith, Little, and their co-laborers who dared to lay my foundation well and to lead me into great places of usefulness.

I began my ministry for your church many summers ago! Now I extend from lakes, Gull and Ontario, to the fields of Texas blue bonnets; from the coastal plains of the Atlantic seaboard to, and beyond, the meandering Mississippi.

I call youth and youth leaders together in joyous company and impart to them the secrets of constructive leadership and life enrichment.

I open to you avenues of vast adventures . Come with me and you will find real comrades who will share with you experiences dear to your heart—, yea, come with a purpose and you will venture with others in study groups, joyous playtime, timely lectures, stirring sermons, quiet worship services, and, most of all, in a closer fellowship with the great Friend in the quest for the more abundant life—Jesus Christ!

I challenge you to Christian service in the name of the one who, in the long ago, said "follow me." Under my influence hundreds of young people have declared, "I will live my life under God for others . . . I will not drift. . . . I will prepare for a Christian vocation and follow it, under the leadership of Jesus Christ wheresoever it takes me, cost what it may."

I am the Friend of the local church. My primary business is to adequately equip for effective service a vanguard of Christian leaders for the advancing host of children, youth and adults which compose the various organizations of the local church.

I welcome you with open arms, you who have known me before; and you to whom I am an utter stranger. To you all, I thrice bid you welcome!

I am the product of the past.
I am your challenge of the present.
I am the friend of the local church.
I am your Summer Conference.

FOR THOSE WHO FAILED

I remember a flash of righteous indignation that swept over Dr. Scofield's face once as he said, "People talk about the bird with the broken wing,—'The bird with the broken pinion never soars as high again.' As though we did not all have a broken wing! For most of us both our wings are broken, and both legs, and our necks!"

The bird without a broken pinion is never going to know victory. One qualification you must have for the victorious life is the broken pinion, the broken nature, uttermost weakness. God makes no offer of victory to people who have not failed and failed utterly. But for sinners He has a Gospel.—Milk of the Word.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

We expect to visit the other churches of this group at a later date when a fuller survey of the work will be given.

South Winston.—Attended service at the evening hour. Held second quarterly conference before preaching. Attendance not large at either. There are some members here who are very much interested in the work and, like other churches, others who are not. But the church has passed through some discouraging experiences this year and has not altogether gotten clear of them. The church is well located but the building is greatly in need of completion. There are hopeful signs that much of it may be ceiled before cold weather. Brother Atlas Ridge has been serving the people since about the first of March. Pastor's Reports

These reports have come in about as fast as we could use them in the HERALD each week, but we would like very much to complete this synopsis-review in next week's issue, however several reports are not in my hands as yet. I am hoping to give a resume of these reports, showing in total percentages what has been accomplished during the first half of the year, but can not do this unless all pastors send in their reports. If you are ashamed of your report it may be that your people shall be more so when they see it, and thus a remedy shall be found for the remainder of the year.

There are many discouraging things facing the churches today but nothing so bad as confronted the early church. We are on easy street when compared to them and we should not therefore be discouraged but work the harder.

Plan of Appointments

June 11—Guilford charge, Mitchell's Grove at 11 a.m., Hickory Grove afternoon.

June 18—Mocksville charge.

June 25—Why Not charge; circuit rally at New Zion church; Denton at night.

July 2—Lincolnton, 11 a. m.; Fairfield, afternoon; Bessemer City, night.

Cordially yours,

R. M. ANDREWS.

OUR NEED

We do not need more national development; we need more spiritual development.

We do not need more intellectual power; we need more spiritual power.

We do not need more knowledge; we need more character.

We do not need more government; we need more culture.

We do not need more law; we need more religion.—Calvin Coolidge.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

My experience during 22 years on the bench in which time over 4,000 boys under 21 years of age were convicted of crime before me, of whom but three were members of a Sunday school, has satisfied me of the value of Sunday schools to the community, in helping safeguard it (to the extent to which Sunday schools exist) from the growth of criminals. My experience also satisfies me of their value to the individual. In 1,092 cases of suspended criminal sentences, in each of which a minister, priest or rabbi became interested, at my request, only 62 of the boys were brought back for violation of the conditions of the parole. I believe the reform in the remaining cases (over 1,000) was prompt and permanent. In fact, I regard our Sunday schools (including those of all faiths) as the only effective means to stem the rising tide of vice and crime among our youth. Society carries the heavy burden of criminality chiefly because of the lack of religious training of the youth. The youth cannot have a sound development of character, nor a fair American chance in life, without religion. In addition, it occurs to me that every church should have some room set aside for a meeting place for the use of boys in the evenings. It would keep them off the streets and away from temptation. And I believe if the members of the men's clubs of the churches were to make a house-to-house canvass in their respective communities for the purpose of getting the boys and girls into Sunday schools, tremendous good would be accomplished. Every child is entitled to know God. Just as the Christian men and women of today are the real strength of our nation, so are the Sunday school boys and girls of today the hope ofthe future of our glorious country.—Lewis L. Fawcett, Justice of the Supreme Court, State of New York, from "Helps and Hints."

SOUTHERN BAPTISTS REBUKE ROOSEVELT

At the Annual meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention, held in Washington, D. C., May 19-22, the Social Service Commission made many recommendations in a vigorous report.

After commending President Roosevelt for certain good things he has done, and pledging co-operation, the report says:

"That we deeply regret and earnestly deplore the fact that the President has used the influence and power of his office for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution, and, pending efforts for repeal, for the legalization of the manufacture and sale of beer; and especially that he has allowed the White House to be used to advertise the beer business much to the discredit of his administration and much to the pain and sorrow of a large element, we believe a majority, of American citizens."

An effort was made to strike out the above, but the effort failed by an overwhelming majority—almost a unanimous vote—and the resolution goes out as written.

Someone objected that the reference to the White House brought Mrs. Roosevelt into the picture in an unpleasant way. It was thought, however, that her words and actions in the matter of beer legislation and beer serving entitled her to a share of the rebuke.

LUTHER K. LONG.

The Short Word

By GRENVILLE KLEISER

I make a plea for the use of the short word. When it can be used it saves space in print and time in speech. A short, crisp word gives weight to thought and tends to strike home with force.

Some of God's great truths and laws are set forth in short words. Note these:

And God said, Let there be light; and there was light.

There shall be no night there.

The wages of sin is death.

God is love.

Ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search with all your heart.

I am the light of the world.

Trust in the Lord with all thine heart.

They that sow in tears shall reap in joy.

Oh that I knew where I might find him!

Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me and know my thoughts.

The night is far spent, the day is at hand.

Note the force of these:

I am the bread of life.

Keep the door of my lips.

He led them forth by the right way.

We walk by faith, not by sight.

As thy days, so shall thy strength be.

Fight the good fight of faith.

I will go in the strength of the Lord God.

Be strong, and work: for I am with you, saith the Lord of hosts.

I hate vain thoughts; but thy law do I love.

With my whole heart have I sought thee.

Teach me to do thy will, for thou art my God.

The sun shall not smite thee by day nor the moon by night.

Have faith in God.

My mouth shall speak truth.

Be not wise in thine own eyes.

In thee, O Lord, do I put my trust.

I sought the Lord and he heard me.

Thy faith hath made thee whole.

Ye are the salt of the earth.

Hold thou me up and I shall be safe.

I will guide thee with mine eye.

The Lord is my strength and my shield.

Be of good cheer; it is I.

Judge not, that ye be not judged.

I will praise the Lord with my whole heart.

The word of God is rich with truth in terse words like these:

Not my will, but thine, be done.

Be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath.

Lord, teach us to pray.

My sheep hear my voice.

Hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown.

Buy the truth, and sell it not.

All thy works shall praise thee, O Lord.

My son, keep my words.

I am come that they might have life.

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.

I said, I will take heed to my ways, that I sin not with my tongue.

My times are in thy hand.

The Lord bless thee and keep thee.

Be still and know that I am God.

The sea is his and he made it: and his hands formed the dry land.

Let all the earth fear the Lord.

He sent his word, and healed them.

Teach me thy way, O Lord, and lead me in a plain path.

Fear thou not, for I am with thee.

I can do all things through Christ.

O God, my heart is fixed; I will sing and give praise.

The Lord is on my side; I will not fear.

I wait for the Lord, my soul doth wait, and in his word do I hope.

When he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold.

Great peace have they which love thy law.

Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God.

Much can be well said in a few short words. Hence:

To write your thoughts
In prose or verse,
Use plain short words
And style that's terse.

A word too big
To fit your thought,
Will show your work
To be ill-wrought.

The short clear word
Gives force and strength,
While much is lost
In words of length.

Hence speak and write
In clear brief style,
'Twill tend to make
Your words worth while.

THE CHILD IN THE HOSPITAL

I knew a little girl who lay for nearly two years and a half in one position, with a disease that was eating her life away. She was fair to look upon; I never saw a sweeter face, or looked into more untroubled eyes than met mine as twice every week I took my seat beside her bed.

She was in humble life, and yet not poor, though an inmate of a hospital, and life might have been attractive and precious to her. She suffered much pain, but she know and loved the Saviour, and remembering what He had borne for her made her own sufferings seem light.

"Poor girl!" exclaimed a visitor. She overheard it.

"I am not poor," she said, tears filling her eyes. "God has made me His child. Oh, sir, don't think I am to be pitied! If I could tell you half His goodness to my soul you would envy me."

Envy her in the way of pain! Jesus was beside her in it all, and upheld her by His mighty love, so that her heart was comforted.

Two years and a half in pain! Think of it! Yet no one heard a murmur or expression of impatience escape her lips. I stood beside her at the close.

"Is it dark, Ellen?" I asked.

"No," she answered, with a sweet look of wonder. "Jesus is here. I am happy." She lay as if contemplating some beautiful vision unseen by those around her. An expression of intense joy was on her face. I bent down.

"What is it?" I asked.

"Himself!" she said in a hushed whisper.

In another moment she was absent from the body and present with the Lord.—A. V., in The Life Line.

CHRIST'S PROMISE

Let us always remember the promise: "Where two or three are gathered together in My Name, there am I in the midst of them." How often during the centuries, plans looking to the extension of the Kingdom have come out of prayers of little groups of people—literally when only "two or three"—are gathered together. It was so in the days of the early Church when Paul and his companions prayed and planned a spiritual conquest of the Roman Empire. It was so when Augustine and one or two others associated themselves together to pray and plan for the enlargement of the Kingdom of their generation. It was so when Calvin, Luther and John Knox each was the center of other small groups that prayed and planned more wisely than they knew for the extension of Christianity. Later still was this true when the Wesleys met with congenial souls, and Whitefield gathered about himself those sympathetic with his ideals, and Carey and his friends got together in England, and Judson and his fellow-students prayed at the haystack. These were the great souls meeting in twos and threes. How poor the world would be without such united prayers and conferences in which the Lord has always been present, although unseen. If a few little groups should quietly meet in different parts of the country to pray and plan for a spiritual forward movement, the entire religious life of our country would be changed.—Publisher Unknown.

"ACCORDING TO YOU"

There's a sweet old story translated for man,
But writ in the long, long ago—
The Gospel—according to Mark, Luke and John—
Of Christ and His mission below.

Men read and admire the Gospel of Christ,
With its love so unfailing and true;
But what do they say and what do they think
Of the Gospel "according to you?"

'Tis a wonderful story, that Gospel of love,
As it shines in the Christ-life Divine;
And, oh, that its truth might be told again
In the story of your life and mine!

You are writing each day a letter to men—
Take care that the writing is true;
'Tis the only Gospel that some men will read—
That Gospel according to you.

OUR BEST

It matters not how long we live—
How soon the sand runs in the glass;
It matters only what we give
Of service as we pass,
What happens to us cannot count—
The poignant grief, the blow that stings;
What counts is just how we surmount
And how we face such things.
We may do very little well—
And few of us will reach our quest;
But all that we attempt will tell,
If we have done our best.

DON'T BE A QUITTER

Oh, don't be a quitter when things all go wrong,
For life does not always flow on with a song,
If someone should tell you—"You might as well quit!"
Just never you mind what they say—not one bit.
Just stick to your task, and no matter how small;
The lad knows no shame who has tried, though he fall.

The fellow the world cannot pity or aid
Is he who shirks duty when at his feet laid.
No matter if folks say you've tried and you've failed,
For know that the best of folks try e'er they're hailed.
There's always a place for the one who will do,
And always remember, we're counting on you.

Our Goal: 200 Students

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

Topic for June 11, 1933

WHAT SHALL WE DO WITH OUR EDUCATION?

Scripture Text—Acts 7:22, 30-36.

An Educated Individual

The students who pass through the walls of our colleges and universities are not necessarily educated. Numbers of pepole who have never entered the doors of institutions of high learning are well educated. Their is no limit to education. To be intelligent young people, we must know what education really means, and what certain modern educational doctrines are aiming to do. We must not be satisfied with the beauty of our educator's expostulation. We, ourselves, must investigate, and our great question is: Is this or that doctrine consistent with Christ's? The kind of education we have determines the type of service we render to others. Education creates in us a sense of self-realization as to what we are; but more, as to what others expect from us. Here and there are needy souls, needy of things which this life on earth demands; but much more important needs of their lives are the provisions for a peaceful spirit and clean conduct toward their neighbors. Men need Christ the Lord and His Word. He alone can defeat the army of Satan.

One God

Some educators are telling us that education will help us discover God. But what we want to know is what kind of God do these educators mean. Some will say, "Any kind which your educational background presents to your mind." That reveals the spirit of many of our so-called learned educators. They are advocating the idea that each persons has his own reality, and, therefore, not all people have the same God. If the idea is advocated to remind us that we are too limited to have an adequate and final truth of the absolute God, we raise no objection against it. But if it means hat anything that appears real and something like God to that individual, is the God to that individual, and therefore, may be worshipped by him, it is a falsehood that needs to be known. God is unchangeable no matter what we think about Him. We can know God through Jesus Christ and Him only.

To be educated we must be able to choose between the right and the wrong. To discriminate between true teachers and faddists. The latter profess to be leaders of thought. History is full of great men who were able to choose rightly.

LOYALTY LEAGUE

I am out, now, in full time for the Loyalty League and met with encouragements in my contacts yesterday with First Church, Thomasville. Some time will be given this week to that church, and I am hopeful of good results. The brethren there sense both the necessity and the merit of the Loyalty League undertaking. If our people will co-operate, and I believe they will, results will be realized through the League that will be greatly heartening. We will learn not to "despise the day of small things." One of the merits of the League is that it depends upon small contributions from many folks to accomplish its purpose. These small contributions can be made, and no one will be burdened by them, and the aggregate will be sufficient for our present needs. Let every reader of this appeal make up his mind now to join, and let us have a great host of our people enrolled in this worthy and necessary undertaking. And let us urge that earnest prayer be offered daily for the success of the League.

Tuesday Morning.—Yesterday was given to First Church, Thomasville, and the results were all that we could ask. Pastor Madison and his people have our grateful thanks for their hearty co-operation. The following list shows how ready they are to enroll: D. R. Connell, Mrs. D. R. Connell, W. R. Dorsett, Mrs. W. R. Dorsett, F. S. Dorsett, W. J. Loftin, Mrs. W. J. Loftin, Mrs. D. R. Loftin, E. C. Dorsett, Ishmael Dorsett, W. C. Martin, Mrs. W. C. Martin, L. R. Garrett, Mrs. L. R. Garrett, Virginia Garrett, Critz Garrett, I. A. Teague, Mrs. I. A. Teague, W. G. Myers, Mrs. W. G. Myers, Mrs. T. G. Madison.

Junior League.—Nell Jarrett, Ruth Garrett, Audrey Dorsett, Lois Dorsett, John Rufus Loftin. The total of this list is 26. Brother Madison enrolled some time ago with the pastors, thus making the total for First Church 27. But this is not final. We fully expect that eight or ten more will enroll by next Sunday. If every charge in the conference would give the League the co-operation that this charge, and a few others have given, we would get the results in keeping with the merit and the necessity of the undertaking. But maybe all charges can't do quite so well. But surely every charge can do something. And all we ask is a willing and an earnest effort. Look out for other reports next week. Boost the League! Boost the League.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

THE INCOMPLETE JIG-SAW PUZZLE

Many beautiful pictures have come to us through the jig-saw puzzle. Some large, some small, the greater number of medium size; but each a complete picture. We have learned that it requires patience and perseverance, perhaps a few pieces fitted now and a few later; but we cannot be satisfied until all are in place, and only then may we see and enjoy the completed picture.

A few days ago one came into our home that was incomplete because many of the pieces were missing. Much energy and time was lost in trying to make a complete picture of it and when all the available pieces were finally placed so much of it was missing that the beauty of the picture was lost.

The complete church makes a beautiful picture whether it be large or small, and fortunate is the member of the medium-sized church. But we need to see the picture as a whole.

"Go ye into all the world and preach my gospel to every creature, beginning at Jerusalem, unto Judea and Samaria and unto the uttermost parts of the earth . . . And lo, I am with you alway even unto the end of the world." This is the complete picture.

It will require patience and perseverance, and little here and a little there; but the promise can only be claimed when we have obeyed the command.

Many churches are incomplete and much of the beauty is lost because of the missing pieces. "Go ye . . . preach my gospel . . ." But if we go no farther than Jerusalem or Judea, the picture is incomplete. We must go all the way if we would finish the picture. We cannot be satisfied with the unfinished picture. Neither can we claim the promise, "Lo, I am with you," for we have not obeyed the command.

CONVENTION NOTES

Last week I gave the names of some of the secretaries who were appointed to head the various departments of the Women's Work. The names of others are as follows: Missionary Education, Mis Nettie Johnson; Thank Offering, Mrs. W. J. Bullis; Temperance, Mrs. Mary Ortendahl; Benevolences, Mrs. J. W. Kennedy; Life, Memorial, Sustaining and Perpetual Membership, Mrs. J. Bibb Mills; Literature, the Associate Secretary of Missions.

The five commissions appointed to study variou phases of our work brought some splendid suggestions to the convention. A more viborous campaign of organization in every branch working under the present plan was recommended.

The Commission on Young People's Work recommended that each church have a definite social program for its young people, carrying with it a higher moral and spiritual standard. The newly appointed secretary of this work is to supervise the compiling and publishing of programs for young people's groups. These are to be printed in the Record.

The Commission on Auxiliary programs suggested that each woman consider the Auxiliary meeting an' opportunity, and bring something to it as well as take something from it, and use what she takes.

The Commission on Material and Methods recommended that each woman inform herself, first, as to the general work of missions, and, second, inform herself especially about our own work. Then begin missionary education with the cihldren. Use plays, pageants and projects. Emphasize our special days. Have a definite system of study directed by the local secretary of missionary education; using study books, the Quetion Box, devotional topics and other material.

Our women should enlarge their conception of missionary education. They should also promote a wider use of our denominational literature.

The Ways and Means Committee urged the use of efficiency chart, Thank Offering boxes and envelopes. The boxes to be opened in February of each year. We should emphasize stewardship and prayer. We should secure the services of our missionaries at home on furlough to speak in churches having no organization whenever possible.

The Mission Board plans to return Miss Hodges and Miss Lacy to their respective mission stations in the near future.

We are happy to pass on the report that Wesley Day is better, and we trust he will soon recover from his recent critical illness.

Each branch was pledged to secure ten new subscribers to the Missionary Record, and to secure renewals. The Record has been losing subcribers for some time.

Mrs. Marie Thompson, Associate Executive Secretary of the Board of Missions, resigned, and the Executive committee will elect her successor at an early date. Mrs. Thompson had a difficult task during the period of merging our mission work, and putting the women's work on a new basis. We should appreciate what she has done. Read the Methodist Protestant Recorder of June 2 for full reports of the Board meeting.

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN,
Corresponding Secretary.

SPIRITUAL LIFE DEPARTMENT

We, herewith, give extracts taken from S. D. Gordon, "The Power of Prayer," No. 10. May each one's faith be greatly strengthened by these thoughts:

"And if it be true that you and I can join in prayer, or can go aside singly, of in twos or threes, and pray that something may happen, something be changed through our prayer, then surely we will get more time alone with the Master to change things. And if things are not changed that ought to be, it will be a bit of reproach upon us that it is not so.

"The more we come in touch with our Lord Jesus Christ, and the more time we spend alone with His Word, the more we realize this: that we are doing most for man when we go away from man into the secret place with God. Prayer changes things."

S. D. GORDON.

"Prayer is the mightiest thing put into human hands. If we know how to pray, nothing is impossible to us. Prayer should be a thing of plan and purpose as well as impulse.

"We, sitting in the sweet light, can stretch out a helping hand through prayer to our brothers and sisters in the dark night, and our prayer, although unknown to them, will help them. And some day they will learn the name of Christ, through whose death they have been thus partly helped.

"Thus prayer is not a matter of logical conclusion mentally arrived at from examining some promise of God's Word. It is far deeper than that, while still very simple. True prayer is hammered into shape upon the anvil of the knees, while the fire burns out, and every stroke of the hammer is keenly felt."

"The chief thing in the conflict of life and of service is prayer. The chief temptation in such fighting and prayer is to tire out and give up. It seems as though some invisible power were trying to wear us out, to exhaust our bodily strength, and so our persistence. The chief factor in prayer, on the human side, is persistence, a gentle, cheery, undiscourageable persistence, but without the common element of stubbornness."

"Pray definitely; the enemy yields only what he must; yields only what is taken. Pray persistently; the enemy yields only when he must. But he can't hold back what we steadily choose to take in Jesus' great name. Pray simply. The simpler and quieter the praying the steadier it can be, and the steadier the praying the greater its intensity can be, the bolder and better it becomes. Pray in faith. That simply means this: keep your thought on the Lord Jesus. Here He is at the Father's right. He is Victor. He has the key to both upper and lower world. He is irresistible. Faith is this—looking at Him; resting in what He is and what He has done. Faith is quiet because it is confident; it is confident because of what Jesus is and what He has done."

"The Quiet Time,"

THE GILES' CHAPEL ONE HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY

Sunday morning, May 21, 1933, the friends and members and former members of Giles' Chapel Methodist Protestant church, located four miles northeast of Asheboro, assembled for the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the church. When we arrived on the grounds that morning it seemed that everybody in sight was some one that had lived there in the days gone by, had gone away, and had returned for this happy occasion.

Promptly at 10:30 the service started with Rev. Q. L. Joyner, the pastor, presiding. The pastor spoke words of welcome to all. Rev. J. B. Trogdon, the pastor of Randleman charge and a former member of this church, conducted a devotional service using the 11 chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews. Mr. J. C. Allred of Central Falls, a life-long member of the church had prepared a history of the church and read it to the delight and edification of all. This history stated that this church was organized by he Rev. Alson Gray, D.D., on the fourth Sunday in May, 1833. That its first name was Cool Springs School house, later changed to Giles' Chapel in honor of Reuben and Anna Giles who gave the land on which the church stands. The present house of worship was built in 1876 and an addition was built in 1899. Brother Allred had the names of all the ministers who had served the church since 1876. Following this history the centennial sermon was preached by the writer. As the minister faced his congregation what a scene greeted his eyes. There just in front of the altar railing on his right sat that valiant Soldier of the Cross who never knew defeat and who never yet lowered the flag, the Rev. G. F. Millaway, who served this church when it was on the Cedar Falls Circuit, the first circuit that Brother Millaway ever served. While his body has grown somewhat frail in these 43 years his soul has grown rich and great. It is safe to say that no man ever served this old church whose life was worth more to the community or who had greater success than did he. Just to the left of the pjreacher of the morning and in front of the altar railing was another veteran, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, who preached his first sermon in this church in 1896. The writer tried to pay tribute to both of these but the tribute was feeble in comparison with what both deserved. Then there was Rev. J. B. Trogdon and Rev. Geo. Laughlin and the descendants of the Rev. Alson Gray and the descendants of the Rev. Jesse L. Giles and the Ferrees and the Allreds and the Williamses and the Hendrickses and the Pritchards and a host of others. The scene was enough to sober any man and yet enough to inspire any man to think that those who labored long ago were still represented by those that love God and the church.

Before the afternoon sermon, Mr. C. L. Gray, Jr., of High Point, great-grandson of the Rev. Also Gray, D.D., sang the "Ninety and Nine," with such rare beauty as to bring tears to the eyes of those who heard. Then Rev. R. M. Andrews, D. D., President of the North Carolina Conference preached a great sermon on the subject "A Glorious Church." He was at his best—or better than his best, if possible. C. L. Gray, Jr., this time sang "God Will Take Care of You." Then the congregation and the great throng that was out-of-doors moved to the cemetery for the unveiling of he beautiful monument to the memory of Reuben and Anna Giles. This monument was built out of as white flint as any one ever saw. It is four feet high, four feet wide and 18 inches thick. A marble slab inserted in it bears this inscription: "In memory of Reuben and Anna Giles who gave the land for this church in 1833. This monument erected in 1933."

Just before the unveiling the wrtier delivered this brief address: "We are here today to pay a long delayed tribute to two of God's servants. Reuben Giles was born in 1798 and died in 1865. Anna Giles, his wife, was born in 1799 and died in 1883. The deeds which men do sometimes seem commonplace while they are still alive. It often remains for the future generations to fully appreciate the work. But work for God is not lost! 'God buries His workmen but the work goes on.' And so long as it does go on there will be some choice souls to appreciate that which has been done.

"Very few people here today can boast of ever having known these two who sleep beneath this sod. They lived their lives, did their work and passed off the stage of action before many of us came. But the fact that they gave the land upon which this church stands is a fine tribute to their character. It speaks to us far more eloquently than any words which I could utter that they believed in God and believed in the church which our Lord established on the earth. Men do not give land and money for things they do not believe in. It is only those who believe in

Kannapolis.—This seems to be an appropriate time and place to thank the people of Kannaolis church for the hearty welcome they gave me and my sister last Saturday. We came here Saturday afternoon to make our home for the summer, living in the parsonage next door to the church. We found the parsonage neatly cleaned and furnished with fresh curtains and linens. Saturday evening we were greatly surprised by a bountiful pounding. Judging from the supply of food we received the people evidently do not mean for us to starve. The following articles were brought in: three cans salt, five 1-pound sacks of sugar, nine cans condensed milk, one can chow-chow, two cans peanut butter, one jar relish, one box prunes, one sack of flour, one can of pickles, one can of baking powder, two boxes of soda, two cans tomatoes, one can hominy, two cas corn, four cakes, one bucket lard, one box cocoa, three boxes matches, one box toothpicks, three bags of rice, one can pineapple, one bag of Irish potatoes, one can of peaches, one can jelly, one box of confectioner's sugar, one can peas, three bags of coffee, one can of pork and beans, one can vinegar, one box Quaker oats, one box pepper, one dozen eggs, two cans jam, one can salmon, soap, kerosee, ham, bread and one dollar in money. The people also brought some knives and forks and a new frying pan for the parsonage.

We sincerely appreciate all of these nice expressions of love and friendship. We feel sure that we are going to enjoy our work with these people. Fraternally yours,

C. P. MORRIS, Pastor.

Rockingham.—Our second quarterly conference was held May 24, 1933, with R. M. Andrews in the chair and Ruby Martin as secretary.

Pastor—I have filled all appointments since asisgned to this charge. I have made 15 visits all being members of the M. P. Church. I have held prayer in some of the 15 homes visited. I have made a few visits in homes that were not a member of the M. P. Church. I have received to date $38.52 on pastor's salary.

The pastor also recommended: That each home organize a family altar or family worship system. That we have an envelope for taking up collection. That we get song books for the people in the pews. That we take a monthly offering for the Cihldren's Home. That we take a collection each Sunday until the Herald subsidy is paid in full. That a committee of three be appointed to solicit each home of M. P. church, and stress the the great need of subscription for the M. P. Herald.

Sunday School Superintendent—Have been present every Sunday except three. Determined to fill office to the best of my knowledge. Number on roll at the beginning of quarter, 60, number on roll at present 90; average attendance 65.

Our aim is to get one hundred and twenty on roll. We are working to that end. We hope to make this Sunday school one of the largest in the community.

Class Leader—Have held meeting since last quarterly conference. Seems that the members are taking more interest in the meetings. Have been to see lots of the members who have gone astray. And have tried to get them to come back. We have held prayer meetings around in the homes each week.

Ladies' Auxiliary—The Ladies' Auxiliary has $8.07 in the treasury. Two dollars has been paid on the piano debt. Our quilt top is almost completed. We are palnning to get together some night real soon and quilt it. We are also planning to give a play and to take a silver offering. The ladies and friends of the church have been very cooperative and helpful in the things that we have undertaken.

Stewards—We, the undersigned, Stewards of the M. P. Church, Rockingham, N. C., beg to advise that due to the depression, we have not been able to accomplish very much as to the finances of the church, but hope we will be able to do greater work the rest of this conference year and come out victorious in the end. Respectfully submitted,

H. W. SNEAD
W. T. BROWN
MRS. W. T. BROWN.

Trustees—We have made some iprovements as to excavating and leveling the church grounds. We want to make other improvements when we are financially able. We also made improvements as to elevating the choir platform.

Treasurer—Paid on pastor's salary $24.44. Paid on piano $8.03. Paid on lights $4.50. Total $36.47. Amount paid Rev. J. H. Trollinger on 1933 salary, $17.25. Total $53.73.

Sunday School Secretary—Taken in in Sunday school this quarter, $36.25. Paid out this quarter, $26.12. Almount in treasury, $10.13.

W. M. Jenkins and Mrs. S. C. Covington were nominated as delegates to the Annual Conference

W. M. Jenkins was ordained as a minister.

We were glad to have Dr. Andrews with us to preside over the quarterly conference. In his talk he compared the members of a church to children in a home. The training children have to be told over and over again things to do and so with church members. They have to be reminded of their duty in the church.

Rev. C. W. Saunders preached for us Sunday morning at 11:00. Due to his resignation for the church in South Carolina, we can now have two services on the fourth Sunday.

RUBY MARTIN, Reporter.

West Forsyth.—Our services at Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches last Sunday were well attended, and the people were attentive to the messages of the pastor. The vote for delegae to the Annual Conference was taken at each church. The pastor was entertained in the home of Mrs. Ella Doub of Baltimore church, Saturday night, and enjoyed visits in a number of other homes. We went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Phillips, of Baltimore church, for dinner. Several homes were visited in the Stony Knoll community Saturday. We attended the East Bend township Sunday School convention at East Bend Saturday night, and it was the pleasure of the writer to speak to the convention. Union Hill and Stony Knoll Sudday schools are in the township, and these schools provided portions of the program of the convention.

The annual revival meeting will begin at Tabernacle church on Sunday, June 18. Owing to a township Sunday school convention to be held at Old Richmond school during the morning and afternoon, the revival meeting will not begin until night service. We have secured Rev. Wayne Curtis, of Burlington, evangelistic singer, to assist us in the meeting. We are looking forward to a good meeting.

Our appointment for next Sunday will be at Union Hill church at 11 a. m.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

* * *

Mebane.—Our work has been going on in the usual way. Our attendance has been some what decreased for the last few Sundays due to special services at other churches.

The Woman's Auxiliary met last Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the church with a very good attendance. The Ladies' Aid will meet this evening at 3:30 o'clok with Mrs. J. W. Nicholson. We are planning to have our Children's Day program the second Sunday night at 8:00 o'clock. Everybody is invited to attend this service and we are hoping this service will be well attended.

The Board of Stewards will meet this evening, June 5, with Mr. Ada Terrell.

REPORTER.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Charge.—Please let me say a few words about Mothers' Day. Oud pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams, brought us a splendid message. Mothers' Day was carried out; many a rose being worn to show that mothers were living and that mothers dead were remembered.

Mr. Williams gave us another splendid sermon yesterday evening, it seems that he gets better and better each time that he preaches to us.

Sunday school is moving along nicely; it seems to be picking up now.

We have re-organized our Woman's Auxiliary, with Miss Tressa Sykes acting as our new president. The auxiliary met Sunday afternoon after preaching. Each circle present had good reports. We had with us in this meeting Mrs. H. C. Nicholson from Mebane. She made a splendid talk and gave us some splendid points to be carried out in this work. We would be glad if she would visit us again.

Chilren's Day service will be held here the second Sunday in June. All day service. Rock and sand is being hauled at this time to underpin the church. We will be glad if anyone will help so this work will be finished as soon as it can be done. REPORTER.

Anderson and Yarborough Charges.—Our four churches in South Carolina are still going forward. A general improvement is being noted, more visible in some than others. The favorable indications are encouraging.

Our association with these good people has been pleasant. The faithfulness and interest of some are a real inspiration to us.

A few examples of their concern for their pastor: One good brother suspected I was embarrassed in meeting a certain obligation, voluntarily offered to advance the needed amount. Another brought us a 14-lb. ham before breakfast. The good people of Liberty Hill raised a special offering of money and produce to get tires for the car. A member brought us a liberal donation of potatoes, and honey, the kind that poets rave about (if they do). Others are constantly giving us produce of various kinds. These tokens of appreciation encourage us in the work and strengthens our hands.

Several churches gave an Easter program and 12.50 was received in offering.

We are proud to report several high school graduates from our membership. Liberty Hill: Lottie Harrison, Marvin Smith. Fairview: Eugenia Connelly, Sarah Henderson. Harmony: Peterson girl. (Name ??). We hope they will attend High Point College.

Our president, Rev. R. M Andrews was with us recently in an Area Meeting at Liberty Hill, Saturday afternoon, May 6. Sunday Home Coming at Fairview. Sunday night in a service at Harmony. We were delighted to have him with us. His splendid messages were much appreciated by pastor and people, and we hope that he can be with us again this year.

We give our best regards to our friends over the conference. We desire a continued interest in their petitions, that we may be used in promoting the interest of Christ's Kingdom. J. E. LOVE, Pastor.

Beulah, Mecklenburg Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. Henderson, filled his regular appointment Sunday morning at 11:00 o'clock. He preached for us a wonderful sermon that was enjoyed very much by all.

Our Sunday school is getting along very well, but our attendance isn't as large as it could be. We wish more of our members would attend and take as much interest as some of our members do. We would have a Sunday school then that we would be proud to own.

Our Ladies' Aid , we are sorry to say, isn't getting along very well at present. We didn't get to have a meeting the last two times as we were planning to; it seems that most everybody is very busy with farm work, but we are expecting to start again soon to have our regular meeting.

Our Christian Endeavor is getting along fine. We gave a Mothers' Day program the second Sunday night in May, which was appreciated and enjoyed very much. We are planning on having a Children's Day program in the near future.

We are sorry to say that one of our members, Mrs. J. H. Wiles, is in the Ellen Fitzgerald hospital in Monroe. We wish for her a speedy recovery.

BESSIE DEESE, Reporter.

First Church, High Point.—This report of First Church is submitted by a drafted substitute. Our faithful and efficient reporter, Mrs. R. T. Pickens, finds her time will taken in the care of her father, Mr. W. J. Armfield. This venerable pioneer citizen of High Point is in gradually failing health. Their friends remember them daily in their prayers. At Mrs. Pickens' request I am writing of First Church activities.

Sunday evening, May 21, we observed the fifth annual Florence Nightingale service to which the nurses and the doctors of the community were invited. The sermon subject was, "The Healing of His Seamless Dress." (Matt. 9:21). "The woman's faith in Christ; her willingness to follow the Divine leading; and her open acknowledgment of Him describe the opporunity for service by these helpers of humaniy," the speaker said. It was suggested, in reference to the trying experiences through which all servants of humanity are compelled to go, that a suitable epitaph might well be, "They kept their tears for themselves and shared their laughter with others." Humanity generally hails none so much as those who help to preserve and maintain human life. But appreciation is so often unspoken. Every man's a hero, every women a heroine to somebody. The time to tell them so is while they are with us. Every Christian man and woman is the prophecy of another as splendid. Let us make disciples and do our work in the name of Jesus.

The annual High Point College commencement program is a delight to our congregation. This year the messages of Dr. G. I. Humphreys to the graduating class in the baccalaureate service in First church, and that of Dr. E. A. Sexsmith to the Christian associations of the college in Roberts Hall in the evening, were real soul-feasts. Among those graduating we were happy to note from our membership Vernon Cannoy, Cyrus L. Gray, Jr., and Miss Ina McAdams. Congratulations, warm and sincere are extended to them. To the morning service came the congregations of Lebanon church and of Grace church in Greesboro.

Last Sunday evening our congregation cooperated with the local high school baccalaureate service by worshiping there. The Rev. D. W. Allen, of St. Mary's Episcopal church, delivered the sermon. From our church families came the following graduates, who have our sincerest congratulations: Julia Elizabeth Coe, Margaret Elizabeth Davis, William Thomas Foister, Garland Hayworth, James Leonard Koonce, Webster Clay Koonce, Jr., William Penn Moffitt, Jr., William P. Vance and Orin R. York, Jr.

Mrs. A. M. Rankin, Robert and Jean Rankin and Mrs. Lewis Teague motored to Western Maryland College last Saturday to be present for the graduation of Dorothy Lee Rankin. Illness prevented Capt. A. M. Rankin from attending. Many prayers are offered for his speedy recovery from his malady.

The devoted secretary of the Welfare board, Mrs. . W. C. Hammond, is a patient at the Guilford General hospital. No doubt the arduous duties of her office have contributed to her illness. We hope for a speedy recovery. Miss Helen Davis is now a patient at the Guiford County Sanitorium. Her friends hope for continued improvement.

Yesterday the executive committee of the Woman's Auxiliary met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Ferree in its June meeting.

Mrs. Farmer, who is in Tucson, Arizona, 621 E. 6th St., still continues to make some improvement but underwent another minor operation this week. She desires to thank the many friends who have so kindly remembered her during this absence from home and loved ones.

Next week will find High Pointers and many from over the state enjoying the State Christian Endeavor convention which meets at High Point College. Our denomination will be represented on the program by Dr. Lawrence Little, who speaks on Monday evening; Dr. P. E. Lindley, the speaker of Thursday evening; and the writer who will conduct a series of conferences. We may well claim Mr. Carroll Wright, of the International Office in Boston, who formerly was a member of our church. A Denominational Conference will be held at 11:15 Wednesday morning in which messages will be brought by Rev. T. J. Whitehead and Rev. N. M. Harrison. The annual banquet and closing session will be held in First church Thursday afternoon and night. The closing address will be delivered by Dr. Daniel A. Poling, successor to Dr. Frances E. Clark, President of the International Society of Christian Endeavor. These should be great days for Methodist Protestants. Plan to attend.

R. I. FARMER.

Shiloh.—It seems rather late to mention a Mothers' Day service of a month ago, but as the letter which contained an account of the interesting and enjoyable Mothers' Day program, failed to reach the Herald, we will mention it again. The oldest and the youngest mothers present were each given a bunch of flowers. The oldest mother was Mrs. Jacob Pickett, but Mrs. Obie Waitman was only a few weeks younger, both being past 80 years of age. The youngest mother was Mrs. Roy Koonts. We thank God for both our aged and younger mothers.

From Luke 21:13, "And it shall turn to you for a testimony," the pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler delivered his message today. He said that nothing once impressed on the human mind is ever really forgotten, but all persecutions, toils, privations, service, and patient waiting of human soul turns to that soul for a testimony.

Mrs. J. R. Koons has been painfully indisposed for the past month because of an abscess on the bottom of her foot. However, we are glad to know that she is improving.

Mrs. Charles Mosely is in the Dacidson hospital for treatment. Mrs. Mosely is a sister of Jack and Noah Weaver.

Mrs. W. J. Berrier and her daughter, Emma, spent three days last week in Richmond visiting her two sons, Carl and Fred Berrier. They report an enjoyable visit.

Mrs. R. S. Troxler was in bed several days last week. Hope she will soon be much better.

MRS. W. L. SHOAF, Reporter.

Liberty, Liberty Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. Fred R. Love, on the fourth Sunday morning read for the Scripture lesson the first 12 verses of the fifth chapter of Romans. His theme text was Rom. 5-1, "Therefore being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." This was a good sermon and an atmosphere of worshipful meditation was prevalent throughout the service and at the close a large number filed around the chancel for prayer.

Our midweek prayer meeting will be led by Mr. Love.

At the evening service all the churches in town joined in a song service. Quartettes from other places, Burlington, Ramseur, and Mt. Pleasant gave special numbers.

It is a praise-worthy activity to learn and sing so many religious songs. It makes us love them dearly.

We are delighted to have Miss Lora Bowman back in our midst and worship with us again. She has been away teaching.

We are also very grateful to have Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Shepard worship with us as their feeble health had not permitted them to attend church for several months.

The Christian Endeavorers enjoyed a fine outing in the form of a picnic last Wednesday. The leader, Mr. R. P. Elkins, had for his topic Sunday evening: "God working through us in every day life."

Circle No. 1 of the Woman's Auxiliary met with Mrs. Boyd Reitzel at her attractive home on South Fayetteville St., on Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. C. L. Highfill, chairman, carried out a very impressive program. An interesting paper was read by Mrs. J. E. Cox also one by Mrs. Fred Reitzel. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. V. H. Dameron.

Circle No. 2 met with Mrs. W. M. Hanner at her hospitable home on North Fayetteville St., Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Fred R. Love, chairman, had charge of the devotionals.

The topic for the evening was: "Youth Our Opportunity." An interesting paper on the topic was read by Mrs. Lawrence Brown, another interesting paper was read by Mrs. S. M. Smith. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess asisted by her daughter, Miss Helen Long Hanner.

Rev. and Mrs. Fred R. Love, Mr. F. A. Shepard, Miss Bertine Shepard, Miss Mary Bowman Shepard, Frank Shepard and Mayor J. T. Martin attended the commencement exercises at Woman's College, Greensboro, on Monday; where Miss Margaret Shepard received the degree of Bachelor of Science in Home Economies.

The union revivals services will begin Sunday evening, June 11, at 8:00 o'clock. The public is cordially invited to all these services. Readers of the Herald, please pray for this meeting that we may have an outpouring of God's spirit and that many souls may be born into the Kingdom of God.

Dr. Akers, president of Asbury College, Wilmore, Kentucky will be the visiting minister to assist in these services.

BERTINE SHEPARD.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—The work here is progressing about the usual way—at about normal rate. We have had no report for two weeks due to the fact that the reporter has been somewhat indisposed. During her silence, however, a most interesting Mothers' Day program was rendered and other regular services held each week.

Our pastor, Dr. S. W. Taylor, has been loaned to the Board of Education for the month of June to further aid in the promotion of that work. His appointments last Sunday were filled by visiting ministers. At 11:00 o'clock, Rev. O. P. Vix, Baptist minister, preached a good sermon to a good congregation. The evening service was conducted by Rev. Aubert Smith, ministerial student, from the Welch Memorial church, this city.

At 11:00 o'clock the Sunshine Band held its monthly service in the Sunday school room in charge of Mrs. S. W. Taylor. Thirty-eight members were present. Four of these children repeated the Bible Alphabet in beautiful manner. That is, 26 Bible verse memorized and quoted.

The Ladies' Aid met recently with Mrs. J. W. Montgomery. Mrs. Taylor led the devotional. Good attendance is reported, two visitors and an interesting meeting.

The women of our church are preparing a large basket for the wedding anniversary picnic at our Children's Home. Many of our folks will not be able to attend owing to the fact that they can't leave their work but will be glad to contribute to the children a little in that way. Our people, always interested in, and in sympathy with, the children, find pleasure in giving to them. Four of our girls were members of the graduating class in High Point high school this year. They are: Misses Iris Welch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Welch; Vivian Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vivian L. Cook; Ernestine Hedgecock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hedgecock, and Margaret Hayworth, daughter of Mrs. Mittie Crouch Hayworth. We congratulate these fine young people. Naturally parents are proud of the children. We expect much. We, in some cases, sacrifice much to give them opportunity. May these young people be happier and succeed in life and thus bring happiness to their expectant parents.

Did you read "The Average Girl's" reply to Mrs. Roosevelt in last week's Herald? Now wasn't that fine? How I do admire Miss Osta M. Underwood, and how I do wish all the average girls had courage to stand up for the right in such manner. It reminds me ofthe teen age Daniel who dared to refuse the king's wine. And, also, of the young man, Joseph, who preferred good character and had courage to flee from the wicked woman, and even went to prison for the sake of righteousness.

O for such courage in more boys and girls in this day of legalized beer, cigarettes, etc.

Charlotte.—We are looking forward to the return of our pastor, Rev. G. H. Hendry and his family, who have been in Florida the past three weeks. Rev. M. Hendry has been assisting in revival services in Nebraska Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Tampa.

The annual Children's Day service was held Sunday morning. A splendid program was given by the children. Mrs. G. W. Stegall, Mrs. A. L. Haigler, Mrs. B. W. Little and Miss Mildred Younginer trained the children and were in charge of the program.

The Young People's Christian Endeavor and the Intermediate societies met together in the church auditorium on Sunday evening to hear Mrs. B. Dale White, a returned missionary to India, who spoke very interestingly on missionary work in India. Mrs. White is the daughter of a missionary, having been born in India. She is a missionary herself, and the wife of an A. R. P. minister missionary.

Mrs. G. P. Younginer, who is district chairman of the State Branch of Women's Missionary Work, had charge of the meeting which was a special missionary meeting. Mrs. Younginer is especially interested in missionary work and we appreciate her efforts to educate our young people in Missions.

The Woman's Auxiliary will give a Silver Tea on Thursday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock at the home of Mrs. C. H. Deweese on Thomas Avenue.

Miss Mary Shaw, who graduated from Tech high school last week, is leaving for her home in Norman, N. C., this week. She was president of the Young People's Christian Endeavor society, a teacher in the Sunday school, and sang in the choir. She was very faithful and will be greatly missed. While attending school here she has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Garmon, the latter her aunt.

Others of our young people who have graduated recently are: Louis Garmon, Miss Sally and Cecil Hollifield and Miss Rachel and Sigsby Tadlock from Oakhurst high school; Miss Mary Shaw, Miss Lois and John Irby from Tech high school and Miss Ruth Curry from the Presbyterian Hospital Training School for Nurses.

Mrs. G. P. Younginer entered Mercy hospital Monday to undergo a major operation. We pray that the operation may be successful and that she may soon be well and strong.

We were glad to have Mr. Herbert Garmon of High Point with us in Sunday school. He spoke briefly of the good work being done by Dr. and Mrs. Dixon at the Children's Home and of the Silver Anniversary being given for them at the Children's Home on June 8. A silver offering was taken to be sent as a token of our appeciation of them.

Graham.—There is to be a L. T. S. rally at the Graham church next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. We expect a large attendance of our young people and church leaders.

Saturday afternoon from 4 to 7:30 there will be a benefit ice cream supper given on Travora Hill. The supper in being sponsored by the L. T. S. club and the proceeds will be used to help the members of the club to go to High Point Leadership Training school.

On the Fourth of July the Graham church is to observe its 30th anniversary. The church was organized in the year 1903, July 3rd in the home of Dr. W. R. Goley on N. Main street, and had for her first pastor, Rev. G. F. Millaway, who was then pastor of our Burlington church. All those who had in this gerat achievement will be asked to join with us in commemorating this event on the fourth Sunday in July.

A union church vacation school is in progress here, All churches are co-operating. So far the attendance is considerably better than last year. The commencement will be held at our church next Sunday evening. An exhibition of some of the work done may be seen in the hut in the rear of the church.

At the morning service there are some very important matters to be brought to our attention. A full atendnace of the members is desired.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Kannapolis.—As our school days are over for the session of 1932-33, we are very glad to welcome our pastor, Rev. Clarence P. Morris, a graduate of the class of 1933 of High Point College to our community as his home. He brings with him his sister, Miss Cladys Morris. We are very glad to have her. We truly believe these young people will be a great help to our church and community and trust the church as a whole might be able to help to increase their faith in the works of our Mastor.

Mr. Morris makes the announcement that at any time, night or day, that he be needed to help by prayer, or any other way that he might be able to help, just notify him on N. Walnut street extension in the parsonage adjoining the church, and he is at your service.

We are glad to state that our attendance at church and Sunday school is increasing. Our finances are not coming in as we would like, but we are hopig and praying that the Lord will finger around someone's heart and especially members, and let them realize the need of the church to carry on the Savior's work.

Our program committee, composed of Mrs. W. T. Kiser and Mrs. C. B. McCommons, has planned a beautiful Children's day program to be presented at the 11 o'clock service on Sunday, June 11. Everybody welcome. At the evening service the Christian Endeavor will have charge.

Circle No. 1 of the Ladies' Aid met at the home of Mrs. C. B. McCommons on Monday night, June 5, with 14 members present and one visitor and two new members, who are: Miss Widenhouse and Miss Gladys Morris. After all business was transacted, delicious ice cream, cake and pickles were served by Mrs. McCommons, assisted by Mr. Burer, of Charlotte.

Announcement has been made by our pastor that the third quarterly conference will convene on the night of June 17. All officials are urged to be present.

On Sunday, June 4, the doors of the church were opened and we had the pleasure of welcoming three new membrs, Mr. M. V. Dwiggns, Mrs. J. W. Braswll and Mrs. W. C. Mahaffey. We hope in some way that we can give these dear ones a spiritual life along the way and hope they will prove a blessing to us.

We were indeed glad to have Uncle "Bob" Sides back with us on Sunday. We are sorry about his accident but are thankful that it was not more serious. There is room yet for you: why not come?

Union Grove Church, Mocksville Charge.—"Watch therefore: for ye know not when the Lord of the house cometh, whether at even, or at midnight, or at cockcrowing, or in the morning; lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch."

People, are you sleeping? Can't you realize that the day of judgment is likely to come at any time? Are you doing what you want to be doing when Christ comes? Let us, as church members, wake up. Let us, by the help of God, hold up Christ before lost souls. Let our light so shine that we may lead the poor wandering ones to Christ. Let us get behind the church and lift it up—up—above all worldly things. Put Christ and the church first.

Our Sunday school average for the past month was 79.

Last Sunday at 11:00 a. m., Rev. Mr. Murray, pastor of Chatham Baptist church of Winston-Salem, (by permission of our pastor) delieverd a wonderful message of the true Gospel. Again last Sunday evening at 8:00 our pastor delivered an inspiring sermon to a very large congregation. His text was "Lord, what wilt thou have me do?" The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. My love be with you all in Christ Jesus.

Shiloh C. E. Society, Shiloh Charge.—The C. E. society continues to increase both in number and in spirit, probably not as fast as some of us would like to see it grow; but we are hoping that our gradual gaining is permanent. We have about 85 on roll so far this year. We hope the society will continue to grow both in number and spirti, but above all in spirit.

The programs this quarter have been interestingly discussed. Those different ones who have had charge each Sunday evening are to be commended on the splendid way in which these programs have been presented.

Sunday evening, June 4, at 8:00 o'clock, about 75 young privileged to enjoy an address delivered by one of our ex-presidents, Mr. Curtis A. Leonard of Thomasville. In beginning Mr. Leonard commended the society on the wonderful progress it has made since organization. Mr. Leonard announced as his subject, "Men and Mountains," or to apply it more directly to the young people, "Boys and Girls and Mountains." In this he spoke of the difficulties and hardships in our lives as mountains; he pointed us to Jesus who is able to help us cross these mountains successfully if we will only take Him as our guide. In Mr. Leonard's talk he discussed four main points or four of these mountains of difficulties that each one of us have to face. They were: (1) "The Mountains of Fear.' (2) "The Mountain of Worldliness." (3) "The Mountain of Doubt," and (4) "The Mountain of Self,' or selfishness.

He discussed his message so strongly and with such ability that he held his audience spellbound for about 30 minutes.

Mr. Leonard left with hearty congratulations and best wishes for a continued life of service. May God bless him and his family is our prayer.

A Leadership Training Rally wil be held in the Graham Methodist Protestant church Sunday, June 11, at 3:00 p. m. The purpose of the rally is to boost attendance at the annual Leadership Training school in High Point College, June 26-July 1. I am asking that a large delegation from each church in this district be present at the rally. The following charges are in the district: Orange, Mebane, Saxapahaw, Alamance, Mt. Hermon, Graham, Glen Raven-Haw River, Fountain Place-Gibsonville, Mt. Pleasant and Burlington First. Short, peppy speeches; good singing; inspiring fellowship will characterize the meeting. Let every church be represented.

FRED W. PASCHALL, Director.

GOOD FOR PINNACLE!

It is not my purpose to rob the reporter of Pinnacle of the pleasure of reporting their victory, but I will say that I was privileged to be in the Stokes County Sunday school convention yesterday afternoon and to see Pinnacle walk off with the pennant. This pennant was awarded on the basis of the umber of people present and the number of miles traveled. Pinnacle had 86 persons present and each person traveled a distance of twenty miles—both going and coming. So I say that was fine for Pinnacle. Congratulations!

GILES CHAPEL ANNIVERSARY

the church as a Divine Institution, an institution that is for the uplift of hunaity, an institution that is to be the working force for the Kingdom, an institution that is to heal the hurts or humanity and bring comfort to the bereaved, an institution that is to give light and information and good cheer to all the people of the earth, an institution that is to help man find his rightful place in the home, the community, the state, the nation, an institution that is to help man into a right relationship to God so that he may enjoy life here and hereafter—it is only those who believe in an institution like this that give land and money for these noble purposes. And so this moument which is soon to be unveiled is to stand here throughtout the years as a sentinel to tell to every one who happens to pass this way that these people believed in God and believed in the church.

"And somehow, this occasion, to me, does more than simply honor the memory of these two splendid people who sleep here. It seems to me that this soil which contains all that is mortal of our fathers and mothers and brothers and sisters demands of us that here and now, we who are still in the flesh rededicate our lives and our substance to the noble task which these found dear to their hearts. If we do not today feel the urge to be better men and women and if we do not resolve in our innermost soul to be nobler in our living, more intelligent in our thinking and more dedicated to the cause of promoting righteousness, good will and religion, then this service will not have reached the full measure of success which it ought to produce. May this monument and this occasion be a reminder to us that there are new battles to be fought, new victories to be won and new burdens to be borne. God give us courage and wisdom to be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as we know that our labor is not in vain in the Lord.

"And now, in the name of the church and this community, Darrell Allred, a great-great-grandson of Reuben and Anna Giles will unveil this monumet as a perpetual memorial to those who so obly began this good work a hundred years ago."

Following the unveiling, Rev. R. C. Stubbins of Asheboro made an earnest prayer, a prayer of thanksgiving for those who have gone before and a prayer of dedication for the new tasks of life. The benediction was pronounced by Dr. R. M. Andrews. And thus we called it a day. After this the congregation came down from the mountain—mountain of blessing and went to their homes feeling that they had spent a day on holy ground. As we went away some of us had a feeling of thankfulness that God had let us live at this particular time so that we could take part in this great occasion and at the same time we had a deep sense of the fact that we will not be there at the next hundredth anniversary.

* Subsidy paid in full.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges becomo Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

PLEASE TURN TO PAGE ONE AND READ "JUNE 24 IS DR. McCULLOCH'S BIRTHDAY"

I have not had any response so far this week to the appeal for the loan of ten dollars. You understand that the money will not be asked for until the whole fifty loans are secured. Won't you help the printers, McCulloch & Swain, in their effort to keep the HERALD going, by making this loan? It isn't fair to ask them to assume the burden of financing the deficit. We made it by our failure to secure enough subscriptions to run the paper without a deficit. Three thousand paid subscriptions will do it. Until we get that many, we must find other sources of income.

Determined Editors

The annual meeting of the Editorial Council of the Religious Press, held in Washington last week (April 18-19) emphasized once more the devotion of the editors of religious periodicals to the high purpose of Christianity in the social order. Always hard pressed to keep their journals going, even in "normal" times; working with small staffs and most of them overworked, with inadequate capital, they are carrying on through the trials of added economic pressure with both optimism and passion. They believe, even more ardently than in former years, in the basic value of the mediums they produce. Over and over again the danger in the failure of the churches fully to recognize that value was stressed. At a time when daily and all other secular journalism is a "big business," religious journals remain free to speak their minds; they are almost the last stand in America for unimpeded enlightenment in the journalistic field. Their impact on the aggregate millions of readers they reach is of immeasurable portent to every good purpose in America. Their support for questionable causes cannot be bought; neither banks nor commercial organizations can dictate their policy; week after week they are molding opinion toward the kingdom of God on earth. We know of no group of men in any department of life if the world more unselfishly and courageously devoted ot high ends, further beyond the reach of intrenched and therefore dangerous interests, than the editors of religious journals. They have fought, and will continue to fight a desperate and optimistic battle against the extinction of their periodicals. Some day the churches will recognize the far-reaching implications, the masterful potency, of their free press.—The Churchman.

Crime

Crime is presenting one of the gravest problems with which we are faced in America today. The criminal record of America is a great challenge to psychologists, sociologists and religionists in our institutions of learning and in our churches. Since 1904 the crime wave has more than doubled in America. In 1904 there were more than 57,070 in all our state and federal institutions; in 1928 there were 116,626. Crime cost the United States in 1928 for maintenance alone $29,298,641, or in other words and figures $320.89 per capita. America has more crime than all of the other civilized world put together! This is in face of the fact that we only form a small portion of the world's population. This is a startling fact when we remember that we are supposed to be the most Christian and the most civilized nation in all the world. New York City has more than 22 times as much crime as its twin sister, London; and Cleveland has 30 times as much. Los Angeles has more than 20 times as much as Liverpool!

But what are we going to do about it? What can we do about it? That is what should concern us most. With crime mounted upon the throne and ruling humanity with a rod of iron, what attitude and action should we take? We should seek to discover the cause of this great increase in crime. There are a number of things included in this cause: improper conditions in the home, unemployment, poverty, mixed blood, consumption of drugs, war, incorrect punishment, and imbecility. Shall we look upon the criminal with a critical eye, point the finger of scorn at him and cast him out of human society? Or shall we seek to eradicate the cause which led him into crime and thus create a wholesome environment which is conducive to the building of Christian character? Most assuredly the latter. If so, we must re-establish the home on a more Christian foundation, rid our country of the divorce evil, abolish war, bring to an end the unemployment situation, prevent imbeciles from increasing, have fewer laws and better enforcement, reclaim the prisoners after they leave the prison, improve our prisons and penal instiutions, educate people along these lines, and provide good honest work for the prisoners, and, finally, treat them as men and they will ultimately respond as men. We as true Americans should put forth every effort to reform society and the crime wave will vanish of its own accord. If we are to prevent crime, we must train the adolescent and the pre-adolescent.

T. Glenn Madison.

"AM I MY BROTHER'S KEEPER?"

"Above all else this country needs a nation-wide revival of old-fashioned prayer-meeting religion—a religion that makes men realize that if there is a Heaven, there must also of necessity be a hell—a religion that makes a man realize that every act is recorded on his own conscience and that though it may slumber it can never die—a religion that makes an employer understand that if he is unfair to his employees and pays them less than fair wages, measured by his ability and their efficiency and zeal, he is a robber—a religion that makes an employee know that if he does not give full and efficient service, he too is a robber—a religion that makes a man realize that by driving too hard a bargain with his servant, his employee, his merchant, he can be just as much a profiteer as the seller or producer who swindles by false weight, false packing or false charges."—Richard H. Edmonds in The Southern Advocate.

WHITE HYACINTHS FOR THE SOUL

By INA MCADAMS

With this essay Miss McAdams won the Annual Essay Contest at High Point College on Friday night of Commencement week. Miss McAdams is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. McAdams, of High Point, and is a member of the First Methodist Protestant Church, High Point. She graduated this year

"If I had two loaves of bread, I would exchange one for white hyacinths, to feed my soul."

Food for the soul! How many of us as we grow older and become interested in the material things of life ever take time to think of nourishing anything as intangible as our souls? Oh, if we could always remain as children! If, with careless abandon, we could cry with Omar Khayyam and then leave our petty worries for someone else to solve! But, alas, it is the fate of man that he should keep growing older long after he is old enough. As a result of his ever-increasing maturity he finds himself facing responsibilities and cares which he must bear. He begins the strenuous task—strenuous at least for most of us—of providing enough money while he is yet able, to take care of himself when the time comes that he is not able. To save his few hard-earned dollars, he would do almost anything, and in the hurly-burly of this modern existence, he finds it convenient to forget that he has a soul. In fact, he would probably blush if someone even accused him of having one. Souls, he thinks, can be extremely embarrassing—and inconvenient at times. They should belong exclusively to the clerical class, who have time to take care of them, and to Holy Rollers, who get a certain satisfaction out of having them saved. So he proceeds to buy his bread and to eat it, and if, perchance, he has a loaf left, he very considerately puts it on the door-step for the dog or the birds to eat, and his soul goes starved. A few years ago, the bankers found it convenient to forget their souls, and, as a result, we sent men to death to save dollars—men whose souls alone were worth billions of times more than the dollars they saved by giving their lives. Warfare, greed, selfishness—they are ruining our lives and make a chaos of a civilization that it has taken millions of years to develop.

The one evil of our modern civilization is that it does not give people time to reflect properly. We do so little thinking for ourselves. Someone tells us that it is better to make enough money to keep up with the Joneses than to worry over whether or not we are going to heaven when we die—for, after all, who knows whether we shall go anywhere at all or not?—and we deside that if others believe this it must be true, so we set ourselves about doing the same thing.

Do not misunderstand me. I am not preaching that the world is going to the dogs. In the first place, I am not preaching, and, in the second place, I most decidedly do not think the world is going to the dogs. I am aware that that has been the cry of every older generation as it feels its own pedestal toppling while the oncoming generation clambers eagerly upward in all good faith that it can solve the age-old problems in the twinkling of an eye, by applying its own immature and naive processes. But—

My granddad, who was raising hogs,
Said, "The world is going to the dogs."
His granddad, in his house of logs,
Said, "The world is going to the dogs."
His granddad, in his English bogs,
Said, "The world is going to the dogs."
His granddad, in his old skin togs,
Said, "The world is going to the dogs."
But here and now I wish to state
Those dogs have had a good long wait.

Far be it from me even to suggest that the world is becoming more wicked or selfish. Any student of history can prove to you in a moment that we are gaining on those dogs by leaps and bounds. Take the story of Clovis—a fascinating story that covers a period of less than 25 years and makes such a beautiful page in history. Clovis was a pagan leader of the Franks about the year 480. He engaged in a number of battles, and during one very important one, he seemed to be getting the worst end of the bargain, she began to pray He said that if God would let him win the battle, he would adopt Christianity. Well, Clovis won the battle and had himself and his men baptized in the recognized Christian fashion. But it was not long before one of his kinsmen, who had helped him to win suggested that he would like a few of the spoils. Clovis did not like this idea so well, so he had the man killed. Another relative he killed because he had refused to help him. Then he looked around and decided he would rather like to have the land that the rest of his relatives held. His eyes became very sorrowful, and, when someone asked if, perhaps, he didn't feel well, he replied that his soul was tortured. Surely, for the sake of his dear religion, he should take the land away from his pagan kinsmen. So he had all his relatives killed. In his last conquest against his kinsmen, he had the son of an old ally to kill the man for him; then he slew the son to avenge the murder! Dear man! What he needed was a hot-house full of white hyacinths with a few Easter Lilies and palm branches thrown in. But he needed them over his grave! Well, like everyone else in the past, Clovis eventually died.

His land was divided among his four sons. Their case may be likened to that of the gingham dog and the calico cat which side by side on the table sat, until they ate each other up. These sons had side by side at the table sat, but, being sons of their father, when they came into their inheritance, they became extremely jealous, so they promptly killed each other. One of the sons won quite a distinction for himself before he died. With his own hands he slashed the throats of his two nephews. He punished his own rebellious son by strangling him and burning alive his wife and two sons. He must, indeed, have been a pleasant person to live around. Perhaps it was a good thig that pretty soon the green grass was growing all around.

Knowing just this much from a period of less than 25 years in history, no one can say that the world is growing worse. Of course, one may ask, "What of our divorce courts? Are they not proof that the world is practically mad?" But even with Reno and Paris, we seldom find a case that equals that of old Henry VIII, who rid himself of one wife and married another just whenever the mood happened to strike him.

None of us would change our modern civilization for a world of Henry VIII's or Clovises. They would not be tolerated today; but, even yet, we are not fully civilized. Will the world 1,000 years hence shudder over the cruelty of our wars—our prize-fights even—as we shudder over Clovis? Why do we allow these to continue, then? It is because we have not educated our better selves to look upon them with distaste. Our physical self desires glory, and we push our spiritual self into the background, starved. We shall never be fully civilized until we begin to feed our souls and to forget the Joneses—until we begin to see God when we go to church, rather than somebody's new hat.

Look around. There are, figuratively speaking, white hyacinths on every hand—food for the soul. Are we making use of it? No. One does not have to go to church to worship God. After all, the only true temples are the fields and woods. They are God. We know He is there because we can see Him. The poet says:

Let me be quiet now and kneel,
Who never knelt before,
Here where the trees paint patterns bright
On the leaf-strewn forest floor.
For I, who saw no God at all
In earth or sea or air,
Baptized by beauty now look up
To see God everywhere.

With white hyacinths on every hand can we afford to let our souls go starved? Can we afford to pass up doing our bit for civilization? We, of the younger generation, feel than we can contribute something to posterity, but we can not do it by force. Food for our starving souls, that is what this old world needs, and when we have beauty all around us, it is criminal not to feed upon it. We have no more right to starve our souls than we have to starve our bodies.

"If I had two loaves of bread, I would exchange one for white hyacinths, to feed my soul."

WANTED, DIRECTORS OF MINISTERS

Horace Bushnell—the eminent New England preacher, theologian, and writer—once declared: "If I were to live my life over again, I would not push."

It has been suggested that "He would not push his mind to conclusions for which it was not prepared, neither would he push for position or honors, but would await the unfolding of the Divine purpose."

I sometimes worship with the Quakers. They surely do not push in their services. They wait on the Lord. They begin the service with a season of quiet. In these moments one becomes conscious of the presence ofGod. No one is asked to speak or pray. Those who do speak, or who pray audibly, do so without haste or confusion. As a rule, the things that are said are worth while, and the hour closes with the feeling that it has been good to be there.

I suppose that when Dr. Bushnell said "I would not push," he meant to call attention to the crowding, vaulting methods of many men in seeking fame and preferment. He would not be like them. He would trust in God for advancement, and await His developing plans.

However, as we are fellow-workers together with God, and as God from time to time pushes one and another out, and on, and up in the service of His kingdom, we may believe that He employs methods in this advancement. Is there not a legitimate pushing on the part of certain individuals who would bring to the front other persons whose qualities are such that they may become intelligent leaders and inspirers of their fellow men?

Stars are important in the production of good moving picture films. The Didector also is important. Without a discerning Director the Star might not have been discovered. And with the best of Stars on the set, the Director is still a necessity—to tell them when to enter, what spirit they are to show, what ideas and actions are to be emphasized. The various scenes, and incidents, and characters are dependent on the Director for co-ordination. Not even the most brilliant Stars may push—they must wait and be directed, that they may occupy the spot-light at the proper time and be given full opportunity to "do their stuff" to the best advantage.

I have long felt that ministers need Directors—to tell some of them not to make preparation for the ministry, to tell others they would better leave the ministry for a more suitable calling, to help others decide as to what special field of ministerial service is best designed for their type of talent, to direct and inspire others in developing their powers of persuasive speech, in making others into biblical interpreters and teachers, workers with the young, or organizers and promoters of the activities of the church.

"All that has been provided for," I hear someone say. "College professors, teachers in theological schools, bishops, district superintendents, and various other general officers of the denominations, are supposed to attend to these very things."

"Supposed" is a proper word to use in this connection. Occasionally good service is rendered by these officials. But anyone who will take the trouble to familiarize himself with the details of this sort of service will soon become assured of its woeful inefficiency. Lack of time, failure to be thorough in the matter, prejudice, favoritism, soft-heartedness, fear of giving offense—these are some of the things that make for failure.

I wish that 20 men who have just graduated from theological seminaries would agree together and say to a capable Director: "We are entering the Christian ministry. We agree to give you 10 per cen tof our combined salaries for a period of 10 years to act as our Director. You are to help us discover, and to train, our special abilities and possibilities, to aid in opening suitable fields for our particular sorts of talent, to hear us praech and to criticise us, to watch our parish work and to suggest improvements, to help us find our talents and opportunities for leadership in educational and social service work. In short, you are to direct us in finding and developing ourselves for the service of the church and the world. You are to be as unmerciful and hard-boiled in your handling of us as our several cases may require."

At the end of the 10-year period two or three of these men would be outstanding preachers, a few would have become great educational and administrative leaders in large churches, or in considerable combinations of churches. Some would be in business, and others would be teachers, or engaged in editorial or other forms of literary work. All this would have been accomplished in a comparatively short time —and with a minumum of heart-burning and bitterness. The necessary shifts would have been made before it was too late for the men to adapt themselves to other lines of service, and —what is of great importance—this would aid in preventing the ministry from being so largely cluttered up with men who are impossible, either as preachers with power or as pastors of ability and effectiveness. LUTHER K. LONG.

RELIGION

Professors, supposed educators, and some "preachers" are attempting to set aside the old postulates and premises of the Christian faith and have surely forgotten that Jesus said "Ye have not chosen me but I have chosen you." St. John 15:16. In the preceding verses of this chapter Jesus teaches that if we are to have true religion at all it must come His way and not ours, for He said "Without me ye can do nothing." (Verse 5). So aside from Him there can be no spiritual progress whatsoever. I think they need to read again the teachings of Jesus to Nicodemus of the necessity of regeneration.

The modernist would have us believe that the doctrine of regeneration as taught by Christ ought to be obliterated, and that all that is reqired today is for one to just choose the right, turn over a new leaf, and that's all there is to it. Now if Jesus had said, Ye have chosen me, therefore I have chosen you, then there would be some ground for such a doctrine, but He didn't put it that way. I know a lot of folks would like for it to read that way, but it doesn't, hence there is no other alternative, and the sooner we recognize this fact the sooner the old-time power will return to the church and people will be really and truly saved.

Oh, yes, I know that there are those who will say that the fellow that still believes in the cross, the blood and kneeology is an obscurant—but I tell you true knowledge and education do not come as a result of human investigation and explanation alone, but when such investigation and exploration is made in recognition of the fact, that "all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are hidden in the mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ." But the modernist would have you discard the time-honored doctrine of Christian faith and set up in its place a social religion which is purely and simply a religion of the head and not of the heart. What we need today is religion that changes men rather than men that try to change religion. "Ye have not chosen me but I have chosen you." J. T. SISK.

OUR TEEN-AGE YOUTH AT THE HIGH POINT LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

Special arrangements have been made for the boys and girls, 14, 15, and 16 years old who will be attending the Training School at High Point College, June 26th-July 1st.

First, we have arranged that the courses will be the most attractive courses ever offered to a group of boys and girls of this age. All those who are 14 years old will take "Prophet Pioneers," which is a course in Bible study, and the mission study course, "Our Neighbors." "Prophet Pioneers" will be directed by Mr. Eugene A. Lamb, Greensboro, and "Our Neigbors" will be offered by Mrs. Curtis Koontz ,of Lexington ton.

Rev. H. W. Maier will direct a group of 15-year-old pupils in the project, "Adventures in Christian Living." Rev. Clyde Auman will direct the 15-year-old students in "Our Missionary and Educational Enterprises." All those who are 15 will take these two units.

Rev. Frank Shaffer, Morgantown, W. Va., a member of the Board of Christian Education, will lead the group of 16-year-old pupils in the unit, "The Bible in the Making.", Miss Maxine Taylor will direct the project listed as "Group Activities." All 16-year-old pupils will take these two courses.

Second, we have arranged that the living of these young people will be as wholesome as these six unit leaders can make it; that there will be plenty of time for fun and frolic as well as ample time for rest and sleep. We have planned that these days at the Training School will be days when pupils and group leaders will live together as wholesomely and as Christian as is possible.

We believe we have things so arranged that the boys and girls will do as their leaders desire them, and find the highest joy in so doing. We trust all the churches will send their teen-age boys and girls to us for the week of June 26th-July 1st. We hope to send them back to you enriched in life and character.

MRS. H. W. MAIER,
Supervisor of Youth Curriculum for the High Point School.

PROJECT TEACHING AT THE LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

Most of our religious education is formal instrution; yet we have known for a long time that "we learn-by doing;" we learn by experience. The churches which have had plenty of activity have grown and developed; children in the home who have freedom of action have developed when there has been the right direction given to it. In theory we have known for a long time that we should have more action in our religious education; we need more experience; our pupils must have various types of religious experience; they must experience their Christianity. Facts about Christianity do not make one a Christian, neither do facts about moral and ethical living make one necessarily moral or ethical. The person must experience morals; he must experience ethical living; he must experience Christ and His way of life. Christian living is a matter of Christianizing the heart, the mind, the feelings, the thoughts, the attitudes, and the conduct. In this process, formal instruction has its place, but this place is not primary; the experiences of the individual are primary; formal instruction is secondary.

Upon this thory of religious education the new YOUTH CURRICULUM for those 14, 15, and 16 years old at the Leadership Training School at High Point is based. The things which the pupils experience there will be primary; formal instruction secondary. Therefore, the group leaders will lead the pupils into all kinds of wholesome experiences. These group leaders will not give the pupils full free range of activity, then criticise them for making a mistake, but they will attempt ot so guide the experience of the youth that they will make no mistake in their choice of action.

Projects will be organized and carried forward by the groups; through these projects, the leaders will so guide the experience of the pupils to the end of life enrichment.

We trust the churches of the Conferences will give us a large group of boys and girls fourteen, fifteen and sixteen years of age, and we promise you that we will give to them the very best we have in the way of direction and training.

MRS. H. W. MAIER,
Supervisor of the New Youth Curriculum at High Point.

DON'T FORGET DR. McCULLOCH'S BIRTHDAY

It's June 24th, remember. And remember what you are asked to do on that day, or before it. Remember how much the HERALD has meant to you these years. And how much it has meant to the Conference, the Children's Home, the College, the Missionary activities, and anything else that can be counted in. And, having remembered it, thank Dr. McCulloch for making it all possible. It is not too much to say that the North Carolina Annual Conference is largely what it is today because of the HERALD. We owe it a very great debt. But the HERALD is very largely Dr. McCulloch. His personality is stamped on it. His very life is in it. So we owe the debt to him. And we must pay our debts, whether they happen to be financial or sentimental. A debt of gratitude is just as much a debt as a debt of money. "Owe no man anything but to love one another."

We hope Dr. McCulloch will live a long time. But when he does pass on, I am certain of one thing—there'll be lots of flowers. I know him well enough to know that he'd rather have the flowers now. So we'll change the slogan of the Florists' Association and say, "Don't say it with flowers; say it with subscriptions. And say it NOW!

REMEMBER: JUNE 24th IS DR. McCULLOCH'S BIRTHDAY. C. W. BATES.

LIVING LIFE OVER—A STORY

One of the speakers at the Southern Baptist Convention, in Washington, told a good story—it suggests a timely warning.

It seems that three citizens—one six, another four, and the other two years old—were exchanging ideas as to what they would do if they had the opportunity to live their lives over again.

Said citizen No. 1, aged six: "If I had my life to live over again, I should avoid acquiring the disagreeable habit of drinking castor oil."

Said citizen No. 2, aged four: "If I could have the privilege of living my life over again, I should certainly avoid forming the habit of eating spinach."

Said citizen No. 3, aged two: "Well, if I had the privilege of living my life over again, I should most assuredly choose to be a bottle baby."

"Why?" in unison queried citizens Nos. 1 and 2, aged six and four, respectively, of citizen No. 3, aged 2, "why would you want to be a bottle baby?"

"I should want to be a bottle baby," responded citizen No. 3, aged 2, "because I do not like to have smoke and ashes dropping in my eyes and mouth when I am taking my nourishment." L. K. L.

FINDING "HIM"

"I have been reading about holiness," said one of my friends to me the other day; "I do wish I could find it."

"Find it?" I said; "you mean, find HIM. Holiness is in Jesus. 'As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God'."

A week after my friend came to me with a radiant face: "I have found it in HIM."—Mark Guy Pearse.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Guilford Charge, Rev. D. D. Broome, Pastor

I visited Mitchell's Grove and Hickory Grove churches on this charge. We were at Mitchell's in the morning; the attendance was somewhat interfered with by a funeral, but the people gave good attention to the message. I heard talk here of building Sunday school rooms. I think it would be fine, as there are no class rooms at all. A good Sunday school is reported here and good interest in the work of the church.

At Hickory grove we found a beautiful brick church. It was built to replace the old church, burned some time ago. This church has both a beautiful exterior and interior. There are three small Sunday school rooms in the rear of the building which were overcrowded. Here we had a very good attendance and excellent attention to the message. Bro. Raper sleeps in the cemetery here.

The people speak well of Pastor Broome's ministry. They like him and appear to co-operate with him in his work. While not a great deal has yet been paid on the Conference interests or pastor's salary, still they are hopeful of coming out in good shape by Conference.

Those Area Stewards Meetings

We have been greatly pleased with the reports from the chairmen of these meetings. Nearly all chairmen held the meetings as requested. I have not heard from a few of the chairmen; I presume they held the meetings and that they were fairly successful. At many which were reported to me the meetings were voted a success and it was resolved to hold other meetings later in the year. The real financial condition of the pastoral charge was brought to light to those present. In some cases the stewards present were so ashamed of what they had done that they would not report the exact amounts raised, but resolved to go back home and try to do something worth while.

It was also brought out that at some of them the duty of stewardship was so presented that some some stewards caught a real vision of their task. It was found to be an excellent place where the task of the church steward could be presented in a most telling manner, and done not by the preacher, but by some steward telling how his church managed its finances.

Plan of Appointments

June 18—Mocksville Charge.

June 25—New Zion, a Circuit Rally; Denton at night.

July 2—Lincolnton, 11 a. m.; Fairfield, afternoon; Bessemer City at night. R. M. ANDREWS.

A CALL AND A CHALLENGE

"Henderson, N. C., June 11, 1933."

"Dear Mrs. Bates:

'I think the time has come for the Methodist Protestants of North Carolina to rise up and support Minnis, so he can carry on his missionary work in India. It would be a great calamity for both India and Minnis for him to come home for lack of funds. It does look like if Minnis and his family could give up home, friends, loved ones and the comforts of America to go to India to help Jesus save India, we could make a little sacrifice and support him while there.

"Mrs. Bates, am going to show my faith in Missions and in Minnis and in the Methodist Protestants in NoNrth Carolina by heading this list with a pledge of one hundred dollars for Minnis. I want you to appeal to the Methodist Protestants of North Carolina to join us in making this fund large enough to support Minnis, also large enough to build him a home in India. I hope every Methodist Protestant in North Carolina read Minnis' letter in the HERALD some time ago on how they were living in India. Remember, all we do for Minnis we do for Christ, the greatest Missionary this world ever knew.

"Mrs. Bates, I wish you much success in this work and in all the work you are doing for Christ.

"Yours for Christ,

E. C. KITTRELL."

This letter is printed, word for word, as it was written. It was written to me, because I have been asked to head up a movement to try to raise $1,000 for Minnis' salary. The Board of Missions is in desperate need, as you probably know. And whether Minnis is able to stay in India for another year will depend very largely on the response we make to this appeal. It is a challenge to our interest, as Mr. Kittrell says, in Minnis as well as in Missions. He represents us, is doing the work for us, in India. Will we support him? That is the question we must answer. Will you let me know what you will do?

LORD, TEACH US TO PRAY

"I will therefore that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands without wrath and doubting." (Ephesians 6:18.) "Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the spirit and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints." Every intelligent child of God is driven to say as we see conditions, I must pray, pray, pray. In her annual message to the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Carolina Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, a few days ago, Mrs. A. M. Gates, of Durham, president of the society, urged the members of the society to work and vote against repeal of the 18th Amendment. She said that the drys had one weapon never used by the wets; namely, prayer. She also counseled education of youth against the evils of liquor and reminded the society that the brewers are seeking to educate youth to drink. She pointed out that institutes for the cure of drunkenness had decreased from 200 before prohibition to 21 after 13 years of prohibition. The Woman's Missionary Society, said Mrs. Gates, must carry the spirit of fellowship into the whole world. So we see the work is great. We feel that much can be accomplished if we pray; but we hear someone say beer is already here. What can we do? Peter was already in prison, but prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains, and the keepers before the door kept the prison, but the Lord sent His angel and delivered him. Then again there was in a city a judge who feared not God nor regarded man. And there was a widow in that city and she asked himto avenge her of her adversary; he would not for a while, but afterwards he said, Though I fear not God nor regard man, yet because she troubleth me I will avenge her lest by her continual coming she weary me. And shall not God avenge His own who cry day and night unto Him? Be careful, for nothing, says Paul, but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your request be made known to God. We have the weapon to gain the victory. Will we use it? If we would only spend more time in prayer there would be more fullness of the Spirit's power in our work.

Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think according to the power that worketh in us , whatever else I do I must pray, pray, pray.

MARTHA PARSONS.

BELONGING TO CHRIST

The Rev. Thomas Kirkup said that in his boyhood days, when his brothers and he were setting out for a party, his mother would always say, "Now, boys, remember to whom you belong!"

They all knew the meaning of those words. The credit of the family had to be kept up. Nothing must be done by them to bring shame on their father and mother. "We belong to Christ. His Name is upon us. His honor is in our keeping. Remember to whom we belong!"

At the same meeting Mr. Kirkup told of a little girl aged eight years, who gave him a new name. "I can never remember your real name," said Betty to him, "so I always call you Mr. Cheer-up!"—Selected.

A STREAK OF SUNSHINE

"Well, Grandma," said a little boy, resting his elbows on the old lady's armchair, "what have you been doing here at the window all day long by yourself?"

"All I could," answered Grandma cheerily; "I have read a little and prayed a good deal, and then looked out at the people. There's one little girl, Arthur, that I have learned to watch for. She has sunny brown hair, and her eyes have the same sunny look in them, and I wonder every day what makes her look so bright. Ah, here she comes now."

"The girl with the brown apron on?" he cried. "Why, I know that girl. That's Susie Moore, and she has a dreaful hard time, grandma."

"Has she?" said grandma. "I would like to know where she gets all that brightness from, then?"

"I'll ask her," said Arthur, promptly, and to grandma's surprise, he raised the window and called:

"Susie, O Susie, come up here a minute; grandma wants to see you!"

The brown eyes opened wide in surprise, but the little maid turned at once and came in.

"Grandma wants to know, Susie," exclaimed the boy, "what makes you look so bright all the time."

"Why I have to," said Susie; "you see, papa's been sick a long while, and mamma is tired out with nursing, and baby's cross with her teeth, and if I don't be bright who would be?"

"Yes, yes, I see," said dear old grandma, putting her arms around the little streak of sunshine. "That's God's reason for things; they are because somebody needs them. Shine on, little sun; there couldn't be a better reason for shining than because it is dark at home."—The Sunbeam.

BEAUTIFUL JANE

It isn't likely any one would have thought that Jane Crosley was beautiful to look upon. Freckled-faced, pug-nosed, red-haired, much too tall for her age, awkward in her every movement, she hardly deserved to be called good-looking.

But Jane didn't know it. She was as happy as she could be for "looks." Because mere looks meant little to her just then.

Carefree and jolly she started out one fine summer's mornning to attend an outing, held in a grove a mile or two from her home. There she met some friends and they had a splendid time during the forenoon. The great lunch baskets were finally unpacked, the contents spread upon the tables, and every one partook of the "eats." With a real appetite, Jane did justice to her share.

After dinner, some one proposed a game of "hide-and-go-seek." Jane was "it." But soon she "spied" every one, and another girls had to take her place and hide her eyes by a great oak tree. All dashed away, intent upon finding the best hiding places in the vicinity. Jane, always expert in such things, spied a pile of lunch baskets near the "base." She thought it'd be splendid to hide so near, and be able to dash out and "free herself" just as soon as "it" moved far enough from the base.

She cuddled down behind the great basket and waited for "It" to finish counting. While she waited, eager and breathless, a lady passed near by, looked at her, and said in a tone that reached Jane's ears:

"Humph! If my children were as ugly and Jane Crosley, I'd be ashamed to take them away from home!"

Instantly Jane forgot all about the game. She just stared after the woman. Was it true? Was she really homely? She sat as though stunned and rooted to the ground. She could not move for a few minutes, as the terrible words sank in her heart and brain. Then, slowly, with hanging head she stole away from her play group, searched out the automobile in which she had come, and crawled inside where no one could see her. There she lay on the seat, and sobbed and sobbed.

She did not come out the car until it was time to go home. The terrible fear that she was really so homely haunted her every moment of the day. She was so quqiet that evening that her mother asked her if she was not feeling well. That night she dreamed of the woman who had spoken those words—and of herself as a hideously ugly, old hag. She awoke tired and listless. The world which had seemed so bright and sunny but twenty-four hours before, was gloomy now. Jane didn't care much to live any more.

She went about her chores automatically, saying little. Her mother and father noticed that the usual cheery smile wasn't on her face an ymore, and questioned her, but she would say little. Finally, her mother insisted that she tell what was wrong, and Jane sobbed out the whole terrible story.

Her mother sympathized with her, and told her not to mind what Mrs. Gragg had said; that her own girls weren't a bit prettier than Jane. But Jane wasn't to be comforted so easily. * * * Before this time she had cared little what the mirror had showed her. She had been happy and ,that had sufficed. Now all was different. She knew she was homely, and she wanted to be beautiful.

Days and weeks passed, Jane remained unhappy, self-conscious, and silent. Her parents became worried about her. Her mother tried every means to comfort her, to arouse her from her dejejcted condition. But Jane, though she tried to shake off the haunting thought, could not cheer up. She was homely, but she wanted, above everything she could wish, to be beautiful.

She did not want to go away from home, even to Sunday school. Her mother insisted, however, and she went; but she had little to say and hurried home as soon as possible.

One day her mother called her into her room. "Jane," she said kindly, "tell mother what you would like most of all to have or to be."

Janes was surprised. Then quickly she said, "To be beautiful like other girls, and have folks say I'm beautiful. But what's the use? I'm not, and never can be, and—"

"Now wait, dear. I think we can fix things up. Mother has thought of a way to make you beautiful!"

"Oh, mother!" Jane's eyes grew wide ,and there was for the first time in weeks a glad light of hope on her countenance. "Do you mean it—really?"

"Yes, I think we can cause people to say you are beautiful. Listen—"

Mother and daughter, with heads close together conversed in low tones for a time. Gradually, Jane's countenance took on a glad glow, and her eyes were brighter when they had finished. Finally they knelt by the bed and had a little prayer for strength and guidance, imploring the Heavenly Father to help in their quest for beauty.

"I'll try it, mother," said Jane; "if you say it'll work, it will."

"It will work, dear," the mother said reassurnigly.

Grandmother Perkins was making her way slowly and painfully along the street next afternoon. Her "rheumatiz' had been unusually bad of late and walking was difficult. At a street crossing she paused and looked uncertainly up and down. She half feared to venture across, because of the traffic. Just then a cheery voice greeted her from behind:

"Hello, Grandma Perkins! Let me help you over. I'm going down your way and will walk with you."

"Well, well, Jane," said the old lady: "I'll be so glad if you will help me. I'm gettin' old and kind-a stiff, an' walkin' don't go like it did when I was your age."

When Jane left the old woman at her gate, there was a smile on the latter's face and a light feeling in Jane's heart. "She didn't say I'm homely," thought the girl as she hurried home.

"My, my, but that girl's dear—an' so purty, too," murmured grandma to herself.

But Jane didn't hear it, of course. She had gone on down the street, and just then was asking a neighbor lady if she couldn't please carry one of her baskets. "You've got two real heavy ones, Mrs. Benson, and I haven't any, so you might as well let me help you."

"My, that's nice of you, Jane," said Mrs. Benson with a smile as she glanced at the beaming face of the "homely" girl. "Maybe I can do something for you some day."

"It's all right, mother," whispered Jane as she hurried into the house. "I got two smiles anyhow!"

Mrs. Jennings, a neighbor, was telling another woman that she "wanted to go shopping, but there was no one to keep the children." She was genuinely surprised, fifteen minutes later, when Jane rapped timidly at her kitchen door, and asked if she might take little Johnnie and tiny May along over to play in her yard that afternoon.

"Well, of all things!" exclaimed Mrs. Jennings. "If that isn't just too sweet of you for anything! I was just wishing I had someone to tend those youngsters while I went to the store. I'll give you 50 cents for your trouble, dear."

"No you won't!" said Jane emphatically. "I'd just like to give you fifty cents for letting me do it—if I had the money."

Little Johnnie and May told their mother they'd never had such a "goodest time" in their young lives as that afternoon "wif dat boo'ful dirl what played wif us."

"Mother!" Jane almost shouted it. "Mind you—Johnnie Jennings said I'm 'boo'ful'—what do you know about that?"

Mother smiled. "I'm thinking other folks will be saying it too, pretty soon, dear. Just keep on."

Jane did keep on. Her bright eyes grew brighter. Her face was almost perpetually wreathed in smiles that drew smiles from other faces as a magnet draws needles to itself. She schooled herself to see things to be done for others.

Folks noticed the change in Jane. And of course they talked about it. "Yes, she's a fine girl," Mrs. Troy declared to Mrs. Henderson. "My girl, Sylvia, says she wants to be like Jane when she gets as old. Why, do you know—" And the good lady smiled as she lowered her voice, "my Sylvia even went so far as to say she hopes she can get freckles on her nose like Jane has!"

"Well, freckles on one's nose is no disgrace," declared Mrs. Henderson. "I'd a thousand times rather have a girl with freckles than one with a face smeared with red paint. And Jane has a lot more than freckles to commend her to others. She's one of the sweetest girls I've ever known. You just don't see her freckles when she's around. You see only her good deeds, her smiles, and her willing unselfishness. You can be glad, Mrs. Troy, if your Sylvia wants to be like her. I know, for I've lived near her all her life."

These good souls never knew the joy their words were causing in the fluttering heart of a red-haired, freckled-faced, awkward girl who, just at that moment, was sitting in the shade of some lilac bushes not ten yards away, reading.

A wave of gratitude swept through her soul, and she whispered "O, dear God, I thank You that mother could show me the way to—to be beautiful!"

And "Beautiful Jane," she's known to this day by her friends, has never forgotten how to increase her beauty, nor to win other folks' smiles and cheer their hearts.—Our Boys and Girls.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

Topic for June 18, 1933

HOW CAN WE IMPROVE OUR TIME?

Scripture Text, Eph. 5:15, 16.

An Old Question

What can we do with our leisure time to make it more profitable to us? Daily we are confronted with this question. Daily we see individuals who have never solved this problem. The people are careless and don't care how they use their time and energy. Those who have a proper appreciation of life and its opportunities for improvement are not greatly troubled with this problem. We as true Christian Endeavorers must put forth all efforts to improve our time and that of others also. We are indebted to our religian for the fact that one day of leisure was provided for us in every seven by our Creator.

Be a Friend of Books

Books should be our close friends. That is, good books. If we spend our spare time reading good literature we are not only making good use of the present time but for future time. Many things we possess can soon be lost, but what we learn can never be lost or taken from us. We all do not have the opportunity to meet a great number of our learned and talented people. If we read what they write we can be brought in close contact with them and their store of valuable information. An hour spent with a good book is more profitable than if spent in riding up and down our highways with no definite aim in view. Many of our young people say they don't like to read. They read with no aim. They are looking for nothing definite. Anyone can cover space in a book.

Christian Service

The proper use of our time would help much in solving the problems of modern society. Absence of the Christian ideal in the family, state or nation always leads to a waste of energy and dissipation of time. The increase of scientific and mechaical invention and labor-saving devices, the hours of toil have been diminished. This time could be used in Kingdom service. The churches that provide playgrounds and libraries have made a great step in training their young people in improving their leisure time.

There are many different ways of improving our time. A line of a familiar song has great advice if we will follow it: "Make friends of God's children, help those who are weak, and forgetting in nothing His blessing to seek." "Speak oft with the Lord," this phrase must be remembered by all Christians.

Suitable Songs

More Like the Master; Sweet Peace, the Gift of God's Love; He Leadeth Me; Somebody Did a Golden Deed; The Last Mile of the Way; There Are Lonely Hearts to Cherish.

Suitable Poetry

God holds the key of all unknown, and I am glad;
If other hands should hold the key,
Or if He trusted it to me, I might be sad.
Enough; this covers all I want; and so I rest;
And what I can not, He can, see,
And in His care I'll surely be forever blest.

NOTICE, PASTORS OF HIGH POINT DISTRICT

Will you please set aside some time in the morning or evening service next Sunday to give publicity to the coming Leadership Training School to be held at High Point College June 26th-July 1st? Mr. Whitehead has listed the courses to be offered in the Standard Leadership Training Department. Last week I listed the courses to be offered in the Young People's Department. Gather together the information pertaining to the Leadership Training School to be found in the recent issues of the Herald, and bring this to the attention of your people Sunday.

The following ministers are in the High Point District; they will please take notice: Rev. D. D. Brome, of the Guilford Charge; Rev. R. I. Farmer, Rev. J. D. Williams, Rev. S. W. Taylor, Rev. C. H. Hill, Rev. D. R. Williams, Rev. H. F. Surratt, Rev. T. G. Madison, Rev. H. W. Bell, Rev. Robert Short, Rev. H. W. Maier, Rev. C. G. Isley, Rev. O. C. Loy, and Rev. E. A. Bingham.

We suggest the following methods of getting the Leadership Training School before your people:

1. Search the recent issues of the Herald for information.
2. Spend at least 15 minutes in some public service next Sunday to get this information before your people.
3. Appoint some person who has attended former schools to speak of the benefit derived from attending such a school.
4. Appoint a registrar to register your people for the school.
5. Be absolutely sold on the Leadership Training idea yourself; then sell it to your people.
6. Ask your Sunday schools and Woman's Auxiliaries to send representatives to the Training School.

Rev. Clyde Auman, Graham, N. C., treasurer of the Council of Religious Education, is in need of money. According to the size of your school or Christian Endeavor Societies you are to contribute to this work in our Conference. Will you please make arrangements Sunday to have this apportionment taken care of by your church or churches. This is highly important. You may send the money to me, to Mr. Auman, or to Dr. Brown, of Reidsville; it will all be used for the work regardless.

Two things I am asking the pastors of the High Point District to do:

1. Give publicity and actually secure students for the Training School.
2. Send in your money, the apportionment from your church, for the N. C. Council of Religious Education.

MRS. H. W. MAIER,
Director, High Point District.

WORDS OF APPRECIATION

I am in such hearty accord with the idea of showering Dr. McCulloch with subscriptions on his birthday, June 24th, that I just must express myself. And this is the kind of a birthday gift where it is indeed more blessed to give than to receive, for in the giving, the giver gets more than he gives. Think of it—you get 50 copies of a big love letter from those you have known in other days and those who are still your friends. You get 50 copies full of inspiration that will make you feel like doing more for your church and for the kingdom. You get 50 copies filled with information of the highest type—not about murders and prize fights and dances and such trash, but real information about real people who are trying to live real lives and who are doing real things.

Surely all this is worth two dollars and more. I am so anxious to have a part in this birthday shower that I am not waiting for June 24, but am sending in two half-year subscriptions right now. Come on, folks, and let's do a good job of it. Instead of giving the editor a little shower, let's give him a deluge.

Clothing and Other Gifts

The gifts we report this week came in as donations at the Anniversary and Home-Coming: Lemons and sugar for lemonade, 3 pair shoes, 8 dresses, 1 bag of flour, 12 towels, 10 wash cloths, 4 sheets, 6 porch rockers, 2 sitting room chairs, and 3 lawn benches.

Anniversary and Home-Coming

June 8th, 1933, will long remain a red letter day in the history of the Children's Home. The attendance was good, the speeches were of a high order, the singing was fine, the dinner was bountiful and all in attendance seemed happy and generous in every way toward the Home and its children. The people emptied their dinner boxes and gave all that was left from the dinner to us, and we feasted that evening and the next day on what remained over and above the picnic dinner. They also left liberally of their money. When it is all in it will amount to something over $500.00. We know of some more on the way, so will report the total amount next week. We cannot report this in itemized amounts as we do the regular offerings, because the greater part of it was contributed through the chest which stood in the yard last Thursday.

We appreciate the work of the committee in working out such splendid plans for the day. We also appreciate the help Dr. C. W. Bates gave in doing the advertising. We thank all who helped with the program, and all who contributed in any way to the success of the day.

Now if we can only succeed in getting our Sunday schools not to make the usual let-up in offerings for the summer months we will come up to Conference in better condition this fall. A MONTHLY OFFERING from EVERY SUNDAY SCHOOL in the Conference will turn the trick.

Yours in the Master's service,
A. G. DIXON, Supt.

A SPECIAL REQUEST

Each summer we permit the most of the children who have been in the Children's Home for more than one year to go back to their old communities and visit friends and relatives. They usually go for two weeks. But we have several here who have nowhere to go.

Last fall at Conference a brother minister suggested that no doubt there are families who would be glad to take two of such children for the two weeks.

Beginning with July 6th and 7th, we are permitting all children to go home who can. Are there families who will take two girls or two boys for two weeks and thus help to give all of them a little outing away from the Home? If you will, then please write us just as soon as you read this, and then don't be disappointed if we cannot send two to you; for we may not have enough to go around.

Please let us hear from you promptly, as time is short. Thank you.

Yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON, Supt.

GET BUSY

If you have a job to do,
Get busy!
Stimulate the best in you,
Get busy!
Better labor than to lean,
Rather share than to be mean,
If you want a life serene,
Get busy!

If you have a bill to pay,
Get busy!
Don't delay another day,
Get busy!
Unpaid debts are just a pest,
They bring worry and unrest,
Promptitude is much the best,
Get busy!

If there's hunger in the land,
Get busy!
Give with generous, willing hand,
Get busy!
Try today some good to spread,
Cast away all useless dread,
If you want to get ahead,
Get busy!

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Kistlers, Cleveland Charge.—The annual memorial services were held at this church Sunday, June 4.

Our pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, preached at 11 o'clock to a very large congregation. His subject was "The Tragedy of Looking Backward." He especially warned us of the danger of putting business before God. A quartette from Shelby rendered some special music which was greatly enjoyed by all.

Many visitors were present to place flowers on the graves of loved ones. The graves are beautiful with flowers and this all that we can do after they are gone, but I wonder if we scatter the flowers of kindness and love while they are living as we should?

Our Sunday school is doing just fine, with a good attendance each Sunday. Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

REPORTER.

◆

Clarkes Chapel, Weaverville.—In some respects the work is moving on nicely. But in others not so well. We have a good Sunday school and Christian Endeavor society.

Plans are being made for a singing school which we hope will mean a great deal to the church and Sunday school.

Yesterday was observed as Decoration Day after which Brother Cowan preached a memorial sermon, using as his subject, "The Higher Gate." It was the best sermon he has delivered at this church since he has been serving this work. The sermon was followed by administering the Lord's Supper.

Dinner on the grounds and singing in the afternoon. Brother Cowan announced that the County Singing convention would meet with us the fifth Sunday in July; and the third Suday in August the Eller Reunion would be held at this place.

The Rev. Ben Eller will deliver the mesage at the 11:00 o'clock service.

Friendship, Mount Hermon Charge.—Although there has not been a report from this church in some time, the work has been making progress.

Sunday, being our annual Memorial Day, we had a large crowd and a wonderful program. At the 11 o'clock service special singing was furnished by Erwin Isley, Roy Euliss, Erwin Edwards, and Garland Isley. The memorial address was by Dr. H. M. Roland, superintendent of city school, Burlington, N. C.

In the afternoon, Miss Mae Patterson led the devotionals. All of the officers were reelected. Special singing was furnished by three quartettes of Burlington, sponsored by Miss Lula Riddle.

Mrs. Frank Robinson and son, of Richmond, Va., are visiting Mrs. Robinson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Patterson.

Mrs. O. C. Loy, who has been sick for some time, was reported not any better Sunday.

Our pastor, Rev. L. E. Mabry, is planning to move into the newly-bought parsonage in a few days.

Mr. Washington Johnson has been seriously ill for the past two weeks.

REPORTER.

◆

Love's Grove, Midland Charge.—We are proud of our small band of co-workers and our pastor, Rev. W. D. Reed, who has been doing some good preaching for us. May the Lord bless him.

Our Sunday school is still growing in attendance and interest. The young people are taking considerable interest in the church work.

We are planning to hold our Children's Day exercise Sunday, June 11.

Our church can not prosper without our blessed Master's help. We ought to look to God for more grace and guidance. We may think we can just go on in our way, setting our Lord and Savior aside, but let's please stop a minute and give it a brief thought; then we will be more humble to our fellowman.

The world today needs more of the old-time religion. Let's not forsake Christ, so when the last mile of life comes we will not have to go alone. That will be one great consolation.

Our next stewards' circuit meeting will be held at Mill Grove the first Sunday afternoon in July. Officials are urged to be present.

We ask for your prayers that we may ever push forward in the Master's service.

Hobbs Chapel.—Many readers of the Herald know that Rev. R. L. Hethcox can preach, but I must say that he reached the hill-top yesterday. His subject was "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye can not enter the kingdom of heaven." Bro. Hethcox said the reason Peter made so many failures was because he was regenerated but not converted. Poor Peter trusted in himself, he thought he could do grea things. Jesus tried to show him that he must be converted and become as a little child—humble, meek, have no guile, love, and faith. As he preached, the writer feels safe to say, many prayers were uttered, "Lord, help us to become as little children." How unlike children we are! We get angry, but we can't forget. We set ourselves above others and thank God we are not like other folks. We try to get the mote out of the oher fellow's eye, bu we can't see the beam in our own. We think the other fellow should treat us right, but how about our side? We want God to forgive us, but how about us forgiving the other fellow? We expect other folks to love and respect us, but how about us loving them? If we do not forgive other folks for their sins, God says He will not forgive us. If we do not love folks, whom we have seen, God says we can not love Him, whom we have not seen. If we want children to love and respect us, we must love and respect them. Some of us would be poor mortals, indeed, if we did not have children about us daily to lead us in the paths of humility, meekness, love and faith. Aunt Het says: "When I say, Lord, help me to love my enemies, I say Amen right away." We are inclined to be worse than Aunt Het; we say Amen before we say, Lord, help us to love our neighbors.

There will be a Home-Coming on Greensville Charge the fifth Sunday in July at Wesley's Chapel. Dr. Andrews will be here at that time. Each one is expected to bring an offering: money, ham, chicken, or any kind of produce. Your name will be called, and you are supposed to take your offering (money) to the table in "nigger" style. You will be given credit for any offering that you bring. If the preacher should get a ham, I hope he will tell you readers about it.

Our special meeting begins the fourth Sunday in August. Rev. J. Clyde Auman, of Graham, will be our help. Bro. Auman has been with us before, and I am sure everyone on the entire charge will welcome him back to Virginia. Pray for him, for us, and for the unsaved.

Mount Pleasant, North Davidson.—The fourth Sunday in May the Memorial Association held its annual meeting. Bro. H. L. Powell delivered the morning sermon, taking for his text Heb. 9:22.

After dinner the people assembled at the cemetery, where a few songs were sung by Misses Auvilla and Pauline Hedgecock and prayer by Mr. H. L. Powell.

Mr. G. H. Jones, of High Point, delivered a very splendid memorial address in the afternoon. The day was enjoyed by everyone.

On June 11th a splendid Children's Day program was given by the children of this Sunday school, directed by Misses Ruth Green and Treva Reid. Beautiful music was rendered by the Murphy quartet from Bethany Reformed church.

We were very sorry that our pastor could not be with us Sunday afternoon and night. He was kept away by the serious illness of his mother. Sunday night Dr. S. W. Taylor filled Bro. Loy's pulpit and delivered a wonderful sermon from Ephesians 3:16.

Mr. Paul Green, a member of this church, and Miss Bessie Bundy were united in marriage May 27 by the groom's pastor, Rev. O. C. Loy. Their many friends wish them a long, happy life.

Bethesda.—The second Sunday in May we observed Mother's Day with 224 present for Sunday school. On account of the absence of our pastor, Dr. Brannock from Lexington had charge of the 11 o'clock service. He gave us a good Mother's Day talk. He talked on the mother of Moses, how she had faith to believe that the baby Moses would be cared for. Hannah's faith in asking God for a son, the mother of Jesus, and the mothers of today, your mother and mine. We are always glad to have Dr. Brannock with us. The Men's Bible Class furnished the songs for the service, which was well rendered.

The fourth Sunday in May our pastor, Dr. Maier, was with us and preached a very inspiring sermon. His main thought was "What Am I Worth to My Nation, My Community, My Home, and My Church, and What Is the Church Worth to Me?"

On Thursday, June 1, we met and had a covered dish supper which was enjoyed by all present, after which we assembled in the church and Dr. Maier gave a good talk. His thought for the night was "Not What We See With Our Eyes and Hear With Our Ears, But What We See and Hear Through Our Eyes and Ears." He said, however, our hearts would depend on what we see and hear.

Today, the second Sunday in June, our pastor preached on "Remembering Jesus," after which the Lord's Supper was administered to the largest crowd this reporter ever remembers seeing at this church.

The fourth Sunday in June we will have our annual Home-Coming with Children's Day in the morning. Picnic dinner will be served on the grounds. In the afternoon there will be a number of speeches. We invite everybody to come and spend the day with us, and especially do we wish every one of ex-pastors can be with us, for we love them all.

We sympathize with Mrs. R. J. Wagner and family who received word last Sunday morning that her son, Everette, had died in New Mexico.

MRS. DAVID D. BRINKLEY, Reporter.

First Church, Lexington.—Our church is still going forward. Due to the warm weather of the summer months and the approaching vacation season, our attendance has fallen off somewhat, but we still have a goodly number attending all the services.

We have just bought 150 new song books for our Sunday school. Much interest is being shown in the musical programs of all the services.

Our class meeting of last Wednesday evening was well attended. Our class leader, Mr. C. L. Hedrick, brought us an inspiring message.

Our pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, filled his appointment at 11 o'clock and again at 7:00 o'clock. At the morning service he used as his subject, "Why I Believe in the Church." This he discussed from several standpoints.

Our young people's C. E. is progressing very well. On Friday night they plan an outing in the form of a weiner roast.

The Ladies' Auxiliary will meet Thursday evening with Mrs. Phonse Bean.

Our church is proud to announce that three of its members were among the graduating class of the local high school. We hope that they will find it convenient to enter High Point College in the fall. The graduates were Misses Margaret Lee Swink and Georgia Etta Davis and Mr. Paul Hill.

We are very sorroy that our church treasurer, Mr. J. J. Mallard, is confined to his home due to illness. The church is united in wishing for him an early recovery.

REPORTER.

Winston-Salem, First.—A very fine recognition service for young people who have graduated this year and for those who have been promoted with honor was held at our church yesterday morning. As the names of the young people were called they stood and the citations of honor were read by Dr. Pritchard. When all had stood the pastor extended his congratulations and then asked all those in the congregation who wished to congratulate these young people to stand. While all stood the pastor led in prayer. Then Dr. Pritchard preached an approriate sermon from the text, "Learn of me." The young people who have graduated from the Richard J Reynolds High School are: Margaret Smith, Archie Smith, Carey Wright, Wilmer Martin, Frances Voss, Frances Tise, Catherine Holder, and Bessie Maye Burns, the former winning a scholarship to High Point College in competition with 60 or more young people and the latter graduating with honors. Those graduating from the Vienna High School were Virginia Stroble and Gladys Kelly. Those graduating from the North Junior High School were Frances Braswell, Lillian Brown and Lollie Mickey. Those finishing Calvin Wiley graded school were Billie Hester, Allen Carroll and Ruth Smith. Those promoted with highest honor are: Helen Contos, Franklin Braswell, and Vertie Mae Spry, the former being elected to membership in the national honor society. Those promoted with honor are: Donald Hartzog, Wade Moser, Sadie Hauser, Bettie Joe Hauser and Ruby Groce.

We are sorry to report that Mrs. Russell Mooney is very ill; an early recovery is hoped for her.

Rev. C. H. Whitaker has been confined to his home for quite some time. He has been missed a great deal from the services and we hope he will again be able to worship with us soon.

Th fourth Sunday in June will be observed as Children's Day. The services will begin at 10:30 instead of the usual hour, 11. This is done in order to keep everybody for the program, and the program will cover right much time also. Mrs. Roy Hauser is chairman of the committee for the Children's Day program. Mrs. Hauser is a very capable worker and we know she is going to finish this task with a big success.

Miss Margaret Smith has been ill for about two weeks, but is improving nicely. She is out of bed again; we hope she will be well soon.

Miss Pauline Tise has recovered somewhat from her illness and is going about now.

PAULINE BRANSON, Reporter.

Henderson.—Since last writing a number of interesting things have happened in our church.

Perhaps at the head of the list in importance comes the renovating of the church, made possible by the bequest of Mrs. A. E. Smerdon, who died last summer. Under the chairmanship of L. R. Gooch, who is always an untiring, conscientious and wise leader in our building and remodelling enterprises, the church has been marvelously improved. The panelled wood which had grown very dark and unattractive under the accumulation of more than a quarter century's furnace smoke and dust was cleaned, and is as lovely as when new. The walls have a fresh coat of ivory paint—and, best of all, the antiquated lighting system has been changed for indirect lighting, which causes no glare to annoy sensitive eyes.

A very nice innovation which we found Mr. Gerringer had provided for us last Sunday, was the publication of weekly church bulletins They are very attractive leaflets, containing, besides the order of service for the day, announcements of the activities of the church for the following week, and also items of interest to the congregation.

Two new members have joined the church since the last report.

We were glad to see Miss Agnes Harris in her place in church today after a long absence; also Miss Mary Young, Mrs. O. O. Young and Eleanor Young, Mrs. R. M. Andrews, Miss Mabel Harris, and Miss Page Gooch were visitors for the Sunday morning service.

On Sunday night, June 4th, Rev. J. T. Bowman was the guest speaker at the Young People's Service. There was a splendid attendance at this service of both young and older people. Mrs. H. A. Jordan has organized a young people's choir, and she is doing splendid work with them.

The Children's Day service is to be held tonight. Misses Helen Hayes and Alice Faulkner, High Point Colelge alumnae, have charge of the exercises.

Miss Elizabeth Fox, our choir director, is in Asheville attending the annual convention of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs. Miss Fox is preident of the local B. P. W., district chairman, and state counsellor.

Among those who went from here to the Children's Home for the anniversary were: Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Kittrell and Millie Kittrell, Dr. and Mrs. Gerringer and Sara Lou, Mr. G. B. Harris, Mrs. J. R. Lovepheus, Mrs. Harry Powell, Miss Agnes Harris, Miss Mattie Hayes, Mrs. O. O. Young, and Miss Mary Young.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Charge.—First Sunday evening Rev. P. E. Bingham filled his appointment; at this service we had a splendid quartet by Misses Mary Green, Helen Fowler, Mary Virginia Hawkins and Mr. Leo Pittard. Our pastor delivered a wonderful message.

Mr. C. F. Hawkins, the class leader, held prayer service the first Sunday morning. At this time Mr. Leo Pittard delivered an inspiring address.

Our superintendent called on Mrs. Claude Hawkins to make a talk in Sunday school last fourth Sunday.

Miss Evelyn Hawkins, one of the C. E. Society members, welcomed other members of the society at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Hawkins, Saturday evening, June 10. Refreshments were served.

Miss Mary Virginia Hawkins has been spending a few days with her aunt, Miss Rhoda Lucas.

Mr. Raymond Hawkins was the week-end guest of his mother, Mrs. C. M. Hawkins.

Rev. P. E. Bingham and Mr. Sim Glascow, were the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Pittard Sunday.

We were glad to have Mrs. J. B. O'Briant's step-son worship with us Sunday.

Mr. Wyatte Hawkins, Miss Ethel Hawkins, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Carpenter and little daughter, Margie Ann, motored to Norfolk Sunday.

Please bear in mind the fifth Sunday in July the district Rally will be observed at our church. Come; you are welcome.

Benediction by Rev. A. G. Dixon, D. D.

On Sunday, June 11, Children's Day was observed under the direction of the program committee, Mrs. W. T. Kiser and Mrs. C. B. McCommons. The children rendered a beautiful and inspiring program consisting of songs, recitations and drills. We are proud of the interest our Juniors, Intermediates and Seniors are taking in church work, and we are praying for them daily and hope that in some way we may be able to lift them on so they may do more for our Master and for the community in which they reside.

On Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock the Senior C. E. Society presented a well-prepared program. The pastor presented awards to several who were winners in a contest recently finished. He also presented the full class with testaments.

The Ladies' Aid, Circle No. 2, met Monday evening at 7:30 with Mrs. Eva Leutz with six members and one visitor present. After all business was transacted a social hour was enpoyed. Refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene McLaurin are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter on Sunday. June 11.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Love and family have our deepest sympathy in the death of Mr. Love's mother, and our prayers go out to them.

MRS. X. E. GRAYSON, Reporter.

Charlotte.—After an absence of three weeks the congregation was delighted to greet our pastor, Rev. G. H. Hendry in the pulpit at both services. For the morning sermon he spoke on the theme, "The Transiency of Tears," using as a text the words of the psalmist, "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

In the evening service he spoke on "The Rediscovery of Faith," using as a text Christ's words, "Where is your faith?"

Mr. Hendry has just returned from Tampa, Florida, where he conducted an evangelistic meeting at Nebraska Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He reports a successful meeting. Mr. Hendry was accompanied by his wife and daughter, Miss Louise Hendry. On the way home they stopped for a few days to visit Mr. Hendry's parents in Perry, Florida. They were accompanied home by Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Johnson, of Clearwater, Florida.

Our congregation voted to unite in the union evening services of the churches in the Elizabeth sectio to be held in Independence Park. Other churches in the union are Caldwell Memorial Presbyterian, St. Martin's Episcopal, Hawthorne Lane Methodist, Saint John's Baptist and Myers Park Moravian.

At the meeting of the young people's Christian Endeavor Society at 7:15 Sunday evening, Miss Rachel Tadlock, who recently graduated from Oakhurst High School was the leader and discussed the topic, "What Shall We Do With Our Education?"

By mistake the names of Miss Margaret Walter, who graduated from Tech High School, and Miss Mary Neal Yandle, who graduated from Oakhurst High School, were omitted from the list of graduates as given last week.

Circle No. 1 of the Woman's Auxiliary will meet on Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 with Mrs. Herbert Garrison at her home on Kentucky avenue.

The Willing Workers' Circle will meet on Tuesday evening at eight o'clock with Mrs. Leon Blake at her home on Matheson avenue

The Workers' Council of the Sunday school will meet Wednesday evening immediately following the prayer service. Some important matters will be attended to and every officer and teacher is urged to be present.

The many friends of Mrs. G. P. Younginer, who underwent a serious operation at the Mery Hospital last week, will be pleased to learn that she is recovering satisfactorily. We earnestly hope that she may soon be able to be back in the church service. We miss her very much, as she is one of our most faithful workers.

The annual Cradle Roll Day service will be held on Sunday morning, June 25, at eleven o'clock. A special program will be given and babies will be baptized at this time.

Rockingham.—Sunday, June 11, Rev. C. W. Saunders took his text from the 43rd verse of the 13th chapter of St. Matthew: "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their father. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear." We are very proud of our Sunday school. We have 107 on roll. Most of these are children. We are hoping the older ones will take more interest.

For the evening service Rev. Saunders, took his text from the 14th verse of the 3rd chapter of St. John: "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up." The attendance was not so good, due to bad weather.

Children's Day will be held here the first Sunday in July. We are endeavoring to get up a good program.

A quarterly conference was called and Mr. W. M. Jenkins was granted license to preach.

LOYALTY LEAGUE

Our Loyalty League grows, though the list this week is not so large as that of last week. The enrollment from Mocksvile charge would have been reported earlier but for oversight on my part. My apologies to Mocksville. The enrollments to be reported this week follow:

Mocksville Charge: Rev. G. B. Ferree, Mrs. G. B. Ferree.

Spring Church Charge: Mrs. H. E. Vassar, J. J. Massey.

Shiloh Charge: J. W. Walser, H. W. Shoaf, Mrs. H. W. Shoaf.

Alamance Charge: J. A. Burgess.

Junior League: Sulon Ferree, Ralph Ferree, Agness Ferree (all of Mocksville Charge).

We are very grateful for this list, and it is our faith that the enrollment from some of these charges has not yet been completed. One pastor writes today, informing us of enrollments at one of his churches. We hope to have this list to report by next week. Another pastor says that his church hopes to enroll 100. Watch for this report! An interested layman who has already enrolled his entire family, has asked for 30 pledge cards. And did he get them! We'll be watching the mails for returns, too. He'll get results if they can be had.

The Loyalty League can be made a power in the Conference. But it will take the personal contact to do it. We earnestly covet the fullest co-operation of every one in this special June effort. And let us urge again that the League be made a matter of much prayer.

"Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it."

If our people will only rally in this emergency, and do the MUCH or the LITTLE that they are able to do, and put the strength of the Conference back of the college, they will sow for a rich harvest. I understand that the college has more applications for students than it has had in any other year up to this period. Surely we must give to this growing school our fullest and most steadfast support.

JOIN THE LOYALTY LEAGUE?

HUMANISM ON PAPER

Humanism used to be a good subject for parlor and dinner table discussions. Few people knew what it actually was, or where literary Humanism left off and religious Humanism began. Nor did Humanism's expounders get together and codify their beliefs for popular enlightenment. Rev. Charles Francis Potter, one time Baptist, Unitarian and Universalist, hired Stanway Hall in Manhattan (Time, October 21, 1929) and still preaches therein, but Professor Irving Babbitt taught something different, and Dr. Paul Elmer More on religious grounds denied them both.

Last week, for the first time, the religious Humanists were on common ground. After discussing many questions (by letter) they had drawn up, signed and circulated a manifesto containing their articles of faith. More and more Humanists are to read the manifesto, sign it, make suggestions which may perhaps be incorporated after due consideration. Vague as it still may be, Humanism may now be said to stand as follows:

The Universe is self-existing, not created.

Man is a part of nature, product of his culture, his environment, his social heritage. The traditional dualism of mind and body must be rejected.

Humanism also rejects cosmic and supernatural "guarantees." The Humanist eschews theism, deism, modernism, "new thought" and instead of feeling religious emotions concentrates on human life—labor, art, science, philosophy, love, friedship and recreation.

Humanism is for "a socialized and co-operative economic order—a shared life in a shared world." Its adherents say that it will: "Affirm life rather than deny it. . . seek to elicit the possibilities of life, not flee from it. . . establish the conditions of a saisfactory life for all, not merely for the few."

Most Humanists come from Unitarian, Universalist, Baptist and Congregationalist churches. In recent years 60 Unitarian ministers have embraced Humanism. Their church was dismayed but could do nothing, its own creed being far fom stringent. There are Humanist groups in Manhattan, Hollywood, Berkley, Calif., Sioux City and Minneapolis. They hope soon to form a national organization. The Minneapolis group is under the guidance of a Humanist pioneer, Rev. John Hassler Dietrich, who, nominally Unitarian, began preaching Humanism 18 years ago and now has 2,000 followers. Humanists like Dietrich and Potter are the only preachers of whom grumpy Clarence Darrow approves. Humanist Dietrich signed last week's manifesto, as did Humanist Potter, Journalist Harry Elmer Barnes, John Dewey, one time editor Albert Charles Dieffenbach of the Unitarian "Christian Register," Editor Robert Morss Lovett of "The New Republic," President Howard Maynard Shipley of the Science League of America, Boston Lawyer Joseph Walker, one time candidate for Governor of Massachusetts, and 26 others.—Time.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Lee

On April 2, 1933, God saw best to take our beloved father and friend, Edward L. Lee, from us to his heavenly home above.

He was stricken with that dreaded disease, paralysis, June 4, 1929, which caused him to be helpless for life. Though he never complained, was always cheerful, and took so much interest in everything.

Born January 3, 1849, was married twice; first to Miss Charlotte V. Harris, March 15, 1876. To this union were born seven children, three of whom preceded him to the glory world in infancy. On March 13, 1889, he married Miss Martha Annie Harris. Three children were born to this union.

He leaves seven children: Mrs. Sallie Wood, Mrs. Della Wood, Mrs. Ella Crawley, Mrs. Annie Ellington, Leslie Lee, Mrs. Lula Patterson and Mrs. Vann Gardner; one sister, Miss Laura Lee; 25 grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren, besides a host of friends and relatives to mourn our loss.

He professed religion at Bethesda M. P. church when just a boy, and attended services held in an old barn, near his home, there being no church near enough for him to attend until old Lee's Chapel was established in 1870. He was one of the first to unite with this church, which is now Hollister Methodist Protestant Church. Here he remained a faithful member until his death. He loved his church and always felt like no burden was too great to undertake for it. The greater the burden the more joy he received. He was always in his place at church and Sunday school and was always anxious to help the more unfortunate ones. His children can not say he sent them to Sunday school—he always took us. His home was a home for everybody and always a warm welcome awaited everyone.

Funeral services were conducted from the home of his daughter, Mrs. E. T. Ellington, by his pastor, Rev. H. F. Fogleman, Monday afternoon, and his body was laid to rest in the old family cemetery near his home beneath a mound of beautiful flowers.

A LOVING DAUGHTER.

Warlick

Mrs. Minerva Carpenter Warlick, widow of Max Warlick, died Friday, June 4, in the Shelby hospital, where she had been a patient for less than a day and had undergone a serious operation.

Mrs. Warlick was 60 years, four months and ten days of age. At the age of 13 she joined Pleasant Hill church and was a faithful Christian and constant attendant at services. She was a devoted wife and mother and was beloved by her host of friends. Twelve years ago her husband preceded her to the grave.

Surviving are the following children: Blanch Warlick, of Washington; Mrs. Hugh Frittain, of Gray's Lake, Ill.; Cecil and Bessie Lee Warlick, who live at home, and one adopted daughter, Mrs. Ola Willis, now living in Washington. Also surviving are her mother, Mrs. Noah Carpenter, of Belwood; three grandchildren, two sisters, Mrs. Essie Turner, of Belwood; Mrs. Clarence Warlick, of Catawba County, and two brothers, Charlie and Lee Carpenter.

A large crowd attended the funeral, which was held Sunday afternoon, June 4, at Pleasant Hill church. Services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. D. Morris.

Lura Bell Crouch Byerly was born on August 6, 1871, and died on June 8, 1933, aged 61 years, 10 months and 2 days.

She was united in marriage with Eli Byerly on January 1, 1906. To this union were born two children, the older of which died in infancy without having been named. The younger one, Susie Byerly Marion, departed this life on October 4, 1931.

She is survived by her husband, two sisters, Mrs. I. F. Farlow, of Archdale, and Mrs. H. B. Johnson, of High Point; two brothers, H. B. Crouch, of High Point, and A. B. Crouch, of Florida; two step-sons, Will and Tom Byerly, of Thomasville; also one grandchild.

Sister Byerly professed hope in Christ in early life and united with Lebanon Methodist Protestant church of High Point. Later the family moved to Thomasville and she united with the First Methodist Protestant church where she remained a faithful member until death.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. T. C. Vaughn.

Payne

On Sunday, May 21, 1933, one of our faithful members, Mr. W. T. Payne, aged 66 years, was called to his home above.

Mr. Payne professed faith in Christ in early childhood and remained a true follower until death.

All that doctors, nurses, and loved ones could do was done, but God called, Come, ye blessed. In all his sickness and suffering his faith seemed to grow stronger. He seemed to be waiting patiently for God's call. As his friends and neighbors visited his bedside he would always tell them he could not be with them very long.

His greatest desire was that everyone live a life so that he could meet them in the Great Beyond. He was a good neighbor, always ready to help those who were in need; a devoted husband and father, and a big-hearted friend to everyone.

Funeral services were conducted at Salem Methodist Protestant Church on May 22, 1933, by his pastor, Rev. W. M. Loy, assisted by Rev. G. W. Holmes and Rev. E. G. Overton. Burial was in the church cemetery.

He leaves to mourn their loss a wife, three daughters, four sons, two brothers, one sister, seven grandchildren, and a host of friends. May God comfort the bereaved ones.

HORSE COMING BACK

For the first time since the World War the demand for good work horses is exceeding the supply. The reason given is that farmers are abandoning tractors because their crops do not bring in cash, while horses can be kept on home-grown feeds. There were nearly 20,000,000 horses on farms in 1918, and only 12,000,000 in 1932. Western horse dealers are experiencing boom times where they can get stock to sell.—The Pathfinder.

THEY HAVE NO SUNDAY

[Miss Marie Crosby, missionary on furlough from West Africa, speaking recently in Woman's Missionary meetings in North Carolina, was asked if they had any Sunday in West Africa, or any day to correspond to our Sabbath, either for rest or worship among the natives. In further reply to this question, Miss Crosby sends the following as to Nature Worship and Tabor, by W. C. Willoughby, which reveals that they have no Sabbath there.]

Most Bantu tribes observe a lunar "sabbath," though some keep one day of the lunar month and some another. Many tribes hallow the day following the evening on which the new moon is first seen; but some keep the fifth day after its appearance, some the eighth; some the ninth. This perplexing variation of lunar "sabbath" is particuarly noticeable in the Mashona group of tribes, and may be due to the composite nature of that group.

It would be interesting to discover the origin and significance of these sacred days, but that is a difficult region to explore. The Becwana say that the crops would not ripen if any work were done in the lands on a taboo day—a belief that is shared by most Bantu. To understand such a notion it is necessary to remember that the ripening of crops is regarded as a boon from the spirit world, and that the dynastic spirits are tutelary deities of the gardens and fountains. Some Mashona say that they observe their particular day of the lunar month because that is the day on which all great chiefs die; which may possibly explain why the ninth day of the new moon is called Mgari's "sabbath." Other Mashona attribute their new moon "sabbaths" to a command received by their ancestors from some evil spirits, whom they fear to offend. Fear of offending spirits, good or bad, is the usual Bantu motive for respecting sacred days; but the fact that the Mashona call these spirits "evil spirits" suggests that their date of the lunar "abbath" is older than their occupation of the country, and that their conquering forefathers feared to desecrate a day that had already become sacred to the spirits of some dispossessed dynasty.

All these "sabbaths" are "unlucky days;" but that may mean nothing more than the belief that the spirits will show their displeasure by spoiling any enterprise that violates these sacred days, and that the safe course, therefore, is to do nothing of any importance.—Christian Sun.

VOLUME XXXIX GREENSBORO, N. C., JUNE 22, 1933 NUMBER 31

My Two Birthdays

An angel came to me and said:
Awake, O sleeper, lift thy head;
Great things the Lord will do for thee,
This very day—just watch and see!

I found it as the angel said:
I lay upon my new-found bed
And had a vision wondrous bright—
My opened eyes drank in the light.

My ears were roused and set in tune
And other powers awakened soon;
A charming world met me that day
And never yet has passed away.

Another angel came to me
With—"Greater things thine eyes shall see:
For thou must have a second birth
And know a world beyond the earth."

This prophet-angel spoke the truth,
I learned in early days of youth,
The world of sense grows dim and pale;
Eternal power will never fail.

To apprehend God's greater glory
With all the depth of sacred story,
One must need pass the second birth
Where Spirit rules and not the earth.

The Christian's Reward

Matthew 19:27-29. The disciples of Jesus, like the most of us, were concerned about what they were to receive. Jesus did not rebuke them but answered them in all sincerity. In this answer he promised them a hundred fold here and everlasting life. Surely there could be no question as to the eternal life. It began when they forsook all and followed Jesus. As to the hundred fold some might ask whether it meant material things or spiritual things. It seems hardly possible that our Lord meant a hundred fold in houses and lands, for so far as the record goes the disciples never owned many of these. The most of them died horrible deaths for conscience sake. But in some respect they gained a thousand fold. The most of them were brought up as humble fishermen without many advantages. They never even looked in at the door of a university like we have today. Their circle of acquaintances was greatly limited. And yet, after following Jesus, they became in many respects the most famous people that ever lived, and their praises are sung throughout the earth today where the Gospel is preached. In the matter of joy and peace and the things that really make life worth living they had an abundance of it. In the matter of seeing the thing they were trying to do succeed, no people ever had greater rewards. From the small number of people who were belivers when the church was founded, some of these disciples lived long enough to see not only many of the Jews saved, but many Gentiles as well.

But it is not my purpose to follow the history of the people of the long ago to the exclusion of those who live today. And let me begin this phase of the discussion by saying this question of rewards will not down. It is still with us and will ever be. The most of us are still enough like children to want to know what we shall receive. And really this enters into all life. The young people want to know what reward they shall receive for going to school, whether any good will come to them or not. To some of them the time in school seems long and they wonder whether it is worth the cost. You may not be able to realize it now,but later on in life you will agree with me. Life is always worth all it costs if we have the right attitude toward it.

Not only does the child want to know what the rewards are to be, but the wage-earner wants to know what he is to receive, and rightfully so. The man who invests money wants to know what he is to get out of it. Men frequently ask this question when choosing an occupation. Many people make the fatal mistake of placing the dollar above the good they can do. But, after all, men want to know that they are to receive something for their labor. But I want to remind all of us that there are some things that pay dividends other than cash. St. Paul said to Timothy, "But Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come. In almost every occupation there are rewards over and above that which we get in the market. Every farmer who is worthy of being called a farmer receives wages that nobody else can pay him For when he goes to the field to produce something that he can sell for cash, he has a right to feel that he is in league with the Infinite in producing something to feed a hungry world, and thus to perpetuate the human race. This feeling that a man is working with God to feed a world, as well as the joy of seeing things grow, lifts farming out of the drudgery class and puts a man in God's great workshop. What is true of the farmer is true of every other class that I know anything about. The only man who gets enough out of life to make it worth living is the man who works,notbecause of necessity, but because he loves to do it. The physician gets some rewards in the matter of money. That is legitimate and necessary, but the only physician that I have ever known that was worth sending for was the man who parcticed medicine for

TWENTY-ONE ANNUAL CONFERENCES

Rev. J. E. Pritchard, D.D.

For some time it has been on my mind to record some reminiscences of the 21 Annual Conferences which I have attended as a pastor. In the hope that it may do some good I now proceed. Since it is my purpose to write wholly from memory there may creep in some errors. If so, I invite those who see the error or who think they see it to call my attention to it and I will do one of two things: namely, acknowledge the error or get out my files of the Journal and prove that it was not an error.

The first Conference that I attended as a pastor was the 1912 Conference at Burlington, though I had served six months on Halifax Circuit, having been assigned to that work by the Henderson Conference while I was still in Seminary. Rev. T. E. Davis, who later went to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was host to the Conference. Rev. C. A. Cecil was elected President of the Conference for the first time. At that time it was customary for the retiring President to serve on the stationing committee, as he was more familiar with the field than the new President. Therefore, Dr. W. E. Swain, the retiring President, was the ministerial member of the stationing committee. One thing that stands out in my memory was the enthusiasm that prevailed in the Conference in regard to the Children's Home, which institution was to be moved from Denton to High Point. A campaign had been launched during the summer with remarkable success and the Conference was following up the effort in order to complete the task. At this Conference Dr. F. T. Tagg, of Baltimore, editor of The Methodist Protestant, was present. A remark was made by Dr. A. G. Dixon in the memorial service which I still remember. It was this: "Dr. Tagg, some of these times in our memorial services we are going to include you, even though you are not a member of this Conference. But I want you to know while you are still with us that we appreciate you and love you." I am quite sure that it was in this memorial serivce also that Brother Bethea spoke of the life of Rev. E .A. Plyler and made this catchy statement: "It made no difference where Brother Plyler's sermon started; it always ended up at Calvary." One other thing about this Conference was the lateness of the hour of adjournment. The business of the Conference, with the exception of the reading of the stationing committee's report, was finished about midnight on Monday night. But when the report of the committee was read one brother called for the committee on appeals and this committee took his case in hand and it was 1:30 or later Tuesday morning when the Conference adjourned.

The 1913 Conference met in the First Church, High Point, with Dr. A. G. Dixon host. The old building was used at that time, as the new one was not built for several years afterwards. Rev. C. A. Cecil was re-elected President of the Conference. The outstanding thing about this Conference as I recall it was the discussion of union with the United Brethren Church. Rev. Lyman E. Davis, D. D., President of the General Conference, was present and made a strong speech in favor of the union. And here is a strange thing: The writer had argued all the summer against the union and at Conference voted for it. The vote was unanimous with the exception of one vote, in so far as I remember. But after the Methodist Protestant Church had voted to unite, the Bishops of the United Brethren decided not to put to a vote, so the whole thing fell through.

It was at this Conference also that the Rev. T. J. Ogburn arose and asked for his letter of standing after having preached in our Church for almost 50 years.

The 1914 Conference was held in Asheville, with Dr. C. W. Bates as host. Rev. C. A. Cecil was again elected President. It was a new experience for a great many of our people to go to "The Land of the Sky," so the Conference was swamped with visitors. This was in the days when free entertainment was furnished everybody who came. It was during this Conference that the Blue Ridge-Atlantic Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, with Bishop Henderson, presiding, came in a body and paid us a visit. Bishop Henderson spoke for his Conference and Dr. McCulloch, the editor, spoke for ours.

On this hot day when the temperature is almost 100 degrees it might be well to speak of the blizzard that came one night during that Conference. Late one afternoon there was a bank of cloud lying low in the West. While we were in the church that night a regular snow-storm descended upon the city with very cold weather. Conference was the third week in November at that time. On Tuesday morning we got on the train and started east and the ground was covered with snow as far east as Durham. After we passed Durham we did not see any more snow.

The 1915 Conference was held in Grace Church, Greensboro, with Dr. R. M. Andrews host. Rev. C. A. Cecil declined re-election and Rev. G. W. Holmes was elected President. Grace Church at that time was on the corner of West Washington and Greene streets. At this Conference Rev. G. L. Curry, who had been serving the Burlington Church, asked the Conference to lend him to the Board of Home Missions for work at Seattle, which request was granted. The writer was elected reporter to succeed Brother Curry, who had rendered signal service to the Conference in getting the news to the papers.

The 1916 Conference was held in the First Church, Winston-Salem, with Dr. J. D. Williams as host. Rev. G. W. Holmes was re-elected President. On the floor of this Conference was a vigorous discussion in regard to levying all the new budget sent down by the General Conference. After much discussion it was decided to levy a part of it and to go to men of means to get the rest. In this Conference Dr. F. T. Benson, who had been elected editor of The Methodist Protestant at the recent General Conference was a visitor and stirred the Conference with his eloquence.

The 1917 Conference was held at Mebane with Rev. W. F. Kennett as host. Dr. R. M. Andrews was elected President. Dr. Benson and Dr. George H. Miller were present and both spoke, the former for The Methodist Protestant, and the latter for the Board of Education. Dr. Charles H. Beck was present and spoke for the Board of Home Missions. The Conference sermon was preached by Rev. J. H. Moton from the text, "But tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high." Luke 24:49.

The 1918 Conference, which was originally scheduled to meet in Concord, was changed to Grace Church, Greensboro, Dr. C. W. Bates, host. The terrible epidemic of flu had somewhat subsided, but things were still upset. The sessions of the Conference were not behind closed doors; however, the public was not urged to attend, simply as a precautionary measure. Dr. R. M. Andrews was re-elected President.

The 1919 session of the Conference was held at Concord, with Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk as host. Dr. Andrews was re-elected President. The writer preached the Conference sermon and Dr. J. D. Williams preached the ordination sermon. Representatives to the General Conference were elected, the balloting beginning, as usual, on Friday afternoon and lasting until Saturday afternoon. This Conference petitioned the General Conference to change the law in regard to how often communion should be observed, so that churches that wished to observe it quarterly instead of monthly could do so without violating the law. The General Conference granted the request by simply changing one word, "shall" to "should."

The 1920 Conference was held in Enfield with Rev. D. R. Williams host. Dr. Andrews was re-elected President. This session will ever stand out for its stand in regard to a college. Dr. Andrews in his report asked that the Conference do one of two things, namely, build a college or quit talking about it. After much discussion it was voted to appoint a committee with power to act and if, in the judgment of the committee, the time had come to build the college the committee should proceed. The committee was composed of Dr. Andrews, Dr. L. W. Gerringer, Mr. J. Norman Wills, Capt. A. M. Rankin, and the writer. This committee met in the office of the Odell Hardware Company in Greensboro, canvassed the siutation and decided to proceed, setting up a campaign committee of Dr. Andrews, Dr. Gerringer and yours truly.

The 1921 Conference was held in First Church, Burlington with Dr. S. W. Taylor as host. At this Conference was the beginning of the Harvard Plan of entertainment. Dr. Andrews was re-elected President. It was at this Conference that the plan of Conference Districts was adopted, this writer writing the resolution and getting Dr. Bates to sign it with him.

The 1922 session was held in Henderson with yours truly the host. Dr. A. G. Dixon was elected President. The Hon. T. T. Hicks made the welcome address and Rev. G. L. Curry preached the Conference sermon. This session may be remembered because of the long discussion concerning Young People's Work. The Conference finally voted for the Conference to elect someone to head up the work rather than for the young people themselves to elect as had been previously done. Rev. N. M. Harrison was elected.

The 1923 Conference was held in the Community Church in Thomasville with Reev. R. S. Troxler host. Dr. Dixon was re-elected President. At this Conference someone made the statement that Mr. C. F. Finch had done such wonderful things in building the new church that he ought to be heard. There was a unanimous call for Mr. Finch. He came to the platform and made a speech that was remarkable for its brevity. He said, "I have heard it said that those who do the least say the most, we are glad to have you here."

The 1924 Conference was held in Reidsville with Dr. J. D. Williams host. Dr. Dixon was re-elected President. This Conference might be put down as one of delightful fellowship and good feeling. This was the first to be held in that city and everybody seemed to be glad to be there. One of the touching incidents of that Conference was when Dr. Dixion, the President, presented his aged father to the Conference.

The 1925 session was held in the new First Church, High Point, with Dr. George R. Brwon host. Dr. Dixon was re-elected President. The splendid new building thrilled the Conference and frequent reference was made to the achievements of the local church. Financial problems of the College were beginning to become acute, so much time was given to a discussion of it.

The 1926 session was held in Grace Church, Greensboro, with Dr. S. K. Spahr host. Dr. Dixon was re-elected President. Rev. J. R. Hutton preached the ordination sermon. During the year two of the most useful members of the Conference had passed on, namely, Dr. C. L. Whitaker and Rev. J. H. Bowman. The writer was elected chairman of the Faculty succeeding Dr. Whitaker. Mr. W. L. Ward, of Asheboro, was elected lay member of the stationing committee. Someone paid him this compliment on the Conference floor: "When he was chairman of the County Board of Commissioners of Randolph County he could turn down a delegation that appeared before the Board with a request and they would go away feeling better than if somebody else had granted them their request."

The 1927 session was held in Asheboro with the writer as host. Dr. S. W. Taylor was elected President. Dr. L. W. Gerringer preached the Conference sermon. Mr. R. R. Ross, who has long been prominent in the church, presented the Conference with a beautiful gavel made of Randolph County wood. At this Conference Rev. J. H. Moton was superannuated. During the service he became very happy and shouted aloud as only he could do. It was during this Conference that the janitor paid one of our preachers this compliment: "You know, Bro. Blank is one of the finest men I ever saw. Why he sat with me down there in the furnace room half of the time during the sessions of the Conference."

The 1928 Conference was held in Winston-Salem with Rev. J. H. Moton, who supplied for a few months, as host. This Conference can also be put down as one of long and much animated discussion concerning the Young People's Work. Dr. Taylor was reelected President. Dr. H. L. Feeman, president of Adrian College, delivered a series of fine devotional talks. The writer preached the Conference serman and Rev. J. A. Burgess preached the ordination sermon. Dr. C. W. Bates preached at the Sunday evennig hour. One of the high moments of the Conference was the visit and address of Bishop Rondthaler of the Moravian Church.

The 1929 session was held in Calvary Church, Greensboro, with Rev. C. W. Bates host. Dr. Taylor was re-elected old classical tradition of the conservative, the tradition of the humanities. He has the utmost respect for the science of the Liberal. But he believes that neither the humanities nor the arts will ever flourish as they deserve to flourish until you get a much closer connection than now exists between the work of society and the culture of society, between the labor by which men earn their living and the labor by which they cultivate their souls. The fundamental unity of bread-winning and soul-saving would serve, perhaps, as a motto for the Labor Party in education. And now I have to confess that I belong to that party myself—always using that term in its strictly educational sense.

We believe further that there is something in human nature which responds to all this. In every human being who is not mentally defective there is a latent power which, when once it is awakened, can accomplish the most astonishing results. I call it the passion for excellence, and I regard it as the primary object of education in all its stages, from the kindergarten to the university, to awaken and to foster this passion for excellence in human beings, child or man as the case may be.

NEED ONE BURDEN HIMSELF?

In writing this article I make no prtense of being an authority on the subject nor am I criticizing those who have, through a mistaken conception, created a wrong impression in the minds of Christian people.

So often laymen and ministers refer to burdens a Christian must bear, to the sacrifices a person must make, if he or she is living the true Christian life.

If a person is a true Christian, will he consider his normal duties to the church as burdens, or in giving to God that which is due Him as sacrificing? There are many who avoid the church and its functions because they are afraid they will have to sacrifice a part of their income or forego some of their pleasures.

Those who have experienced both worldly pleasures and normal Christian living testify that the latter is more satisfying and lasting and that it is not a burden, but a joy.

I don't want to leave the impression that I think it requires no effort to be a Christian. It requires courage and back bone. Many people are too weak to qualify as Christians.

If an equation is made, effort and courage do not equal burdens and sacrifices, instead, courageous striving toward that which is right brings joy and contentment; it affords one self-repect and demands the respect of his fellow man.

DR. McCULLOCH'S BIRTHDAY

When you read this it will be either Friday or Saturday, depending on where you live. If it is Friday, there will still be time to get your birthday gift—a new or renewal subscription—to Dr. McCulloch in time for his birthday. If not, he may have to wait until Monday, but then it won't be the first birthday present that didn't get there on time. We have a habit of putting things off, you know. But, whether it comes on time or is delayed, it will be acceptable and appreciated. A goodly number of subscriptions have come in marked "Birthday Present," and I happen to know the editor is getting a good deal of a "kick" out of it. And you want to help, I am sure. So, go to it. Send 'em in.

TWO GREAT WORKS OF ART

It is always interesting to spend a while in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City.

To see again some of the pictures that, through previous visits, have become parts of my mental art gallery, is indeed gratifying. "The Horse Fair," by Rosa Bonheur, is such a picture. It is one of those great works of art that never fails to satisfy an admirer who sits for a time before it.

I also like to get from a visit at least one or two additions to my mental gallery. When I was there last April I added two specimens that I hope never to forget.

Jesus Among the Lowly

In this picture Jesus stands beside the table in a humble home, with right hand uplifted in blessing. The old grandfather and grandmother sit at the right end of the table as the observer faces the picture. The mother, with a baby at her breast, sits at the other end of the table. The father, hat in hand and a child in his arms, stands reverently in the open door behind his wife. There are eight children in the group. The older people express profound reverence and respect in face and attitude, and the children—naturally—reflect the spirit of the parents and grand-parents. Leon A. Lhermitte (1844-1925) of the French school of painters, is the artist.

In this painting the artist is dignifying the humble home and the simple, sincere family living there. He does this through the presence of Jesus. But the scene is not dignified merely because Jesus throws over it the mantel of His dignity and worth. This sort of vicarious dignity and worth could be of little value. Rather, he begets in them a spirit and a character and a life that are good and worthy. Because of His presence with them, and influence over them, the humble family becomes a truly Christian family—the finest possible group of human beings.

The Millmore Memorial

This memorial is called "The Angel of Death." It was made in marble in 1926 by the sculptor, Daniel C. French (1850-1931), and occupies a distinct place in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Mr. French had executed it in bronze in 1892 and erected it in Forest Hills cemetery, Boston, as a memorial to the young sculptor, Martin Millmore (1844-1883). The Angel of Death is shown with flowers in her right hand touching with her left the sculptor's left hand in which he holds the chisel against his work—the mallet being uplifted in his right hand.

One cannot escape a feeling of sadness at the sight of youth, and talent, and beauty being stopped in life and work by the hand of death. But when you look again at the face of the Angel of Death—noting that it is a pleasant face, and that there are flowers in her hand—you feel that death has an appreciation of youth, and beauty, and talent—and is not an enemy. The artist is telling you, in this touching way, that there are life, and beauty, and employment beyond—and you are comforted.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

October, Pay-up month

Second Sunday in October, Rally Day, Promotion in Sunday school, etc.

November 8, Annual Conference meets at Thomasville Community church.

Honor Roll of Churches

The following churches paid their pastors in full for the first half of the conference year: First Church, Lexington; Henderson; Lincolnton, Seagrove Church, Why Not Circuit; New Zion Church, Why Not Circuit; Maple Springs and Hickory Churches, Forsyth Circuit, and Saxapahaw. All honor to these church folks; may their tribes increase.

Those Pastor's Reports

At quite an early date I shall give a complete set up of the facts in those reports on the basis of the totals. Thus revealing our real status at the end of the first six months of the conference year. But in this letter I shall emphasize what I am calling the major attitude expressed in those reports and in the reports of the Stewards Area Meets.

It Was Hopeful

Wherever a consensus was expressed, emphasizing the feeling of the majority, it revealed the fact that our people are courageously approaching the tasks before them in a manner that shall not fail. Notwithstanding it is still hard to raise money for the pastor as well as for the budgets; notwithstanding it was most difficult to carry on the other work of the church; it was no blind optimism that failed to add the difficulties in the way; yet there was a sensible lessening of the grip which has so nearly strangled our church in the recent past.

Nowhere do we find feelings of utter hopelessness now; did find it six months ago. Even those churches which are heavily burdened with debts are beginning to seek the way out with more hope than was felt in many moons. It greatly heartens us. It is quite true the panic is not yet passed. It is quite true the church is usually the last institution to feel the impact of the rising tide of prosperity. But the moving of the waters gladdens our hearts and we shall labor with increasing hopefulness the remaining months until conference.

We have many problems confronting us. There are big debts on many of our churches to be provided for: Many of our pastors must be given salaries enough to support their families, so they can give whole time to the ministry; The Herald must be provided for, its debts cancelled and the paper put on a solid foundation; the debt on the Children's Home must be paid off and our contributions to the Home made large enough to support it and our workers there; then we must make a real beginning on the liquidation or the indebtedness of High Point College.

Here is enough to challenge the heroic spirit in us, is it not? Now let the heroes appear and the defeatist depart. We have had enough of their swan songs and dirges. Let the notes of the grand processional arise:

> A mighty fortress is our God.
> A bulwark never failing;
> Our helper He, amid the flood
> Of mortal ills prevailing."

Say It With Subscriptions

We do not know a more fitting thing the people in North Carolina can do just now than to join with those who propose to recognize in a most substantial way the services Dr. McCulloch had rendered the church by making the return of his birthday the occasion for a greatly increased subscription list for the Herald. Let all join in this love task and by it show that WE DO appreciate great sacrificial service our Brother has rendered our church. SAY IT WITH SUBSCRIPTIONS BY JUNE 24th.

Mrs. Georgie Ann Loy Passes

After a lingering illness with great suffering, Mrs. O. C. Loy, the mother of two of our young ministers, Reverends W. M. and O. C. Loy, passed to her reward and was buried in Friendship cemetery last Wednesday to await the saint's glad day when all who love the Lord shall meet Him in the air We deeply sympathize with our young friends in the pastorate and with other members of the family in their great loss, by the death of their good mother.

Mocksville Charge—Rev. G. B. Ferree, Pastor

We visited three churches on this charge, Bethel, Elbaville and Dulins in the order named. Congregations at Bethel and Dulin were very good, the pastor thought, while that at Elbaville was small.

This group of churches has had with it Union Chapel, not far from Mocksville and Union Grove some twenty miles from Mocksville. The four churches make a compact little charge with the parsonage at Mocksville not at all difficult to serve, but the church in Iredell county is rather hard to get to from this point and yet there seems to be no other charge to place Union Grove with.

The condition of the work here is not very different from what I found it when president of the conference before. New Sunday school rooms have been added to Bethel, the parsonage has been improved, recently it was underpinned with stone, thus adding greatly to the comfort of its occupants as well as adding value to the property. It appears pleasantly located But the pastor feels keenly the lack of financial support here. With a growing family, expenses of living increasing, he has found it difficult to live and do his best work on this charge. In this respect Mocksville is not very different from the rest, but there are some splendid people here. No more loyal, no more faithful people can be found anywhere than here, but the work has greatly suffered from being a rural charge, close to an urban center without a church in that center. Brother Ferree has done a good work here and this is his fourth year on this charge. I was given a cordial hearing at all the appointments and enjoyed visiting these churches; was indeed sorry not to be able to visit two appointments at this time.

Mrs. Ida Love Passes

The mother of Rev. J. L. Love passed away last week and was buried in Concord. Our information of her going is quite meagre but we enter deeply into sympathy with Brother Love in his great loss.

Plan of Appointments

HIS CROSS HIS PULPIT

The Cross was Jesus' greatest pulpit. The hillside, the lakeside, the wayside well, the Temple court, the synagogue, did not afford Him such an audience, or such a hearing, or such persuasive effect as His Cross. Races, religions, governments, emotions of every type from love to hatred, varieties of personalities—all were represented there.

The sermon that He preached was brief and broken. It now is termed "The Seven Words." It was really seven sermons. It dealth with mighty themes—forgiveness, evangelism, social service, physical need, discouragement and lonliness, victory over wrong and suffering, faith in God and the future. They were sentence sermons of never-ceasing comfort and hope. The voice from the pulpit has never ceased and never has lost its power.

The greatest preaching comes from adversity, endurance, heroism, and compassion. That Cross was a place of inspiration, instruction, and understanding.

When a man preaches from a Cross the people listen. A preacher's cross is his credentials to the hearts of the people. The martyr's voice never ceases. The partner in sorrow, in toil, in self-denial, in pain, has a superior power of persuasion. If the people feel or note the long hours of study, the contact with the Spirit, the experiences in homes of sorrow, or toil, or sin, they will recognize the messenger of God.

He who knows Jesus in the fellowship of his temptations and burdens can preach Jesus. The visible pulpit may be beautiful and quqiet. The true pulpit is that cross upon which self has died and from which compassion and courage speak.—The Christian Advocate.

THE HEALING POWER OF TRUTH

By Grenville Kleiser

The healing power of spiritual truth is now widely recognized and employed. In many authenticated cases of illness, merely repeating and affirming these truths have brought help and healing.

Read the following verses aloud, very slowly and with an earnest desire to understand their import, and you will experience an immediate elevation of spirit. They will tend to drive away fear, depression, and similar negative thoughts, and to lay a firm foundation for the building of faith, endurance, and good health.

Daily spend ten minutes or more in relaxation and meditation. In the silence you can best realize the presence and power of God. Stop all vagrant thoughts, still the sense, and listen to the voice of Truth.

Be still, and know that I am God.—Psalms 46:10.

In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength.—Is. 30:15.

Fear not; I will help thee.—Is. 41:13.

Let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing.—James 1:4.

The eternal God is thy refuge, and undreneath are the everlasting arms.—Deut. 33:27.

Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.—John 8:32.

God is the strength of my heart, and my portion for ever. —Psalms 73:26.

And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.—Phil. 4:7.

Mark those verses which particularly appeal to you and repeat them several times a day until you have memorzied them. Recall them to mind at convenient intervals. They will become to you a source of constant comfort, inspiration, and healing.

THAT HERALD SUBSIDY

Last Conference, Dr. McCulloch presented a scheme, which was adopted, whereby the churches and charges might help to take care of the deficit—the difference between the income and the cost—in printing of the Herald. The churches have responded so well that the weekly deficit has been cut down from approximately $30.00 last year to just a little more than $10.00 a week this year. It was hoped that enough additional subscriptions would be received, not only to wipe out that amount, but also provide a fair living for the editor. As it now is, the printers are "in the hole" $10.00 each week, and the editor gets nothing for his services. Perhaps, with conditions as they are, it is not possible to reach the goal of subscriptions. But it does seem possible that the churches and charges that have not yet raised their subsidy allotment might do so. If the churches that have already raised theirs can be of such material help in cutting down the weekly deficit, it is easy to see that the others can not only continue to keep down the deficit, but wipe it out entirely, and put something in the hands of the editor. I am therefore making this appeal to the pastors and interested members of the charges that have ...... marks in place of $$$$ marks in the place designated for their subsidy. Knock out the ...... and put in the $$$$. And, by the way, don't forget that $10.00 you are going to lend to help take care of the past deficit.

C. W. Bates, for the Committee.

OUR STORY PAGE

HOW ANNIE PUT IN THE "MY"

''How did you get saved, Annie?'' I asked as we walked along together.

''It was two years ago, at the close of a meeting at K—— Hall. The gentleman who was preaching, read to us the verse in the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah, which begins, 'He was wounded for our transgressions.' and he told us that he got saved by taking out the 'our' and putting 'my' in intsead. He said that if any of us would like to be saved by Jesus that night we should put in the 'my' too.

''I went home and opened my Bible at the chapter and put in the 'my.' The verse then read like this: 'He was wounded for my transgressions, He bruised for my iniquities; the chastisement of my peace was upon Him; and with His stripes I am healed.' What a difference it made! I saw that Jesus had done it all for me, just for myself, and that I was saved. Before that I only believed in Jesus in a general way—just as almost everybody does—that He was the Son of God, who died for sinners; but I did not single myself out of the crowd as one of the sinner for whom He died until that night. Now I can say Jesus is mine—my Saviour and my Lord.''

My dear young reader, have you, like Annie, put in the ''my?'' Have you accepted the Lord Jesus to be your own personal Saviour?

It is not enough to know that He is a Saviour, or even the Saviour; but, in order to have your soul saved and your sins forgiven, you must have personal dealings with Him, and say—''He is my Saviour.''—Life Line.

HOW KATIE WORKED IT

Down at the end of Katie's street was a little house that had long been vacant. But now some one had moved into it.

''Just some foreigners,'' people said and passed by. No one ever called there, and none of the children, except Katie, ever spoke to the fellow who looked so longingly over the gate as they played.

Pedro, his name was, Pedro Nevarro. He was a Spanish boy.

Every morning Katie spoke to him, but she dared not ask him to play with them after school for fear the other children would treat him slightingly and hurt his feelings. She made up her mind that she would have to work it carefully.

''Indeed, we're not going to have foreigners in our crowd,'' they said when she asked them if Pedro could play.

''I'll have to think up some way,'' she said to herself. ''He looks so lonely, always watching us play.''

She thought a great deal about it and finally she thought of a plan.

''I'll do it after school tonight.''

When the rest of the crowd gathered in her yard after school to play, Katie suggested that they play ''follow the leader.''

''And let me be leader first,'' she said. ''I have some fine new stunts.''

''All right,'' they all agreed.

So the procession started out. Katie made them do stunts all the way down the street. Then they were near the house where little Pedro lived. As usual, he was looking wistfully over the fence. Katie's eyes twinkled as she brought the procession closer to the fence.

''Hello, Pedro'' she called gaily, and with a backward glance at the next in line said, ''Do as I do, or you are stumped.''

''Hello, Pedro,'' he said as cheerfully as he could, under the circumstances.

''Hello, Pedro,'' said the tird.

''Hello, Pedro,'' said the fourth, and with each successive greeting Pedro's face grew brighter.

By the time the last of the line had greeted him Katie had led the line around and was passing him again.

''Want to play, Pedro?'' she called as she passed. The next follower hesitated but then repeated her words, for there was something brave and defiant in her action.

''Want to play, Pedro?'' said the thrd.

''Want to play, Pedro,'' said the fourth, and by the time the last of the line had passed Pedro's gate, Pedro had joined the line and they followed the leader back to her gate.

The ice had been broken, and Pedro was found to be a good friend.—Florence Isaacson in Sunshine.

FAMILY PRAYER

The family altar is one of the oldest and best institutions in the world, and blessed is that faimly where such is established. It is better to live in a cot or a cabin, with a naltar, than a palace without one.

It makes the Lord a welcome Guest, and a member of the family, and it is very comforting to know that we can confer and have fellowship with Him as the Man of our counsel.

It is a sad thing to be without God in the home. It is like being in a tempest-tossed ship without compass or rudder.

Samson became weak as other men, and an easy prey to his enemies, when the Lord left him. So it will be to all those who discard the family altar. The altar is as much needed in the home as a fire on a cold day, or a lamp on a dark night.

No home is complete, no matter how elegantly adorned, without an altar of prayer. Minus this, it is like a watch without a mainspring.

As parents are interested in the mental education of their children, so they should be in the spiritual culture of the heart.

The family altar is a connecting link between our earthly and our Heavenly Home, and if it was more generally established there would be fewer drunkards, divorces and suicides than there are.

The Lord says, ''Them that honour Me I will honour.'' So if we honor Him by worship at home, He will bless us openly. ''Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it.''

Let us have a revival of family prayer and Bible reading everywhere, and witness the great transformation that will follow.—Publisher Unknown.

STOP TRYING! TRUST!

Past years of failure and despair,
Of trying to be good;
With days of sorrow and of care
And fear of death—and widow-hood,
There came the message, "Child you must Stop trying. Trust!"

Life's problems only multiply,
Will God take care of those I love?
Will He their daily needs supply?
Soft comes the answer from above—
"Forget thyself. Thy God is just.
Stop trying. Trust!

Whatever test thy soul shall meet
In all the years that are to be,
In Jesus there is no defeat,
He said, "If ye abide in Me."

Our powerlessness with God, we know,
Is only that our faith is small.
We try in our own strength to go,
And ignominiously fall.
And thus we learn His children must Stop trying. Trust!

GOD'S WAY FOR US

God blesses us that He may, through us, bless others; and when you are filled with His Spirit, then the enemies of righteousness will be overcome, and the entrenched powers of darkness will be stormed by the soldiers of Jesus Christ. Then we shall see the land of the enemy ravaged, and his fortresses falling, if only God may have His way with us.

It is His will that every child of His shall be filled with His Spirit. And why not? Will you face what it involves for you individually? Will you be willing in the day of His power to do your part for the sake of the world that is waiting for a real Pentecostal manifestation of the power of Christ in every-day life?—Rev. H. Earnshaw Smith.

GOD'S LONGING FOR US

In this hart or gazelle of the desert panting after the water-brooks, we have probably the crown of all language as an image of sincerity in the soul's thirst after God. What is more sincere in all the earth than the lustrous-eyed, panting after the water-brooks? There is perfect desert instinct here; perfect innocent need, going out to perfect supply, and expressed so perfectly in that pant succeeding pant!

God then, has driven David into the desert to learn that for every pant of David's soul after God, the Living God, there is a corresponding deeper pant in God's heart for His child. "Deep is calling unto deep"—the deep of David's longing calling out to the deep of God's longing.—Dan Crawford.

RESPONSIBILITY

Don't hedge whent responsibility comes knocking at your door. You can escape it, certainly. You can get through life with never a thing depending upon you. But that's all you will do—just get through. So far as real worth, genuine benefit to the world is concerned, you may as well never have lived. And who wants that said of him? Who wants it to be true?

You don't need to be bossy and officious about it. You don't need to trample on other people's toes. You don't need to go seeking responsibility that belongs to other folks, shouldering them out of the way, and grabbing what isn't yours. Enough will come to you if you but stand up and meet your existence. Handle that well and soon enough others will be coming to you with all the responsibility anybody could want.

Don't dodge! Don't sidestep! It really takes no more courage to fight and succeed than it does to run away and fail. Getting used to responsibility is only a matter of habit, but it is one of those right habits that every successful man cultivates.—Exchange.

JUNE GRADUATES

The colleges and universities gained the front page and told their story the past few weeks. It was a wonderful panorama, a glorious drama in our American life. It is said that more than 100,000 graduates went home from our colleges and universities this June, with their college diplomas tucked away in their trunks after four years of packing their minds with learning and knowledge. It is not certain what they will all do about it. Commencement speakers warned the graduates of the pitfalls and the privileges; of the obstacles and the opportunities; of the trials and the triumphs, that confronted them as they faced the future. Not a few were advised that there are in our country already more teachers than schools, more applicants than positions, more lawyers than clients, more doctors than patients, and more preachers than churches.

On the other hand, they were warned that ours is a time that try men's souls, and that there was a challenge to faith, to energy and to virtue.

Society, the state, the church, every profession, still need strong, willing and well-prepared men and women, able, alert, energetic, faithful, law-abiding, God-fearing. What a contribution, indeed, these 100,000 graduates can make to our common weal and the cause of righteousness in the world if only they will follow the high standards and noble ideals set for them and held up to them during the past four years.

However, a diploma is no longer a guarantee of a job, or even of a strong man or woman to fill a job. And any of the 100,000 who shall rely upon their diploma to carry them through will be leaning, indeed, on a weak stick and a crutch that may fail them at any moment of their journey.—J. O. A., in The Christian Sun.

We must not ignore the comparatively uneducated Methodist preacher. The best sermon I ever heard was one delivered by a goods guard who worked on the Manchester and Sheffield Railway.—Sir Robert Perks.

SOME SOCIAL DANGERS AND HOW TO REMOVE THEM

Scripture text—Rom. 13:11-14.

Undoubtedly, we all see the actual, as well as the possible dangers of social life today. There are hundreds and thousands of social leaders and educators, men and women, who claim to have an interest in fostering better social conditions. They specialize in social, religious, educational work, and in many other technical lines of endeavor. But it is interesting to note that sometimes the more enthusiastic they get in their social work, the farther they get removed from the center of the whole task of bettering social life. They lost sight of the heart of their message—Jesus.

Whether a misconduct is personal or social, it is a cause of immorality.

Morality and customs are two different things. Many people err in mistaking one for the other. Morality is a universal character of a clean and righteous humanhood of the race; it is immutable in its principles. Custom has reference only to a particular time and tribe or country. It may not be universal. For this reason customs may be varied in regard to the conditions of the life of a community; they may be chosen, according to personal or societal taste, as the conventional ways of a particular locality. But morality is an entirely difftrent thing. It rests on universal principles which underlie a respectable, gentle, humble, righteous humanity. To mix customs with morality is a blurred thinking; for morality can not be subjtct to customs, while customs can and must be subordinated to morality. Custom is a human invention; morality is a divine commission. Christ is the Founder and basis of a truly moral life.

To make morality a human invention is the same as saying, "There is no immorality in the world; all is well; everything is moral." This is the logical inference, because in such a case, one man does not have the right to say or insist that his own "moral" invention is the standard of other men's; a custom of drinking intoxicating liquor, robbing, murdering, etc., for example, may be good, from the human standpoint, to those who are in the habit of drinking, robbing, and murdering. What right has another man or group of men to say that such habits are wrong and should be stopped? None. If none, therefore, they can not be criticized by any man; and the result is that everything will have to be tolerated and be considered right; and each group or nation then has its own "morality," as certain moralists say. A careful consideration of the question, therefore, leads us to believe that there is but One who has the authority on morality—Jesus Christ. And this belief is a necessary one, in view of the inherent weakness of man, as compared to the strength and wisdom of Christ the Lord.

Christ, we conclude, is the only remedy to a disordered, unrighteous society. Man is weak; he lacks the power to remove drunkenness, jealousies, licentiousness, etc., from human society, the effects of which are undoubtedly dangerous and evil. He is weak, because he is only as strong as the other man, and therefore both are equal, and one has no right to criticize the other for his drinking, robbing or licentious habits, because they may be both "good" from each one's point of view. No man can remove the social dangers that art at hand; but Christ can.

DON'T BE A MISER!

Only misers
Hoard and stint;

Work for you;
It will pay
And richly too.

The prospects are that eight or ten will keep me company on my way from Graham. I am certainly looking forward to seeing you. Please, no one send us word, saying: I did not know about it in time. For I will feel that you did not read the Herald or that your pastor or church leader fell down on his job. Decide quickly for you still have time if you will act now.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

SPRING CHURCH CIRCUIT AUXILIARY

Our last meeting was held in the home of Mrs. G. W. Massey, June 9, at 3 p. m. There were ten members and eight visitors present.

As we were late in beginning our meeting, "The Question Box," and "Program on Christian Literature and Systematic Bible Study," were omitted.

We were delighted to have Rev. and Mrs. H. F. Fogleman with us. Mrs. Fogleman gave an interesting talk on what took place at the Branch meeting. We were very grateful to Mrs. Fogleman for this talk as our auxiliary was not represented at the Branch meeting on account of sickness in the home of some of the delegates.

Sorry Mrs. Neese was not able to be with us. I want to ask all readers to join us in prayer that she may soon be well and strong again if it be the Lord's will.

MRS. R. M. ROBINSON.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Midland.—Dr. Andrews, president of the Annual Conference, will visit Midland charge July 2, as follows: Pine Bluff, 10 a. m.; Love's Grove, 11:30 a. m.; Pageland, 3:00 p. m. and Midland, 8:00 p. m.

This will be Dr. Andrew's official visit to the charge and he will be brim-full of helpful information for the charge. Every one who misses this message will be greatly impoverished thereby.

We have held splendid chidlren's services at Love's Grove and Pine Bluff. We had all day services with record-breaking congregations.

One of the attractive features of the program was the fine music rendered by the famous Tarlton quartette of Love's Grove. Where ever they sang, the congregntions were moved to tears by their Gospel of song.

We are to hold an all day service at Midland the fourth Sunday—next Sunday. Here, too, we are expecting a great day. With Mrs. L. W. McCoy and Mrs. O. B. Furr training the children and Mrs. Rulph Carmon at the helm of music, how could we expect less.

Roberta Charge.—Our whole community greatly mourns the loss of our beloved sister, Miss Mae Blackwelder. She had been confined to her home for over a month. Her disease was of such a nature that her family and friends had little hope of her recovery. On June 10, 1933 she departed this life. She was born January 13, 1901. She leaves to mourn her death a father, mother, six brothers, five sisters and a host of friends and relatives. Funeral services were held at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon from Roberta Methodist church and interment was made in the church cemetery. Rev. T. A. Williams officiated assisted by Rev. J. B. Trogden and Rev. Sisk.

Miss Blackwelder was educated at Mont Amoena Seminary, Mt. Pleasant, N. C., and King's Business College, Charlotte, N. C. Following her graduation from Mont Amoena Seminary she taught school for five years in the public schools of Cabarrus county. For the past three years she has been cashier of Ritchies' Hardware Co., Concord, N. C. She was a good teacher and an ideal stenographer. Those associated with her in business had the highest regard for her business ability.

Miss Blackwelder joined Roberta Methodist Protestant church in her early girlhood. She has been a faithful and loyal member ever since. She was a devoted Christian and gave her best efforts to the work of the church. She never missed a sermon unless providently hindered. She will be greatly missed by all who knew her because of her sweet Christian character. She always stood for the highest and best things in life. Her noble Christian character is an example for us to follow. The high esteem in which she was held was shown by the many friends that visited her during her illness.

Children's Day program will be held at our church June 25, at 10:30 o'clock. The program wil consist of exercises and songs by the children followed by an address by Mr. S. G. Hawfield the superinttndent of public education in Cabarrus county.

The third quarterly conference will be held at our church Saturday night, June 24.

Mt. Pleasant, Mt. Pleasant.—Memorial services were held the first Sunday in June. Several people came back to their home church to join in honoring those who rest in the cemetery. At 11 o'clock the children marched into the cemetery and placed flowers on the graves. The choir sang while the decorating was being done. After this service the people assembled in the house to hear Dr. Johnson read the list of those people who had been buried in the cemetery. There are about 500 graves, of this number 99 graves had no record. The earliest date recorded was 1856, four persons being buried during that year. Quite a number of children under five years of age had been buried here.

In the afternoon the program consisted of singing, memorials and a talk by Mrs. E. H. Thompson.

Dr. Johnson selected a fitting subject for Fathers' Day, taking the Scripture lesson from II Samuel 18. "Is the Young Man Safe?" was used as a text. A person's safety depends upon two factors, his environment and his own moral strength. Any wrong doing is the wrong use or excessive use of some good thing. Dr. Johnson called attention to the father's opportunity to help guide his son in the right way.

It was announced that a Children's Day program will be given the first Sunday in July at 11 o'clock.

Miss Ola Stafford attended the State C. E. convention at High Point. Several members of our society heard Dr. Poling speak on Thursday at the convention.

Calvary, Greensboro.—The President of the United States lives in the White House; but, thanks to a number of the brethren, the pastor of Calvary and he'd rather be pastor than president—lives in a white house. Two coats of paint has made a great difference in the appearance of the parsonage. And the job was done at a cost of about $30.00, because the brethren gave their labor.

We began a Daily Vacation Bible school last Tuesday week with an enrollment of between 90 and 100. This is the first time in the history of this church that a vacation Bible school has been carried on. It is proving a great success. And one of the fine things about it is, it is being conducted without the pastor having much to do with it, except to look in on the folks now and then. It's a good thing to serve a church where the folks can go ahead without having to depend on the preacher. It relieves him and helps them.

The Boy Scout troop recently organized in connection with the church is getting off to a good start. Fourteen boys have joined thus far, with other expected. Brothers Floyd Reynolds and Ross Dixon are the Scout Masters.

The Children's Day exercises, held the second Sunday night, were especially good, with a very fine attendance and a good offering. One of the features of the program was the siging of a junior choir, which was robed in white.

Some playground equipment has already been placed on the grounds in the rear of the church. We are hoping to add several more swings, see-saws and a slide this week. This is one of the prospects undertaken by the Brotherhood. The children in the neighborhood are putting in a full day on the swings and playing in the sand piles. I imagine a good many mothers are getting a good deal of relief at the same time. They have some idea where the children are, and especially, that they are not playing in the streets, as was the case before the playground was started.

Sunday school attendance is picking up. There were 201 last Sunday. Church attendance is holding its own. But there is plenty of room for improvement, especially at night.

The attendance at the Auxiliary last night was the best since the Auxiliary was organized. There 51 present. The treasurer reported almost $70.00 raised last month.

We are expecting to have nine or ten of [illegible] week. [illegible] an illustrated [illegible] Sunday, presented by [illegible] George Maher, the superintendent of [illegible] Sunday school of our church at Westminster, Md. Mr. Maher is to give the devotional talks at the Leadership Training school at High Point, and will give the lecture there, also. He is using this method to help raise $1,000 which he has pledged to the Pine Ridge school. Those of you who can attend either [illegible] these lectures will be amply repaid, and will help him to help Pine Ridge.

I should be very glad if any of the brethren [illegible] members of their churches in the hospital in Greensboro at any time—or any [illegible] of any of the churches having relatives there—will let me know. I shall be glad to visit them and do anything possible to cheer them up. Just drop me a card.

C. W. BATES, Pastor

Lexington, State Street.—Our work is going forward in an encouraging way. All branches are functioning and all are doing good work.

We are glad to have three of our most faithful young ladies back in their place — MissLila Aron, who taught in Reids high school the past term, and Misses Mildred Leonard and Helen Harkey from their respective colleges.

Mrs. Maier attended a meeting of the Executive Board of the North Carolina Branch of Women's Work held at Weaverville last week. The opening day of the meeting—Tuesday—was the fourteenth anniversary of the opening of the Bethel Home and Mr. Casto celebrated the event with a reception in the evening to which the ladies of the board meeting were invited as honor guests. Mrs. Maier reports a profitable and most enjoyable meeting.

The official board of the church meets Tuesday night of this week.

The Woman's Auxiliary met Monday night at the church. Mr . Foster's circle was hostess to the entire group.

The devotionals were led by Miss Pauline Forcum. Mrs. Maier gave a partial report of the board meeting held in Pittburgh.

The mid-week prayer meetings are held on Wednesday evening of each week and ar well attended and most helpful and uplifting to all who attend.

A Children's Day program will be given at the hour for evening worship Sunday.

A good representation of our people attended the double celebration at the Cildren's Home on June 8 and all enjoyed it very much.

First Church, High Point.—The State Christian Endeavor convention, which assembled at High Point College last week, was a decided success, and brought 350 fine young people to the city. The newly wedded pair left immediately after the ceremony for a honeymoon trips to points in Pennsylvania, where they will be guests of relatives of the bride. Both these young people are popular in the city, and a host of friends and relatives extend congratulations and loving wishes for a happy and prosperous married life together.

Wyatt A. Pickens, associate professor of Spanish in Louisiana State University, has arrived from Baton Rouge to spend the summer vacation with his mother and other relatives. He will go to Asheboro tomorrow to spend the night with the family of his uncle, William J. Armfield, and to say goodbye to his cousin, Britt M. Armfield, who will leave Thursday for a trip to Europe with Congressman Walter D. Lambeth.

Mrs. John S. Pickett has gone with a party of friends to Chicago to visit the World's Fair.

Many friends of Mrs. R. I. Farmer, who is taking treatment for arthritis at Tucson, Arizona, will rejoice to learn that she is improving. She underwent a second minor operation on Saturday, June 10 at St Mary's Hospital, and has been removed to her temporary home, 621 E. Sixth street.

The Leadership Training school, an annual event will convene at High Point college June 26, continuing through July 1. Rev. T. J. Whitehead of Greensboro is president and [illegible] registration for the training school will begin Monday morning, June 26; in the afternoon of that day a picnic wil be held, and in the evening a musical contest will take place under the direction of Rev. Mrs. J. T. Bowman will preside over the vesper sirvecs and on Friday evening the Young People's banquet will be held.

Wyatt J. Armfield continues quite ill at his home, 704 W. Broad St. On account of his advanced age, being in his ninetieth year, small hope is entertained for his recovery.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Farmer was the guest for the past week-end of Misses Catherine Brandon and Anne Louise Sherrill of Winston-Salem. She accompaied them home from the C. E. convention here.

Shoals, Pinnacle-Mt. Zion.—Our Sunday school is going on in the usual way, we feel like we have the very best little Sunday school to be found anywhere but our attendance is not what it should be by any means.

We were very sorry, Sunday morning, to learn that our pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, was ill and could not fill his appointment. We hope he will soon be restored to his usual health.

Rev. Wilie Gough, Baptist minister, preached at the 11 o'clock service and also at 8 o'clock in the evening. He preached two good sermons to an attentive congregation. We were very glad to have him to preach for us.

We are glad to report that H. E. Kiger, one of our most faithful and oldest members who has been ill several weeks, is improving.

Our revival meeting will begin the second Sunday in July. Pray for us and the meeting, that we may have an old time revival.

Tabernacle,Julian.—At our second quarterly conference some weeks ago, Brother C. A. Smith and Brother R. L. Jones were made the nominees for delegate to the Annual Conference. Other matters of business were cared for with harmony and interest. In the matter of a better financial system a considerable interest was manifested.

On June 4 the annual Memorial services were observed. Rev. George F. Millaway, a former pastor and who began to observe memorial services at Tabernacle was with us and preached at the 11 o'clock hour. The many friends of Brother Millaway were glad to see him. He preached a good sermon which was enjoyed by all. In the afternoon memorial services were conducted for those who had died during the year.

Children's Day service was observed on June 11. The service was well prepared and those taking part rendered their parts well. The offering for missions was not all we hoped it might have been but the amount collected was to be appreciated.

A number of our people attnded the Christian Endeavor convention and brought back good reports. They were highly pleased and we believe it will mean better work for our local society. We have a fine group of young people much to be appreciated.

Our good Julian people presented the parsonage with a good lawn mower. This enables the parsonage lawn to have a more attractive appearance. Thanks to the good Julian people.

Shoo fly! The parsonage has recently been screened. All doors and windows are now fully screened with good substantial screens. The Tabernacle people get credit for this fine job. Thanks, Tabernacle.

The people continue to be thoughtful of us in so many ways. These people have just one pounding during the year and that is all the while. It is just oe kind deed after another. The pastor being favored with a nice parcel of ground on which are growing many nice things for the family use. The good people have seen to it that it is kept plowed and much assistance has been rendered. Thanks to the good farmers.

GEO. L. CURRY, Pastor.

Young Men's Wide Awake Class, Shiloh.—We had a large crowd present Sunday, June 18. The class was called to order and the business was transacted. After this, the teacher, Mr. Evans, took charge. He taught a very interesting lesson in an interesting way. The lesson was about the Resurrection of Christ and about the women going to the grave to emblam the body of Christ. They knew the stone was in front of the tomb and they knew they could not roll it away; but went to the grave anyway. If they had not gone but had stayed at home they would not have found out that the Lord had risen as early as they. But they had faith and started. When they told Peter he did not believe them but ran to the place to see for himself whether the Lord had risen or not. He saw Christ while he was at the grave. This must have given Peter great comfort because he had denied Christ just a couple of days before and did not get to see Him between this and His death. There were many other inetresting facts brought out about the lesson.

The class is ever striving to climb upward and we request your prayers for us.

Efland, Orange Charge.—Sunday was a good day for us. Brother Wililams brought us a splendid sermon in the morning. Sunday night was the Children's Day program. All the children rendered their parts well. Much credit is due Misses Kathleen Brown and Eloise Efland for the training of the children.

Our Sunday school is well attended and every one seems to be interested in the work.

REPORTER.

Shiloh.—Shiloh was very pleasantly surprised Sunday morning by the arrival of Dr. Taylor of High Point for the 11 o'clock service. Dr. Taylor brought an inspiring message from II Tim. 4,16-17-18, with emphasis on verse 18, "The Lord stood with me and strengthened me." In his message he told us that the Lord stands by and strengthens a seeking sinner. Also he stands by and strengthens the Christian. There is not much joy in following at a long distance; the religion of Jesus Christ is more than form it is an inner experience of the heart. The inner man is the source of our spiritual life, so "Be strog in the inner man."

The Lord stands by and strengthens when we are doing the work of the Lord. The church is not to entertain folks, but to save them to "come to the help of the Lord against the mighty."

Also he Lord stands by and strengthens the Sunday school teacher and all organizations of the church when they stand by Him. Surely these are trying times. Many who were rich a short while ago are almost in want; but, thank God. There are things that can't be lost by bank failures that are worth far more than material things. Yea, when we have God and hope left, we are still rich. When everything goes, and we are left alone, it's worth something to know that God stands by and strengthens. Not only does He stand by and strengthen, but delivers us from every evil work and preserves us. Does that mean that we will be delivered from suffering? No, but it does mean that our spiritual bodies will be preserved, our joy unimpaired and the inner man unhurt. Then the crown awaits all who can say with Paul, "I've fought a good fight, I've kept the faith."

Dr. Taylor is giving his time and service during the month of June to the interest of "Christian Education."

The Woman's Auxiliary is actually engaged in raising money for the Lord by selling ice cream, the ingredients of which are donated by the members of the circles.

All departments of the church seeme to be progressing noramlly.

MRS. W. L. SHOAF, Reporter.

First Church, Lexington.—Our pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, filled his regular appointment Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. He preached for us a wonderful sermon using as his subject, "The Christian and His Money." Mr. Isley stated that the four essentials were God's word, prayer, love for others, and the grace of giving with particular emphasis on the last mentioned. He brought out all the different instances, from the tree in the Garden of Eden to the World War, where God took His share even though man did not give ito Him as he should have. This is a subject of universal importance and interest.

In the evening he brought us another inspiring message. This time he used as a text Matt. 6:33, "But seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." As a basis for the sermon he used the story of Lazarus and the rich man.

Our Sunday school seems to be increasing in attendance and interest. Records show an increase of twenty over the attendance of a year ago. Committees have bee appointed and plans are being made for our Children's Day program and also our memorial service which will be held July 9.

MARGARET LEE SWINK, Reporter.

Corinth Church, Littleton Charge.—Since our last report our pastor, Rev. E. A. Bingham, has filled all appointments here and he has brought us some wonderful messages. The first Sunday morning the doors of the church were opened and Mr. J. B. Reid came to us by letter. We welcome this young man into our church.

We have organized a union Sunday school the M. P. and Baptists going together on account of the small crowd at each church. One quarter at Baptist church using Baptist literature and one at our Church using M. P. literature. We are hoping all will co operate and make a good Sunday school.

The fourth Sunday in May we held our memorial service at this church. Rev. E. A. Bingham brought us a wonderful message, after which we went to the cemetery and put flowers on all the graves.

At this writing one of our most loyal members, Mr. Lawrence Morris, of Tarboro, is critically ill, he has had two blood transfusions in the past week. We are asking the prayers of all Christian people for this young man. Mr. Morris is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Marion J. Morris.

The Loyalty League committee is not getting the results we hoped for. We are asking your support and prayers.

MRS. B. F. MORRIS, Reporter.

Spring Church C. E. Society.—The Spring church Christian Endeavor society was recently re-organized. The following young people were elected to office: Miss Virginia Massey, president; Miss Catherine Crew, vice-president; Miss Mildred Mitchell, secretary-treasurer; Mis Vista Robinson, corresponding secretary; Misses Elizabeth Massey and Marjorie Robinson and Mr. Lunsford Crew, program committee.

The first meeting was held Wednesday, June 14 at 8 p. m. The attendance was good as about 25 were present.

The devotional was conducted by Miss Dorthine Massey. The following young people gave very interesting talks: Misses Pauline Massey, Marjorie Robinson, Sara Marie Neese, Catherine Crew and Mr. Ellis Crew. Special music was renderd by Misses Mabel and Helen Massey. Several of the young people recited verses of, Scripture.

The meeting then adjourned to meet again June 25 at 8:00 p. m.

VISTA ROBINSON, Cor. Sec'y.

Mocksville Charge.—We are still existing but we are not making very much progress during this depression.

Our pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, has been delievering splendid sermons throughout the year.

We were indeed glad to have with us on Sunday night our president, Dr. R. M. Andrews. He delivered an inspiring message. We would be glad for him to be with us again.

Our Sunday school is under the splendid leadership of W. D. Foster and is moving along nicely.

Our revival meeting will be held the first Sunday in September. We wish to ask all former pastors and Herald readers to pray the greatest revival ever held here because we realize we need it. Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

LEONA HENDRIX, Reporter.

Reheboth, Granville Circuit.—It has been quite a while since I have written but it was not because I did not have anything to report for we have been quite busy down here at Rehoboth.

Our pastor, Brother C. L. Spencer, has been bringing us splendid and inspiring messages each appointment. We had a grand fifth Sunday rally of the Sunday schools. The best program we ever had at a rally day. The crowd was large and the dinner both good and plentiful.

Our Sunday school attendance has improved some but not near what we would like for it to be.

We had our Children's Day exercises the third Sunday in June. The program was good showing that the children had been well trained by Misses Crystal Bobbitt, Sue Harris, Lucy Rogers and Mrs. Maude Hight. One feature of the exercise which was greatly enjoyed was a quintette by some of our young men, namely: Carey and Randolph Cheatham, Henry Hunt Jones, Edward Thornburg and Mr. Lucius [illegible]. "Boys, if you knew how much we enjoyed your singing, I am sure you would sing for us often."

Our revival begins the first Sunday in July. Brother Spencer has been doing all the preaching at the revival for the past year or two and it was very hard on him but this year, Brother B. M. Williams will assist him. We are looking forward and praying that it will indeed be a great and grand revival.

There will be a joint meeting of the three auxiliaries on Granville circuit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Spencer on next Friday night, June 23. We all look forward each year to this for we all enjoy this meeting best of all. When we meet at the parsonage with Brother and Mrs. Spencer, we receive such a cordial wlecome and feel so at home that it makes us feel indeed like one big family working together to advance the Kingdom of God.

We are asking each one to pray for our revival, that it may be a great one.

H. L. W., Reporter.

Meriah.—Fathers' Day was observed the second Sunday with a special sermon for the fathers by our pastor.

We are having good attendance for both Sunday school and church, much interest is being shown.

Children's Day service will be held the fourth Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A good program is being planned and the public is invited to attend.

We were mighty glad to have Brother E. P. Sharpe with us for Sunday school last Sunday. Brother Sharpe has been ill since last November.

A very interesting sermon was heard last Sunday, the text being the 27th verse of the 20th chapter of St. John.

A remarkable chorus from Greensboro will be heard the first Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

Many from here attended the Silver Wedding Anniversary of Dr. and Mrs. Dixon at the Children's Home on June 8. A splendid program was rendered. May God bless the Herald and its readers.

MRS. GEO. L. GLENN, Reporter.

First Church, Concord.—Our pastor, Rev. Morgan gave us two good sermons Sunday and we were sorry that there was not more folks present to hear them. We know some of our folks were kept away on account of being sick or sickness in the family. Mrs. P. J. Mann returned home from the hospital last Wednesday and she is getting along as well as could be expected. Mrs. Mann and family have our prayers and sympathy. We hope it is the Lord's will that Mrs. Mann will soon begin to improve and be able to be up. Mr. S. H. Teeter has gone to Albemarle for treatment by Dr. [illegible]. Mr. Teeter has been in bad health for some time and we hope that the treatment will be much benefit to him. There are lots of measles here among the children which has kept many of our children away from Sunday school. Virginia and Iris Burris were able to be at Sunday school after getting over the measles.

Mrs. P. H. Scarboro and Miss Mildred Harris sang for us last Sunday and we were also glad to have special music by the junior choir.

We were glad to have Missss Mildred Waddell with us; she is home for vacation from the Greensboro College.

Miss Agnes Litaker and Miss Louise Brown attended the Young People's Conference in High Point. I did not get to hear their report but I know they had a good report to make from the looks of Miss Agnes' notes.

The wedding bells have been ringing around here since our last report. One of our Sunday school teachers, Miss A9rnie Ruth Wilhelms was married to Mr. Hoye Misenheimer, June 4. The ceremony was performed in Oragn church, the Lutheran church near China Grove of which Miss Wilhelms is a member. Miss Wilhelms has been making her home in Concord for several years so she just seems as if she belongs to our church and we don't feel like we could do without her and we are glad that she will still make her home here.

On June 15, Miss Fannie Little and Mr. Earl Cochran were married in York, S. C. Miss Fannie is one of our Sunday school workers.

Last Saturday night, June 17, Miss Ada Festerman and Mr. J. M. Blackwelder were married at the parsonage. We wish for all these folks a happy future.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Sides and two of their sons, Jurney and Cornelius are attending the World's Fair.

Rev. Morgan and family and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest LIitaker and family are spending this week at Lake Waccamaw. We were very glad to have Rev. Lloyd Love and wife with us two weeks ago; and Rev. Love preached for us on Sunday night.

Mr. Love's mother was buried on Monday. Our hearts go out in sympathy for Brother Love. Some of our folks were called to Bessemer City on account of the death of Mrs. R. E. Scarboro. Mrs. Scarobor was a sister-in-law of Mrs. W. R. Earnhardt and Mrs. A. M. Honeycutt.

REPORTER.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—In the absence of our pastor, Rev. 'N. M. Harrison, Jr., promotional secretary of High Point College, filled the appointment at the 11 o'clock hour on June 11. Using the text found in Deut. 33-25, he preached a most interesting sermon.

Dr. G. I. Humphreys, president of High Point College, preached in the evening service. His text was, "My God Shall Supply all your needs according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus," Phillippians 4-19. He delivered the message in his usual masterful manner to a very appreciative audience.

On Sunday, June 18, Rev. W. L. Owen preached at 11 o'clock, his subject being "A Separated Life," and Rev. P. S. Kennett preached at the evening service on "The Call of Gideon." At this service a beautiful quartet was rendered by Messrs. C. A. King and John Taylor, and Misses Louise Welch and Frances Taylor.

Our Children's Day program is to be given next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The C. E. societies will have charge of the evening service.

Last evening at 6:30 o'clock Circle No. 3 had charge of the program for the general meeting of the auxiliary circles. They served a picnic supper at the Welch Cabin on the Winston road. The following program was given: Chorus "Day Is Dying in the West." Scripture reading, by Juanita Hayworth. Prayer, by Alene Kelly. Flute solo, "Trees," Joyce Kilmer, by Iris Welch. A Talk on Nature, by Mrs. V. L. Smith. A busines session followed with good reports.

Vacation Bible school is being conducted this week for the children in our church. Miss Lois Hedgecock is in charge with the following teachers: Messrs. Hermon Yokeley and John Taylor, Misses 'Frances Taylor, Doris Hedgecock, Lucille Payne, Doris Welborn and Vivian Cook.

Lebanon had 29 registered in the C. E. convention held last week at High Point College.

We had a good representation on the official staff. Six of our Endeavorers served as ushers: Herman Yokeley, chief, Staley Montgomery, Louis Huff, Lake Montgomery, Jewell and Iris Welch. Miss Jewell Welch was city registrar; Miss Ida Guyer, state registrar, and also state treasurer. Miss Luielle Payne, secretary of convention; Miss Juanita Hayworth, assistant secretary of convention; Miss Vera Smith, chairman of Badge committee; Miss Frances Taylor, chairman Decoration committee; Misses Vera Smith and Iris Welch served on the music committee; Miss Jewell Welch member of the Resolution committee; Iris Welch, members of literature and supply committee.

Our Junior C. E. society gave a dramatization to the State Junior committee.

The State Intermediate Union C. E. sponsored a speaking contest. There were eight speakers. Miss Lois Yokeley, one of our endeavorers, won the gold medal in this contest.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—In come ways the work is moving on splendidly. But in others not so well. We hope we can soon report well in all ways.

We exted our prayers and sympathy to our pastor and family in the death of Rev. Love's mother. As Rev. Love was away the second Sunday morning, Brother Lee Leonard of Greenville filled his place. He brought us a very ispiring message. He will be with us again the fourth Sunday morning. We are glad to have him every time it is possible.

Sunday night the Junior C. E. rendered an interesting program on "My Knowledge of the Old and New Testament." They certainly are a group of willing, ever ready workers! The church is very proud of them and hope they keep up the good work.

Sunday afternoon, June 4, the Girl's Senior class with Mrs. R. T. Bennette as teacher, carried a shower of lovely gifts to Miss Geneva Hamby, who has been sick for a long time.

Plans are being made for the repainting of the inside of the church. We hope to get this done as soon as possible.

A special Silver Offering was sent to the Children's Home, June 8.

The Greer Singing convention will meet here the third Sunday in July. Come and bring some one with you.

Some renewals and subscriptions are being sent in this week. Best wishes to our editor on his birthday—and every other day; also all Herald readers.

Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE ACCEPTS FARM PRODUCE IN PART PAYMENT OF COLLEGE EXPENSES

High Point College challenges the rural youth of limited means, or those whose assets are temporarily non-productive. She will permit them to pay a part of their college expenses with farm produce.

The ambitious boy or girl can gather up this surplus, or plant a little extra, or "raise" a few more chickens, hogs, or head of cattle, and use this to help him to realize his educational dreams.

The college will accept the following produce, at market price or better, for as much as a half of the college expenses: Vegetables, corn, wheat, cotton, peanuts, chickens, eggs, hog-meat or beef.

Receiving stations will be established in different sections of the state and in particular localities where the interest justifies. The produce will be brought there at stated times and received by a college representative.

The schedule below gives the college charges, when payments are to be made, and the amounts to be paid in money and produce:

	Sept. 11	Nov. 6	Jan. 29	Mar. 26
Matriculation Fee	$25.00	.....	$25.00	.....
Tuition	25.00	$25.00	25.00	$25.00
Student Activities	6.00	.....	6.00	.....
Room and Board	57.50	57.50	57.50	57.50
Totals	$113.50	$82.50	$113.50	$82.50
Grand total				$392.00
May be paid:
Money	$56.75	$45.25	$56.75	$41.25
Produce	56.75	45.25	56.75	41.25
Totals	$113.50	$82.50	$113.50	$82.50
Grand total				$392.00

Farm produce will be accepted only from students who will live in the college dormitories. They must advise the college not later than July 15, 1933, the kind of produce and the approximate amount they desire to supply, and the approximate date when it will be delivered.

Kindness

Many hearts are pining away for want of kindness. Many homes are broken up because many men and women who took the marriage vows, promised to love each other to the end, have been unkind to each other.

Take the records of our divorce courts; often the reason given to the courts for asking for the privilege to break up the home is that of cruel treatment.

Our world needs more, yes, many more, kind words. Kind words uttered in a pleasant voice are easy to give; why not then he liberal with them?

It is not easy to give gold when you don't have any. When you can make a person happy by giving a kind word or two, why not give it? A kind word or a kind deed always has a reflective influence.

We should be kind to others not for the reward, but we cannot be kind to others without being benefited ourselves. To be kind to others who are kind to us is simply obeying the law of common honesty. But to be kind to those that have been unkind to us is Christ-like. We ar ecommanded to love our enemies. "For he is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil." (Luke 6:35.) We must be kind to the erring and unfortunate.

Here is a large field ripe unto the harvest opened up to us. Many people seem to think that kindness should not be given to some people. Here is a case that came under my own observation. A young woman had lived a crooked life, but she went to Sunday school and when the special meeting came on she came up as a penitent and professed Christ. She with some others presented themselves as candidates for membership in the church. She was voted in with the others. Just as soon as this was done the members of that church began to plan to get that poor woman out of the church. In a few days after she had joined the church a committee of women visited her and asked her to withdraw from the church; never said one word to encourage the poor woman. This, it seems to me, was enough to have astounded the angels and almost enough to make them weep. Read John 8:3-11.

I LIKE TO READ BIOGRAPHY

Alexander Poe was right when he said: "The proper study of mankind is man."

This study may be carried on in many ways—by means of daily contacts in business, in labor, society, school, church, and in the home.

Thomas Fuller has given an excellent description of the purpose of biography: "To hand down to a future age the history of individual men or women, to transmit their exploits and characteristics."

Those are two good words—"exploits" and "characteristics." The reports need not be bold or striking to merit attention, and the characteristics need not be wild or peculiar in order to be instructive.

Joseph Collins well says: "Biography presents a picture of a mind, a soul, a heart; of an environment; of successes and failures that make, or seek to make, the subject immortal. Biography strives to make the subject as real as a character in fiction; actually it makes him as real as life."

Plutarch's Lives of Famous Men is a good book to start with. These sketches are brief, discerning, and pointed; and they train the reader to see, to think, and to understand. You will do well to keep a copy of Plutarch within easy reach, and to read one of the Lives at odd moments for refreshment.

Entertainment, instruction, and inspiration may be had from reading such modern biographies as The Making of An American, by Jacob Rees; Up From Slavery, by Booker T. Washington; The Life of Helen Kellar, and Lord Charnwood's Life of Abraham Lincoln.

Jacques Aymont says: "There is neither picture nor image of marble, nor triumphal arch, nor pillar, nor sepulcher that can match the durableness of an eloquent biography with qualities which it should have."

Biographies are good to read, consider, and inwardly digest.

—The editor of the Herald thanks Dr. C. W. Bates and those who joined with him in noticing the editor's anniversary last week. Most of his anniversaries have come and gone without announcement. This one was a great exception. Our friends now seem more numerous and nearer to us. We have a more kindly feeling toward each one that came or sent or wrote. There stand out in memory a beautiful letter from a little girl in Greer, S. C., whom we have never seen; and a letter from a dear brother now shut in with whom we had pleasant business relations for many years. These and other communciations are among our treasures. To complete the day Dr. Bates and members of Calvary church came in the evening equipped for an ice-cream supper. This we were permitted to enjoy with the company. There were prayers and songs and our visitors departed wishing us "many returns." In behalf of the Herald let us thank those who took occasion to extend the subscription list.

TWENTY-ONE ANNUAL CONFERENCES

Rev. J. E. Pritchard, D.D.

For some time it has been on my mind to record some reminiscences of the 21 Annual Conferences which I have attended as a pastor. In the hope that it may do some good I now proceed. Since it is my purpose to write wholly from memory there may creep in some errors. If so, I invite those who see the error or who think they see it to call my attention to it and I will do one of two things: namely, acknowledge the error or get out my files of the Journal and prove that it was not an error.

The first Conference that I attended as a pastor was the 1912 Conference at Burlington, though I had served six months on Halifax Circuit, having been assigned to that work by the Henderson Conference while I was still in Seminary. Rev. T. E. Davis, who later went to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was host to the Conference. Rev. C. A. Cecil was elected President of the Conference for the first time. At that time it was customary for the retiring President to serve on the stationing committee, as he was more familiar with the field than the new President. Therefore, Dr. W. E. Swain, the retiring President, was the ministerial member of the stationing committee. One thing that stands out in my memory was the enthusiasm that prevailed in the Conference in regard to the Children's Home, which institution was to be moved from Denton to High Point. A campaign had been launched during the summer with remarkable success and the Conference was following up the effort in order to complete the task. At this Conference Dr. F. T. Tagg, of Baltimore, editor of The Methodist Protestant, was present. A remark was made by Dr. A. G. Dixon in the memorial service which I still remember. It was this: "Dr. Tagg, some of these times in our memorial services we are going to include you, even though you are not a member of this Conference. But I want you to know while you are still with us that we appreciate you and love you." I am quite sure that it was in this memorial serivce also that Brother Bethea spoke of the life of Rev. E .A. Plyler and made this catchy statement: "It made no difference where Brother Plyler's sermon started; it always ended up at Calvary." One other thing about this Conference was the lateness of the hour of adjournment. The business of the Conference, with the exception of the reading of the stationing committee's report, was finished about midnight on Monday night. But when the report of the committee was read one brother called for the committee on appeals and this committee took his case in hand and it was 1:30 or later Tuesday morning when the Conference adjourned.

The 1913 Conference met in the First Church, High Point, with Dr. A. G. Dixon host. The old building was used at that time, as the new one was not built for several years afterwards. Rev. C. A. Cecil was re-elected President of the Conference. The outstanding thing about this Conference as I recall it was the discussion of union with the United Brethren Church. Rev. Lyman E. Davis, D. D., President of the General Conference, was present and made a strong speech in favor of the union. And here is a strange thing: The writer had argued all the summer against the union and at Conference voted for it. The vote was unanimous with the exception of one vote, in so far as I remember. But after the Methodist Protestant Church had voted to unite, the Bishops of the United Brethren decided not to put to a vote, so the whole thing fell through.

It was at this Conference also that the Rev. T. J. Ogburn arose and asked for his letter of standing after having preached in our Church for almost 50 years.

The 1914 Conference was held in Asheville, with Dr. C. W. Bates as host. Rev. C. A. Cecil was again elected President. It was a new experience for a great many of our people to go to "The Land of the Sky," so the Conference was swamped with visitors. This was in the days when free entertainment was furnished everybody who came. It was during this Conference that the Blue Ridge-Atlantic Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, with Bishop Henderson, presiding, came in a body and paid us a visit. Bishop Henderson spoke for his Conference and Dr. McCulloch, the editor, spoke for ours.

On this hot day when the temperature is almost 100 degrees it might be well to speak of the blizzard that came one night during that Conference. Late one afternoon there was a bank of cloud lying low in the West. While we were in the church that night a regular snow-storm descended upon the city with very cold weather. Conference was the third week in November at that time. On Tuesday morning we got on the train and started east and the ground was covered with snow as far east as Durham. After we passed Durham we did not see any more snow.

The 1915 Conference was held in Grace Church, Greensboro, with Dr. R. M. Andrews host. Rev. C. A. Cecil declined re-election and Rev. G. W. Holmes was elected President. Grace Church at that time was on the corner of West Washington and Greene streets. At this Conference Rev. G. L. Curry, who had been serving the Burlington Church, asked the Conference to lend him to the Board of Home Missions for work at Seattle, which request was granted. The writer was elected reporter to succeed Brother Curry, who had rendered signal service to the Conference in getting the news to the papers.

The 1916 Conference was held in the First Church, Winston-Salem, with Dr. J. D. Williams as host. Rev. G. W. Holmes was re-elected President. On the floor of this Conference was a vigorous discussion in regard to levying all the new budget sent down by the General Conference. After much discussion it was decided to levy a part of it and to go to men of means to get the rest. In this Conference Dr. F. T. Benson, who had been elected editor of The Methodist Protestant at the recent General Conference was a visitor and stirred the Conference with his eloquence.

The 1917 Conference was held at Mebane with Rev. W. F. Kennett as host. Dr. R. M. Andrews was elected President. Dr. Benson and Dr. George H. Miller were present and both spoke, the former for The Methodist Protestant, and the latter for the Board of Education. Dr. Charles H. Beck was present and spoke for the Board of Home Missions. The Conference sermon was preached by Rev. J. H. Moton from the text, "But tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high." Luke 24:49.

The 1918 Conference, which was originally scheduled to meet in Concord, was changed to Grace Church, Greensboro, Dr. C. W. Bates, host. The terrible epidemic of flu had somewhat subsided, but things were still upset. The sessions of the Conference were not behind closed doors; however, the public was not urged to attend, simply as a precautionary measure. Dr. R. M. Andrews was re-elected President.

The 1919 session of the Conference was held at Concord, with Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk as host. Dr. Andrews was re-elected President. The writer preached the Conference sermon and Dr. J. D. Williams preached the ordination sermon. Representatives to the General Conference were elected, the balloting beginning, as usual, on Friday afternoon and lasting until Saturday afternoon. This Conference petitioned the General Conference to change the law in regard to how often communion should be observed, so that churches that wished to observe it quarterly instead of monthly could do so without violating the law. The General Conference granted the request by simply changing one word, "shall" to "should."

The 1920 Conference was held in Enfield with Rev. D. R. Williams host. Dr. Andrews was re-elected President. This session will ever stand out for its stand in regard to a college. Dr. Andrews in his report asked that the Conference do one of two things, namely, build a college or quit talking about it. After much discussion it was voted to appoint a committee with power to act and if, in the judgment of the committee, the time had come to build the college the committee should proceed. The committee was composed of Dr. Andrews, Dr. L. W. Gerringer, Mr. J. Norman Wills, Capt. A. M. Rankin, and the writer. This committee met in the office of the Odell Hardware Company in Greensboro, canvassed the siutation and decided to proceed, setting up a campaign committee of Dr. Andrews, Dr. Gerringer and yours truly.

The 1921 Conference was held in First Church, Burlington with Dr. S. W. Taylor as host. At this Conference was the beginning of the Harvard Plan of entertainment. Dr. Andrews was re-elected President. It was at this Conference that the plan of Conference Districts was adopted, this writer writing the resolution and getting Dr. Bates to sign it with him.

The 1922 session was held in Henderson with yours truly the host. Dr. A. G. Dixon was elected President. The Hon. T. T. Hicks made the welcome address and Rev. G. L. Curry preached the Conference sermon. This session may be remembered because of the long discussion concerning Young People's Work. The Conference finally voted for the Conference to elect someone to head up the work rather than for the young people themselves to elect as had been previously done. Rev. N. M. Harrison was elected.

The 1923 Conference was held in the Community Church in Thomasville with Reev. R. S. Troxler host. Dr. Dixon was re-elected President. At this Conference someone made the statement that Mr. C. F. Finch had done such wonderful things in building the new church that he ought to be heard. There was a unanimous call for Mr. Finch. He came to the platform and made a speech that was remarkable for its brevity. He said, "I have heard it said that those who do the least say the most, we are glad to have you here."

The 1924 Conference was held in Reidsville with Dr. J. D. Williams host. Dr. Dixon was re-elected President. This Conference might be put down as one of delightful fellowship and good feeling. This was the first to be held in that city and everybody seemed to be glad to be there. One of the touching incidents of that Conference was when Dr. Dixion, the President, presented his aged father to the Conference.

The 1925 session was held in the new First Church, High Point, with Dr. George R. Brwon host. Dr. Dixon was re-elected President. The splendid new building thrilled the Conference and frequent reference was made to the achievements of the local church. Financial problems of the College were beginning to become acute, so much time was given to a discussion of it.

The 1926 session was held in Grace Church, Greensboro, with Dr. S. K. Spahr host. Dr. Dixion was re-elected President. Rev. J. R. Hutton preached the ordination sermon. During the year two of the most useful members of the Conference had passed on, namely, Dr. C. L. Whitaker and Rev. J. H. Bowman. The writer was elected chairman of the Faculty succeeding Dr. Whitaker. Mr. W. L. Ward, of Asheboro, was elected lay member of the stationing committee. Someone paid him this compliment on the Conference floor: "When he was chairman of the County Board of Commissioners of Randolph County he could turn down a delegation that appeared before the Board with a request and they would go away feeling better than if somebody else had granted them their request."

The 1927 session was held in Asheboro with the writer as host. Dr. S. W. Taylor was elected President. Dr. L. W. Gerringer preached the Conference sermon. Mr. R. R. Ross, who has long been prominent in the church, presented the Conference with a beautiful gavel made of Randolph County wood. At this Conference Rev. J. H. Moton was superannuated. During the service he became very happy and shouted aloud as only he could do. It was during this Conference that the janitor paid one of our preachers this compliment: "You know, Bro. Blank is one of the finest men I ever saw. Why he sat with me down there in the furnace room half of the time during the sessions of the Conference."

The 1928 Conference was held in Winston-Salem with Rev. J. H. Moton, who supplied for a few months, as host. This Conference can also be put down as one of long and much animated discussion concerning the Young People's Work. Dr. Taylor was reelected President. Dr. H. L. Feeman, president of Adrian College, delivered a series of fine devotional talks. The writer preached the Conference serman and Rev. J. A. Burgess preached the ordination sermon. Dr. C. W. Bates preached at the Sunday evennig hour. One of the high moments of the Conference was the visit and address of Bishop Rondthaler of the Moravian Church.

The 1929 session was held in Calvary Church, Greensboro, with Rev. C. W. Bates host. Dr. Taylor was re-elected President. Rev. H. W. Maier preached the ordination sermon. Finances of High Point College were pressing for solution. The Conference voted to stand behind the Bond issue and to guarantee the interest. At this Conference also was considerable discussion of the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD. One division felt that to cut the HERALD to half its size would solve its financial problem. It was found that this would not considerably lower the cost of printing. It was at this Conference that a goal of three thousand subscribers was set.

The 1930 Conference was held at Albemarle, with Rev. J. R. Anderson as host. The Conference was delighted with the beautiful new church. Dr. Taylor was re-elected President. Rev. H. F. Fogleman preached the Conference sermon and by this was transformed from a previous seeming visitor at Confrence into one of the most useful and vigorous men on the Conference floor, since then preseting some of the most useful and workable plans presented on the Conference floor. At this Conference the College and the HERALD and church union all came in for a share of the time. One of the great speeches was that by Dr. Frank W. Hickman,of Duke University, as fraternal messenger from the M. E. Church, South. This was also Dr. G. I. Humphreys' first Conference with us and he thrilled the audience with his eloquence in regard to High Point College. Also at this Conference Rev. J. W. Hulin was superannuated after having preached a good many years and having surpassed all of us in the labors more abundant when the age at which he began is considered.

The 1931 Conference was held at High Point with Rev. Roy I. Farmer as the genial host. Dr. Taylor was re-elected President. Rev. R. A. Hunter preached the Conference sermon and Rev. G. F. Millaway the ordination sermon. Revs. G. F. Millaway and E. G. Lowdrmilk was superannuatede, the former having served 41 years and the latter about 35 years in the ministry. Brother Millaway was presented by Rev. N. G. Bethea, while Brother Lowdermilk was presented by Dr. J. D. Williams. Dr. A. G. Dixon made some appropriate remarks about the splendid labors of these brethren. Other men wanted to speak, but the hour was late and the Conference was pretty well worn out, so they refrained. In this Conference was the most eloquent short speech that I have heard at Conference in the 21 years I have attended. It was by Dr. R. M. Andrews in regard to certain unethical practices that were being resorted to on the Conference floor in regard to the election of representatives to the General Conference. Dr. Andrews arose and stood silent for a few sconds, his lips quivering like a leaf. Then in about two or three sentences he delivered himself. But the voting was about over. So I hereby nominate him to make a similar speech when the balloting starts in 1935.

The 1932 session was held at Burlington with Dr. Fred Paschal as the smiling host. Dr. R. M. Andrews was elected President, there being a neck and neck race between him and Dr. C. W. Bates. When the writer's vote had dropped from 24 votes on the first ballot to five on the second he arose before the third ballot was taken and stated that on account of pressing business he was afraid he could not give the office as much time as it required and therefore he was asking his friends not to consider him. Dr. C. W. Bates preached the Conference sermon and Dr. T. M. Johnson preached the ordination sermon. As this Conference is a little too close to me in point of years for me to remember much about it, I will largely pass it up.

One thing I failed to say about the 1915 Conference was that Rev. J. A. Burgess preached the ordination sermon and as we came out of the church Rev. T. J. Ogburn, who was back as a visitor, said: "John Burgess is the finest preacher in North Carolina, regardless of denomination."

In these 21 years what have I seen? I have seen the Children's Home moved from the old building at Denton to the splendid location near High Point. I have seen the High Point College come into existence. I have seen the beautiful new Grace Church and the beautiful new First Church at High Point, the new church at Asheboro. I have seen the Community Church at Thomasville, the West End Church at Thomasville come into existence. There have also been established the churches in Lexington, Charlotte, Asheville, West End in Greensboro, Calvary in Greensboro; new buildings have been built at Enfield, Whitakers, Flat Rock on Flat Rock Circuit, Pleasant Union on Mount Pleasant Circuit, Fountain Place in Burlington, and South Side in Winston-Salem, and perhaps several others that I have overlooked. Yes, there is the new Sunday school building at Henderson that was built while I was pastor there; churches have been built in Spencer, and Kannapolis; buildings have been remodeled at Bethesda and Shiloh, near Lexington. A new church has been built at Love Joy on the Why Not Circuit, a new church has been built at Gray's Chapel on Randolph Circuit, and on and on and on. I have also seen many of the brethren slip away from us and go home to glory, among these being Revs. W. D. Fogleman, C. L. Whitaker, J. H. Bowman, J. H. Stowe, W. E. Swain, C. A. Cecil, W. R. Lowdermilk, C. E. M. Raper, W. C. Lassiter, N. Brittain, D. A. Braswell, J. H. Moton, P. L. Kinnaman, D. A. Highfill, T. J. Ogburn, and others whose names do not come to me just now but whose names will come to me perhaps after this is finished. They all wrought nobly and well, and I trust they saw their Pilot face to face as they crossed the bar.

By a study of this article it can be seen that Dr .C. W. Bates is the champion entertainer of the Conference, he having been host three times. Dr. J. D. Williams and I tie for second place with each having been host twice while no other man has been host more than once.

There are many other things I could have said if I had permitted myself to look in the Journal to establish some dates, but I have refrained from that. Now for the errors. Let them come, brethren.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

October, Pay-up month

Second Sunday in October, Rally Day, Promotion in Sunday school, etc.

November 8, Annual Conference meets at Thomasville Community church.

Facts-Finding

Out of 77 pastors we received reports from 73, giving a brief of what had been accomplished for the first half year of the Conference

Pastors had received on their salaries	27%
Churches had paid on A. C. B.	5%
Churches had paid on W. S. Budget	7%

Fifty per cent should have been paid on all these claims to bring them up to date May 14th. Thus it can be seen how far behind we are in a financial way.

Our total financial obligations for the year for pastors, A. C. B., and W. S., total $108,000. This amount divided among 30,000 members woud be an average contribution of $3.60, or seven cents a week per person. That would not be a hardship even in these hard times.

What Was Done Last Year

Pastors were promised $91,074 and received $80,594, 88% of total.

Annual Conference Budget, assessed $10,250; paid $3,435.00, about 34%.

World Service Budget, assessed $14,700; paid $7,669.00, about 50% of total.

This Year

The churches promised to pay their pastors, $83,740.00; A. C. B. and W. S., same as last year as to amounts assessed, but many churches did not pledge as much as they were asked to pay.

The Outlook

We do not know how the amounts paid to date compare with those paid for the same period last year, but suspect there is but slight difference. There are two points which differ: first, during the six months just passed through it has been harder to carry on than for the same period last year because of the hard times last year. But we now approach a rising tide, conditions are improving, wages are being increased, a spirit of hopefulness is stimulating us; so that the second half of the year should be a great deal better in every respect than the same period in last year. Therefore, we would say that the outlook is not bad—we are encouraged to expect better financial reports this year than were brought in last Conference.

Our Denominational Program in Brief

1. A Fellowship of Prayer formed.

2. Evangelism: 10% increase by conversion; 10% increase by reinstatement; 10% total increase above all membership losses for the year.

3. Missions. An educational program in the local church. Full observance of all special days. Formation of Women's Auxiliaries in all churches.

4. Education. Renewed emphasis upon Christian education by pastors. Strict observance of Rally Day, Thank-Offering Young People's Day. Enrollment of our own young people in our colleges.

5. Literature. Use our own literature in Sunday schools. Subscribe for Methodist Protestant Recordrr, Missionary Record and HERALD.

6. Financial. Pay all claims in full—pastor's salary, Annual Conference budget, and World Service budgets in full as pledged.

The above program in substance was set up by the Boards of Administration in Pittsburgh last May. The program should challenge us to do our best when it is harder to carry out this program than it has been in several years. And, after all, it is the test of hardship that reveals the finer qualities of mind and spirit by which we are moved. There should be no discouragement. Nothing is gained by being discouraged. The defeatist drummer only knows how to beat a retreat. Let us refuse to step to his brum-beats. Our way is forward.

New Zion-Why Not Charge, Rev. G. L. Reynolds, Pastor

This service had been arranged for a Circuit Rally of the members of the churches. (Out of the eight churches, six were represented. There was a fairly good attendance, not so many as some were expecting, but as many as others were looking for. I spoke at the morning service. Dinner was served on the grounds and a short afternoon program was had in which official duties of church officers were discussed together with plans and objectives for church work. It was the hope of those who planned the program to make the discussions as general as possible. Participation was not so wide, and yet we felt the meeting might be called good. Brother Reynolds is serving his second year, we believe, on this work. He has gone about his work in a methodical manner and is doing some constructive work here. The charge is too large. That is apparent. Eight churches is at least four too many to get good services from a pastor and too many to really work together well. We think that when times become somewhat normal again it might be well to consider what can be done to help this charge develop into more efficient churches. There are some fine people on this work. They are loyal, but so many of them are indifferent about the Conference activities and the general work of the church that church membership really does not mean enough to them. The organization at Seagrove, I have been told, has made satisfactory progress and doubtless in a few years it may become the key to the present problem. We enjoyed our visit to this work and hope that we can visit more of the churches on this work at another date.

Denton Charge, Rev. Robert Short, Pastor

The church building has been completely overhauled. Both brick and woodwork have been painted and many other improvements made. That about the altar was most noticeable. The church is now possibly the most beautiful of the village churches in all our Conference. It is likewise commodious, has many Sunday school rooms, and is thereby able to serve the community in a most acceptable manner. It was not the regular appointment, but a good congregation was present and we spoke to them of the work of the Conference. This church until a year ago has been one of the Honor Roll churches of the Conference and we are hoping to see them take their rightful place this year. Recently Bro. J. G. Rogrs and family from Burlington have connected themselves with the church here; already he has been active in its work since he came to Denton last year. We know that they will be much help to our loyal band of workers. Bro. Short has other churches, Pine Grove, Mount Ebal, nad Canaan, thus making his labors many and some of these rural churches are more in the sense of liabilities than of assets. Bro. Short has shown by his activities since coming into the Conference that he is neither indolent nor without plans in his pastoral duties. It was a pleasure to be in the home of the pastor for a few hours and to meet again many of the leaders of our church here.

LETTER FROM INDIA

Dear Dr. McCulloch: May 26th, 1933.

In the Herald for March 9th there appeared a letter which I had sent to our good friends, Rev. and Mrs. Bates. In a later issue the Secretary of the Board of Missions, Dr. Haddaway, took issue with a statement and replied in such a manner as to imply that I had failed to state facts. However, in the reply Dr. Haddaway missed the point entirely. "But what a pure waste of cash to send out new missionaries and at once call others home." The unnecessary expenditure of several hundred dollars was not touched upon at all in the reply. All of you who are in any way informed know that Mr. and Mrs. Cassen were newly returned to India when I wrote the letter in question. And even though we should be recalled at our request, the waste of cash would not be any the less. And furthermore, we never requested the Board to bring us home. After hearing from friends, both in Maryland and in North Carolina, that it was understood that we were to be recalled, and knowing the matter had been discussed in the office, I wrote to the Secretary asking if it were true. No reply has ever been received to this letter. The request I did make was to this effect: If we are to be recalled, will the Board please allow us to remain until after the evangelistic touring season? But if we were to be recalled at the end of our term, then if it made no great difference with the Board it would be a great saving for us to be spared the usual hot season vacation and allow us to come home during the spring months. It is true that we asked for a home, which the Board assured would be built for us. But recently when finances became so short we agreed to remain even though it meant living in two rooms.

This morning a cable came from the Board telling us that we may remain. I want to assure our friends in North Carolina that we have no desire to run away from India and a hard job. But even though we have been granted permission to remain, yet if finances do not improve over last year then we shall be forced to ask the Board to allow us to come back. In my department there are 20 families who look to me for every bite of food. For all these people I have been forced to find support for the months of Januay, and a part of February, nearly all of March and April, all of May, and unless we get money at once. for the whole of June. (A check has recently been sent, but the banks will not cash it.) We have received no check for the work since the first of the year. Let me say that what I have said is in no way to criticize the Church for not sending more. We know how hard it is to secure money. What I want to say is that we are with a whole heart behind the program of the church, and as your representatives desire to do our best to act as loyal Christians should. We are not complaining; our lot is no harder than yours; you are forced to suffer and we are ready to do so with you.

J. F. Minnis

TO THE MEN AND WOMEN VOTERS OF NORTH CAROLINA

On May 27, 1908, the people of North Carolina voted against the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor by a majority of 44,196. We are again called upon, on Tuesday, November 7, 1933, to do battle in this righteous cause.

No family, high or low, rich or poor, has escaped the galling curse of the liquor habit. It is the cankerworm that has eaten into the heart of the body politic. It has made the sweet water of life bitter. The tears that have been shed by an army of mourners speak to our heads as well as our hearts.

"In the sweetest bud the eating canker dwells."

No race is exempt; especially is it injurious to the Negro workman. Neither the employer nor employee wants about him in their daily tasks those who drink. The people of North Carolina, in the generations gone by, have resisted to the last ditch tyranny and opprsesion, cruelty and wrong.

OUR STORY PAGE

TOM'S SUBSTITUTE

A fine story of a New England home of years ago was recently told by one of the two boys concerned. now grown up.

Once I saved Tom from a promised whipping for leaving down the bars when he went after the cows at milking time, thus giving the young cattle left in the pasture a chance to get out, which they always did. Father reproved him several times, till finally he threatened to whip him if it happened again. Several weeks passed, and he left the bars down again. The young cattle got into the corn and did much damage.

The next morning father said nothing, but went about his usual work. Tom was gloomy; there was an air of depression in the house, and I was greatly troubled. I couldn't bear to have Tom whipped, nor could I blame father. At last I resolved to speak to him. He was opening some bundles of hay in the east meadow. I approached him slowly, for I did not feel sure of my ground, and stood still without saying a word. He looked up at me, and said, "Well, Joe, what is it?" "I have come to you to speak about Tom. I don't want him whipped." "I don't know how you can help it, my son. I cannot have my crops destroyed in this way, and I must keep my word." "Father, didn't you read this morning in the lesson: 'He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities. . . . and with His stripes we are healed'?" "Yes; what a boy you are to remember, Joe." "Well, I will take half the blows you intend to give Tom." "I can't do that, Joe; Tom is the transgressor, not you," father answered, his face softening, and his voice trembling a little. Then looking at me keenly, he asked: "Does Tom know you have come to me?" "No, he knows nothing of my coming." My father stood leaning on his pitchfork with both hands, looking down on the ground. At length he said, "Go and bring Tom."

I found Tom on the front porch with a sober face, trying to study. "Come with me, Tom; father wants you." "I know what he wants," he answered, turning a little pale. After a moment's hesitation he arose, saying, "I might as well go and have it done with." As we walked along I thought it best to give him a little advice, for there was no knowing beforehand what he would do. "Now, Tom, you must be humble, and answer father's questions in a kind way. I don't think he will be hard with you." Father stood as I had left him. He did not seem to see us; he was lost in reverie. "Father," I ventured timidly. "Tom is here." He looked up at us both quickly; then said, "Tom, do you remember these words in our Scripture-reading this morning: 'He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities: . . . and with His stripes we are healed?'" "Yes," said Tom, greatly surprised. "What do you think those words mean?" "That Christ suffered for us," replied Tom, his voice unsteadly and his face flushing up. "Well, Joe offers to suffer for you." Tom turned to me with a look on his face I shall never forget, and exclaimed, "No, Joe; you shall not do that." Then flinging his arms around my neck, he kissed me, and said, "The stripes belong to me, Father." Tears were falling down my father's face, and for a moment he could not speak. Then he said, "No, Tom, I cannot punish anybody now. I do not think you will ever forget this day. If you do, remember, Joe's offer holds good. I love my children, and want to do them all the good I can; but I must be obeyed, and this is one way of doing them good. You may go now." Then, with great awe upon us, we went to the house. Tom never left the bars down again.

The Lord Jesus not only offered to bear half our punishment, but He bore the whole (Is. 53:6), and we go free, through accepting Him as our Substitute.—C. D., in The Christian Graphic.

To the Men and Women Voters of North Carolina

This issue appeals to men and women of all parties; to men and women of all creeds; it is above party, above creeds, above nationalities; it is a matter of conscience.

Be not deceived with false arguments, and let no foreign hand—the predatory wealth gained and to be gained from this evil—dictate to North Carolinians, a free and independent people. The economic waste of money spent for intoxicating beverages is appalling. Millions of dollars that should be devoted to home-building and economic recovery will be siphoned out of this State by Liquor Lords living in cities and states outside of North Carolina. Our birthright shall not be sold for a mess of pottage, a tax that in the end comes from the wreckage of those made in the image of our Maker. We call upon you in this contest for the mastery to be temperate in word, language, and action. WE ARE AGAINST THE EVIL, NOT AGAINST THOSE WHO DIFFER WITH US. In other vocations and duties, we would wish them God-speed.

We would regard the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment as a calamity to our Nation. We believe that prohibition at its worst is better than the legalized sale of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes at best.

Let's not mix liquor with machinery and the automobile on the public highway. It is our duty to be temperate, but to destroy the pitfalls, to protect the innocent. Shall our boasted uplift and civilization in North Carolina be turned back by foreign Goliath Liquor Barons?

We earnestly appeal to the young men and women of the State to enter this contest; they may not be aware of the tragedy of this evil until too late.

We call upon men and women in every community, township, and county of the State to forget past differences and enter into this contest. It is a non-partisan, non-political, ad non-deominational fight. Orgaize under the United Dry Forces of North Carolina at once, and do it yourself. Do it now! The battle is on until sunset on November 7th. Be sure and see that these community, township, and county or-

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING

At the call of the Branch President, Mrs. William C. Hammer, a meeting of the Executive Committee was held in Weaverville, June 14. Several things made it seem more expedient to hold the meeting at that time rather than in July. One of these was the celebration of the Fourteenth Anniversary of Bethel Home. Mr. Caasto held a reception in the afternoon to which mny of his friends from Asheville, Weaverville and other places came to express their congratulations and their appreciation of the splendid service rendered by Bethel Home during the fourteen years since Mr. Caasto, himself a sick man, established this Christian Home for other sick people in order that they might have a quiet, peaceful and home-like atmosphere in which to win their fight for health. Mr. Casto was a delightful host, serving dainty refreshments of sandwiches, cakes, homemade mints, and portions of a lovely three-tiered birthday cake that wass brought as a surprise for him. The day was ideal and the beauty of the flower garden surrounding the attractive log cabin, which stands just above the main building, added color and grace to this spot from which the grandeur of the mountains all around could be seen—a scene of the beauty and glory that catch a glimpse of the beauty and glory that is eternal.

Another reason for having the meeting so early was that plans might be made for raising the money that we have promised to pay in order to keep Mr. Minnis in India for a longer term. Several plans were discussed, but action was deferred during the Summer Conference being anticipated. We would like to plan some way to raise enough money from the Branch and others to erect a bungalow which shall not be designated as a Branch project, but a denominational one. If we could do this it would take the place of the amount promised on salary.

Reports of the Convention and Board meetings were given by the delegates attending them. Reports from Branch treasurer and other officers were mde. Other matters of interest to the Branch were discussed. Eight members of the Executive Comittee and several visitors were present at the evening meeting which was held in the "cabin" after a delicious supper at Bethel Home.

The loyal women of the Weaverville Auxiliary, as usual, were on hand to greet us on our arrival, and each came bearing gifts of food and service that were highly appreciated after our long ride. Mrs. Bates "shack" was soon swept, the "mile of beds" made up for the night, and the first fire ever started in the new fireplace was kindled by Mrs. J. W. Boyles. Willing, expert hands prepared a satisfying supper consisting of gerat slices of ham sent by Mr. Casto, in addition to other good things, ending with ice cream, the gift of Mr. Altman.

The last reason for having this meeting at this time was that it seemed a more convenient time for Mrs. Bates who so kindly invites us to take possession of her cottage during the summer meeting. Dr. and Mrs. Bates, Mr. Casto and Mr. Altman, the Weaverville Auxiliary, Dr. and Mrs. J. S. Williams and all others who contributed to our entertainment and pleasure have our heartfelt thanks and appreciation. We pray that Bethel Home may be blest with may more years of Mr. Casto's capable and kindly "bossing," and with Mr. Altman's sunny smile.

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN, Cor. Sec'y.

FORGIVE AND FORGET

Have nothing to do
With wrath or vain regret:
If some one offends you—
Forgive and forget.

What are others' temptations
There's no one can tell;
So pity—and pardon—
And all will be well!

Turn retorts into kindness
Be wise—never grieve;
Understand others' troubles—
Live the faith you believe!

When you suffer injustice—
When others offend—
When people are peevish,
Complain without end.

Remember their troubles—
Do naught you'll regret;
You don't know their sorrows—
Forgive—and forget!

—Grenville Kleiser.

WHAT ARE YOU WORTH?

What are you worth to God?
Does He use you in His plan?
Does He depend on you?
Are you God's kind of man?

What are you worth to God?
Are you honest, are you true?
Do you work to help His work?
What does He have you do?

What are you worth to God?
Is your purpose high and pure?
Do you sacrifice yourself?
Will your daily deeds endure?

What are you worth to God?
Do you serve Him well each day?
Is He well pleased with you?
What do the angels say?

—Grenville Kleiser.

THE BEGINNING OF OUR CHURCH IN ASHEVILLE

A Statement

By REV. J. S. WILLIAMS

[Read on the celebration of the First Anniversary of the Pastorate of Rev. J. Elwood Carroll.]

My first visit to Asheville was in the early summer of 1902 to attend a state Christian Endeavor convention at the First Christian church here.

That fall, October 20, the late Rev. D. A. Braswell and I conducted a revival in the old North Asheville M. E. church. There were a number of conversions. Brother Braswell and I visited all around and found 85 Methodist Protestants. There had been two or three efforts to establish a church here. At the Annual Conference that year, Brother Braswell and I plead for our cause in Asheville and Western North Carolia. We did likewise with other brother miisters, at the conferences of 1903 and 1904. The 1904 conference assigned me to Asheville. I arrived here December 1, and immediately began the work. Weekly prayer meetings were held in private homes. Until April 1905 there were no Sunday services. The attendance at these meetings was good. Frequent requests for special prayer were received from down the state, and there were joyous answers. Some of our finest citizens were healed of seemingly fatal illness. Our first public Sunday meeting was held in the Commissioner's Room in the old County Court House on April 2, 1905. On April 9, the charter members were received and the church was organized. There were 22. At the end of 1907 we had 72 members; Sunday school membership, 101; C. E., 24; Ladies' Aid, 20. That year there were 16 conversions, ten baptisms and 31 new members added.

From 1907 to 1911 average Sunday school attendance was 147, church membership 114; Cradle Roll, 315; Home Department in Sunday school, 96.

In 1905 we moved to the Paragon Building for services. In 1907 we moved to the Y.M.C.A., now occupied by the Citizen-Times Co. In December, 1911, I was loaned by our Conference to the Mission of the Good Samaritan, recently organized here. The late Rev. W. D. Fogleman became pastor of our church. The site we had purchased for a new church at the corner of Haywood street and French Broad Avenue was sold, and this site was adopted—corner Merrimon Ave. and Hillside St. The successive pastors have been Brothers Bates, Johnson, Isner, Gerringer, Paschall, and Carrol.

DIXON-SMOTHERS-WILLIAMS REUNION

The families above mentioned and their friends will please remember that by previous arrangement we are to meet in Flat Rock church, Flat Rock circuit on Tuesday, July 4th at 10:30 a. m.

No special program is being arranged, except that Dr. J. E. Pritchard will bring a brief message around 11:15.

A brief memorial service will be held in memory of Mrs. Sarah D. Smothers, Mr. J. W. Williams and Mrs. Elmina Williams Garret. Any one may speak briefly who wishes.

We shall be glad for some special music and recitations. A. G. DIXON.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Mt. Hermon.—Services began with the choir singing, "The Way of the Cross Leads Home," and "Whisper His Love to Me." The Scripture reading was taken from the eighth division of Psalms read by the pastor, Rev. L. E. Mabry, prayer by the pastor.

The text was based on the Twenty third Psalm. The first thought was how and where did we get the Book of Psalms. They are a group of poems written by David and others and they used them as songs which were hummed or chanted and used in their opening exercises.

"The Lord Is My Shepherd." How many of us can truthfully utter these words. Each verse of this Psalm was analyzed and explained how we might live as David did, a life of service for our Lord and Master and at last when the end comes we shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever. Mr. June Coble led in prayer.

Then the congregation joined the choir in singing "Trust and Obey." The benediction was pronounced by the pastor and then the doxology was sung while Rev. Mabry rushed to the door to greet every one as they came out.

We all enjoyed the sermon and trust our next one will be equally as good.

REPORTER.

Kannapolis.—One of the biggest days in the history of the Kannapolis church was celebrated last Sunday, June 18. This was the annual Home Coming at this church. A large crowd attended both morning and afternoon services. Seats were not available for all those present. Aside from regular members a number of friends from other churches both in town and outside were present to worship in these various programs.

The central speaker of the day was Dr. A. G. Dixon from the Cihldren's Home. He delivered a very appropriate message on "The Meaning of the Cross." With Dr. Dixon were two girls from the Home, Miss Laura Braswell and Miss Flora Coble. Miss Braswell sang a solo accompanied by Miss Coble at the piano. Miss Coble also gave a beautiful and timely reading, "The Master Appears." Immediately following the morning program dinner was prepared by the women of the church and served on a long table in front of the parsonage. All visitors were invited to dinner and an hour of fine fellowship was enjoyed together.

The afternoon program was given over to a devotional service conducted by Rev. C. P. Morris, pastor, and a short talk by Rev. T. A. Wililams from Roberta. The subject chosen by Rev. Williams was "Mother, Home and Heaven." The remainder of the day was taken up with quartet singing. The following quartets rendered several beautiful quartets each: the Wesleyan Methodist quartet of Kannapolis, the Sisk quartet of Gaffney, S. C., Westford Methodist quartet of Concord, and the Presbyterian quartet of Lexington. Mr. George Horn of Shelby, N. C., gave several fine piano solos.

We all feel that it was a day wellspent in the Master's service. The church is only six years old and we feel that it has awonderful record. The membership has increased from 17 charter members to 116. During this time not a single member has been lost by death, and we feel that God has wonderfully blessed this church.

GLADYS MORRIS.

Fairview, Anderson Circuit.—Rev. J. L. Love and his family have returned from Concord, N. C. They went on a visit, but while they were there the Lord called Mr. Love's mother to Heaven.

The Ladies' Aid met Friday afternoon at the home Mrs. Lee Ballentine with Mrs. Ina Nalley and Mrs. A. G. Sitton joint hostesses. An unusually large number attended. During the busiess hour it was decided to buy for the church a new Bible which will be of a convenient size for using in Christian Endeavor or Sunday school classes. The Bible study which was chapters 20-25 in Numbers was conducted by Mrs. Bernice Phillips. This study began with Genesis and shall (we trust) continue through Revelations.

The Christian Endeavor was given a social at the home of Mrs. T. B. Nalley, June 8. There were 65 present who participated in games, stunts and singing. Ice cream was served.

The young people's Sunday school class which is taught by Miss Montez Henderson, enjoyed a picnic at Boscobel Lake Saturday evening. Thirty-seven gathered at the church and were carried to the lake in a truck and cars. The chaperones were Mrs. Estella Connelly, Mr. and Mrs. Grady Foster and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Foster. REPORTER.

Thomasville, West End Church.—Our annual revival meeting began the first Sunday night in June and closed June 15. Rev. E. A. Bingham came on the first night of the meeting and did all of the preaching. He was at his best. His messages brought conviction to the hearts of the unsaved and revived the weak in faith and confirmed the strong.

There were 55 that were converted and came and renewed their covenant with the Lord. Three were 19 additions to the church. I think there will be more to unite with the church later. Our church has been greatly revived. We bow our heads and lift our hearts to the great Head of the Church for sending the Holy Spirit upon us and the people.

A goodly number of the unsaved of the community were brought into the Kingdom. There are many others whom we yet hope to reach. If we know our heart, we can say like Paul of old: "My heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved." H. W. BELL.

Pleasant Union, Mt. Pleasant Charge.—We had a large crowd for our Sunday school and preaching service the fourth Sunday in June. Dr. Johnson brought us a very helpful sermon on justice, mercy and walking with God. All of our pastor's sermons are splendid but this was one of his very best.

Visitors for our services Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Amick and children, Miss Mary Ward Johnson and T. M. Johnson, Jr. We hope that they will be with us very often this summer.

Our Children's Day service will be held the second Sunday in July. The children will give the regular program of our church including the pageant, "The Hillside of Blessings." The program will be under the direction of Mrs. Charlie Shepard, Miss Blanche Staley and Mrs. James T. Holt.

The annual Greene Township Sunday School convention will be held with us the third Sunday in July, beginning at 11:00 o'clock. Prof. E. H. Thompson of Mt. Pleasant church is president of the Greene Township association.

We are very sorry to report that Miss Ethel Shepard is in Duke hospital preparing for quite a serious operation. We hope for it to be very successful and for a speedy recovery.

MISS FRANCES CAUSEY, Reporter.

Salem, Saxapahaw Charge.—We are still making progress with our church work. Sunday school attendance is improving nicely as the summer days have come.

We observed Children's Day the second Sunday. A very beautiful and interesting program was enjoyed by all present. The program consisted of songs, recitations and a pageant entitled, "The Hillside of Blessing." Much credit is due Mrs. Raymond Thompson, Mrs. P. E. Smith, and Miss Bradshaw, who had charge of training the children. Collection amounted to something over $10.00.

Our C. E. is doing some very good work. Much interest is being shown in a contest we have on between three groups of the members. The object of this contest is to build upon our society and make it better. We are anxious to do all we can for our Lord.

Our pastor, Rev. W. M. Loy, filled his morning appointment the second Sunday afternoon as Children's Day was observed in the morning. REPORTER.

West Forsyth.—Our revival meeting began at Tabernacle church Sunday night, June 18, and closed the following Friday night. Rev. Wayne Curtis, of Burligton, was the pastor's assistant. He directed the song services and sang a solo at each service. The writer did the preaching except Tuesday and Friday afternoons. Rev. F. F. Frisbie, of the Northern Methodist church, was present and preached Tuesday afternoon. Brother Curtis preached at the young people's service Friday afternoon. There were 13 professions and ten new members were received at the last service Friday night. Three of them were given the regular Methodist baptism, while the remaining seven are to be baptized by immersion later. The church co-operated in a splendid manner during services of the meeting, and it was the best meetings we have had at Tabernacle in recent years.

We will begin the annual revival meeting at Stony Knoll church next Sunday morning. There will be three service on the first day, at 11 a. m., 2 p. m. and 8 p.m. Rev. Wayne Curtis, of Burlington, will assist the pastor in the services. He will direct the song services and render solos during the meeting. The pastor will do the preaching for most of the services. We are looking forward to a good meeting. Pray for us.

Our regular appointment last Sunday was with Harmony Grove church at 11 a. m. We had a good attendance in the Sunday school and church service. The vote for delegate was taken, and we understand that the two nominees, Brother J. H. Speas, of Stony Knoll church, ad Brother B. A. Long, of Tabernacle church, each received exactly the same number of votes, thus showing that Harmony Grove church thinks well of each one. This vote will perhaps not be duplicated at any other church.

After the service at Harmony Grove last Sunday morning the pastor and young son, C. B., Jr., were invited to the good home of Brother J. E. Jarvis, where a ssplendid dinner and a short visit were enjoyed.

Mrs. Hester Hutchins, wife of John Hutchins, of Union Hill church, recently returned to her home from the Baptist hospital in Winston-Salem, where she spent about two weeks. A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Hutchins and the mother and baby are getting along fine.

Baltimore church will be host to the Forbush Township Sunday school convention which meets at that church next Sunday, with morning and afternoon sessios. Brother J. B. Phillips, of Baltimore church, has been president of the township association for the past year.

The writer has been invited to preach the sermon to the convention at 11 a. m., but will not be able to accept the invitation because of the beginning of the revival meeting at Stony Knoll church.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Mebane.—Since our last letter to the Herald our work has been going forward in a very satisfactory manner although there seems to be a slight decrease in our S. S. attendance. This is due to nothing more than hot weather, we hope.

The C. E. society met Sunday night at 7:45 o'clock as usual.

Our Sunday evening service was called off on account of two revivals going on in our town.

The Woman's Auxiliary met Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock, the Willing Workers having charge of the program. It was enjoyed by all who were there.

We older women will have to hustle if we get ahead of the small girls in getting up a program, or putting it over.

Thomasville, First.—Rev. and Mrs. T. G. Madison wish to announce the birth of a son, T. Glenn, Jr., born June 6th.

The Woman's Auxiliary met in the home of Mrs. J. A. Hedrick on Tuesday evening. Fourteen members were present. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. A. H. Ragan. Mrs. T. A. Lloyd conducted the devotionals. Interesting papers were read on Systematic Bible Study and Christian Literature, after which Mrs. J. W. Baity conducted the Question Box. One of the interesting features of the program was hearing the ladies give their reports on relief work, visits and Bible reading. During the social hour Mrs. Hedrick served tempting refreshments.

The Minnis Circle met at the church on Monday evening. Attendance was somewhat off, but the service was inspiring. Mrs. A. H. Ragan was the visiting speaker

The many friends of Mr. Royals, "Uncle Bud," are pleased to learn that he is recovering satisfactorily. We hope that he may soon be able to be with us in our church services.

Miss Pauline Bailey underwent an operation at the City Memorial hospital Sunday night. Miss Bailey was present for C. E. and church service Sunday evening and was taken ill while there. She has filled the place of secretary in our C. E. society for the past eight months without being absent. Her pesence will be greatly missed. We are delighted to learn that she is getting along nicely.

Twenty-two members of our C. E. society were able to attend the evening services of the State Convention. Miss Virginia Brown Jarrett attended as delegate. An echo meeting was held Sunday evening, which proved to be the most interesting service of the year. A large number were present and after listening to the splendid reports given, one felt that he had just retured from the convention.

Home-Coming Day will be observed at First Church the fifth Sunday in July. A committee has been appointed and plans are being made to make this a happy occasion.

Since our last report the third quarterly conference convened and Mr. D. R. Connell was declared delegate to the Annual Conference.

Union Grove Church, Mocksville Charge.—We have a new Sunday school superintendent, Mr. Clay Madison. He is a fine, intelligent young man and is liked by all the Sunday school members. We think he will cause our Sunday school to grow. Our average attendance for the past month is 90; for the past quarter, 84. The following, in the Junior class, attended Sunday school regular during the past quarter: Esther Wooten, Cleo Templeton, Geraldine Rash, Fern Templeton, Muriel Templeton and Florence Templeton.

Mr. Ferree, our pastor, preached an inspiring sermon last Sunday night. His text was: "Art not thou also one of this man's disciples?" John 18:17. His topic was, "Confessing Christ."

The C. E. is about as usual but Mr. Clay Madison is going to aid us in it. We hope by the help of God we'll grow and prosper. Let us all work for Christ and He will reward us by and by.

Community M. P. Church. — Community church last week closed a very successful term of Vacation Church school. Miss Kathleen Paschall from Westminster, Md., did very fine work as general supervisor. One hundred and 12 pupils were enrolled. On Sunday night a commencement program was given. The leaders in the various departments were as follows: Rev. and Mrs. Freo Surratt, Misses Kathleen Paschall, Virginia Boyles, Sylvia Saunders, Grace Saunders, Isabel Boyles, Dot Westmoreland, Katie Blair, Marion Stone, Margaret Thompson, Lela Maude Boyles, Dot Perry, Nellie Myers, and Mrs. A. M. White.

Miss Pearl Perry, who has been the reporter from this church for some time, was married to Mr. Solon Williamson of High Point, N. C., on June 20. Community church will greatly miss Mrs. Williamson as superintendent of the junior department and teacher in the Sunday school Our very best wishes are always with them.

A very inspiring service was held on Fathers' Day. Each father and son present was presented with a flower by the daughters. Mr. C. L. Berrier had charge of the service. Mr. C. F. Finch spoke very fittingly in behalf of the fathers and the response was given as a son by Mr. Alvan Boyles. The pastor then brought a splendid message suitable for the occasion.

Misses Pearl and Lela Maude Boyles had charge of the Children's Day program which was given on the 11th of June.

Mr. George Mather of Westminster, Md., will give an illustrated lecture at Community church on Thursday night, June 29. His subject will be "My Father's World."

First Church, Burlington. — Sunday was Home Coming Day, or the forty-first anniversary of this church. We were pleased to have worship with us many of the former members and officers of the church.

The Sunday school was well attended. Mr. J. G. Rogers, former superintendent, now residing in Denton, presided.

Dr. J. E. Williams, High Point, brought a very impressive message at the morning worship. He used as his text Matt. 5:13.

Rev. J. E. Pritchard delivered the evening address. He used as his subject "Indebtedness," emphasizing the fact that we are all indebted to those who have labored before us.

Henderson.—We are trying to give old man "Summer Slump," a hard fight at Henderson. We acknowledge that with Summer Slump joining forces with that old fellow "Economic Depression," and that other dangerous fellow known as "Spiritual Decline" we are having the fight of our lives. However, we have not yet acknowledged defeat, and we are trying to meet their attacks standing up.

Beginning where our reporter left off in her last communication, I will say that we held our Children's Day service Sunday night, June 11th. An interesting program, consistig of songs and recitations by the children of the Suday school, was well rendered. We thank Misses Alice Faulkner and Helen Hayes for planning and preparing the service. We think we gave old man depression a right good blow when we made our offering to World Service larger than usual.

The Girl's Mission club under the direction of Mrs. J. B. Fox gave an interesting program at the church Wednesday evening, June 21, at eight o'clock. In addition to the musical selections by members of the girl's club, Rev. and Mrs. J. T. Bowman entertained the audience with story telling, Mrs. Bowman telling a serious but effective story and Bro. Bowman a number of humorous ones. Admission to the service was by "drinking glass." Each person was asked to bring a drinking class or some other piece of talbeware for the Children's Home. About seven dozen glasses and a number of other useful pieces were donated. The next day the missions club with a number of invited guests enjoyed a picnic outing at Camp Ballanced Rock ten miles fom Henderson.

We are glad to have so many of our young people who have been away either teaching or studying, back with us for the summer. It is encouraging to see them in the services of the church. It is also an inspiration to see a faithful, consecrated woman like Mrs. O. O. Young in her place at the hour of worship. Mrs. Young, as many know, spends the school months with her daughter, Miss Mary, at High Point college.

A fine group of our young people recently graduated from the Henderson high school.

These were Misses June Hardee and Grace Lee White, and Hamilton Hicks Falkner, Francis Martin, Garland Harris, ad Joseph Parks Satterwhite. While all of these young people deserve credit and have our hearty congratulations, we especially congratulate Miss June Hardee on the distinction of leading her class of 72. Her valedictory was well received and complimented. I wish very much that all of these young people could make their way to High Point college in September.

Our young people's choir, recently organized and composed of twenty young people, expects to take part in the singing contest at High Poit college next Monday evening. A number of our young people also expect to stay for the Leadership Training school.

Last Sunday evening at 8:00 Mr. George Mather, of Westminster, Md., delighted and edified our evening congregation with his illustrated lecture, "My Father's World." This was one of the very best lectures of its kind we have had the privilege of seeing and hearing.

We were also pleased to have Dr. C. E. Forlines, also of Westminster, Md., along with Mr. Mather. We were glad to have them as guests at the parsonage.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Friendship Station.—Our reporter seems to be taking a long vacation, so I will report some things that have been done during the recent past. The attedance at all services is good, and the people are very kind to the pastor and his family.

The first Sunday in July we will celebrate Home Coming Day. We are inviting all former pastors to be with us on that date, and we are expecting many members and friends to return and worship with us that day; there will be all-day services, and dinner will be served.

On Wednesday before the first Sunday in August we will begin our annual revival services, and will continue for ten days; Rev. A. D. Shelton will assist the pastor in the services.

Our collections have been small during the recent months, but are showing improvements at the present time. Brother Charlie Hatley reports that the Lord's Acre which he planted in wheat made fourteen and a half bushels; we are anxious to get the reports from others.

The Christian Endeavor society is doing things. We sent two delegates to the state convention at High Point college, Doris May Hatley and William Snotherly. At the last two Sunday evening meetings we have heard their reports, which we feel has been a great help to our society. At the last service of the convention we have twenty-five of our endeavorers hear the address of Dr. Poling; they were transferred to the convention through the courtesy of Brother J. H. Harkey, who transformed one of his big International trucks into a bus for the trip to High Point. Our young people thoroughly enjoyed the trip and the lecture. Our C. E. president, Miss Mary Harward, has gone to Washing'on, D. C. to make her home; Dean Ellsworth has been promoted to president.

On Saturday afternoon of last week the young men's Sunday school class entertained the young women's class, with a weiner roast, etc., at Palmerville Beach. In the recent contest for class attendance, the young women's class was the winner. The teachers are: for the young men, Pharell Hurlocker; for young women, Mrs. O. B. Williams. The young people report that a pleasant afternoon was spent. The pastor and wife were in attendance.

Recetly the home of Brother and Sister Harris Harward was destroyed with all its contents by fire. This unfortunate family has the sympathy and helpful co-operation of the entire community.

Mrs. Lowell Wells and son, T. L., Jr., of Jacksonville, Fla., are spending a few weeks at the parsonage Mrs. Wells is the daughter of the pastor and wife.

Friendship church has sent its pastor to the Pastor's Summer conference at High Point college this week.

O. B. WILLIAMS.

Spring Church Charge.—On the night of the third Sunday in June our special meeting began at Pleasant Hill, and closed on Friday night. Rev. O. E. Peeler was our pulpit help. Brother Peeler did good preaching, and good congregational work. There were ten professions, and nine united with the church. Eight were baptized. Mrs. Rose Crew was able to attend the services. Her presence is an inspiration to all.

Pleasant Hill observed Children's Day the night of the second Sunday in June. The program was extra good.

The Christian Endeavor society here has paid the assessment in full for superannuates.

Spring church has a new and good working Christia Endeavor society.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Cook remembered us recently with one bacon side and shoulder, and two friers; Mr. John Hart pounded us also with one bacon shoulder. Mrs. Lena Dunham, one dressed frier. Others contributing various items were Mrs. H. E. Vasser, Mrs. R. M. Robinson, Mrs. Rose Crew, Misses Olie Crew and Mary Daniel, Mr. M. L., and Miss Aubrey Crew, Mrs. C. E. Dimick and Mrs. Lena Tucker. All of the above supplied a felt need.

Siler City.—The Woman's Auxiliary met at the church Tuesday afternoon, June 20, with 14 members present. After a short business meeting, Mrs. C. E. Brady, chairman of the program committee, took charge. Mrs. Brady had a real treat in store for us. She has as our speaker for the afternoon, Mrs. June Wrenn, of the First M. E. church. Mrs. Wrenn spoke on outline of the Mission study book, "Lady Fourth Daughter of China." This was an inspiring talk and was enjoyed by every one present.

Our Children's Day program was presented the fourth Sunday night with a good congregation. The exercise consisted of songs, recitations, a story drill by the primary children, a pantomime, "I Think When I Read That Sweet Story of Old," by Mrs. Duncan Welch, which was very impressive, and a pageant, "The Hillside of Blessing," The colored spotlights turned on at intervals to suit the occasion made this pageant much more impressive. Mr. D. G. Fox deserves much credit for installing and operating these lights. Misses Minnie Cooper, Verda Shaw Fox, Joy Holt and Messrs. Evans Stone, Irvin Ellington and Johnnie Brady sang the songs for the pageant very effectively with Mr. Stone as soloist. The service closed with a lovely trio, "Trees," by Misses Minnie Cooper, Joy Holt and Verda Shaw Fox. The committee, Mesdames T. L. Smith, C. E. Brady, Duncan Welch and Miss Minnie Cooper desrves much praise for the training of these children. Our pastor said that it was one of the best programs he had ever attended.

The Junior class, Mrs. T. L. Smith as the teacher, had charge of the Sunday school devotionals the fourth Sunday morning. This class is the most wide awake class in Sunday school and with the most efficient training of Mrs. Smith they always present something good when in charge of any kind of program.

At the close of Mr. Isley's sermon on the third Sunday morning, Mr. D. Wright gave his name, and was baptized for membership in our church. We were indeed glad to have him join with us. We are hoping his wife will join with us in the near future.

First Church, High Point.—The Leadership Training school opened on Monday at High Point college, and a week of study and recreatio was launched with an enjoyable picnic at Municipal Lake, Jamestsown. Rev. T. J. Whitehead of Greensboro is dean of the assembly. Registration was well up to expectation and classes began their regular schedules Tuesday morning. On Monday evening Miss Cornelia Coward gave a recital of beautiful music in Roberts Hall auditorium; she is a pupil of Miss Margaret Sloan of the music faculty. This was Miss Howard's graduating recital, which, due to her illness, was not given during the recent commencement. Tuesday eveing, Dr. George K. Mather of Westmister, Md., a well-known publisher, and business man, will present an illustrated lecture, and on the other evenings of the week Dr. Fred S. Holloway, President of the Theological Seminary, will speak. There are two divisions in the work of the Training school. Mrs. H. W. Maier of Lexington, being in charge of the Juior group, and Rev. T. J. Whitehead, of the Senior division. The vesper services will be conducted each afternoon at 6 o'clock by Mrs. J. T. Bowman, and Rev. E. Lester Ballard, will have charge of the music for the week. An interesting feature will be the young people's banquet on Friday evening, for which elaborate preparations are being made.

The annual Pastor's Summer Conference convened Monday at the college for two-day session. The afternoon session was devoted to the meeting of the Council of Religious Education, and the program will include discussions of problems by leaders in the N. C. Conference and also in the General Conference. Rev. R. C. Stubbins of Asheboro, is at the final session on Wednesday.

At the Sunday morning service at First Church, C. L. Gray, Jr., sang very beautifully, "Come, Ye Blessed of My Father," and Mr. Furman R. Auman, chairman of Board of Stewards, read the roll of the official board, and it was surprising to note how few did not respond to their names. The pastor, Rev. R. T. Farmer, delivered a very practical and impressive talk on the work of the church. He said that no one individual is able to carry on a project without help. Some sarcastic and sneering questions are being asked in this day such as, "What is the church doing?" The church of the future will be disappointing as in the past, but let us not forget that the membership is made up of folks just like you and me, full of imperfections, and not angelic or seraphic, but very human. The church of Christ is composed of sinners saved by grace. Another observation is that the finest work of the church cannot be written down or described, as the best work in life is silent and unseen. You cannot hear the dawn; there is no sound when light comes. Christians are said to be seed. Cardinal Newman said that the church does not exist to make a great show but to do a great work, to transform wicked lives into useful and fruitful love, to change loafers into workers. Not all the members nor all official members of this church are interested in the church. Too few will teach a Sabbath school class or lead a C. E. meeting or even attend services on Sunday or weekly prayer meetings. At least 50 to 75 per cent of church members show little interest in its welfare. Too great a burden has been borne by a faithful few, both in work and finances, for whom I thank God daily. The task of the church is to be the incarnation of the gospel. The discipline ought to include this question to those seeking membership, "Will you pray daily for the welfare of the church?" There are three things everybody can do: you can pray about it, you can talk it up and defend it in time of criticism, and you must pay it out.

A marriage of much interest to many friends in High Point and Thomasville was solemnized on Tuesday evening, Jue 20, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Perry in Thomasville, when Miss Pearl Perry became the bride of Mr. Solon G. Williamson of High Point. The bride's pastor, Rev. H. Freo Surratt, officiated, the ring ceremony being used. The bride was given in marriage by her father, and her youngest sister, Miss Dorothy Perry served as maid of honor. Mr. Cromer Bodie of High Point wa sthe groom's best man. The bride was lovely in her wedding gown of light blue with darker blue accessories, and wore a soulder corsage of Sweetheart roses and Lilies of the Valley. Mr. Williamson is a native of High Point, being a son of D. M. Williamson. He formerly held a position in the Commercial National bank, but is now engaged in the mercantile business, while his bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Perry, was educated in the graded schools of Thomasville and at Guilford College. She later held a position with the Commercial National bank of High Point. After the ceremony the bride's parents entertained with a reception with a large number of guests in attendance. The couple left later for a wedding trip to points in western North Carolina, and upon their return will make their home here. A host of friends and relatives extend congratulations and best wishes. Mrs. Williamson is a sister of Mrs. J. H. Allred and Mrs. James Ellington of High Point.

Many friends will regret to learn that Mr. and Mrs. June A. Gray and family were in an automobile accident on Main St., in Winston-Salem Sunday afternoon when Mrs. W. J. Hutchison of Charlotte, Mrs. Gray's mother, suffered internal injuries. She was taken in Yow's ambulance to the Guilford General hospital here, where she is resting comfortably. Mrs. Gray hopes to take her to her home in a few days.

Many friends of Judge Lewis E. Teague are gratified to know that he has received the appointment as Judge of the Municipal court again for a term of two years. Lewis has made a fair and competent officer, and is popular with his fellow members of the bar.

Rupert T. Pickens went to Chapel Hill last week to attend the Institute of Government. He was accompanied by Mrs. Pickens as far as Durham, where she will remain for a week as the guest of Miss Anne Garrard, a classmate at Duke university.

Mrs. Lawton Hill and charming little daughter, Barbara Anne, of Graham, is spending a few days with Mrs. Robert Garland. She is pleasantly remembered here as Miss Della Moore, a member of the class of 1928 of High Point college.

Miss Mary E. Young of Henderson is attending the Leadership Training school, and teaching a class.

◆

Bellemont, Mt. Hermon Charge.—The Daily Vacation Bible school was held at our church June 12-23. The attendance was very good. We had 56 students on roll, and 45 of these will receive certificates for good attendance. The commencement exercises were held on Friday evening, June 23. The program was very good.

Miss Margaret Pickett was superintendent of the school, and Mrs. Clay Holt directed the music. The teachers weer Misses Carrie Nicholson, Elma Davis, Dorothy Hargis, Helen Sharpe, Mattie Pickett, Myrtle Holt, Annie Bell Clayton, Flossie Holt, Beulah Coble and Rev. Mabry.

On Sunday morning, June 25, Rev. Mabry conducted the service especially for the children. He read Psalm 121, and told an interesting story. The children took part in the service by singing a number of children's song.

The Children's Day program was held on Sunday evening, June 25. The children presented a splendid program under the direction of Misses Ramah Shoffner and Nannie Coble. Rev. Mabry also made a short talk. An unusually large crowd was present at the service.

On Thursday evening, June 29, Class No. 5 will hold its class meeting at the home of Miss Helen Sharpe. All members are urged to be present.

English Street Church, High Point.—Things seem to be moving along nicely at our church, in spite of the hot weather. For the past month we have been holding cottage prayer meetings each Friday night. These meetings have proved to be very successful as several conversions have been made in these services.

On last Sunday we received into the church Mr. M. J. Setzer, also two honorary members, Mrs. Ida Ring and Mrs. S. A. Setzer. This past Sunday we received Mrs. Newby as an honorary member.

On Sunday, June 18, the C. E. society held a very interesting Echo meeting of the State Convention. Miss Iris Caudle was in charge of the program. Several others who attended the convention gave reports. We feel that our society will be helped by the inspiring reports from the convention. On Thursday evenig of this past week the society held a business meeting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Queen. New officers were elected. They are as follows: President, Tressie Caudle; vice-president, Maxine Kennedy; recording secretary, Myrtle Moore; corresponding secretary, Maxine Kennedy; treasurer, Eva Moore. The following committee chairmen were also elected: prayer meeting, Callie Loflin; lookout, Jim Setzer; welfare, Bernice Livengood; social, Carrie Moore; press, Iris Caudle; sick and flower, Jimmy Bowens. These officers weer installed on Sunday night by the former president, Kathleen Embler.

The Intermediate C. E. society is also active. Miss Eva Moore is superintendent. They, too, held a business meeting last week to plan work for the summer months.

Midland.—Taking too much for granted. In my announcing Dr. Andrews' visit to the charge I said that he would be on the work July 2, supposing that the petople would understand that it was Sunday. Anybody should know that four appointments would be too much for any president except it be Sunday. However, the president understood as verefied in his visiting program.

Had a fine Children's Day at Midland Sunday. The house was packed and the entire day's program was excellent. The Love's Grove quartet, after singing for our people at Concord, ran down and helped greatly in the song service; this with the splendid choir at Midland climaxed a happy day for all who were there.

Welch Memorial Church.—In the absence of the pastor Rev. D. R. Williams preached for us in the morning service Sunday. He brought an inspiring message on "Enthusiasm" which favorably impressed the listeners.

Dr. Williams, our pastor, was at Burlington where he was a speaker at the anniversary service there. He was back in the pulpit at night.

Dr. Ben Hill and wife are back with us for the summer. We are glad to have them.

We had our spring revival since our last report and it was a successful one. Dr. Williams did the preaching, and was at his best it seemed. We had several conversions and the church in general was uplifted.

It is very encouraging to see the large class of young men now in Sunday school, and a good percentage of them stay for the preaching service. Three of the class joined the church just after the revival.

We see new faces in the congregation most every Sunday.

Our Sunday school offering is the best now since 1930, and the church finances are coming up some too. We have set aside July as Tithing Month and hope to catch up during that time.

The Christian Endeavorers are having good programs too. They had their regular service for the fourth Sunday at the Sandy Ridge convict camp. Luther Medlin made a very interesting talk. The Endeavorers give a program out there each fourth Sunday.

◆

Union Chapel, Granville Charge.—Our revival begins one month from this week, let us all pray that it will be one of the greatest in the history of the church.

The Woman's Missionary Auxiliary met in a joint meeting with Rehoboth, Mount Carmel and Union Chapel in the home of our President, Mrs. C. L. Spencer. On account of the stormy weather the attedance was not so good, Rehoboth was not represented at all, while Mt. Carmel had six presente with quite a goodly number from the home church.

After the program and busines was over the three churches presented Rev. and Mrs. Spencer a lovely water set as a token of their love and appreciation of the good work they have done for the churches. The hostess served delicious fruits.

Mr. Spencer preached a most inspiring sermon Sunday morning to an unusually large congregation. The Scripture was taken from Hebrews 11:1-10. His text was taken from Genesis 3:9 as follows: "And the Lord God called unto Adam, and said unto him, where art thou?" Especially stressing, where art thou?

We should take inventory of our souls and find where we are, how we stand with God and as a Christian in general.

Where are we morally? God knows all about us, we cannot hide anything from him.

Everything has fulfilled the purpose of which it was created, moon, stars, sun, birds, animals and earth, but sad to say the human being is the only thing that has fallen short.

Let us pray earnestly that we may accomplish the tasks set before us.

Junior League—Gertrude Bingham, Annabel Bingham, E. A. Bingham, Jr. (all of Davidson charge).

I am convinced that the Loyalty League can be made a tower of strength in the conference, and that much of the indebtedness of High Point college can be liquidated through this organization We have now enrolled one-tenth of our goal of 5,000. If we can enroll the other nine-tenths at the same rate of payment that the one-tenth makes, our monthly receipts would be $1,730, or $20,760 per year. And the payment per person is so small that no one would be burdened by it. There is surely much hope in this League.

IT IS TO BE NOTED THAT SEVERAL OF OUR STRONGEST CHARGES ARE NOT YET LISTED.

Anniversary and Home Coming Offering to date is $536.85.

We are certainly pleased and thankful for the response of our people to the Anniversary and Home Coming Day. Many people came and seemed happy to be here, they brought an abundance of dinner, and the offering that day, and through the mails, was good.

We are hoping that 15 people somewhere will still give one dollar each to make the special offering up to $600.00.

As usual the special offering had to go immediately into the payment of bills. But, how happy we were able to be able to reduce them that much.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Ladies' Aid society, Caanan church, North Davidson, 11 dress patterns of prints.

The Girl's Mission club, Henderson, seven dozen drinking glasses, 24 dishes, plates and saucers, and two cakes of soap. We are so thankful for all of these gifts.

Looking to the Fall

We are beginning now to make our usual plea for contributions of produce this fall. This last week we sent 12 dozen cans to Baltimore church, and six dozen cans to Stony Knoll church on West Forsyth circuit. The ladies of these churches will fill them during the summer. Then in the fall we will get these back full, with other produce. We have other cans yet to put out, and will be glad to let you have them as early as may be. Whether you get cans from here or not, please remember your children here during the summer and help us out with the best harvest-home offering.

The dry weather is cutting short our vegetable crop. We have scarcely had any rain during June. Our potato crop, however, is far better than we thought. Our farmers have gotten in around 200 bushels. We are so thankful.

Just for the Summer

The Sunday schools will please keep up their regular monthly offering in cash during the summer. If this is done we can make a much better report this fall. Thank you every one, and may God richly bless you.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON, Superintendent.

We wish for them happiness in this life as they ascend the hill of life, and may they ever keep the vows of holy matrimony and live in peace.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Tapp

J. Thomas Walker Tapp was born August 29, 1860; died June 20, 1933, aged 72 years, 9 months and 21 days.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer June 21st at Chestnut Ridge church. A large congregation was present.

Bro. Tapp had been a Christian .for several years. He joined Chestnut Ridge Church last year.

Of his near relatives, eight children, 19 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren survive.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Little

On May 26 the death angel visited the home of Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence Little of Westminster, Md., and took away their baby daughter, Frances Lawrene, aged three years, three months and 22 days. Funeral services were conducted from the home on College Avenue by Dr. A. Norman Ward, president of the college, and the Rev. Charles Elderdice, pastor of the Westminster M. P. church. Interment was made in the Westminster cemetery. The pallbearers were ministerial students of the college: Theodore Landis, William Kesmodel, Robert Loss, and David Wynn. Music was furnished by four girls from the college choir.

About three weeks bofer her death, Lawrene developed a sever case of whooping cough, and having been an invalid from birth her little system was not strong enough to overcome the disease. She was the bravest little sufferer I have ever seen. After a severe attack of coughing when she would lose her breath for several minutes, she would look up into the face of the one near her and smile. Although she will be greatly missed by her parents and loved ones, they are comforted in knowing that she has gone where there is no suffering and affliction. When we think of her entrance into the Great Beyond we are reminded of these words:

Gathering buds, gathering buds;
Full grown' alone will not do,
Jesus is gathering day after day,
Buds for the Kingdom of Heaven.

A FRIEND.

Moore

Eva Louise Moore, the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Moore of 19 North Street, passed away at her home on Sunday, June 9, leaving a great vacancy in the Intermediate Department of the Asheville Methodist Protestant church.

Eva had been ill less than a week and her death came as a great shock to her family and her many friends in high school circles and in the church. Her entire life of 16 years had been confined to altruistic endeavors in her home, in her church, and in her school. In the Asheville Methodist Protestant church, to which she united in 1925, she was president of both the Intermediate Sunday school class and also the Intermediate Christian Endeavor society. She leaves, therefore, a great vacancy among her friends and in our church.

Funeral services for the deceased were conducted from the Asheville M. P. church on June 11, with the Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, pastor, in charge. Flower girls were from the Intermediate Department of our church, and the pallbearers were the church stewards. Interment followed in Riverside cemetery.

Eva was th oldest of two daughters, having been born on August 9, 1917. She was a junior in high school. Without hesitation it can be said that she was one of the very finest of young girls. Her fine past is beyond the slightest criticism, her character radiant and noble, and her ideals of the finest type.

J. ELWOOD CARROLL.

In Loving Memory of Wife and Mother—Mrs. C. C. Lineberry

Mother, dear, you have gone,
To live with God on high.
No words can ever tell
How you're missed day by day.

You had a heart of gold,
You wore a cheery smile
That was worth all and all:
We miss you, oh, so much.

You gave a helpful word,
To cheer some lonely heart,
To make a sad one glad.
The words you did dare speak
Would melt a heart of stone.

But should we mourn, though
Because God took you home?
Our loved one truly now
Blooming in God's fair garden.

Sunshine and priceless flowers,
Oft are taken from us:
The cherished love and beauty
Seem only for a day.

As I think of mother
And of the days gone by
I can see back of shadows
The sun is shining still.

And if we watch and pray
Looking beyond the sky;
We'll see the flowers growing,
So pur and good and bright.

I think angels of heaven
Come nearer and neare us.
Scattering good hope and cheer
In our daily pathway.

On our way we wander,
With memory sweet of you,
And a crown is waiting,
And a blessed meeting
With joy and endless hope.

—MRS. J. W. SHARPE, JR.

Cashatt

Charles Franklin Cashatt was born in Randolph county, September 14, 1885, and died June 4, 1933.

Charles joined Mitchell's Grove M. P. church in 1905 and has remained a faithful member of this church ever since, except during the time of his residence in High Point when he transferred his membership to Welch Memorial M. P. church.

He was married to Miss Bessie Giles, December 25, 1913. To them were born two children, the first of whom died in infancy. The other lived with him at the old home place. His wife became helplessly ill in 1926 and was carried to the State Hospital at Raleigh where she has remained since that date.

He is survived by his wife, his daughter, Ruth, his mother, one sister and seven brothers.

Charles became ill Tuesday, May 30, but never thought his condition serious enough to require a doctor's care. He never took the bed but bore his suffering without complaint. In him we have lost a tender father, a loving brother, and a man faithful to duty. The church has lost one among its best and most faithful members.

The funeral service was held in Mitchell's Grove M. P. church and was in charge of the writer, assisted by Rev. J. R. Hutton and Rev. W. F. Ashburn, of Greensboro. His body was laid to rest in the Mitchell's Grove cemetery, there to await the general Resurrection in the last Great Day. For "He that believeth in me, thought he were dead, yet shall he live." May the Lord bless the bereavd.

D. D. BROOME.

Spoon

Nancy Pearline Cox Spoon died June 7, 1933, aged 72 years, one month and 13 days.

March 9, 1882, she was married to Silvester Graham Spoon. To this union were born nine children. Her companion, one son and one daughter preceded her to the grave. The following survive: three sons, H. A. Spoon, of Ulah; S. P. Spoon, of High Point; W. M. Spoon of Asheboro; four daughters, Mrs. F. H. Humble, Asheboro; Mrs. B. W. Williams, Ulah; Mrs. J. A. Ashworth, Asheboro, and Mrs. F. I. Sink, High Point. Three brothers, Frank Cox of Baden, and William and Clarkson Cox of Asheboro. Twenty-seven grandchildren, six great-grandchildren and a host of friends.

In early life she professed faith in Christ and joined the church at Flagg Springs and remained faithful until God called her home. Sister Spoon was a good mother and a kind neighbor. She will be much missed in the homes of her children and her church.

Her funeral was conducted by her pastor, Rev. G. L. Reynolds, assisted by Joel B. Trogdon, pastor of Randleman Circuit. She was laid in the church cemetery beneath a beautiful mound of flowers to await the Resurrection Day. May the dear Lord lead those who mourn her going until they meet where parting will be no more.

PASTOR.

Jones

James Milton Jones was born May 2, 1853, and departed this life June 4, 1933, age 80 years and 28 days. Brother Jones had been a member of Gray's Chapel on Randolph charge for about 50 years. Those who knew him esteemed him highly. He was what one would call a quiet, unassuming, Christian man. His wife, who was Miss Margaret York, preceded him to the life beyond about 18 years ago.

Brother Jones leaves to mourn their loss five children, five brothers, and a large circle of friends.

For several years he had been deprived of attending church because of poor health. The funeral services were held in Gray's Chapel by the pastor, Edwin Suits, assisted by Rev. W. F. Ashburn and Rev. A. O. Lindley; after which his body was laid to rest in the church cemetery to await the Resurrection Morn.

* Subsidy paid in full.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

The possibility that some churches and charges may have forgotten the classification into which they fall in the HERALD Subsidy scale prompts its presentation to refresh the minds of those who may not remember just the amount asked of their church toward the support and continuation of the HERALD.

Churches whose membership is from 101 to 200	5.00
Churches whose membership is from 201 to 300	7.50
Churches whose membership is from 301 to 400	10.00
Churches whose membership is from 401 to 500	15.00
Churches whose membership is more than 500	20.00

A glance at table showing the receipts on Subsidy is convincing proof of the effectiveness of the plan. If your church or charge has not done its part, the doing of your bit will help to lift the load that crushes. The blank spaces in the Subsidy column are gradually diminishing. The National Act submitting the repeal of the 18th Amendment makes no provision against the return of the SALOON and its TRAGIC EVILS. It provides for NAKED REPEAL. Therefore, vote on November 7th "No Convention." This is in keeping with the pledge of the State Democratic Party platform on which the present officials were elected: "The Democratic Party always has been responsive to the will of the people, and in obedience thereto has SPONSORED AND ENACTED ALL THE PROHIBITION LAWS OF NORTH CAROLINA."

The National Democratic platform says: "Believing that a party platform is a covenant with the people, to be faithfully kept by the party when entrusted with power, ... we urge the enactment of such measures by the several states as will actually promote temperance, EFFECTIVELY PREVENT THE RETURN OF THE SALOON," etc.

The Republican State plaform: "We hope for a capable, courageous, sober, and virile nation, and therefore pledge ourselves to the retention and strict enforcement of the 18th Amendment to the Constitution," etc. The National Republican platform: "The Republican Party has always stood, and stands today, for obedience to and enforcement of the law as the very foundation of orderly government and civilization." To vote "NO CONVENTION" is to support both of the above platforms.

We appeal to all sorts and conditions of men and women in every walk of life, to enter this contest. Banish hate and win by kindness and the justice of the cause. No great human contest is ever won without work, prayer, and sacrifice. This is your duty from now on—WORK and WIN! The God of our Fathers will be with us in this contest for God and humanity. Worship

It is natural for man to worship. Those tribes which have not known the true God have been found, no matter how ignorant and degraded, to be worshipers of some object or being that served, however inadequately, as the object of this inborn urge to worship.

It appears to be characteristic of all religious worship that it is offered either to unseen beings or to some invisible quality or trait of the object or beeineg. True, the sun-worshiper could see the sun, but his adoration was offered in consequence of a supposed intelligence which could not be seen—a quality that transformed the visible sun into a wonderful and mysterious being.

In the case of image-worshipers it is clear that an invisible spirit is believed to dwell in the idol. It is to this invisible being that homage is paid.

It is hardly necessary to point out that the Christian worships an invisible God: ''No man hath seen God at any time!'' ''They endured as seeing him who is invisible.''

The fact that homage is paid by the worshiper either to an invisible being or in consequence of some quality, either real or imaginary, that is invisible to the natural eye, raises the question of whether that which is completely understood is ever worshiped. The heathen prays to the forces of nature or to his departed ancestors. He does not understand the laws of nature, and can only imagine the state of his dead relatives. Moreover, when it is remembered that the Christian finds the ways of God too high for him, it might seem that mystery encourages worship.

On the other hand, it does not seem reasonable to suppose that a better knowledge of God would weaken the desire of the human soul to pay him adoration. Indeed, the experience of those who have known God best seems to indicate that the more they learned of Him, the more lovely He appeared to them and the more their souls longed for communion with Him. And here is one of the points of superiority of the Christian religion over all the other religions of the earth: Knowledge and enlightenment strengthen rather than weaken the Christian's longing for and adoration of God.

The desire for worship has always found expression. Among the ancient Egyptians and Babylonians the worship of images was the manner in which the urge found expression; among the Persians the expression took the form of nature worship; ancestor worship prevailed in certain tribes of American Indians; but in every case some means of expression was found.

To us the universality of the instinct of worship is a strong proof of the existence of God. It is reasonable to suppose that a God who would require worship from His creatures would create them with the capacity for worship. As a result of the degradation and ignorance into which man in many places has fallen, God is not unversally worshiped. Yet that there is a universal longing for an object of worship is a proof that there is a God.

Man becomesc like the object of his worship. The pagan civilizations never rose to a high moral level because the gods which were worshiped were not thought of as being above the ordinary level of human conduct. On the other hand, the worship of a holy God, ''in the beauty of holiness,'' inspires to holy living. We fashion our lives after that which we worship.

The church of today is coming to a clearer realization of the importance of worship in the program of the church; it realizes more fully that the services should be so arranged as to encourage a worshipful attitude on the part of the congregation. It is easily possible for the sermon to contain profound truths and at the same time the service as a whole be of comparatively little value, because the atmosphere of worship is lacking.

Man will worship; what he worships is largely decided by those in charge of the services of the church. It is their business to promote and encourage the sincere worship of the true and living God.

The Adequate Christ

A considerable number of people were following Jesus. Because of certain things which He taught they began to fall away until only the Twelve remained. Jesus turned to them and said: ''Will ye also go away?'' Peter, who was the spokesman of the group, answered and said, ''To whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life.''

Peter's question as to whom they might go was an expression of his conviction that Christ is the refuge for the troubled and needy soul of man. The statement that follows his question is an expression of his belief that in Jesus all the needs of man are adequately met.

No hope is so high or need so deep but that it is fully met in Christ. All that is greatest and best in this life is found in the matchless character of our Lord. In Paul's letter to the Philippians he gives expression to this idea when he says, ''Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Jesus Christ my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, and be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but which is through faith in Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith: that I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead. Not as though I had already attained, either were also perfect; but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which I am also apprehended of Christ Jesus my Lord. Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

This Scripture gives expression to the idea that in Christ is to be found all that is worthy of our emulation, and the height of His excellence is such that we may spend our eternity endeavoring to be like Him. No other religion furnishes such an exalted object of worship. The gods of all the heathen are the personification of imperfection. Their limitations are those of mortal man because they are the creatures of His imagination. At their best they cannot be above the best of men, because the creature is never above the creator.

Jesus is just as adequate for our needs as for our ambitions. His adequacy in part consists of His knowledge of our needs. He took upon Himself human nature and lived as we live. He experienced temporal need. He said on one occasion, "The foxes have holes and birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." Surely He knows how to sympathize with millions today who are jobless, homeless and hungry. His spiritual experiences were those of men today. While He was divine yet He was human, and "was tempted in all points as we." Surely "He knoweth our frame and remembereth that we are dust." This knowledge assures us of having access to the storehouse of God's bounty.

The resources of God are sufficient for the supplying of these needs. "Are not the cattle on a thousand hills mine, saith the Lord of hosts." "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man the things that God hath prepared for them that love him." We usually think of this Scripture as having reference to the provisions of eternity, but it is just as true of this. It is true of both temporal and spiritual abundance.

Jesus is most intensely interested in the needs of the soul. Here, too, He is abundantly able to supply our needs. "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth," said the Master to His disciples, and He assured them He would be with them alway, even unto the end of the world. This "all power" is unlimited power or omnipotence. "All the gods of the nations are idols, bu tthe Lord made the heavens." This expresses the thought that God in Christ has power, and that this is an unlimited power in that it was able to bring a world into existence. This power coupled with the love of God as shown to us in the giving of His Son to save us inspires perfect confidence as we commit oursouls into His care. There is no other that has the power of salvation. "There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." "Salvation belongeth unto God."

"THE MINISTER AND PRESENT-DAY VISITING"

Rev. C. E. Ridge

The subject assigned to me is not the chief function of the minister, but it holds perhaps the most important place in the work of every pastor. I have not had an extended experience in the work of the pastorate, and what I shall say here has been said in substance many times before. But we must keep on reminding ourselves of things we already know.

I presume that my problems and my experience in the pastorate are very much the same as yours. In other days people required pastors to make more extended visits than they do now.

Fore instance, the pastor was expected to spend the night and a part of the day. Very few require that now. The good roads and the automobile have brought us into a new day. I shall not attempt here to set up any book of rules for you to follow, nor say when you should visit, or how long you should stay. You must be the master of that situation.

The object is to make visiting effective in building up spiritual life and church membership. The minister who succeeds with his work must visit his members and make full proof of his ministry.

I have heard this saying: "To do the right thing, and say the right word, at the right time, and at the right place, is a man's job." There is no other persons with whom this is so important as the minister. My pastoral visiting has been almost exclusively among rural people, and I presume that town and city people require a different type of visiting to that of country people, but their spiritual needs are much the same. Let us take up first:

The Regular Pastoral Calls

We will say by way of illustration: This evening we will drive out to the home of Mr. A. I suggest that we take the family when it is convenient to do so. The praecher's family should also be a blessing and a benediction to his people. It may be that we are invited out for lunch, or to some social event, or for an hour of chat and fun. It is fine for the pastor to have this privilege to enter into the family' ssocial life, their business life, their school life, and to help make the event what might be termed by some a great time; but the pastor must remember that his chief commission is not to play the roll of a chief entertainer.

The minister who seeks to be popular with his people by lowering the standard of his ministry to their level, and fails to magnify this high office will never lead his people to higher Christian ideals. I think the ministry of today has crippled its sacred influence in its effort to catch the world, by conforming in a measure to the ways of the world. If we as a messenger of Jesus Christ do no more in our visits than talk about the depression, or the weather, or business, or farming, or taking a vacation, or the biggest scandal in the community, we had just as well stay at home, for just anybody can do that. We MUST find time to press the claim of Jesus Christ. If we do not do it no one else will, for no one else is commissioned and sent out to do it. Dr. Dixon once said to us preachers: "When you make your pastoral visits, do something to make them feel that there has been a preacher in the home."

Many of us preachers think our people are too busy to give religion and prayer its rightful place, or it may be that we have had too little interest in their immortal souls to insist upon it. The opportunity will present itself.

When the Samaritan woman came with her water-pot to draw water she met Jesus at the well, and there arose a conversation between them concerning the well and the water. It is intensely interesting to see how quickly He shifted the conversation from the natural to the spiritual, and sought for her the highest good.

The story is told of a pastor who visited a farmer who had great possessions. He was not a Christian. This pastor's chief object was to talk to the man about his soul . After dinner the farmer took him for a walk. He showed him around over his farm. The farmer said to him: "Do you see that big field of grain yonder? That is mine. Do you see that field of corn? That's mine. Do you see that herd of cattle? They are mine. Do you see that body of timber? That's mine." Then the pastor said: "Well, brother, you have showed me what you have North, South, East, West; now tell me," lifting his hand upward, "what you have in that direction." The farmer's reply was: "I will confess to you that I haven't much in that direction." At last the way was open for pressing the claim of Jesus Christ.

Visiting in Sickness

1. In the Home. Along with the doctor and the nurse, the pastor has a very important place among the sick. He is the man of God who comes to impart to the sick and to the family spiritual blessings, assuring them of his prayers and his interest. The pastor must decide for himself whether it is advisable to have prayer in the sick room. Some will ask for it; others will wait for it. Scripture reading and prayer is in most cases greatly appreciated in sickness. I have also found this a good time to approach some on the subject of religion. A sick woman said to a member of my church who was in the hospital some days ago: "People never pray until they get sick." They should not wait until they get sick to pray and repent and get right with God, but it is better then than never.

2. In Hospitals. I visited a woman the other day who had spent some time in a hospital. She told me the pastors of the city came in right often to see the patients, and I asked her if they usually had prayer. She said they did not while she was there; they came through and asked how they were feeling, and passed on. I ask the question, "Is that all God requires of us?"

If we are not careful we will find ourselves placing more emphasis on the physical life than we do upon the soul life.

I have been associated recently with a minister in the M. E. Church, South, who told me of his visit to one of the hospitals in Asheville while he was pastor there. He went there to visit one of his members. He was in a ward with three other men. After a few words with his friend he turned to the stranger beside him and asked him if he was a Christian. The answer was, "I am anxious to become a Christian." In a few moments he had led the man to Christ. He turned to the second man and led him to Christ. When he approached the third man he covered his face with his pillow. This minister told me this was one of the happiest experiences of his ministry.

Emergency Calls

If the pastor is sent for in a case of emergency the party sending for him usually has something very definite for him to do. It may be to pray for some lost man or woman; sometimes it is to pray for a very sick person, and again it may be to reconcile the man and wife. It may be to settle some fuss or dispute in the neighborhood. Whatever problems come up the pastor is supposed to know how to solve them. A little boy swallowed a nickel, and someone said, "Send for the doctor," but the father said, "No, send for Preacher Suttle—he can get it."

When he have an emergency call we usually work to some definite aim, and in this we strive to accomplish the desired results.

Deaths and Funerals

Holding funerals is one of the most selmn and most difficult tasks in the work of the pastorate. When a death occurs in the home of our people, it is a good practice to go to the home as soon as we learn about it. If we learn of death and misfortune among our brethren and friends here and there we should send them our word of sympathy. We may never know how much good it will do.

Conducting funerals may appear to us as an official duty to perform, but we will do well to remember that it is not a common experience with the family. There is no time in the life of the family that the presence and sympathy of the pastor is needed so much as in the dark hour of death and bereavement.

We must do something better than talk in professional tones at funerals. When our parishioners are in the depths they need more than the touch of human kindness.

The great heart of Jesus was so tender that He was moved to tears as He stood with Mary and Martha at the grave of their brother.

Be An Example

Paul, in writing to Timothy, I Tim. 4:12: "Let no man despise thy youth; but be thou an example of believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity."

Dr. Lewis in his book: "Many a good sermon is wasted, not because it goes over people's heads, but because it is trampled on daily by the preacher's walk and conversation." Billy Sunday said: "A pound of example is worth ten thousand pounds of advice."

I was in a special service on one occasion with a pastor of another denomination. A minister from another section of the country had been called in to preach the sermon. Just prior to going into the service the speaker for the hour used a word that, in my judgment, is very unbecoming to the minister or anyone else. I wish I had not heard it! I was hoping my brother pastor did not hear it. After the service I said to this pastor: "That was a good sermon." The answer was, "Yes, but did you hear that word he used before we went into the service? That hurt his influence with me. I'm sorry he said it."

A certain layman had this to say about his pastor: "The Conference has bigger preachers than we have, but they haven't a man that can beat him living what he preaches."

Make Disciples

What I have said here might seem to some to be a charge against the ministers of today, but far be it from me to do such a thing. I have only tried to show us our duty and stir us to a deeper sense of our responsibility. I have especially emphasized the fact that every function of our ministry should count in the winning of souls for Jesus Christ.

And now I close with the words of Apostle Peter: "Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof. not by constraint, nor filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being examples to the flock, and when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

HOW LARGE SHOULD THE HEART BE?

Paul had the makings of a large heart. That is why he could become a great Christian and a great missionary.

He was not content with his own enlargement and enrichment. He wrote to the Corinthians, among whom he had labored: "Be ye also enlarged."

We are not favorably impressed with a person who has the big-head. But we are specially complimentary when we say of a man: "He is large-hearted."

Of course, we do not thus refer to the physical heart. We are speaking of the center of one's being, one's personality, and mean to say of him: "He is large-minded, broad-minded, generous in his nature and in his relationships with others."

To get down to particulars we need to ask: How large should a person's heart be? It should be large enough to hold several important things:

1. The heart should be large enough to hold one's self. That is to say, it should be large enough to hold a somewhat just and adequate conception of one's personality, powers, and possibilities. A person should know something of his place and work and career.

Some young people are injured because they think of themselves more highly than they ought to think. But more of them fail because they do not think well enough of their powers and possibilities, and are too easily satisfied with inferior aims and ambitions.

Parents make the mistake, in many instances, of not inspiring in their children high ambitions. Too often they encourage them to feel that they cannot expect to achieve much, being of lowly origin. This is un-American.

A young woman author dedicated her first book "To my Mother who was always helpful to me; and to my Father who was proud of me." That helpfulness and pride were valuable contributions to the success of the daughter.

2. The heart should be large enough to hold a life companion—a husband, a wife. There are adequate reasons why some persons should not marry. Certain physical or mental diseases or tendencies; financial conditions; obligations to care for parents or other relatives—these should be carefully considered and may in some cases properly prevent marriage.

But the natural, normal, thing is for the young people to be interested in some partciular one of the opposite sex, and, eventually, enter into this most sacred and blessed human relationship. Marriage pre-supposes a somewhat enlarged heart, and further enlarges it. The person is to be pitied whose heart is too small and selfish to enter the relationship, or fails to further enlarge with the passing of the years. Marriage and the home are proper studies for young people in school and the church.

3. The heart should be large enough to hold children—one's own and the children of others. Experience with my own children has been so happy that it is easy to grow enthusiastic when speaking of children. They fill the heart and home with joy. They bring work and problems, but the pleasures of watching them grow, aiding in the development of their bodies and minds and souls, watching them through the years of school and seeing them doing out in the world work that is honorable and useful—these are satisfactions beyond price.

I used occasionally to hear an odd old man say grace with a peculiar manner and tone of voice: "Lord, bless to our use a r-e-a-s-onable portion of this food." This would be a good prayer for a young married couple: "Lord, grant to our home a reasonable number of children, conveniently spaced." Some good people are afraid that the knowledge of how to control the number and spacing of children will result in no children. My observation is to the effect that, with few exceptions, married folks do want children—but they do not want to endanger the health and comfort of the family, and the possibilities of education and advancement, by having too many.

Many married peoeple who are unable to have children of their own, and many unmarried men and women, are good foster parents in schools and churches. I should be sorry to have loving relations with only my own children. Among my dearest friends are men and women whom I have known since their early childhood. They and their children enlarge and help to fill my heart and life with delight.

4. The heart should be large enough to hold people—many people. We should care for people who are of our kind; for those who are of our nationality and shade of color, and for those who are of other nationalities and shades of colr; for folks whose religious and social bringing-up is similar to ours, and for those whose rearing has been very different. All sorts and conditions of men make their appeal to us. We should be able to understand and appreciate them.

I spent more than nine years at the center of Michigan's copper country on Lake Superior. Thiry-eight languages and dialects were spoken there. Many countries and religious denominations were represented. The schools and love and marriage and the family and the churches served as points of contact. I have seen many combinations and wonderfully interesting outcomes. No group failed to have excellent qualities and possibiltiies. No normal person living under such conditions could fail to be broad-minded and large-hearted. Our country is a fine experiment station for the development of human brotherhood. Let us frown upon everything that would make for smallness of mind and heart.

5. The heart should be large enough to take in God. Not a small, local, tribal God—the god of the fatherland—but the God who is over all, and in all. The God who made the heavens and the earth, who sustains and rules the vast universe revealed by the telescope, and the little things that even the microscope fails fully to reveal; the God in whose image and after whose likeness we are made; the God who is concerned with the movements and development of human life and history and progress; the God in whom we live and move and have our being; the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ—this is the God whom we should receive with gladness into our hearts.

The more we know God the more we shall enjoy Him. The more fully we receive Him the more will our hearts be enlarged. His presence regulates all else with which we have to do. He helps adjust us to ourselves, to our life-companion, to our children and other children, to people of all classes and nations and colors. God's personality and His works are marvelous. So are we, His children. So are all His children; and nothing that concerns any of them should fail to be of interest to us.

FEDERAL COUNCIL PLANS MOTION PICTURE PROGRAM

The Federal Council of Churches at the last meeting of the Executive Committee created a Committee on Motion Pictures within the Department of the Church and Social Service, the purpose being to develop the influence of the churches for better films, and to assist the churches in the use of motion pictures for religious purposes.

The Committee, which is to be enlarged, consists of well known leaders in religious education and social service. Rev. Harold McAfee Robinson, Executive Secretary, Presbyterian Board of Education, is Chairman. Other members are: Mrs. Jesse Bader, Rev. C. Rankin Barnes, Rev. Hugh S. Leinbach, Rev. William B. Miller, Rev. Leslie B. Moss, Rev. Harry S. Myers, Miss Emma V. Peppler, Rev. William F. Quillian, Miss Katherine Terrill, Rev. Sidney A. Weston, and George J. Zehrung. The work will be under the personal direction of Dr. Worth M. Tippy, Executive Secretary of the Department of the Church and Social Service.

The Committee on Motion Pictures was authorized, as soon as finances can be assured, to organize local Church Better Films Committees in communities where there are neighborhood theatres, when a study shows that they are needed; to create a national photoplay review service for the Protestant churches, which shall be non-promotional and shall emphasize the spiritual and social values of films; to organize a Film Service Bureau to assist local churches and church boards of visual education in securing films for relligious purposes; to join in common action for social control of the motion picture industry in the interest of the public welfare.

It is recognized that important parts of this program must await adequate financing, and it is hoped that laymen who realize the need of concerted efforts to safeguard the moral and social quality of films, will voluntarily offer resuorces.

The Executive Committee also approved an important statement on Fundamental Attitudes Toward the Motion Picture which is as follows:

"The Federal Council's Committee on Motion Pictures should neither ask nor receive financial aid in any form from the industry. This is the only sound and self-respecting policy for both the industry and organizations of the public.

"There is so much that is unreal and harmful in American films and their advertising and in the present conduct of the industry, that the church is tempted to become wholly critical. Nevertheless, a merely negative attitude is unsound. There are splendid as well as degrading films, and the cinema in its large aspects is too important to be approached negatively.

"The spirit of the churches in their relations with the cinema should therefore be fundamentally constructive rather than fundamentally unfriendly and iconoclastic. This policy is necessitated by the fact that in the photoplay humanity has achieved an extraordinary new instrument of expression, with immense possibilities for broadening of knowledge and sympathies, for the relaxation and pleasure of the whole people, for international understanding and appreciation, and for every kind of education effort, including the purposes of religion.

"The motion picture is the people's theatre, and the public desire must be kept in mind. The freedom of the screen in its creative processes is related to freedom of speech, freedom of assembly and freedom of the press. These rights are never unlimited but are always conditioned by public welfare and safety. The problem, as related to the commercial cinema, is to strike effectively at its deliberate degradation, to encourage the development of exceptional films and films for selected groups, to appreciate and applaud the finer achievements of producers, directors, writers, artists, technicians and exhibitors, and to assist in improving the publi ctaste."

PRAYER

A man may live for sometime without water; he may live for a great many days without food, he may go for a length of time without rest or sleep, but he cannot live without breathing. When the supply of air is shut off he is very soon a corpse. Prayer is to the spirtual life what air is to the physical life—the spirtual life will go out, will die without it.

It is written: "My house shall be called the house of prayer." A church cannot be spirtually prosperous without much prayer. It may get along for a time without singing, or it may keep alive without an eloquent preacher, but it will die without prayer. It can no more live without it than the man can live without air. To abandon prayer means to bury the church.

The real spirit of prevailing is what is most needed to make a live, Holy Ghost church. Let the members live in a spirit of prayer. Pray for the pastor, pray for the sick and afflicted (for God has said the prayer of faith shall save the sick); pray for the children, for the lost, for the community and pray for one another. "Pray ye * * the Lord of the harvest, that He will send labourers into His harvest." "Pray without ceasing." If the church be characterized by prayer and the atmosphere be filled with the spirit of prayer the trophies of prayer will soon be seen on every side in the church. "Lord, teach us to pray."—Publisher Unknown.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

October, Pay-up month

Second Sunday in October, Rally Day, Promotion in Sunday school, etc.

November 8, Annual Conference meets at Thomasville Community church.

Honor Roll of Churches

These churches paid their pastors in full for the first half of the Conference year. If any church has been left out, please write me at once so it can be included in the last run: Haw River, Saxapahaw, First, Lexington, Henderson, Lincolnton, Seagrove and New Zion churches, Why Not Charge, Maple Springs and Hickory Ridge, Forsyth Charge.

Haw River Charge, Rev. J. L. Trollinger, Pastor

I visited three churches on this charge, Friendship, Mizpah and Fairgrove, in the order given. Preaching at Friendship was at 10 a. m., followed by Sunday school. Preaching at Mizpah at 11:30, following Sunday school. The Fairgrove service was at night. Pastor Trollinger finds that he can get better attendance at the services by holding them before and after the Sunday school than to try to get the people back for an afternoon appointment. It makes it hard on the preacher,, maybe, and does not permit a lengthy service, which may not be a bad thing. But of course the churches must not be very far apart to permit this plan to work in the most satisfactory manner.

Haw River Charge has five churches, the other two being Midway and Brown Summit. I hope to visit these at another date. While there are several churches for one pastor they are fairly compact and do not necessitate so much travel as some charges which have fewer churches on them.

There are some of our best people here and the churches are located in some of the best rural centers in our population. Fairgrove has undergone a rejuvenation since I was president of the Conference before. Back in those days the pastor thought it was dying by a process of strangulation. The colored farmer was in their midst; yet the congregation there was a surprise to me in that it was as large as at the other churches, and we had good congregations at them. The pastor reports that Fairgrove is as nearly up with pastor's salary as any church on the charge. A revival was to begin there on this appointment.

One is impressed with the well-kept church grounds, the good repair of the buildings, as he visits these churches. It signifies well, and means that there are people there who are interested both in the dead and the living. The graves are well kept and the buildings are clean and well repaired. A visitor is assured by such conditions whenever and wherever he finds them. There is no spiritual decay in such places.

Pastor Trollinger is interested in the advancement of his churches and we heard many expressions of appreciation of his services. Certainly there were no signs of dissaitsfaction in the churches visited, and we are expecting to hear good reports from this work at the Annual Conference session in November.

It was a pleasure to renew many acquaintances formed in other days and to perform the hard labor in carrying out the schedule the pastor had prepared.

UNSOLICITED AND APPRECIATED TESTIMONIAL

Burlington, N. C., June 29, 1933.

DEAR DR. MCCULLOCH:

This is a delayed birthday greeting! I have no subscriptions to the HERALD to send (only wish I had), but I do want you to know that I appreciate it and enjoy it so much. It has been coming into our home now for about three years and I enjoy it so much. Friday doesn't seem like Friday without the HERALD. If the Methodist Protestants in North Carolina would just realize how much this paper has in it and how much it holds for everyone there would be no trouble in getting the 3,000 subscriptions; but many of them simply don't know what they are missing.

A few weeks ago I taught a Sunday school class that I had never taught before, and was not prepared to teach that day. However, I knew all the pupils, girls between 10 and 15. I used as an illustration one of the stories from the HERALD. To my surprise nearly every girl in the class had already read it. One of the girls then wanted to tell another story she had read in the HERALD. I was so glad to know that those girls were reading and enjoying the HERALD.

Many of us read it and enjoy it, and appreciate your faithful work for us, even if we seldom say so.

Sincerely,

POMONA JOHNSON AMICK.

OUR STORY PAGE

UNCONSCIOUS UNSELFISHNESS

Inez Elliott's black eyes danced with delightful anticipation as the Western Express roared into the station, and with a grinding of brakes came to a standstill. She drew the reins tight on the horse hitched to the light wagon and then gazed eagerly at the passengers leaving the train . A tall, soldierly man with iron gray hair descended the steps, then turned to assist a woman who looked tired and worn after her long journey. He placed the tiny girl who accompanied her in her arms, and with a lift of his hat turned and faced Inez who had risen impatiently to her feet.

In a minute he was by the side of the wagon and Inez leaned over and kissed him.

"Jump in, Uncle Gabriel," she said, "I'm afraid to let the reins out of my hands for Kim is not used to the traces yet, and I don't want to give him a chance to take us anywhere but home. Oh, it semes so good to see you again! Do you realize that it has been almost three years since you have paid us a visit? So be prepared to be held a prisoner at Wildmere for months and months."

Gabriel Litchfield laughed, a deep laugh which held a boyish ring, as he replied: "The prisoner accepts the verdict and makes the plea that the sentence be prolonged for good behavior."

Inez flicked the ears of the horse with the whip, then started in asking and answering numberless questions. When they drove up to the house, all the family were out on the porch to greet Uncle Gabriel, for he was their favorite uncle.

He leaped to the ground as lightly as a boy and lifted Inez down as she threw the reins to the small brother who was waiting to lead Kim to his supper. After the greetings were over and Uncle Gabriel had made surprise comments on and little Bob's long trousers, he turned to his sister and her Baby Alice's two extra inches of height, Ralph's black curls husband and said with pride:

Our Inez is quite an expert little driver. I don't know when I have enjoyed a drive so much. I have an idea that her time will be taxed pretty heavily showing her old uncle over the country, for if I can I am going to secure an option on her time. It is rather a relief to drive after being whizzed around in autos."

"And I will gladly give you an option, for I rather like your company."

Ralph laughed as he said teasingly, "I wonder what Edith Courtland would say if she heard that. You know, Uncle, Edith is still Jonothan to Inez's David. None of us ever have a chance of securing her companionship."

Inez's eyes flashed for a second and Uncle Gabriel waited a little sadly for the outburst of temper which he remembered used to follow the teasing remarks of Ralph. But the angry light died away and Inez smiled brightly as she replied:

"You forget, Ralph, Edith drives a car, and there's lots of room in it for Uncle Gabriel to come along too when we go off on our jaunts. But, there, supper's ready."

Conversation at the supper table led from one topic to another and finally the subject of selfishness came up.

"The more I see of the young folks of today in traveling over the country, the more I am convinced that they are hopelessly selfish, doing nothing that inconveniences them or demands exertion or sacrifice on their parts," Uncle Gabriel declared. "Of course there are exceptions to every rule, but I would be willing to make the statement that if I offered a dollar for every unconscious, unselfish act of the average young woman or young man of today that at the end of the week I would have seven dollars left out of ten."

A mischievous smile lighted up Inez's face but she tried to be prefectly serious as she asked, "Do you really mean that you would give a dollar for every unselfish action of a young man or woman that you witnessed?"

"I certainly do," he answered, gravely. "Let's make a test. I'll give you one dollar for everything absolutely unconsciously unselfish that you do for the next month, it being understood, of course, that I am the judge, as the acts must be absolutely unconsciously."

Inez clapped her hands in delight and for the moment she seemed to Uncle Gabriel more like the little girl of fourteen he had seen three years before than the dainty little maid of seventeen who had driven him to Wildmere on his arrival.

"I'm going to be on my guard," she warned, "so be prepared to draw a large check to the order of Miss Inez Elliott. Oh, but it is nice to have a rich uncle."

"But, Inez," he protested, "I'm not giving you the money; you will be earning every dollar that comes to you."

"You are in success, Inez," Ralph declared, "to be paid for being good. But Uncle Gabriel is going to take me as his assistant while he's here, and he promises me that there will be lots of work so I'll have my little check to count on too, and I won't have to be on my best behavior to get it."

Inez's eyes flashed, but before she could speak Uncle Gabriel said, "And with Bob to run errands for me and Alice to keep me company when everybody else deserts me, I think I will have a fine band of helpers, and all Elliotts too. But then you're half Litchfield too."

Aafter every one but the two of them had gone upstairs that night, the father turned to the mother and said, "Allie, do you notice how your brother seems to bring out the best in our children?"

"Yes," Mrs. Elliott answered. "And Gabriel does enjoy the children so. It means much to him to be here with us. He told me that that the three years he has been away have been the loneliest years he has ever spent."

The weeks fairly flew, leaving behind memories of pleasant drives through shady roads, outings in the woods, walks which were just wanderings in pleasant company, delightful evenings at home about the fireside. Edith Courtland was a constant member of the parties, and Uncle Gabriel came to understand how the influence of this tall, quiet, earnest young girl had done much to tame down the impetuousness of Inez.

One day Inez started off by herself, and did not answer Uncle Gabriel's question as to where she was going. He did not press her for he was coming to understand Inez perhaps better than she did herself. She came home in time for supper with cheeks glowing and eyes sparkling. The family had all been invited for an evening's visit at a friend's a few miles away, as they started for their rooms to dress Gabriel Litchfield turned to Inez and said: "Do you want to go for this visit very much, little niece? I'd rather like to have you stay home for a quiet evening with me."

"Of course I'll stay," she answered heartily. "And we will just have the loveliest kind of an evening."

After they had all gone Inez settled herself on a low stool at her Uncle's feet and leaned contentedly against his knee.

"Do you know what date this is?" he queried.

"Yes. It's the eighteenth of June. And pretty soon we will have the long summer vacation to dream in. Let's plan."

"Its also the day you were to receive your unselfifish money," he said slowly. "But instead of asking you for a report I am going to give you one. I know where you were this afternoon. You and Edith had a group of berry picker's children off for an auto ride. And that's what you have done a day each week when you wouldn't tell me where you were going. You've made clothes for these children, and I know you hate to sew. You've told stories to Baby Alice by the hour when you have been longing to finish some book. You've stayed at home from many places just so your mother could go, and you've made her blieve that you didn't want to go. Those are the sort of things I call unconsciously unselfish acts. I have changed my mind about the average young person of today, for you and Edith have numberless projects which you are carrying out for others' benefit. Here's a check for $200, Inez, and I hope the spending of it will bring you happiness."

Inez drew back almost in alarm. "Oh, but Uncle Gabriel, I can't take your money for what I did. I took the whole proposition that night as more or less of a joke. I just coldn't make these things marketable. Please don't misunderstand," she pleaded as she saw what she thought was a hurt expression in his eyes. "I wanted to do those things, even though at times I wasn't quite so willing as others."

"Inez," her Uncle answered gravely, "I am giving this check to a little maiden whom I love and admire, not purchasing from her any marketable products. I did not tell you I would buy your unselfish acts from you. Those are the kind of things, little girl, that money cannot buy. They come only from the heart. Will you take the check now?"

Inez raised her eyes to his and they held untold joy in their depths. She valued nothing so much as Uncle Gabriel's commendation. She took the check and as she did so exclaimed gladly:

"Oh, Uncle, this means that Edith and I can plan our summer treat for the berrypicker's children without stopping to count too loosely the cost of every item. You're a darlnig," and Uncle Gabriel was enfolded in a pair of whirlwind arms.

"There's only one thing I ask," he smiled after he had been released from the young cyclone, "and that is that you do not shut me out from the festivities. I may be gray-headed but I still can enjoy planning for pleasures for children."

"We'll make you the chief director," Inez laughed, "and what more could thy heart desire?"—The Girls Friend.

TWO EARRINGS

The Christians in a little town in India were going to build a church. They were very, very poor; they almost never had enough to eat; but they gave every rupee that they could find.

Then, one evening, two little girls, eight or nine years old, dressed only in ragged petticoats, came to the missionary's house.

"We want to know, sir," they said, "if there is anything we can do to help build our church."

"Have you anything you could give?"

Poor little mites in their ragged clothes, was there anything in the world that they could give away? Yes, just one thing! No matter how poor the people there are, the little grils have earrings or rings of some kind, though they do not cost as much as they do in our country.

Each one of these little girls had a tiny bit of gold wire twisted into an earring, and each little hand went up and untwisted a tiny wire and gave it to the missionary. They gave the only pretty thing they ever had and the only thing they had in the world that was worth anything at all. Dear little girls of India, when we give as you did, the missionaries will have all the money they need.—Apples of Gold.

JACK'S TURN

Jack saw the group of ladies chatting gaily as he passed them in the touring car. He knew where they were going for he had heard mother talking about it at dinner. They were on their way to the missionary meeting at Mrs. Temple's up the hill.

Jack looked again.

Where was Aunt Nancy Thomas, his favorite of them all—Aunt Nancy, who had made him his first short trousers, and a birthday cake all those early years, when birthday cakes with candles are so important.

She was getting old now, and the last time he had seen her at church he had noticed how feeble and bent she was.

And then suddenly he turned the car about and went up another street.

Aunt Nancy sat in her neat, brown afternoon dress with her Bible in her lap.

She wanted—oh, she wanted to go to that missionary meeting, but because of her rheumatism she couldn't climb that long hill up to Mrs. Temple's.

And she had counted on hearing the minister's wife talk on 'The Mothers of Our Missionaries." And she would miss hearing the letter from Miss Brown upon the receipt of her annual missionary barrel.

Miss Brown was teacher in an Indian school out in Nevada and the society each year sent her a barrel.

She rested her gray head on her worn old hands. How hard old age was with its infirmities. She didn't want to be shut in yet.

And then she heard a firm step on the walk and the next moment the door opened and Jack came in.

"Aunt Nancy," he began, "don't you want to go to that missionary meeting? You always used to go."

Aunt Nancy looked at Jack wistfully. She wanted to go very much.

"I'm getting too feeble, dear, to climb that long hill," she answered slowly, "I'll have to give things up."

"Not while I have an automobile," he replied. "Put on your wraps, Aunt Nancy, and very soon I'll have you up at that missionary meeting."

The meeting had not yet begun when suddenly the honk of an automobile was heard and Mrs. Temple looked out.

"If there isn't Aunt Nancy Thomas with Jack Thurston helping her out of his automobile. I'm so glad. Somehow our missionary meetings lack something when she isn't here."

And the next moment she ushered in Aunt Nancy who was all smiles.

"Yes," she beamed, "I had given up all hopes of coming today. I'm very lame, you know, but Jack brought me in his automobile."

How full the old voice was of love and tenderness as she smiled at all the ladies.

"Thank you, Mrs. Temple, I will take that big chair. I'm not tired, I'm just happy."—Kind Words.

GRACE AND SALT

The speech of the Christian should have the two qualities of grace and salt. "Let your speech be always with grace"—literally, it reads, in grace. The topic of conversation will not always be of grace, but it should be in grace; that is, grace should be its characteristic element. This quality of speech means restraint, modesty, sympathy, and courtesy. These are the fruit of the Spirit, the flower of a life dwelt by Christ.

The seceond quaity of speech is salt. This has a double purpose: to give flavor to the speech and to preserve from corruption. "Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth." This salt of speech means truth, purity, courage, and common sense. Both qualities are essential.—Rev. Frank V. Mildred.

THANKFULNESS TO JESUS

A Cambridge student, of nineteen, writing in 1884, to his younger brother at school, referring to Bible readings among the boys, said:

"I know you make a point of carrying something away with you each night from your reading. I do trust all who read with you may really be brought to the point; numbers strive to do right, and get so near ,but yet they never have real rest in their souls. For tomorrow; I think Hebrews 12:28, will be most helpful (especially margin of new version)—'let us have thankfulness whereby we may serve God acceptably.' If we are truly thankful to Jesus for what He has done, we have some impetus given for working for Him."

A GREAT DISCOVERY

Sir James Simpson, the noted Scotch suurgeon, was once approached by a young man, it is said, who, wishing to compliment him, asked what he regarded his greatest discovery. The simple reply of this scientist was this: "My greatest discovery is that I am a great sinner and that Jesus is a great Saviour."—Unknown.

"GOD IS NOT MOCKED"

Several months ago a number of scientists and atheists, among them semi-believers in God, scoffers and those who had the form of Godliness, but denied the power thereof, assembled themselves around the festive board for the celebration of the hundredth anniversary of Huxley, the dead scientist and atheist, in a large hall in London. The great Metropolis was combed for the scientist who could best give an oration in memory of the dead scoffer. The speaker, who was famed throughout all England as a scholar and atheist, was also known as a magnetic speaker who could draw visions and pictures around his subject. In respect for the speaker's family, the source of information withheld his name.

After all the dinner guests had gormandized themselves and drank well of the various liquors, just as they did at the great feast of Belshazzar in Daniel's day, the speaker, solemnly and with august dignity, arose and eulogized the dead scientist. Then having finished his discourse on the wonderful attainments of the great unbeliever and scoffer, the speaker himself sought to tickle the ears of those present when he made an attack on the Christian faith. He said that Paul, although a scholarly Hebrew, when struck down by the light, and an imaginery voice while traveling to Damascus, became dizzy from the effects and continued dizzy all through his ministry, bringing forth doctrines that no sane man or woman could accept. (The natural man receiveth not these things.—Paul.) He ridiculed the claim of the church that it had been led by the Holy Spirit for nineteen hundred years. His remarks about Paul's being dizzy brought forth laughter and scoffing and those present were about to applaud the speaker for his master oration, when they saw him collapse and sink to the floor. Speechless lips and solemn faces gazed amidst the awe of silence that followed. The speaker gave a few gasps and the death rattle in his throat bespoke his fate. "Be not deceived; God it not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."—H. O. Wilson in The King's Herald.

NO TIME TO LOSE

A gay young woman came up to London. Curiosity led her to hear a sermon, which cut her to the heart. One standing by, observed how she was affected and took occasion to talk with her. She lamented that she should hear no more such sermons, as she was to go into the country the next day; but she begged her new acquaintance to right to her there, which she promised to do. In the country her convicitions so increased that she resolved to put an end to her life. With this design she was going upstairs, when her father called her, and gave her a letter from London. It was from her new acquaintance, who told her, "Christ is just ready to receive you: now is the day of salvation." She cried out, "It is! It is! Christ is mine!" and was filled with joy unspeakable. She begged her father to give her pen, ink and paper, that she might answer her friend immediately. She told her what God had done for her soul, and added, "We have no time to lose! The Lord is at hand! Now, even now, we are stepping into eternity." She directed her letter, dropped down and died.—Wesley's Journal.

WHAT IS CONSCIENCE? HOW TEACH AND TRAIN IT?

Scripture—Rom. 11-16.

Conscience Can Be Right Or Wrong

Conscience is not necessarily a true guide, for the simple reason it is, after all, only a creature of education. If properly trained it is a safe guide. If improperly trained it becomes dangerous in exact ratio to the error that has been absorbed. We hear many people advocating the doctrine, "Let your conscience be your guide, and you will not go wrong." Paul said:, "I was in all good conscience," but he was dead wrong, for he helped to persecute the early church, being present at the stoning of the first Christian martyr, Stephen.

Conscience Can Be Destroyed

One's conscience can be killed. Paul told Timothy of some people who had their consciences seared as with a hot iron. In this condition the conscience is incapable of those fine uses for which it was intended. Each of us needs to guard carefully lest the fires of passion and appetite sear our conscience and leave us bereft of this God-given safeguard.

Definite Purpose

Conscience has a very definite purpose. When properly trained, it blazes the trail for human relationships. It holds tenaciously to high idealism. The least variation from the pathway which it had announced is instanly made known. The value of such a servant is apparent to every thinking individual. It may not always be pleasant, but it is always safe. Oftentimes its dictates are contrary to the desires of the flesh. But the ultimate goal to which it leads is peace, purity, contentment and happiness. It marks the pathway for all human progress. God makes no mistakes. As an inherent part of the heart of His crowning creation, man, He placed that thing which we call conscience; without it man would not have been complete.

Abuse of Conscience

By long abuse conscience may be stifled until it is said to sleep. Many a prodigal, spending his substance is riotous living in a far country, has succeeded in doing one thing, that is, lulling his conscience into a state of coma. This is that state of coscience in which vast millions are living today. Sometimes the sound of familiar song will bring back his conscience. The one supreme method for awakening the sinner's conscience is by the means of the Gospel preached fearlessly in all of its simplicity and power. It is God's dynamite for blasting away the worldly walls behind which the human conscience sleeps.

Suitable Hymns

"I Need Thee Every Hour," "In the Hour of Trial," "Yield Not to Temptation," "Jesus Calls Us," "The Comforter Has Come," and "Into My Heart."

THE BETTER WAY

It is better to lose with a conscience clean
Thana to win with a trick unfair;
It is better to fail and to know you've been,
Whatever the prize was, square;
Than to claim the joy of far-off goal
And the cheers of the standersby.
And to know down deep in your immortal soul
A cheat you must live and die.

Who wins by a trick may take a prize,
And at first be sweet he may think,
But many a day in the future lies
When he'll wish he had met defeat.
For the man who lost shall be glad of heart,
And walk with his head up high,
While his conqueror knows he must play the part
Of a cheat and a living lie.

WANT MORE "SUNSHINE" IN MILK

Children in this country need and would benefit by more sunshine in their milk says a report handed in by the Committee on Milk at a recent meeting in Washigton of the Conference of Health Authorities. The committee had made a study of vitaminizing milk, through a patented process that has been used in several communities. This vitamized milk contains vitamin D, that vitamin that prevents rickets in children.

The usual source of this vitamin is from such preparations as cod-liver oil and sunshine. It was found by the committee that the dairymen using this process had three methods of putting vitamin D in milk. Milk is mixed with a patented preparation of vitamin D obtained from cod-liver oil or ergosterol, cows are fed irradiated yeast, and direct irradiation of milk.

A standard dosage has not yet been determined upon but authorities declare that there would be no harm to children except in amounts several hundreds of times greater than the amounts now being placed in milk.—Pathfinder.

EARTH'S HOTTEST DAYS

Furnace Creek Ranch, Death Valley, Cal., has kept accurate weather records since 1911 by means of a weather bureau thermometer. The hottest day recorded was on July 10, 1913 when the bureau thermometer, properly shaded and protected, registered 134 degrees of temperature, the highest ever recorded at that time by experts.

Nine years later, French observers recorded a temperature of 136 on the edge of the Sahara desert. Now Ernest E. Eklund of the Weather Bureau points out that inasmuch as the weather station in Death Valley is 98 feet above the bottom of the valley, it is entirely possible that on the floor of the valley on that July day the thermometer would have registered above the present high of 136 degrees. Death Valley is 276 feet below sea level. That's a real depression.—Pathfinder.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Gibsonville, 83 drinking glasses and four glasses of jelly. Spring Valley, Vance, Daily Vacation Bible school, eight aprons and two cushion tops. Flat Rock, Vance, Daily Vacation Bible school, six little baskets and 17 pillow slips. Mrs. J. W. Boyles, Thomasville, two pair shoes, five dresses and seven strings of beads. Bellmont, Mt, Hermon, Daily Vacation Bible school, eight pillow slips. Friendship Auxiliary, Mt. Hermon, eight pillow slips and eight towels. These were delivered by the pastor, and there were about eight pounds of bacon, which we think came from Friendship. Mrs. T. A. Williams and class of girls, Roberta, three towels and a package of coupons. Mrs. Bert Van DeWarker, Lansing, Michigan, 25 handkerchiefs, 21 copies of the Gospel by Luke, ten towels, 17 wash cloths, three pair hose, one pair gloves, one dress and one coat.

We are so thankful for the gifts of maney and substance. The dear Father bless all the givers.

Note—We have sent out about 500 glass cans within the last two weeks and will be glad to place three or four hundred more. Some have written, "You need not provide the cans, we will furnish cans and put up as much as possible for the Home." We appreciate this, and are asking our farmer friends to share their produce with us this fall. To do this the good women will have to plan for us during the summer.

We have gone through June and are started into July almost without rain. It has rained all about us, but to date we have had very little raain in over six weeks.

We are getting some berries from elsewhere, and have the promise of some peaches from the orchards soon. So we are saving all we can.

Coupons

Please keep collecting the Octagon coupons, and watch the paper for further announcements about them. It seems a small thing, but they help us wonderfully. Keep them coming.

Yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON, Superintendent.

—Dr. J. E. Wyche, Greensboro dentist, died last week, aged 77

Though I really get about all I can absorb and profit by. The radio—with all its short-comings and impertinences—is a decidedly enriching invention. You can at least turn it off when its product is too offensive. Much of great value may be had, and to turn on really good things certainly does contribute to that fine feeling of affluence.

I enjoy houses, public buildings, streets, parks, zoos, flowers, fields—all the varied beauties of nature. People, large and small, old and young, of all colors and all races and nationalities—are a part of my riches. Possession of friendships of many choice individuals thrills me with a sense of well-being, even of opulence.

Contributing to the expenses of the local church and to the wider missionary and educational enterprises yields large measures of satisfaction. Were I richer I should be glad to do much more along those lines. Prayer and intelligent interest help, as well as contributions of money.

Most of these riches of which I have been speaking are ours for the taking, with but little or no money as a condition of enjoyment. Some money is necessary in life—and that is worth working to gain, and it should be carefully saved and wisely used. But the best and most real riches come to whoever has the mind and heart to understand, appreciate and use them. The words of our Lord are wonderful: "Ask, and ye shall receive; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." If we ask and persistently seek for the best things, we shall obtain them. LUTHER K. LONG.

LET US GO TO WORK—A FIVE-YEAR PLAN TO END THE DEPRESSION

1. The American people must have employment. Ten million persons unemployed present a serious national problem. Work is the only practical permanent solution of this problem. Charity soon exhausts itself.

2. Fear has become a national obsession. Capital is afraid to seek its natural outlets in providing employment through safe investments. This fear must be overcome as a national defense act of major importance. Capital must come out of its hiding and take legitimate chances. Unused capital is a real menace to a secure economic order.

3. If work does not start up and this depression should continue, twenty-five million property holders will have to give in charity an average of at least three hundred dollars a year until the depression ends to feed and house the millions out of employment. To give employment is better economics than to give in charity. Charity should be reserved for the afflicted and the otherwise unfortunate.

4. There are twenty-five million home-owners in the United States. These twenty-five million home-owners can make a vital contribution to the solution of the unemployment problem. By mobilizing their forces in a movement to encourage wise spending the home-owners of this country can set an example in judicious spending which, if followed by all the industries, will provide work for our people and in this way end the depression.

5. Twenty-five million home-owners, each spending three hundred dollars for five years would put into circulation seven billion five hundred million dollars a year in the creation of permanent values in beautifying and making more comfortable the homes in which the American people live. This in addition to normal expenditures along all other lines, would stimulate all industries and find employment for all. To keep homes in proper repair and to build new homes for a growing population is a prime economic necessity in stabilizing values and in bringing lost values back. Money spent on better homes and on values tending towards permanency is good business sense and in line with the economic laws dealing with continuing or permanent values. With the tax-rate kept down within reason in order to encourage investments in permament values, the future of our country would be bright indeed.

6. The "Better Homes Movement" offers a leadership for all the industries to follow. When we all go to work most of our troubles will come to an end. Work in the direction of providing better homes for our people is a step in the right direction. If every family owned its own home many social and economic problems which loom so large and threatening would lose their threat and would disappear. A roof over our heads and paid for, is a mighty fortress in a time of economic confusion. The wind and the rain of adverse economic conditions may beat in vain upon that kind of security.

7. Of course, every home or property owner could not at first put three hundred dollars a year into such an undertaking; but if one-half of the owners of these twenty-five million homes could or would do it, such increased activity would be felt in all lines of business as would carry along the other half.

8. People cannot think clearly on empty stomachs. Legislation forced by unusual economic distress is apt to be unwise legislation. First of all give the people worq; and then let legislators and economists, statesmen in church and state, with the people at work, take up that study of economic and spiritual relationships that these times are calling for, and by means of a program of education along these lines find a way to provide permanent employment for all who are able to work.

9. Let a Movement be started at once to gather into a great national enterprise, the twenty-five million home-owners of this country in an endeavor to induce the spending of at least three hundred dollars a year for five years on each of these twenty-five million homes; let this movement be organized in every state in the union, in every county in every state, in every community in every county, with the passion and fervor that evangelists and ministers and priests exercise as they seek to bring men and women into the Kingdom of God; let the psychology of the old-fashioned "revival" in the churches be employed to get everybody to sign on the dotted line a solemn contract to lend a hand in conquering a national depression. Out of all this a way may be found by which the unemployed may find work and food and raiment be procured for needy millions. Such a movement could be inaugurated and put through. It would cost less than a campaign to win or lose a presidential election, and might mean vastly more.

10. "This is the victory that over-cometh the world." Faith in God and faith in mankind and faith in government and in the future of our country and of the human race! Borrow—if need be to carry on. But let it be everybody's business, and not simply that of the government. Yes—faith!

We can afford to speculate on the future in this way. Such speculations would be safer than on margins in Wall Street, or government bond issues which may become so staggering and burdensome as to bring down in ruins our whole order of society, our whole economic structure. Let us find a way for the release of capital and that stored-up energy in the bodies of men and women which should find fulfilment in continuous employment for all the people. It is work that people need most—not charity.

Albert Norman Ward,
Pres. Western Maryland College.

STATEMENT BY THE REV. WM. SHEAFE CHASE, D.D., FOR THE INTERNATIONAL REFORM FEDERATION

The dry defeat on the Repeal Proposal may be turned into a double blessing. It may purify crooked politics. It may educate the public to know the devastating and demoralizing results of legalizing the sale of intoxicating drinks in this automobile and highly organized age, and of returning the greedy lawless liquor traffic to power in politics.

The overwhelming successes of Prohibition have been minimized. The victories still to be won have been falsely proclaimed as failures. Widespread discussion will reveal the hypocrisy of those who have pretended to hate the saloon, but are now working for its return.

The cry for state rights by the liquor business will be shown as insincere. It is a trick to divide the successful Federal Army into 48 separate armies. The Wets know that the Federal Government can subdue the lawless liquor business but that the liquor trust can overcome the Federal power, if the Federal Army can be separated into 48 different units. When the public comprehends this trick, the bubble of the wet hope will burst.

The coalition of the Republican and Democratic Machines, by threats of the loss of patronage and of preventing their return to Congress, coerced dry Congressmen to vote against their honest convictions and against Article V of the Constitution which provides that members of Congress shall not vote for a change unless they "DEEM IT NECESSARY."

Prohibition has not failed but both party machines have failed. The remedy is not to repeal prohibition but to denounce and punish the corrupt party machines which for graft are betraying the people and destroying our representative form of government.

The hunger of both party machines for graft cannot be satisfied by yielding to the wishes of the organized underworld crime and of the liquor traffic.

The drys do not fear an honest vote on repeal or honest state conventions. They fear that the votes will not be honestly counted and that the state conventions will be composed of delegates hand picked by the alliance of the two corrupt machines. They fear that the State Conventions will be mob-controlled as were the two Chicago Conventions.

Demand An Honest State Convention

In every State Legislature there should be a determined effort to get a bill which will provide an ideal State Convention which will be free from the political machines and from financial control. It should have two sessions, with at least one month intervening, one session for organization and appointment of committees and the other to receive the reports of various committees. One Committee should investigate the effect of alcoholic beverages upon women and children. Another should report upon the relation of the Liquor Traffic to law and politics. The danger of stampeding either session should be safeguarded.

The nomination for delegates, women as well as men, should be by petitions on which candidate shall state whether he is for or against ratification.

In case no candidate is elected, and there are several wet candidates and several dry, the total vote for the sevral wet candidates should be added together, and the total vote for the dry candidates. The one leading the group which has the larger number of votes, whether wet or dry, should be declared elected. In this manner, the will of the people can be best determined.

The bill should provide that at least six months should elapse after the enactment of the bill, before the election of delegates to the State Convention.

The drys cannot hope to win unless they have the same use of the press, radio and motion pictures as the wets. The handicaps against the drys who have little money seem insuperable, unless American citizenship awakes and throws aside its timidity and indifference.

Nothing is more timid than the corrupt party machines before an enlightened and consecrated patriotic feeling. An aroused public indignation can destroy both corrupt machines as the Egyptians were overwhelmed in the Red Sea.

The Washington Conference of 25 Protestant Communions against Prohibition Repeal signed by over 700 persons, who believe that Prohibition has succeeded in part but has not yet a fair trial, will meet on Tuesday and Wednesday, March 7 and 8 in Calvary Baptist Church, H and 8th Streets, N. W., Washington, D. C.

It will usher in a new day of righteousness and prosperity for which we work and pray.

It will wake up the American hosts of righteousness and save the Constitution from the enemies of liberty through law.

It will test men's souls. Some will work for worldly motives.

Others will work as the Nazarites, Aaron, Sampson, Elisha, Christ, Paul, Lincoln, Bryan and Frances Willard, because they love their neighbors, and that God's will may be done upon earth.

Wm. Sheafe Chase.

SEND IN YOUR JOURNAL MONEY

Brother Reiner has sent me an appeal for help in meeting some most urgent obligations. But I am helpless. I cannot respond to it and pay the Journal bill until the pastors send me the money they have collected. Only sixteen charges out of eighty-seven have sent in Journal money at this writing. And that won't pay the bill. Come along, brethren, help me to help the publishing house. And, please, make your check to

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

April 16th, Easter—Offering for Board of Missions.

May—High Point College Month.

June, Second Sunday Children's Day—Offering for Board of Missions.

October—Pay-up month for Annual Conference Budget; Second Sunday in October—Rally and Promotion Day.

Nov. 8-13—Annual Conference—TO MEET WHERE? Think of this, no place to go.

The Easter Program

There came to my desk last week a sample of the new Easter program gotten out by Dr. Haddaway. It is quite complete, furnishing pageant and recitation sheets together with sprightly music which ought to satisfy the requirements of any of our churches. We hope that a very large number of our Sunday Schools will observe this service, take the offering and send it in at once because the Board of Missions is in need of funds.

While many of our pastors have not used Easter as a decision day, others have with good results, and since the Decision cards are likewise furnished it brings an opportunity to us which no pastor should neglect; if the decision service can be held either on Easter or afterward, the cards might be found useful.

Pastors' Salaries

Many pastors report their salaries are far in arrears for this time of the year, and the first quarter is not a time when salaries are usually paid up to date. But so many of our pastors received less salary than was promised last year, your failure to pay them now, works a very great hardship on them. While all of our pastors gladly bear the burden of poverty with their people, they ought not to be incapacitated by your failures to pay. Many are. I know pastors who cannot use their car because of the cost of gas and license and by this are compelled to walk or depend upon the kindness of others to get to their appointments. Your pastor certainly cannot render to you his best service under such a condition. Come on folks, make a supreme effort to pay your pastor up to date; the first quarter is past and try hard to pay him for the services he has rendered you. This will greatly encourage him and enable him to be of so much better service to you that you will be glad of the self-denials you made to do this. I shall be able to write more fully upon this topic when pastors reports are in my hands in about two weeks.

Fuller Enlistment of Church Members

I have long since been convinced that the church is one organization that makes proper use of but few of its members. A possible ten or twenty per cent of the members of our churches really render definite services to the Lord through the church. This is not saying that only this small percent really render religious services, but render it through the organized church.

That this is entirely too small, most of you will readily agree. The question arises how can this number be increased? We shall discuss this topic in our Area Meetings. There will be several ministers to speak on it at different places, and we believe some help shall come from these discussions.

But without waiting for these discussions I want to urge that we make our worship services richer in their spiritual content. The services ought to be so deeply spiritual, so productive of thought upon spiritual things, that those who go, as a duty, remain to serve, because of the joy they found in the services.

There has been a change of attitude towards the worship service in recent years, we think. The sermon does not have as large a part in some services as it ought to have. It is crowded to the back door; the congregation is released for the sermon after they have grown tired and are ready to go home through a long preliminary service. The pastor then has a poor chance to grip his hearers with his sermon.

In other cases there is practically no devotional preparation for the sermon. The preacher must preach a sermon in a house and to a congregation where there is no spiritual atmosphere and no real desire to hear him talk about spiritual things. That there should be a medium, we admit.

But there ought to be more consideration given to the enrichment of the service. It is one of the objections to a brief order of service that it becomes so formal, it is already bare, that we weary of it. A richer ritual would some relieve this, could we have a change. But to stand and sing a hymn selected at random, to sit down to hear a prayer, then to wait for the collection plate to be passed, then to sing another hymn, hear the announcements, then the sermon can become most monotonous. But if the order should be frequently changed, if a spiritual attitude could be created, a deep sense of awe or reverence felt when we enter the house of God, the worship period would be what we mean when we speak of it as a worship service.

Come to the Area Meetings and hear this topic discussed, also take a part in the discussion. It will be open to all who attend.

The Church, Past and Present

This is another topic to be discussed at the Area Meetings. The church as a divine means for world redemption will receive consideration. The spiritual inheritance which is ours will likewise be emphasized and the need for greater loyalty to th church as God's means of bringing in the kingdom will be stressed. Whether we belong to the church or not, whether we appreciate what it has done or not, the world has not known Christianity except through the organized church. The early disciples handed themselves together for worship instruction and consoliation and they called the group the Ecclesia-church. Through the centuries this ecclesia has marked its trail with the blood of sacrifice; the graves of its martyrs have become the rallying ground for more heroic efforts on the part of the saints. We have entered into their labors, they without us could not be made perfect, nor can the future generations be perfected apart from our sacrificial services. Let us learn more about the place of the church in our civilization.

LIVING AND ACTING YOUR RELIGION

Religion needs to be thought, and, without doubt, it should be felt. But, above all, religion is something that requires to be lived—to be acted. The Reverend L. P. Jacks—an eminent English scholar, educator, and preacher makes some penetrating observations and remarks in a lecture on ''Education and Religion.'' Professor Jacks says:

''One of the tasks awaiting Christian theologians today is to sift out those parts of Christianity which cannot be acted and to stand firm on those which can.

''God, Freedom, and Immortality, the main pillars of every religion, are all actable: God, by living a God-like life—the only way in which you can finally convince yourself or anybody else that God exists; Freedom, by silent and heroic service; Immortality, by asserting your citizenship in heaven and claiming your membership in the Communion of Saints. There are others: think of them for yourselves.

''And what of the education we are giving to children in the schools and to young men and women in the universities? Is it actable education? Is it of the kind they can follow up and develop into the continuous culture of a life-time? Will it help them to enjoy the universe and to love it, or will it merely swell the army of exploiters who would make what they can out of the blind machine, and so increase the confusion into which that unhappy drama is now drifting? Will their education cease the moment they leave school, as a thing for which they have no further use, or will it continue and prolong itself to the end of their days as a vital motive for good work?

''According as the answer falls out one way or another, you have the difference between an education which is a reality and an education which is a sham. Education will become real when all the children and all the adults are being trained to play their parts as living members of a living universe. Here, again, the task of educationists is to sift out the shams, of which there are many, from the realities.

''And, in general, the thing that we are preaching in our pulpits and teaching in our schools and universities, is it only something we argue for and grow contentious over and work up into eloquence? Then away with it, for it is mere cant! Or is it a plan of action, a scheme of noble living, a thing we are doing and mean to do? Then stick to it, for it is a reality!''

LAW ENFORCEMENT VS. POWERFUL CITIZENS

President Hoover has officiated at the corner-stone laying of many important public buildings in Washington.

Last Thursday, February 23, he performed his last service along this line. The Department of Justice building is to house a department in which all our people—rich and poor, high and low—have a great deal of interest.

In his address at the corner-stone laying of this structure, President Hoover said a thing that should long be remembered. It indicates that he is the same high-minded and patriotic official that he was on entering the White House four years ago. And we may expect that, as he returns to the ranks of private citizens, he will continue the same unselfish service to his country, and the whole world, that characterized his life before becoming President. I have taken the liberty to italicize a few words. He said:

''The building that will rise upon this ground will house men and women dedicated to one of the noblest pursuits of the human mind and spirit, the preservation of the majesty of the people's law, the preservation of the people's rights against evil doers and oppressors, the amelioration of those passions which inevitably arise between rival interests and claims.

''The primary reason for establishment, government is the preservation of public peace. Law is the foundation stone of organized society. Its enforcement is the primary task of civilization. Democracy can hope to endure only to the degree that it can find the means of enforcement of its own laws, even against the most powerfully entrenched of its own citizens.''

That powerful spoilers of the people are making increased efforts to entrench themselves seems quite evident just now. I am hoping that sensible, law-abiding men and women are going to learn the necessity of coming efforts for the common good. The less crankiness and partisan bigotry we have in our own ranks the better. The more broad-mindedness and genuine human sympathy we manifest the more wholesome will be our influence.

Luther K. Long.

BRINGING THEM IN

One of the most beautiful points in Mr. Moody's life was his extreme earnestness and fidelity in doing little things for God's work. Bishop McCabe says that on one occasion Moody heard him preach Christ to the people. At the close of the sermon Moody said: "Chaplain McCabe, I want you to preach that sermon in my Illinois Street Church to the poor sinners whom I will gather there for you." Moody held this service at midnight. When Bishop McCabe walked into the room with Mr. Moody, there was not a soul present. Moody said: "You sit down here, and I will go and get the audience." He went out on the street and in about a half hour returned, followed by a great crowd of toughs from the street. McCabe grew ecstatic as he told of the wonderful service held at midnight with these poor sinners. Moody was faithful over little, and God made him ruler over much.—Elim Evangel.

GOOD INTENTIONS

The things that you do, either good or bad,
Will bring to you praise or blame.
You will make your record yourself, to give
You a feeling of joy or shame.

Your record will stand by the things you start
Or the things you carry through,
But you'll never get either praise or blame
For the things that you meant to do.

No matter how good your intentions are,
The question is: "What have you done?"
And it will be put at the end to you,
As it is to every one.

Perhaps there may be more praise than blame
For you, when your life is through,
But you never will get any credit at all
For the things that you meant to do.

—Somerville Journal.

SHE NEVER THANKED HIM

Walking down the street of one of our large cities a poor man passed a carriage occupied by a little girl of some ten years. The coachman had left the box to make a purchase. He had not passed the conveyance for more than fifty yards before the horse, taking fright, bolted. Realizing at once the situation, he sprang forward, and succeeded in stopping the runaway. He was, however, knocked down in the attempt and taken unconscious to the nearest hospital. Here he lay for days between life and death. As it subsequently transpired he had become a cripple for life. On regaining consciousness and being able to talk, his first enquiry was for the little child. "Is she safe?" "Yes!" "Was she injured?" "No." "Can I see her?" "I fear not," the nurse replied, "you are in the hospital and the child is not here." "But she has been to enquire and express her thanks, has she not?" enquired the poor man. Alas! the nurse was obliged to reply in the negative. It seemed inexplicable to him and he had to console himself with the thought, as the days went by, that she would certainly come some day! But the time passed on and she never appeared.

The story goes that her father, fearing he might have to bear all expenses involved, refused to allow his child to call. It was pathetic to hear the poor cripple's constant enquiries. "Oh, that she would come to me, the little girl I saved. If I could only hear her say 'Thank you' just once, I should be satisfied." But he never did, he never even set his eyes upon the one for whom he had given all that was sweetest in life.

"Can such ingratitude be possible?" you say! Yes, and a thousand times worse. There are many who have never once in all the many years of their life gone to their room and behind their closed door thanked the Lord Jesus out of a full and glowing heart for all that He has suffered for them.—The Dynamic of Redemption.

JESUS CARES

Across the deep waters of grief, Jesus cares,
Whispering hope, dear, and calming thy fears,
He is so faithful; He'll answer thy prayers,
Jesus cares.

Dark though the night, dear; He ever is nigh,
To help with thy burden and dry sorrow's eye.
Trust Him, and all will be bright, by and by,
He is nigh.

Yes, Jesus loves thee, and Jesus still cares,
Lovingly comforts and dries all thy tears,
His love is lasting through all of the years,
Jesus cares.

—Selected.

HOW MUCH RELIGION CAREY HAD

A neighbor stepped into the shop of William Carey, the cobbler, and thus accosted him: "William, how much religion have you got today?"

"Just enough to make a good pair of shoes," replied the cobbler quietly.

That was enough for the moment and the man. But he needed that much, for his religion would have been defective if it had allowed him to do dishonest work. He must put conscience in everything he did at his bench or his conscience would not work satisfactory in church.

You can depend upon the man whose religion animates him in his daily round and grind on week days, for it alone can inspire and elevate on Sundays.—Publisher Unknown.

EBENEZER

When God is known to be on our side, we can say, "Who can be against us?" We realize that He does not forget us in our hours of need, and we can set up our remembrance of His help. Our Ebenezer is really our Lord and Saviour—the chief Corner Stone, on whom all depends. He is the exponent of the tender love of our God to us, and all the mercy that comes to us by day and by night comes through Him.

When we realize that "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me," we have the exhilarating consciousness that He is our Stone of help, and our hearts are revived and filled with gratitude and thanksgiving in remembrance of Him.—Scripture Truth.

OUR LOYALTY LEAGUE

This movement, fostered by the Conference Board of Education, is taking form in the Conference, and is receiving encouraging response by both pastors and laymen. It is not a movement that we expect to carry on in any whirlwind fashion, but rather by the "steady pull" plan. If we are not, therefore, making anybody dizzy as we move in this movement, don't conclude that we are not moving. The undertaking is underway, and will spread until every part of the conference is covered. And we are hopeful of good results. To create in our Conference a Loyalty League of 5,000 members, including our people from infancy to old age, should not be thought of as impossible of achievement. We should certainly be able to find one in every six of our membership who will enroll in so worthy an undertaking.

The Loyalty League Pledge Card and the Certificate which we give here, will throw light on what the Board hopes to do through this movement.

THE DAY OF TROUBLE

In these days of trouble, of many sorrows, when, perhaps, children are crying for bread, naked and destitute of daily food, those who are in good circumstances, have a great opportunity to help the needy and suffering families. If those who are able to help the people in distress refuse, what then? It is this: 1 John 3:17, 18, Whoso hath this world's goods, and seeth his brother in need, and shutteth his bowels of compassion from him how dwelleth the love of God in him?

This distress that is upon us could be worse, but we think it is bad enough. What is the cause of it? I do not know. Many people have written on the subject, but it seems that they do not know. I am going to guess. It is sin. We have forgotten God. If it is sin, what is the remedy? It seems that the remedy is found in 2 Chron. 7:14, If my people which are called by name, shall humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land. Our part: Humility, Prayer, Repentance. God's promise: Then will I hear, forgive, heal.

G. F. MILLAWAY.

A DANGEROUS HABIT

The fault-finding habit is a bad one. It is easily acquired and not readily broken. We live in an imperfect world. Everything is flawed and defective. Institutions all blunder and fall short of the ideal. Perhaps all are erring creatures and their faults give us offense. But one should not pay too much attention to the faults of others or to the defects of the world in which he lives. He may become a chronic fault-finder, and in that case he will become a grumbler. If he is not careful, he will degenerate into a growler. And if he growls long enough, he will degenerate into a snarler, and in the end will become a cynic. When a man has become a cynic, he has reached the bottom. There is nothing lower than cynicism. A cynic is of no account either to himself or to any one else. He is a nuisance and a stumbling-block. He did not intend at the start to become a cynic. He began by finding fault, and the habit grew on him until his mind became twisted and his heart sour.—Gosper Banner.

THE POWER OF THE BIBLE

The power of the Bible confirms the proposition that it is a revelation from God. It is the Living Word. It transforms character. It makes a revelation such as no book of human authorship has ever done.

Pastor Hirsch says that in his parish visitation he gave a Bible to a seller of low literature. At first she refused it, and when she consented to accept it she said, "I will sell it."

"All right," replied Mr. Hirsch, "but read it before you sell it."

When he returned to that book store several months afterward, he found that all the low literature had been cast out. The woman, who had never read the Bible before, was so impressed by its truths, and her character was so changed, that she decided to run only a first-class book store.

The Bible thus cleanses and keeps every heart and business that will accept its teaching.—Gospel for the Youth.

OUR STORY PAGE

GOD'S CHILDREN AND CHERRIES

We were standing on the street corner in Nelson, British Columbia, one very hot day last summer. We were studying the thickly wooded slopes of the towering Canadian Rockies and wondering what kind of persons lived over on the other side of these mountains. So we went into the telegraph office and inquired about the other side of the mountain. We were as inquisitive as the old bear who wanted to see the other side of the mountain.

"Friend," I asked, "could you tell us what kind of people live on the other side of that range of mountains?"

"Doukabours," he smiled.

"And what are they?"

"You've never heard of the Doukabours?"

He seemed to be a bit astonished. I told him that we were from far away Georgia and this was our first journey into Canada.

"Russians in Canada?" We were surprised. "Why I thought only English and French lived in Canada."

"Well, you go about twenty-five or thirty miles from here, over those Rockies, and you can see for yourself."

So we took his hint and began our journey across and over the Canadian Rockies. The automobile climbed and climbed. It looked as if we never, never were going to reach the summit of this ridge of mountains. We circled around and around. My, but it was hot and dusty. But we looked at the beautiful scenery and watched the little red and gray squirrels scampering across the road in front of our car. So we really didn't get very tired.

Finally, we came up a long hill and found ourselves on top of the world, a way, way up in the clouds. And down below, thousands of feet, the blue Kootenay River rushed along its way. We could see the white water as it boiled and gushed over the falls and roared over the rapids. The little squirrels came out of their holes and watched us and we saw a rabbit nibbling at some grass.

Then we started again. Far away down the valley, we could see small dots, which were houses of the Doukabours. We began a long descent, one that wound in and out of the forest and circled down the mountain. We came upon huge cliffs, where the car would fall two thousand feet before striking bottom. But we were not afraid for we knew that God was watching over us and that He would take care of us.

At last we began to ride on level ground. We were in the fertile Kootenay River Valley. Along the road we saw wooden houses, with little boys and girls playing in the yard. Their mothers wore green skirts, red blouses, and yellow shawls. Some of the little girls were dressed in a similar manner, but most of them were clad in white garments. At one place we stopped and watched a group of boys up a cherry tree. These little fellows were having the time of their lives, reaping handfulls of red berries and filling their mouths.

Then we came upon the village proper of the Doukabour settlement. We went into a store and found a man who could speak both the American and the Russian languages.

I was interested in getting some pictures for Mrs. Brown's page in the Christian Index, so I asked him to take me to see some boys and girls.

"All right. I take you. Maybe they will let you take pictures and talk to you. They're good children."

So this good man took me to see boys and girls. The little boys were rolling in the sand and letting the small puppies roll over them. The little girls looked on and called to the boys not to hurt the dogs.

"Won't you all let me take some pictures of you, so the little boys and girls back home in Georgia can become acquainted with you?"

"You American?" asked one small, dark-headed boy.

"Yes. I'm American."

"Do you have a God?"

"Yes. I have a God."

"A good God?"

"Yes. The best God in the world. The same One who watches over you. Won't you tell me something about your God and where you came from?"

"My people came from Russia, because the government wanted to make them worship a god that was not the right God. They left their land and came to eastern Canada, in the Saskatchewan Valley. The Canadian government gave them some land, but took it away from them because they did not want to be ruled by the government. We think that our soul belongs only to God. So my people left there and came out here. They bought the land this time. But if the Canadian government wants it, they will gladly give it up. All our people want is to be left alone so we can worship God. When we die we aren't going to any government. We are going Home to God."

"That's fine," I told him.

He called to a girl who was carrying a bucket into the house. Then he turned to me. "Don't you want some cherries to eat? Mother is going to make a pie out of these, but I can get her some more."

So I ate cherries and watched the little children at play with the puppies. After a long climb, as we topped the peaks of the Rockies, I looked back and saw the village. I thanked God that there were more boys and girls, even in a distant country, who believed in Him.—The Christian Index.

FIRST MORNING THOUGHTS

Elizabeth Fry, during her last illness, said to her daughter, "I believe I can truly say that, since the age of seventeen, I have never waked from sleep, in sickness or in health, by day or by night, without my first waking thought being how I might best serve the Lord." In this continual recognition of Christ as her life's Guide she fulfilled the condition on which we are promised that He will direct our paths.

It was a prayer of George Herbert that he might be led wholly to resign the rudder of his life to the sacred will of God, to be moved always "as Thy love shall sway."—Dr. J. R. Miller.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

THE KIND OF GOD JESUS REVEALED

Scripture Text: I John 4:16; John 14:1, 2.

There is a question in the minds of many people today as well as of former times as to the kind of being which God is. We will, therefore, find this lesson profitable and enlightening. The disciples of Jesus were faced with the same problem and Thomas said "Show us the Father and it sufficeth us." Jesus seemed amazed that the disciples had not understood Him as long as He had been with them. He says, "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father." The great task of Jesus was to reveal to the world the Father and give to the men of all ages a true conception of the true God.

God is love. Jesus revealed a God of love. It was love for the world which made the Son of God take the form of man and come to earth to die for those whom He loved. It was love which Jesus demonstrated to the world in the manifold acts of goodness and friendship which He did. It was the greatest of Divine love which made Jesus go to the cross. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." The cross is the very emblem of love and has stood since the time of Jesus as that symbol. In the title which Jesus gave to God as Father, He taught that God is one to be loved as a Father rather than to be feared and to be obeyed from the motive of fear. A child soon realizes a relationship of love with his parents rather than one of fear. It is the Divine within us that gives us the spirit of brotherly love.

God is purity. Jesus was pure in His relations with man and in all of His dealings with people. Jesus was pure in soul and the one perfect man. Since He was pure and without sin, He sould say to the world, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect." As the Christ triumphant stepped from the tomb, He was the emblem of purity. As spotless as a white lily plucked with the dew upon it so the Christ freed from the restrictions of the flesh and pure in every way, gave to the followers of all times a personal example of the purity of God. The entire world realized the purity of Jesus and false witnesses had to be called to get Him convicted. Pilate said, "I find no fault in Him."

Jesus revealed a God of power. We have often limited our conception of God to a mere super-man who understood a little more than we did and had a little more power than we. The power of God is unlimited by the terms which we know and is not to be compared with the qualities of man. We need a conception of God of immensity: a God who is not limited by human weaknesses and who is not circumscribed by the knowledge of man. The miracles which Jesus performed showed the power of One whom He represented. If the world could conceive of God as a Being of Power there would be less skepticism and more real faith. The God whom we worship is one of infinite wisdom and power and not hedged in by the natural limitations of man. One of the supreme needs of the world today is a view of God that is greater and better than our greatest men. The faith of more men is spoiled by presenting a God who is too small than by facing them with a God of immensity. We may be assured that when we have accomplished the greatest feats which man is capable of doing, God will still be out in the distance, greater than we and still the ideal of the world.

Jesus was the visible representative of God. Men had before the time of Christ a small idea of God, but in Christ they received a true conception of what God is like. Jesus is the same today as He was when on earth in quality and the kind of God which He revealed is not outgrown today. Jesus was not for an age, but for all time. What Jesus was, God is. When we have laid at the feet of Jesus the greatest tributes of all times, we have then a good conception of what God is like. God is illimitable in love, purity, and in power.

THINKING THINGS OUT

Jimmie was a fine chestnut horse that I used to drive, and he was a constant proof that animals can think. Driving on country roads and trails, sometimes through deep snow banks, we occasionally got into difficulties. Then, instead of becoming flurried and nervous, Jimmie could be relied on to take his time and think things out.

Jimmie sometimes put his brains to less admirable uses, as, for example, when he learned to open the gate of his pasture and wander around the orchard, eating apples. The gate was fastened with a large hook, which dropped into a staple. Jimmie was seen to pick this hook up with his lips, and the rest was easy.

As soon as it was discovered how the wise horse made his daily escape, a wire hoop was put over the gate-post and the head of the gate. Then Jimmie was let into the pasture through bars at the other end, and the family hid within sight of the gate to watch his reaction to the new difficulty.

Jimmie sauntered up to the gate with a nonchalant air, bent his shining copper neck and lifted the hook. Now, according to all the rules of the game, the gate should swing open, but it did not. He shook the top bar with his teeth. Still the gate resisted. Jimmie stood still and thought. Then he nuzzled along the top of the gate until he felt the wire hoop. He examined it, and thought again. Suddenly he seized the hoop in his teeth and lifted it off the gate-head. The gate opened, and Jimmie trotted through with a flick of his handsome tail.—Our Dumb Animals.

First and Second Sundays in March

Please remember when taking your offerings for the Home on the first two Sundays in March that we had to put in a car load of coal last week and that seeds and fertilizers for farm and gardens must be had soon. And somewhow we must keep feeding and clothing and sending to school this big family of children who are yours and ours. So please share with us as liberally as you can. We know you will, and we thank you. We are needing your help very badly at this time.

Yours in His blessed service,

THE DAWN WILL COME

Though black the night,
And fears benumb,
Cling close to God,
The dawn will come.

Though steep the climb,
And rough the way,
Know there will come
The brighter day.

Press bravely on
Through stress and storm,
Thoug black the night,
The dawn will come.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Spring Church Charge.—Young People's Day was observed in each of the three churches with very satisfactory results. Thank-offering service has been held in two churches. Lebanon will hold a thank-offering service next Sunday.

Pleasant Hill C. E. Society put on a contest some weeks ago. Last Friday night the contest culminated in a social hour at the schoolhouse.

Pleasant Hill has the best year-'round prayer meeting this writer has been privileged to attend. The service is held twice monthly, and is well attended.

Bro. Ira Robinson has been critically ill with pneumonia. At this writing he is somewhat better. The persons whose names follow have remembered us in a substantial way: Misses Daisy Caldwell, Brownie Coker and Warrick, Medames E. L. Barnes, L. H. Barnes, Will Burnett, J. W. Crew, R. C. Crew, Rose Crew, C. E. Dimick, Marvin Dunham, Will Harris, Cora Jordan, J. W. Magee, I. I. Massey, Mary Robinson, Leon Tucker and Rev. H. S. B. Thompson. We thank one and all for their expressions of love and interest. Wm. H. NEESE.

Central Church, Thomasville.—"Better late than never" seems to fit in nicely in the care of reports from our church, but we shall try hard from now on to have something of our "doing" in the church paper each week.

Young People's Day was observed on the evening of January 29th with an imprssive pageant, "The Knight of the Holy Grail."

The Y. L. Circle held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Misses Susie, edith and Odessa Myers, with an attendance of 23. Three new members were added to the roll. Incidentally this was a rainy night, but this group of young ladies never lets the weather interfere.

The second qcarterly conference was held last Wednsday evening. Mr. J. W. Boyles and Mr. C. F. Finch were nominees for delegate to Annual Conference. Reports from the various committees were gratifying.

There has been a marked increase in attendance and interest in our Sunday school during the past month or so. One feature is the organization of the "Young Men's Class," which has an enrollment of 14 members, with attendance last Sunday of 12 and two visitors. We are proud of this class and their enthusiasm.

The Woman's Auxiliary held its regular meeting on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. W. Saunders with 16 members present. Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: Mrs. J. E. Clodfelter, president; Mrs. T. G. Perry, vice-president; Mrs. J. W. Boyles, secretary; Mrs. H. Freo Surratt, treasurer; Mrs. M. A. White, pianist. Delegates to the Branch Meeting were elected as follows: Mrs. Marvin Hobbs, Miss Pearl Perry, delegates; Miss Lela Maud Boyles, Mrs. J. M. Lloyd, alternates. Final check on Missionary budget has been forwarded to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, which we are sure will put us on the honor roll.

Dr. and Mrs. Surratt are happy to see the new rugs and furniture which recently came to the parsonage.

Mr. and Mrs. Surratt are doing fine work here, and we are happy to give our best efforts in helping them.

First Church, High Point.—The Annual thank offering of the Woman's Auxiliary was observed Sunday morning. Mrs. R. M. Andrews served as chairman of the program. After the beautiful "Sextette from Lucia," (Donietti), was played on the organ by Prof. E. B. Stimson, and the anthem, "We Bless Thee for Thy Peace," by the choir, Rev. R. I. Farmer delivered an appropriate and eloquent sermon on "The Power of Christian Idealism" from the familiar words of the closing verses of Matt. 28: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations." In an effective manner he sketched the rise of Christianity from the time Jesus left the world when there were barely 100 followers, and its slow progress through the succeeding centuries. In 1828 at Brookline, Mass., a prayer meeting was held that opened up Japan and in 1859 the first missionary went cut there. Today there are 250,000 members of Christian churches in Japan alone, and the roots of Christianity have been planted deep in the hearts of the nations of the earth. So long and so much sacrifice in giving for missions, although some mistakes have been made and criticisms may be offered, has not been in vain and Christianity is the greatest force in the world today. In America materialistic? There is a coming oneness of thought that teaches that the nations of the earth must work together. England says to Japan, "You must treat China right." A Mohammedan told the story of seeing a Christian English nurse dressing the ulcerated leg of a Mohammedan soldier. This new world with its new Christian ideas transforms humanity; beneath the chaos and corruption of Japan is the cry of human hearts. The power that Jesus possessed is a betterment of life and an appeal to humanity to accept God as our Saviour. After the sermon, the thank-offering was collected, and the amount will be announced later.

In the evening service Rev. Mr. Farmer presented the second in the series of talks on "Happiness," the subject being "Beliefs Making for Happiness." He said that the Christian's happiness is bound up with love for Jesus Christ. Its groundwork is faith in God. To be happy is not only to be free from pain and disease of the body, but also from anxieties and vexations of the mind and spirit. The peace of God in our souls and confidence in Him and His promises is the foundation of all true happiness.

"How tedious and tasteless the hours
When Jesus no longer I see!
Sweet prospects, sweet birds and sweet flowers
Have all lost their sweetness to me;
The midsummer sun shines but dim,
The fields strive in vain to look gay,
But when I am happy in Him,
December's as pleasant as May!"

On Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock the Senior C. E. Society met with Mrs. Mary Sheppard Ballard leader on the topic, "How May We Make American Attractive to New Citizens?"

On Tuesday evening at the County C. E. banquet and rally at Calvary church, Greensboro, in which all C. E. Societies in Guilford are invited to join, Rev. E. Lester Ballard will have charge of the program. The principal address of the evening will be given by Dean P. E. Lindley of High Point College on "Facing the Foe in Christian Work."

On Wednesday evening the regular prayer meeting will be held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore R. Ballard, 316 Howell street.

On last Friday evening the A. M. Idol Philathea class enjoyed a delightful party at the college. Mrs. Wade Marlette is president of this group, and Judge L. E. Teague is teacher. Several weeks ago the class was divided into two teams with Mrs. Ross Davis and Mrs. Lester Peacock captains, and a spirited contest followed. Mrs. Davis' group won out in the highest number of points, attendance at class and church, obtaining new members, visiting the sick and absent members, and others, and according to the agreement, Mrs. Peacock's team entertained the winning side at this party. A group of college girls rendered an entertaining program, and delicious refreshments of sandwiches and coffee were served. This class roll contains 65 members of young matrons and girls.

Circle No. 7 of the Woman's Auxiliary is planning to give a chicken-pie supper at the home of Mrs. E. L. Douglas on Montlieu Avenue Thursday evening from 6:30 to 8 o'clock. All friends are cordially invited to buy tickets at 35 cents.

Dr. Dred Peacock and several older business and professional men of High Point are greatly intersted in the announcement that Col. Daniel C. Roper, of South Carolina, is slated for the new Secretary of Commerce in the Roosevelt Cabinet. He was a member of the graduating class of 1888 of old Trinity Collge near here, and is pleasantly remembered by his former schoolmates as a youth of the best thought and character, and they are not at all surprised that this honor has been accorded him. Colonel Roper is of the Board of Trustees of Duke University, Durham.

Tyson T. Ferree has been notified that he has successfully passed the examination of the State Board of Architecture, and is now a registered architect of the state. Young Mr. Ferree was garduated from N. C. State College of Architectural Engineering in 1930 and maintains an office here. He has designed a number of pretentious buildings, business and residence, in High Point, Thomasville and Asheboro. He is now drawing plans and specifications for the new Lindale Creamery on Lexington Avenue. A bright future awaits this energetic and talented young man.

At the public exercises in the High School auditorium last Friday morning sponsored by the National Honor Society and presided over by George Armfield, three members of First church Sabbath School were "tapped" for membership, Leonard Koonce, a Senior, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl P. Koonce; Miss Vera York, a Junior, daughter of Postmaster and Mrs. O. R. York, and Robert Rankin, a Junior, son of Capt. and Mrs. A. M. Rankin. Requirements for election into this honor society are scholarship, leadership, character, and service. We wish to congratulate these young friends upon the attainment of this high honor.

J. C. Penny and Company, large chain department store, will observe the sixth anniversary of the opening of their local unit at 132 South Main street this week. Mr. R. W. Riggins is the capable and popular manager of this High Point branch.

A humorous play, "The School of Hickey Holler," was presented by the American Legion Auxiliary last Friday evening in Ray Street School Auditorium to a large audience; among the cast of characters were Mrs. Lewis Teague and Mrs. James Ryan.

At the Sunday morning class period of the A. M. Idol Philathea class the members were much pleased to hear Clarence Schultheiss sing a beautiful solo, "Rock of Ages," with piano accompaniment by Miss Lucille Pickens. His splendid tenor voice gives pleasure whenever heard.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Krieger were called to Shomokin, Penn., last week by the death of his brother, George Krieger, and much sympathy is extended by a large number of friends.

Friends of Mrs. George L. Reynolds, who has been suffering from influenza for two weeks, will be gratified to learn that she is improving and is able to sit up a short time each day.

High praise has been accorded the performance of the A Capella Choir of High Point College at Grace church, Greensboro, last Sunday afternoon. The vocal solos of W. C. Ferree, Jr., and C. L. Gray, Jr., both of whom are students at the college, and of Miss Anne Robbins, who has studied at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music for two years, drew much applause from the large and appreciative audience. Another number which elicited much favorable comment was the solo sung by Master S. W. Taylor, Jr. The solos by Miss Margaret Sloan of the College Music Faculty in an anthem were well received, and the seven-piece orchestra directed by Miss Sloan, presented some delightful selections. The choir is ably directed by Prof. Ernest B. Stimson, head of the Music Department.

Many improvements are being made at High Point College. A curb has been laid along the road leading from McCulloch Hall to Montlieu Avenue, the interior of Roberts Hall is being repainted, and the stage in the auditorium is being refloored and enlarged. The depression between Roberts Hall and East College Drive has been filled up, and will be sown in grass. The flag-pole has been moved to the south end of Roberts Hall. The masons, who were compelled to suspend work on the Gymnasium on account of bad weather, are again busy on the walls. Work will be resumed on the athletic field in a few days. Much shrubbery has been set out around the buildings and along the roads. When spring comes, the campus will present an attractive appearance. The interior of the Gymnasium is practically ready for the mid-state basketball tournament to be staged there March 10.

The members of Circle No. 5 of the Woman's Auxiliary are holding an old-fashioned "quilting bee" this (Tuesday) afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. L. Whitaker on East Circle Drive. They are planning to give a chicken-pie supper at the home of Mrs. C. C. Robbins, south of the city, on Thursday evening, March 9.

The Salem Alumnae Association will hold its annual meeting at the beautiful new home of Dr. and Mrs. W. L. Jackson in Emerywood on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. R. T. Pickens, Sr., and daughter, Lucille, are among the 40 local members. A Russian student now at Salem College and several representatives of the faculty will be in attendance, and an entertaining program will be presented.

Harmony Grove, West Forsyth.—The regular appointment was held at Harmony Grove church Sunday, February 26, by the pastor, Rev. C. B. Way. The text was taken from the 6th chapter of Isaiah, the first 8 verses, and a wonderful sermon was preached from the 29th chapter of Proverbs, the 18th verse, which everyone enjoyed.

We had a very large crowd at Sunday school and church. We have had for the past month very good attendance at Sunday school and Christian Endeavor.

Glen Raven.—The Ladies' Aid Society met the second Monday evening with Mrs. Tom Cheek. The attendance was good, 11 being present despite very unfavorable weather. After business was disposed of an interesting program was enjoyed. The hostess served fruits and candies. The March meeting will be held with Mrs. Y. F. Tickle.

Regardless of an unusual amount of sickness, our Sunday school has held up remarkably well. By spring we believe we will average 200. Mr. P. E. Troxler is our very wide-awake and progressive superintendent.

On the afternoon of February 18 the Ladies' class enjoyed an oyster supper in the basement of the church. This pleasant occasion terminated a contest of three months' duration. The losing side did the entertaining.

The C. E. Society met with Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Garrison for the February business meeting. Plans were made to serve a plate supper in Burlington on Saturday, March 4. The president of the society, Miss Frances Pritchett, has been visiting relatives in South Carolina for some time. We hope for her return soon.

The Junior C. E. was delightfully entertained last Thursday afternoon by Miss Lillian Johnson at her home. Games were played and refreshments were served. This society is doing a splendid work.

Siler City Church.—On Wednesday afternoon, February 22nd, the Woman's Auxiliary met at the church with 13 members present. In the absence of the president, the vice-presidnt, Mrs. Emma B. Siler presided. After a brief business meeting new officers were elected for the coming year as follows: President, Mrs. L. L. Woody; vice-president, Emma B. Siler; seretary, Mrs. D. L. Johnson; assistant secretary, Duncan Welch; treasurer, Miss Minnie Cooper; assistant treasurer, Mrs. B. E. Fox; reporter, Mrs. T. L. Smith.

The meeting was then given over to the program committe, Mrs. B. E. Fox. Miss Minnie Cooper told a brief story of "Gifts of Gratitude," and Mrs. L. L. Woody read an interesting paper on Japan. Our Auxiliary has paid everything up to date and we will enter the new year with a clean sheet. Our circles have not made money the past year like we once did, but we keep pushing ahead. Mr. Oliver, editor of our local paper, The Chatham News, has given our Auxiliary a fine opportunity to make some much needed cash. He offers every lady in the Auxiliary one-third of all they will collect on old or new subscribers. We think that a very generous offer of Mr. Oliver.

Friday night, February 24th, Circle No. 2 gave a very interesting play, "Let Sallie Do It." Each character did her part to pertion and was very much enjoyed by a good congregation. The proceeds, amounting to over $7.00, will be used for beautifying the church grounds.

We have been having some very interesting mid-week prayer services. Our pastor is presenting some wonderful messages on the Beatitudes. Also Mr. J. L. Duncan, superintendent of the local schools, and Mr. W. S. Durham (better known as Captain Durham), of the First M. E. church, have conducted services for us. Our meetings are well attended and everyone was delighted with the splendid talks from these good men. We hope they can be with us again.

We were very glad to have Mr. T. C. Fox back with us in Sunday school after being absent several Sundays with flu.

Mr. and Mrs. William Wright are the happy parents of a fine boy.

We are very glad to have Mr. Tally, formerly of Sanford, join our Sunday school and worship with us. He with his family have moved to our town and will make their home here. We are always more than glad to have M. P.'s, or anyone else, come to our church when they move into our town. We welcome you.

MRS. J. A. COOPER.

Kannapolis.—We were very glad to have Dr. Andrews, president of the Annual Conference, with us the third Sunday. He gave us a message of wisdom and inspiration which was enjoyed by all present.

Our Christian Endeavor held its regular monthly meeting on Saturday night, February 18, at the home of Miss Edna Foxx, on North Main street. After all business was transacted those present enjoyed several interesting games, after which delicious refreshments were served to the following: Misses Zula Carter, Katheryne Hampton, Beatrice Cartner, Nellie Readling, Minnie Mason, and Messrs. Eugene and Leonard Henderson, "Duck" Roberts, "Bill" McCommons, Bruce Allen, and Miss Edna Foxx.

Our sick members are all improving. Mrs. N. F. Harris, one of our faithful members and most untiring workers, is improving, but we are very sorry to note she has not gained sufficient strength to be back with us, but trust that the Great Spirit will continue her improvement and bring her back with us soon.

We are glad to say we are having a gradual increase in our Sunday school and hope it will continue. Our church is gaining in membership to some extent. We have taken in four new members this month.

The Woman's Missionary Society had charge of the evening service Sunday, the 26th, at which time they presented a pageant concerning home and foreign missions. We had a splendid audience and the program was enjoyed by all present. After the pageant a thank-offering was received by Mrs. L. C. Carter and Mrs. J. F. Faggart. A neat sum was realized.

Union Grove Church, Mocksville Charge.—Union Grove church is still working and trying to accomplish something for the Master. We are very proud indeed that we have a new piano, which aids us in our singing.

Our Sunday school averaged 64 during the past month. We think the number will increase when spring opens up.

Christian Endeavor is getting on just fine with the aid of "the always faithful few." We are hoping and praying that it will continue to grow and prosper.

Mr. Ferree gave us a wonderful sermon last Sunday night. I think he preached one of the best sermons I've ever heard him preach. His text was Luke 9:62: "And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." His subject was "Plough On." His subject for his next appointment is "Go Forward."

"We have not wings, we cannot soar;
But we have feet to scale and climb
By slow degrees, by more and more
The cloudy summits of our time.

"The mighty pyramids of stone
That wedge-like cleave the desert airs,
When nearer seen, and better known,
Are but gigantic flights of stairs.

"The distant mountains, that uprear
Their solid bastions to the skies,
Are crossed by pathways that appear
As we to higher levels rise.

"The heights by great men reached and kept
Were not attained by sudden flight,
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward in the night."

Reidsville.—The attendance of our church and Sunday school is showing some improvement. Our pastor continues to bring helpful messages which are very inspiring. Dr. Brown has decided to diversify the prayer meeting subjects. This has proved beneficial, according to the number present.

Dr. and Mrs. Brown entertained the teachers and officers of the Sunday school with a turkey dinner February 9th at the parsonage. Everyone thoroughly enjoyed themselves and it seemed as if the depression was forgotten while partaking of this bountiful feast. After the supper a short business session was held in the discussion of the betterment of the Sunday school.

The Auxiliary held its regular monthly meeting on the 13th in the baement of the church. Plans were made for the chicken-pie dinner which was served the Rotary Club the following day.

Mrs. J. S. Moore was hostess to the Philathea class at her home on Main street February 20th. Upon arriving each member was greeted at the door by little Miss Anne Moore, daughter of the hostess, dressed in colonial costume.

Mrs. A. D. Jones, president, called the class to order for the regular monthly meeting. The Scripture was read by Mrs. Madge Dixon and prayer was led by Mrs. Clara French. Old business was dispensed with and new business transacted.

During the social hour the George Washington idea was carried out in contest and refreshments. Miss Lola McCollum and Mrs. Louise Smith were awarded prizes in a pie contest.

The hostess, assisted by Mrs. Dobbs, served delicious sandwiches, coffee and cherry tarts with whipped cream.

Our class is wide-awake, having a membership of 25 and we never believe in being idle. We have decided to pay the janitor's fee for this year. This month we had an auction sale and next month we are making a quilt to be sold. We have also set a goal to do something for some worthwhile needy person each month. When needed we always try to do our part.

A thank-offering pageant was given Sunday night. Mrs. A. D. Jones deserved much credit for the success of the service. A very nice offering was received. Special music was rendered by Mrs. Herman Shreves, and a quartette composed of Messrs. Odell and Howard Lambeth, Howard Hardy and Bennie Garrison. MRS. LOUISE SMITH.

Lexington.—Our Sunday school at First M. P. church was well attended Sunday. We went beyond our 300 goal which we had prayed so hard to reach and had 311 present Sunday. Now we are trusting we may have 400 coming to our Sunday school before this contest ends.

We still desire the prayers of all praying people. REPORTER.

First Church, Concord.—The attendance at Sunday school last Sunday was 366. The 11 o'clock service was well attended. Pastor Morgan's subject was "The Enemy of Our Soul." Text Luke 10:18: "And he said unto them, I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven." We were glad to have a duet by Mrs. Eula Fry and Miss Mildred Burris. Mr. Morgan baptized three children at the 11 o'clock service: Little R. D. Waddell, Jr., and little Donald Ritchie Waddell and little Bobby Jean Haines.

The Woman's Missionary Society had charge of the Sunday night service. They gave a thank-offering program. We used the program that was printed in the January Missionary Record. The little children of the Precious Jewels sang "Father, We Thank Thee." The thank-offering creed was read by Mrs. B. F. Waddell. The Sunshine Circle sang "Jesus Loves the Little Children of the World." The pastor made a real good talk on Mission work. The Intermediate society sang "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations." The thank-offering presentation was then given. Those taking part in the program were: Mrs. Maggie Sides, Miss Lillie Nash, Miss Helen Smith, Miss Sarah Little and Miss Lillie Belle Johnson. Little Jeanette Litaker, Melda Scarboro, Grace Mann, Olena Smith and Iris Burris. The singing was rendered by Miss Mildred Burris, Mr. L. H. Sides, Mr. Arthur Smith, Mr. J. M. Blackwelder and Mrs. Durant Nash, music by Miss Mary Lillie Nash. The singing was very sweet and added much to the program. The singers were in another room of the church and their voices sounded sweet out in the auditorium. We feel that we owe Mrs. Ernest Litaker much praise for this program.

On last Wednesday we were very glad to have Rev. Mr. Williams and son, Mr. Linker, and another brother whose name I can not recall from the Roberta church with us. Bro. Williams had charge of our prayer service and we know that everyone enjoyed his talk. We hope they will come again.

Our pastor and Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Sides spent last week at Lake Waccamaw and we know they were thinking hard about the church while they were fishing because they did not eat all those fish. They just packed them in the car and brought all they could home last Friday afternoon and Friday night Mrs. Sides and Mrs. Litaker went around and called on as many of the Ladies' Aid members as they could and so they planned a fish fry for Saterday night. It was quick work with short notice, but we are glad to say we sure did enjoy a good fish supper and the Ladies' Aid took in about $12.00. Just let Mrs. L. H. Sides get behind anything for her church and she makes it move.

We are glad to report that Mrs. W. B. Newton is improving some now. She is able to sit up a short while at the time. Mr. G. A. Winecoff is able to go back to his work. Grandma Thomas is still confined to her bed. Mrs. Lottie Litaker was able to be back at church last Wednesday night, but she was absent Sunday on account of the little granddaughter, Dorothy, being sick.

Henderson.—Mr. Gerringer has given us quite an innovation by having his son sell single copies of the Herald at five cents a copy, hoping to benefit both the readers and the publishers of the paper. He realized that it would be easier to extract a nickle every week than it would be to get a two-dollar check for a subscription, and the plan is working nicely.

The Women's Auxiliary held its February meeting in the home of Mrs. L. R. Gooch with a splendid attendance. A most attractive little play was given by a group of children dressed in colonial costumes, and two recitations were given by Vista and Jacqueline Wester. The nominating committee made its report, as follows: Mrs. Clyde Finch, president; Mrs. H. A. Jordan, vice-president; Miss Mabel Hayes, secretary; Mrs. F. R. Harris, treasurer, and Miss Myna Hight, local treasurer.

The World Day of Prayer will be observed in our church Friday afternoon. This will be a union service of all the Women's Auxiliaries in town, as usual.

The funeral of Mrs. Ben Briggs, who had been a member of the M. P. church for 60 years, was conducted at the church Saturday afternoon.

Dr. F. R. Harris, who underwent an operation in January has not yet recovered sufficiently to take his accustomed place in the choir, though he is convalescing as rapidly as could be expected.

The late Mrs. A. E. Smerdon left in her will two bequests for religious purposes, $250.00 for the Children's Home, and an equal amount to be used for interior improvements in the local church auditorium. The estate has been settled and the money received. The treasurer and congregation made fitting acknowledgement of the gift at the morning service last Sunday.

There has been so much sickness among our members it became necessary to postpone the visit of the High Point College choir until a later date. They were to have given a concert in the Stevenson Theatre Sunday afternoon, February 26, at 4:30 o'clock, and it is hoped that they will be able to come in the near future.

Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson.—On the fourth Sunday morning at 11 o'clock Brother Loy delivered another one of his wonderful sermons. Taking for his text Psalm 23:1, his subject was "Security in Christ." Life is the greatest thing on earth to us, therefore we should be careful to whom we invest our lives. There is but one safe place to invest our lives and that is in Christ. There is no hope for a life that is not based upon Christ. Why should we fear to trust Him? Today is the time the people need Christ if ever there was a time. Why is life as it is today? It is because the people are trying to find security in something besides Jesus, but it can not be done successfully. We are suffering today for the necessities of life because we are not trusting God. When we see that we need Jesus to live and must have Him to live, then we will have the necessities of life. "Seek ye first the kingdom of heaven and all these things shall be added unto you." We are suffering for our own sins. When it comes to the shadow of death the man that has not lived with Christ will feardeath, but the one that has lived with Christ will have no fear of death. Do not get too concerned about the little things of the world and forget Christ; just remember these words: "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want."

Our Sunday school is getting along nicely, increasing in number and in interest.

The second quarterly conferece will convene at this church Saturday before the first Sunday in March. REPORTER.

Lebanon Church High Point.—The usual services were held last Sunday morning. Junior C. E. at 9:15 and Sunday school at 9:45 with Superintendent J. W. Montgomery in charge, and at 11 o'clock preaching by the pastor, Dr. S. W. Taylor, on the subject, "The Church At Its Best." The Scriptural text was found in the 27th verse of chapter 5 of Ephesians, "A glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing . . . holy and without blemish." The speaker said, in part: "We art not accustomed to this sort of church in this day. The records show that in ancient times churches departed from teaching and fell from grace also. Christ saw imperfection; Paul saw it; John found all but the church of Philadelphia imperfect. But we cannot afford to lose confidence in the church. The imperfect church is but clay in the hands of the potter, Jesus moulding this into a perfect church. There will come a time when He will gather out of all the nations of the earth a perfect church unto Himself. A church that serves God at its best must have a ministry that serves God at its best. It must have laymen who serve God at their best. Being the apostles of Christ they must strive to reach he mark of perfection. For the world reads through Christians as the representatives of Christ."

Our pastor expressed gratitude at having a large number of children present for the preaching service, and he promised to preach another four-minute sermon for children at some early date, probably March 12th. There were about 50 children present last Sunday.

The Senior C. E. Society held its weekly meeting at 6:45 p. m. with Mrs. Stokes Gallimore leader. An interesting program was carried out with talks, special music and group singing.

At 7:30 the Women's Auxiliary Circles, aided by representatives of all the children's Circles, presented a pageant, "The Challenge." This was interesting, inspirational, helpful, featuring missionary work in India and China. The characters played their parts well. Mrs. V. L. Smith and Miss Loula Thacker had charge of the program. The collection amounted to about $25.00.

The last meeting of our Ladies' Aid was held with Mrs. S. W. Taylor. Miss Lake Montgomery led the devotionals. A good attendance, an interesting program, and very good collection was reported. Pleased to add two new members to the roll. These good ladies have aided five needy families recently.

The mid-week prayer service is regularly held on Wednesday evening at 7:30. Topic for study is still the Sermon on the Mount. Beginning with this week the choir practice will be held immediately after prayer service instead of an Thursday night.

West Forsyth.—The service at Harmony Grove church last Sunday was well attended. We arrived in time for Sunday school, which was conducted by the superintendent, Bro. G. B. Craft. The attendance was as large as usual, and the interest in the Sunday school and preaching service was good. After the service the pastor, accompanied by his son, C. B., Jr., and James Hunt, who accompanied us during the day, were invited to the good home of Bro. Craft, where we enjoyed a splendid dinner and a pleasant visit.

We arrived back in Lexington Sunday night in time to attend preaching services at State Street church, and heard a very helpful sermon by the pastor, Rev. H. W. Maier. The theme of the sermon was "The Borrowed Axe," and the preacher brought out some splendid thoughts, applying the text to our present-day life.

The last report we had from Bro. J. T. Smitherman, member of Baltimore church, who has been in feeble health for several weeks, was to the effect that he is improving slowly. We trust that he will continue to improve. Dorothy, the youngest daughter of Bro. H. W. Doub, of Stony Knoll church, was improving nicely the last report we had from that home. We hope she will soon be entirely well. Others who have been sick are either recovered or much better.

Our appointments for next Sunday will be with Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches. We will spend Saturday and Sunday among the people of those churches.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Bellemont, Mt. Hermon Charge.—The regular church service was held on Sunday morning, February 26th. Reverend L. E. Mabry, our pastor, delivered an interesting sermon on "Why People Go Away From Jesus." He took his text from John, sixth chapter. He gave several reasons why people go away from Jesus. One reason is that they do not like Jesus. Another is that they do not like Jesus' teachings. They feel that His teachings do not fit into life's program. They like their own way better than that of Jesus. They are not willing to take Christianity in a lump

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Asheville.—Our church has been saddened by the death of one of our finest young members, Miss Eva Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Moore, aged 15 years, who died Sunday evening, June 4, after an illness of one week. Eva had attended our Sunday school from infancy and was a leader in every group with which she was connected. She served as secretary of the Junior C. E. when it was first organized and was president of the Intermediate C. E. society at the time of her death. She was planning to attend the Leadership Training school at High Point. Her companions ,teachers and the entire church feel keenly the loss of such a faithful young person and every one sympathizes deeply with members of the family in their great sorrow. Funeral services were conducted at the church by the pastor and burial was at Riverside cemetery.

An anniversary service was held June 18, at the 11 o'clock hour. This marked not only the anniversary of the organization of a church in Asheville but also marked the end of one year of faithful service from our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll. Interesting sketches of the history of the church, the Senior, Inetermediate and Junior C. E. societies, the Woman's Auxiliary, each department of the Sunday school and the Cradle Roll were given. Each presented an offering which, when added to the offering of the congregation, amounted to $111.00. The reports included the facts that 39 members have been added to the church roll and that the Sunday school attendance had increased from 64 to an average of 110 during the past year.

The Woman's Auxiliary met with Mrs. D. L. West for the June meeting. Mrs. C. B. Baker, who was recently elected prersident, is very capable and is thoroughly interested in the work of the church.

The Young Men's Bible class entertained the Young Ladies' class June 15 with a barbecue supper at the beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Stringer on the Weaverville road. Mr. Stringer is a recent addition to the membership of the church.

A benefit party and barbecue supper was held June 19 at the homes of Misses Margaret and Elma Fawcett by the Young Ladies' class of the Sunday school. This class has made a substantial pledge to the church budget and the amount is practically on hand.

The Senior C. E. society served a supper to the church members last Wednesday.

The Intermediate C. E. entertained the Senior and Junior groups Sunday, June 18, with an outdoor meeting and supper held on Sunset Mountain. The young folks hiked to the top of the mountain. The Intermediates are sending James Clouse to the Leadership Training school and the Senior representative will be Miss Nancy Clouse.

A Vacation church school will be conducted July 17-28 with the following faculty members: Beginners, Mrs. E. A. Bolich, Miss Estelle Swain, Miss Josie McNeill; Primary, Mrs. C. B. Baker, Miss Elizabeth Shoenfelt, Miss Eunice Hart, Miss Martha Griffin; Junior girls, Miss Nancy Clonse; Junior boys, Rev. J. E. Carroll; Intermediates, Miss Margaret Fawcett with Ruth Drake assistant. Owing to the lack of room the enrollment will be limiited to 110.

A group of church people were invited to an informal birthday tea given Sunday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Shelton in honor of the Rev. Mr. Carroll. Mrss. C. B. Baker, Mrs. Virgiia Hooks, and Miss Verda McIntire assisted Mrs. Shelton in entertaining. About 50 friends called during the afternoon. Mr. Carroll has made his home with the Sheltons since coming to Asheville.

As usual, there is a large number of visitors in Asheville at this season and our church welcomes an increasing number each Sunday.

Haw River, Glen Raven.—Rev. J. P. Pegg filled his appointment here Sunday and brought us a fine message as usual. The congregation was very good considering the warm weather.

The night service was given over the Children's Day exercise. We had a crowded house at the night service and the children rendered their parts well. Much credit is due Miss Bullard and Miss Thompson for the manner in which they trained the children. I don't know how much the offering was but I am sure we got a nice one to go on the budget.

Miss Margaret Williamson is attending the Young People's Training school at High Point this week.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—Our work is moving along nicely. Our Sunday school is growing in number and interest. Brother Henderson delivered one of his inspiring sermons to a large congregation last Sunday night at 8 o'clock. We certainly did enjoy this sermon. Brother Henderson is a fine speaker and always delivers soul-inspiring sermons.

We have organized a Christian Endeavor society. The young people are taking great interest in the programs. We render a program each Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock.

The Ladies' Aid society met with Mrs. M. L. Stallings the first Thursday of this month. The meeting was opened with a song. Mrs. M. L. Stallings read the devotional. Mrs. P. L. Garmon had charge of the program which was real interesting. We had the roll call and paid our dues. After the usual business Mrs. Stallings served delicious refreshments. Mrs. Henderson dismissed with prayer. We are to meet with Mrs. P. L. Garmon the first Thursday of July.

We are glad to report that Mr. M. L. Stallings is better at this writing. Best wishes.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Our pastor has brought us a couple of mighty powerful sermons since the last report. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely and quite a number of old scholars have entered their names on the Sunday school register once more. Also we have right many "brand new" scholars.

On Sunday, June 25, we had our Memorial Day and Chilren's Day. At the Sunday school hour our former superintendent, Brother C. W. Allen, who has been away for some two or three years, was with us and gave us a splendid talk, using as a subject, "Imagination." Stating that it was just as easy to imagine something good in store for us as to imagine something bad. If we would take his message like we should I'm sure we would not be so pessimistic in the future.

At the 11 o'clock Dr. P. E. Lindley, Dean of High Point college, brought the message. He used as his subject, "In Memoriam." He, in a masterful and powerful way that caught and commanded the attention of the entire congregation, explained just why we have memorial services. In his address he stated that one should attend these services in a spirit of reverence. According to the speaker, the best way to distinguish a gentleman from a non-gentleman is to watch how he respects the dead. He said we should respect the dead because of the living, and because the dead are a poignant manifestation of God's power. Also, he stated that one should think of the dead with a righteous fear. That is to say, that it is nothing but right to feel shaky in the presence of the dead, because the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom.

We feel ourselves honored in having such an able speaker with us and trust that we may take a hint from his sermon and quit our "slip-shod" manner of respecting our dead and our church.

During a recent electric storm the steeple of Mt. Zion church was damaged from a lightning bolt; however, the damage is not so bad as to necessitate immediate repairs, for which we are thankful.

The dry, hot weather in this section is playing havoc with gardens and other crops. A good oldtime soaker is much needed.

Much sickness is prevalent in the community, which consists mostly of colds and flu.

The burial of two infants in the church cemetery has been recently finished; however, the writer does not know their names.

Brother Hunter is conducting a singing school at Mt. Zion this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Lane are the proud parents of a new baby girl.

Mr. and Mrs. Neal Joyce have a new baby at their home.

If all the new babies and new scholars and new "old scholars" come out and continue to do so we will have the best attended Sunday school in the future that we have ever had.

This church needs the prayers of all Christian people and will remember them in its prayers.

First Church, Lexington.—The work is going forward in a very gratifying way. Our Sunday school attendance is very good in spite of the warm weather. Our attendance last Sunday was 296, which our record shows to be an increase of 24 over the attendance for the same Sunday a year ago. Several of our classes have been enjoying social activities during the past two weeks. On Thursday afternoon of this week at 3 o'clock Mrs. J. J. Mallard will entertain her class of small boys at her home.

In the absence of our pastor, who filled his regular appointment at Mt. Carmel, Mr. C. L. Hedrick preached at the 11 o'clock servrice. He brought us an inspiring and uplifting message using as his subject, "The Happy Home Coming in Heaven." As a text he used the fourteenth chapter of St. John.

In the evening at 7:30 o'clock our Children's Day program was given under the direction of our Suday school superitendent, Mr. H. C. Koontz. This program consisted of several recitations by the young members of the Sunday school and several songs from the pageant, "The Hillside of Blessing." A capacity congregation was present for this service.

On July 9 our Memorial Day services will be held at three o'clock. The same day at ten o'clock our Home Coming Day will be observed.

Orange Charge.—The third quarterly conference will meet at the Efland church Saturday, July 15 at 2 p. m.

Children's Day exercises have been held at each church. These exercises were all good; much credit is due those who prepared them.

Revival meetings are being planned as follows: Efland beginning the second Sunday in July, [illegible] W. [illegible] promised to help; Union Grove, first Sunday in August, Geo. R. Brown to help; Hebron, second Sunday in August, [illegible] L. Spencer to help; Chestnut Ridge, fourth Sunday in August, J. L. Trollinger is to do the preaching.

We are hoping and praying that much good may be accomplished in these meetings.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—We were delighted to have our pastor, Dr. S. W. Taylor, back in the pulpit last Sunday after a month's leave, working in the interest of the Board of Education. He expressed his appreciation for services rendered by visiting ministers during his absence, also, for the faithfulness of the laymen here in carrying on the work in the various departments of the church work.

He delivered a most edifying message at 11 o'clock on the text, "The Lord stood with me and strengthened me." II Timothy 4-17. These words of Paul were found in one of the last, or probably the last letter that he wrote. Paul's words are very comforting. God stands by repentant sinners, and by His faithful servants. No man can minister for God in his own strength, but he must have the love of God in his heart and rely on God for strength. Unless the Lord stands with us we can do nothing.

The evening service was very interesting indeed as well as most helpful, the text being, "Grow in Grace." II Peter 3-18. All worth-while things grow only by the process of cultivation—grain, vegetables, flowers, trees, animals, etc.—yet, weeds typical of sin grow without cultivation and will rob the useful plant of its food and moisture. So will sin rob a person of the proper growth in Christian graces. Let us flee from the evils and try to cultivate Christian graces which are named in II Peter 1-5-8—virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity. Why grow? The end of growth is the harvest. "If these graces be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ, but he that lacketh these things is blind."

We are glad to report that our subsidy has been raised by our church at last.

On June 25 our Children's Day program was rendered at 11 o'clock, a pretty program. Some of our folks think that it was the best program we've had for many seasons.

It is hoped that the church may be crowded to the fullest capacity next Sunday for we are expecting an interesting added feature in some echoes from the State Convention recently held at High Point college. This will take only a few minutes off the usual service.

Our pastor has announced that for the hot summer days he is going to make short, intense, interesting, live services. He is a man of his word. You can count on just that. So come to church, every member bring a friend and receive a blessing.

West End, Thomasville.—We are very thankful for the wonderful revival that has just come to a close in our church. It lasted [illegible] nights. There were 35 converts. Rev. [illegible] of the Davidson charge held the services.

Rev. H. W. Bell brought an interesting message Sunday night on "The Reward of Faithfulness." Tom Hamm had charge of the devotional service.

Our Senior C. E. society had an interesting program Sunday night in honor of Fathers' Day. Mrs. Stanley Clinard was the leader. Reid Long was sent as a delegate from our society to the State C. E. convention which was held at High Point college. Ten young people from our C. E. society went over for the last night of the convention to hear Dr. Poling speak at the First M. P. church.

Miss Georgia Pierce and Mr. Tom Hamm, both being members of our church, were united in marriage by Rev. H. W. Bell on Saturday night, June 18, 1933.

The Executive committee held its regular monthly meeting at church Monday night, June [illegible]. MARY DISHER, Reporter.

Liberty, Liberty Charge.—The past two months have been extremely busy ones for the members of Liberty church.

A revival of two weeks' duration has just closed.

Dr. L. R. Akers, president of Asbury college, Wilmore, Kentucky, was the visiting minister. Services were held at 9 o'clock a. m. and 8 o'clock p. m. A large number attended and much interest was manifested; there were a goodly number of conversions and reclamations. May we live better and more useful lives as a result of hearing those helpful messages which Dr. Akers so patiently brought to us.

Our circles, Christian Endeavor and Sunday schools have been marching forward as good soldiers. May we continue to march through the warm summer months and keep "Summer [illegible]" away.

The second Sunday evening the Christian Endeavor leader, Miss Margaret Shepard, used as her subject, "What Shall We Do With Our Education."

Dr. J. F. Amick of Marion, Indiana, and Miss Joy Amick of Milmaukee, Wisconsin, are spending their vacation mith their sister, Mrs. F. A. Shepard.

Rev. and Mrs. Fred R. Love and Miss Bertine Shepard were visitors in Greensboro recently.

It is with profound regret that we learn of the death of J. Ernest Hardin last week. He was a good and useful man. His aged father and sisters, who are loyal Methodist Protestants, have our deepest sympathy. They are in sorrow's Gethsemane. O Father our blind eyes cannot discern the purpose of Thy providence. In His word He has said: "What I do you know not now, but you shall know hereafter." Thorugh their tears may they find comfort in our sympathetic Sevior and Elder Brother. BERTINE SHEPARD,

Spencer.—Spencer church does not report sc often but it is not dead. Several families have moved away but the attendance has been good and interest remaains high. These fine people have put forth a determined effort to establish a church in this community and are sacrificing for their church.

The revival meeting begins at Spencer the second Sunday in July with Rev. G. B. Ferree doing the preaching. There is a great need for a revival and a wide field for this church so pray for us. The meeting begins with morning and evening services on Sunday and service at 7:30 each evening of the week. We welcome any who can attend our meeting and request your prayers for a gracious outpouring of the Spirit.

W. M. HOWARD, Pastor.

First Church, High Point.—The Leadership Training school held at High Point college last week was brought to a successful finish on Saturday noon, when 74 Leadership Training certificates and 25 Young People's certificates were awarded to the pupils by Mrs. H. W. Maier of Lexigton. On Tuesday evening the audience was much pleased with the illustrated lecture, "My Father's World," by Rev. George Mather of Westminster, Md. On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings President Fred G. Holloway of the Theological Seminary delighted his hearers with splendid addresses. The banquet on Friday evening was a particularly enjoyable affair, and Dr. P. E. Lindley of the college faculty delivered a short address. Rev. F. L. Gibbs of Westminster, Md., acted as toastmaster, and the music and songs were under the direction of Rev. E. L. Ballard. In his closing address, Dr. Holloway urged the young people to read the Bible more often, more intelligently and more consistently. He said that the Gospel of Mark is particularly important because it shows the broadmindedness of Jesus. One hundred and fifteen guests sat down at the banquet table. The address of Dr. Holloway was followed by an impressive consecration service when several young people came forward and pledged their lives to whole or part time service.

At the morning service on Sunday, Miss Anne Robbins sang a beautiful solo with accompaniment on the organ by Prof. Ernest B. Stimson. The minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, delivered a unique and uplifting message on "Love Thyself," from the text in Matthew 22:37-39. He related a legend about a mirror that reflected the image of a person's real self, and not as he or she appeared to his or her friends and neighbors. He urged his hearers to strive to attain their ideal in character and purpose of life; and begged them to be true to their better, higher selves. "To thine own self be true, and it will follow as the night the day, thou canst not be false to any man."

According to a custom of several pears' standing the seven largest churches of the city will unite in union services each Sunday evening at 8 o'clock on the city lot next to the First Baptist church. Last Sunday evening the message was brought by our pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, on the topic, "Getting Acquainted With Jesus."

Miss Esther Pritchard will have charge of Methodist Protestant Heralds to be sold in the church lobby each Sunday morning to those who are not regular subscribers. Proceeds from the sale will be used for a subscription to some invalid or shutin.

The Senior C. E. society will hold its weekly meeting Monday evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rosa H. Davis, 507 Denny St., when the hosts will serve as leaders.

No meeting of the Executive committee of the Woman's Auxiliary will be held during the months of July and August, but the General and Circle meetings will take place on second and third Mondays as usual.

Next Sunday morning for the third time Joash Chest day will be observed, and every member is asked to contribute a sum equal to what he spends in a fortnight on luxuries for himself, such as the movies, candy, ice cream, soft drinks, pleasure trips by automobile, etc. It is often surprising until one checks upon himself, to learn just how much is spent in this manner. It is to be hoped that a goodly sum will be realized.

The N. C. Postal Clerks and Letter Carriers will meet in a joint State Convention here today (Tuesday), and Postmaster O. R. York, who has held the office for the past 12 years, will deliver an address of welcome to the visitors. The post office in High Point was established 78 years ago in 1855, and the first postmaster was the late Austin Welch, a brother of the late J. Jasper Welch, who with his wife, "Aunt Lizzie" Welch, were greatly loved pioneer members of First church. His appointment was made by President Franklin D. Pierce in January 1855. There have been 15 men who have held the office since that time, among whom was Mrs. Martha Letitia Robbins, nee Causey, the only woman who has ever been postmistress. She was the wife ofthe late Dr. Lane Robbins, son of Rev. Alexander Robbins of blessed memory, and proved to be so efficient and accomodating official. She died last may at the home of her son, O. B. Robbins, in Westwood, a suburb of Boston, Mass., at the advanced age of 95½ years. In 1881, Mr. Albert A. Holton, who was a member of First church, received the appointment and held it for four years during the administration of James A. Garfield who was assasinated, and his successor, Chester A. Arthur of New York. Mr. O. R. York has been a capable and popular officer.

Miss Dorothy Rankin returned home Saturday to spend the summer with her parents, Captain and Mrs. A. M. Rankin. Since her graduation from Western Maryland college at the recent commencement, she has been the guest of school friends in New York City, Riverside, Conn., and Boston, Mass.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Farmer has returned home from a visit of two weeks with Misses Catherine Brandon and Anne Louise Sherrill in Winsto-Salem.

Miss Lucille Pickens will leave Thursday for New York to complete her course in Library Science. She and Mrs. Nancy K. Poston have been given leave of absence for six weeks and while they are away, the High Point Public Library will be in charge in Miss Louise Jennings and Mrs. Wade Maarlette. Miss Pickens will study again at Columbia University.

A host of friends of Captain A. M. Rankin will regret to learn that he is still suffering with pain in his eye. He is at his home on Church St.

We are pleased to note that Mrs. W. J. Hutchison of Charlotte, who was injured more than a week ago in an automobile accident in Winston-Salem while riding with the family of her daughter, Mrs. J. A. Gray, is much improved, ad has been taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gray on Lindsay St.

NEW LAW SOLIDIFIES BANKING

While the Glass-Steagall banking bill which has now become a law does not exactly meet the views of any one group or school of finance, the adoption of some law on the subject is itself a gain to the country. Some law is better than so much uncertainty.

The act is far-reaching and the full force of it cannot be gauged at this time. Bankers everywhere are studying it and preparing to apply its provisions. A system is provided whereby deposits are guaranteed by the goverment. This plan will not go into full effect until a year from now, but under the president's direction this deposit-insurance feature can be applied before that as an emergency measure.

The new law aims to put a curb on private bankers and especially on their activities in selling stocks, bonds, and other securities. In this way the Glass-Steagall law reinforces the securities law which recently went into effect and which is intended to bring all marketing of securities under the scrutiny of government authorities.

The banking law tends to build up a nationwide banking system, with the government at Washington holding the final control. Branch banks for national banks are permitted by it in those states which allow this type of banks. State banks and private banks will find it more difficult to navigate, since no bank after 1936 will be allowed to enjoy the benefits of the check-insurance pool unless it is a member of the Federal Reserve system. Weak banks will be forced to consolidate and secure new capital in order to qualify.

Small business concerns and individuals have been complaining loudly that the banks have not been granting them the line of credit which they must have in order to do business. The bankers themselves are to blame for not being popular, declared H. A. Lyon, president of the Financial Advertisers Association, at a convention of the Illinois bankers a few days ago. It is hoped that the new law will help to restore confidence in banking and in turn release funds which the people are etitled to have and which constitute the life-blood of trade.—Pathfinder.

MAN INTENDED FOR LONG LIFE

The human race was originally intended to to live for a thousand years if the theory of Professor Robert L. Greene, head of the department of pharmacy at Notre Dame, is correct. Professor Greene, believes that the proper diet, consisting chiefly of fruits, vegetables, milk and water will enable persons even in these days to attain an age of at least 100 years.

He bases his belief on the answers he receives to a questionnaire he sends to every person he hears of who has neared or turned the century mark. He believes that the processed foods of today are responsible for the shorter span of life.—Pathfinder.

A wedding charming in its simplicity was solemnized this morning at ten o'clock at the District Methodist Protestant parsonage here, when Miss Georgia Hanner, of Greensboro, became the bride of Clifton O. Metz of Columbia, S. C., Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Protestant church, was the officiating minister, with only a few friends of the contracting parties present.

For the occasion the home was beautifully decorated with a variety of summer flowers in pastel shades, with pink predominating.

The bride was becomingly attired in a blue ensemble and her flowers were roses and Lilies of the Valley. The is the daughter of of the late Nathan and Mrs. Amanda of Greensboro. Dr. Andrews officiated at her christening during her infancy and again when she took the church vows.

Kenney-Paterson

On June 27, 1933, Miss Mae Paterson and Mr Paul Kenney were united in marriage. The ceremony, conducted by Rev. D. I. Offman, assisted by the writer, was in the Friendship church at 8:45 a. m. The ceremony was witnessed by the near relatives of the bride and groom.

Miss Paterson is a faithful member of Friendship church. Mr. Kenney is a minister in the Lutheran church.

Immediately following the ceremony the couple left for Washington, D. C. and other points.

To them we extend our best wishes for happiness and success. May God through them institute a Christian home.

Fogleman-Bowman—Clap-Baine

A beautiful double wedding was solemnized at the M. P. parsonage of the Mt. Hermon charge on July 1, 1933, at 7 o'clock, when Miss Muriel Bowman of Alamance became the bride of Mr. Grady Fogleman, and Miss Marie Baine became the bride of Mr. Raymond Clapp, both of High Point.

Following the ceremony, witnessed by a few close friends, the party went to the home of Mr. Roy Fogleman, father of the former groom, and found there a well prepared table. After the meal was over the couples left for a week-end at Carolina Beach.

We wish for them happiness in this life, and may they ever keep the vows of holy matrimony and live in peace.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Barbee

Miss Lala Beatrice Barbee, was born May 21, 1913; died at the Duke hospital June 13, 1933; aged 20 years and 22 days

She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Maggie Barbee, three sisters, Misses Lillian and Bulah Barbee and Mrs. Mable Lozier; by three brothers, Messrs. Howard, Edgar and Allen Barbee.

Miss Barbee had been in ill health for some time and her death was not unexpected by those who were near her.

The funeral was conducted at Bellmont church by the writer assisted by Rev. Wayne Curtis of Bellmont. The body was laid to rest in the family plot underneath aa mound of flowers. May the bereaved be comforted in their affliction. L. E MABRY.

McPherson

John Peter McPherson passed away at his home near Siler City Saturday, June 24, 1933, having reached the age of 81 years.

His long life was spent in the community of Piney Grove Methodist Protestant church. He had a sunny disposition and was full of genial warmth but he knew and fully appreciated the value of a real man. One of the leading citizens of the community had this to say of him: "He was a good neighbor, a kind friend, and was always interested in the good of the community." His church affiliation was with Piney Grove Methodist Protestant church.

The following children survive: Mrs. J. S. Beaver, Mrs. C. M. Beaver, Mrs. A. W. Lineberry, Mis. J. M. Vestal, Mrs. H. F. Forsett, Mrs. D. I. Hinshaw, Mrs. Tate Cotner, and J. L. McPherson all of the community, and J. W. McPherson of Brandy Wine, Md.

Revs. A. O. Lindley and T. F. Andrews assisted the writer in the funeral at Piney Grove, Sunday afternoon, June 25, 1933, and the body was laid in the church cemetery.

H. L. ISLEY.

Loy

Mrs. Gergia Anna Loy was born in Alamance county October 27, 1863, and passed away at her home June 12, 1933, aged 69 years, six months and 15 days. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Dowdy. She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. D. D. Holt, Mrs. Rozelle Coble, and Miss Hallie Loy; by six sons, Haywood E. Loy, R. E. Loy, Rev. W. M. Loy, Rev. O. C. Loy, George P. Loy and Eugene Loy, by 32 grandchildren, and one great-grandchild. She was a faithful and loyal member of Friendship church.

The passing of sister Loy has been an occasion of sorrow in the church here and also in the community in general. She was loved by all who knew her. This fact was well expressed by the beautiful floral offering and by the large concourse of people who attended her funeral.

She left this world with the praise of God upon her lips. When she was last conscious she spoke freely not only to her family but to her pastor of her departure from this life. When last I talked to her she was happy in her condition and seemed to be longing for the time to come for her to join the Heavenly throng. To this number she addressed herself on several occasions prior to her going to join them. She spoke to those of her own household that had preceded her to the Glory World, and called them by name. It would seem to me that the great curtain must have been lifted and that she was permitted to look over in to the great beyond and see what her future estate would be like. Her parting words to her pastor were the words of the old hymns:

"On Jordan's stormy banks I stand———"

We can rest assured that our loss was heaven's gain and may the dear Lord bless her family and friends. L. E. MABRY.

Love

Mrs. J. T. Love, mother of Rev. J. L. Love, died June 10, at the home of her brother Rev. G. W. Fink, of the M. E. Conference whom she was visiting in Lewisville, N. C. The remains were brought back to her home in Concord, and buried in Oakwood cemetery beside her husband who preceded her two years ago. We extend Rev. Love and his family our sympathy and prayers.

Johnson

Washington Albert Johnson was born January 10, 1860, passed away at his home June 20, 1933; aged 73 years, five months and ten days. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Bates Johnson. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mattie Belle Johnson, one son, Norman Johnson, one sister, Mrs. R. G. Hornaday, one brother, Dr. T. M. Johnson.

Mr. Johnson was a life long member and staunch supporter of Friendship Methodist Protestant church. By his going the church and community have lost a valuable person. He was always ready to lend a helping hand at his church and in his community. For several weeks he had suffered from a stroke of Paralysis. He was a patient sufferer and as long as he was conscious said he was prepared for the Great Beyond and had a desire to go to his reward and leave the suffering of the body behind. Even when he could no longer speak, he would signify to his wife and pastor, that he wanted to hear the Bible read and have prayer when visited by his pastor.

The body was laid to rest in the family plot of the Friendship cemetery beneath a beautiful mound of flowers.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. D. I. Offman and Rev. J. A. Burgess.

May the dear Lord bless and comfort those who mourn his departure.

L. E. MABRY.

Hopkins

B. L. Hopkins died March 31, 1933, aged 73 years and was buried in Bethel church cemetery. He left many buildings as memorials, among them the Sunday school rooms at Bethel, but his imperishable monument is raised in the hearts of those who knew him. He was given the noble cognomen of "Christian Gentleman."

Few people grow old beautifully but Mr. Hopkins had that quality. He was in no wise cynical or sour but had a hopeful outlook on life. Especially was he the friend of youth and umbered among his friends the young people of the community.

The many beautiful flowers and large number of sorrowing friends bear testimony to the high esteem with which he was held in his community. The following family survive: his wife, Alice Martin Hopkins, two sons, Lonnie and Sanford, and three daughters, Mrs. Clarece Penry, Genie and Mary Hopkins. The funeral was held at Bethel church by his pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, assisted by Rev. W. M. Howard.

"I cannot think the thing farewell," so "Goodnight, we shall meet in the morning."

W. M. HOWARD, Pastor.

IT WAS A SUCCESS!

Our first attempt to conduct a contest among the several young people's choirs of our various churches at the Leadership Training school just closed was a decideed success. There were four contesting groups of singers, and all of them did cerditable work. It happened that two were from rural churches and two were from town churches. Two were directed by their pastors and two by lady musicians. Two were composed of young men and young women, while the other two were made up of young ladies only. Each choir sang two numbers. Aside from one number which was duplicated, there was a good variety in the selections used. One choir was fully vested. So, in almost every way, the program of the choirs was quite diversified.

Appreciation is due to these choirs, directors and pastors, who demonstrated that they deemed this a worth-while project. That all may know who they were, we give herewith their names: Shiloh church, Rev. R. S. Troxler, pastor and director; Graham church, Rev. J. C. Auman, pastor, Mrs. Don S. Holt, director; Spring Valley and New Hope churches on Vance charge, Rev. J. W. Braxton, pastor and director; Henderson church, Dr. L. W. Gerringer, patsor, Mrs. H. A. Jordan, director. The award, a large picture of the boy Jesus, was given to the Henderson choir, although the Spring Valley-New Hope choir was a very close second.

Hymn Books

We knew that a number of those who attended the Leadership Training school would want copies of the hymn books used, so we retained a small quantity before sending them back to the publisher. This hymn book, The Hymnal for Young People, is one of the best on the market today, and by special concession of the publisher we were able to offer it for 50 cents a copy, the regualr price in quantities being $75.00 per hundred. Many of the delegates purchased one. A pastor bought 12 for his choir and young people.

While they last, we shall be glad to mail you a copy for 60 cents (10 cents extra to cover postage), or in quantities of 10 or more for 50 cents each, postage collect. These books cannot be retained very long, so send in your request early. If you contemplate the purchase of larger quantities, write to me about it. E. LESTER BALLARD.

Greensboro, N. C.

Bobby wouldn't say his lesson, although he admitted to the teacher that he knew it.

"Then why don't you say it to," the teacher asked.

"Because if I say it now, you'll only make me learn something else for tomorrow."

* Subsidy paid in full.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

DOLLARS or DOTS?—WHICH?

The possibility that some churches and charges may have forgotten the classification into which they fall in the HERALD Subsidy scale prompts its presentation to refresh the minds of those who may not remember just the amount asked of their church toward the support and continuation of the HERALD.

Churches with less than 100 members contribute	$ 2.50
Churches whose membership is from 101 to 200	5.00
Churches whose membership is from 201 to 300	7.50
Churches whose membership is from 301 to 400	10.00
Churches whose membership is from 401 to 500	15.00
Churches whose membership is more than 500	20.00

A glance at table showing the receipts on Subsidy is convincing proof of the effectiveness of the plan. If your church or charge has not done its part, the doing of your bit will help to lift the load that crushes. The blank spaces in the Subsidy column are gradually diminishing. Let's put Dollars in the place of Dots!

VALEDICTORY SCHOLARSHIPS AT HIGH POINT COLLEGE

High Point College offers to a large list of high schools in North Carolina a $100 free tuition scholarship to the valedictorian of the 1933 graduating class. A certificate of this scholarship has been forwarded to the principal, and any valedictorian reading this notice who has not received this certificate should notify the college at once. Scholarship certificate is void after July 15 unless the valedictorian has filed entrance application and made reservation of room by paying a $5.00 fee, credited to his account for the school year 1933-'34.

High Point College purposes to be the most selective school in North Carolina, and hence we are giving these scholarships. It is making a special appeal this year to this type of student. We want the finest young people produced by our homes, churches and high schools. Already a number of these valedictorians and outstanding students have filed their applications for admission to the college.

Every indication, thus far, is for a fine and large enrollment next school year.

The total annual charges for a degree course is $392, deducting the valedictory scholarship will leave but $292 for the valedictorians to provide. This amount may be paid by the quarter, as follows: September 11, $88.50; November 6, $57.50; January 29, $88.50, and March 26, $57.50. This figure does not, of course, include the laboratory fee, or books.

GOD USES BROKEN THINGS

Christ is building His kingdom with earth's broken things. Men want only the strong, the successful, the victorious, the unbroken, in building their kingdoms: but God is the God of the unsuccessful, of those who have failed. Heaven is filling with earth's broken lives and there is no bruised reed that Christ cannot take and restore to glorious blessedness and beauty. He can take the life crushed by pain or sorrow and make it into a harp whose music shall be all praise. He can lift earth's saddest failure up to Heaven's glory.—J. R. Miller.

The Minister and Present-Day Preaching

Dr. Johnson, in his book, "The Ideal Ministry," says: "The permanent function of the ministry is preaching." I believe that with all my heart. A man may be a good pastor, a good mixer, a good business man, a good joker and a good sport, but if he is not a good preacher he falls short of "the mark for the prize of the highcalling of God in Christ Jesus." Ministers whose names have been placed among the great have been, in the main, ministers who were pre-eminent as preachers. The last and one of the most important commands of our Master was "Go preach," and surely none of us present-day apostles could set before us a more worthy goal than this: "I will be the very best preacher possible."

In the first place, the present-day preacher should be brief. Recently in our Ministers' meeting in Winston-Salem, a committee was appointed to study the subject of "How to Increase Church Ateendance," and offer suggestions to members of the next meeting. I recall that one of the suggestions was: "Preach twenty-minute sermons."

Among Grenville Kleiser's "Don'ts for Public Speakers," I find these: "Don't fatigue your audience; Don't exceed your time limit." And among his "Do's for Public Speakers," these: "Do prune your sentences; Do cultivate brevity! Do end swiftly."

It would be much better for us to quit while people were wanting us to keep on than it would be for us to keep on until they feel like saying what Dr. Christopher Hazard said about one preacher, "The longer he talks the less impression he makes; half as long would be twice as good."

Second, the present-day preacher ought to use the conversational style of delivery. When we preach we should speak so all the people in the building (not all those on the outside) can hear. Quite often there is more power in words whispered than in words shouted.

Theodore C. Pease, teacher in Andover Seminary, has this to say on the conversational style of oratory: "It is to be questioned whether oratory of any kind is rightly set in another key; whether, indeed, our present age admits of a different style from this . . . It is the power of realizing the presence of others in the solitude of thought." It is this that marks the difference between an effective public speaker, and one whom the people weary to listen.

Jesus is our example here. Take the Sermon on the Mount. Here is the greatest of all preachers delivering the greatest of all sermons. The praecher is sitting, speaking in a con-

Third, present-day preaching ought to be constructive, rather than destructive. There is a real danger that the preacher today, surrounded as he is by evil forces and inversational tone and the sermon is about fifteen minutes long.

fluences, make the mistake of constantly denouncing evil and fail to hold up the good. I believe in a positive gospel. No telling people what they must not do; at least a portion of his time ought to be used in telling them what he feels they must do. I am confident that our ministry will count for more if we use most of our time and talents in trying to build up Christ's Kingdom than if we wear ourselves out in trying to tear down the strongholds of the evil one. After all, the best way to get rid of evil is to overcome it with good.

Fourth, the present-day preacher ought to be earnest. I wonder if we do not find ourselves, sometimes, feeling that after all our preaching is not very important; that it makes little difference whether we preach or not. And after we preach I wonder if we do not, sometimes, feel like saying, "Well, I am glad that is over with for another week." Such thoughts and feelings do great damage to our ministry and rob our sermons of their power. There should be an earnest desire to preach and a feeling that we have a message that we just must deliver. In other words ours should be a "ministry of the burning heart."

It is a great privilege to be able to preach today. It is just as true today as it ever was that "the gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation toevery one that believeth." God forbid that we should fail to preach this Gospel.

Partitions

In the arrangement of the temple of Solomon, there were different degrees and varying grades of sanctity. The startling and beautiful thing about the inaugural vision of Isaiah in the temple is this: the glory and "train" of the Lord filled the house to the posts of the very thresholds. The priests and the rabbis taught that the awful Presence dwelt only in the Holy of Holies, but it was revealed to their prophet-in-the-making, that His presence filled all the chambers and courts. So, for Isaiah, there were no longer partitions in the Lord's House.

Jesus found in the new and costly temple of Herod the same old divisions and partitions. But he removed these walls that separated. This He did, not only in the temple of Herod (Matt. 27:51), but in the larger temple of man's spiritual thinking and social conduct. He taught the woman of Samaria at the Old Well the truth, and at Joppa Saint Paul knew it. In writing to the gentile church in Ephesus, "that the middle wall of partition between us is broken down," he revealed the true spirit of the Christ.

AS WE SEE SOME THINGS OF TODAY

A recent notable event in religious circles was the celebration of 125th anniversary of Andover Theological Seminary.

The outstanding address given on that occasion was the Southworth Lecture delivered by Carl S. Patton, D. D., moderator of the General Council of Congregational Christian Church, and pastor of the First Congregational church of Los Angeles, California. His subject was "Religion, Theology and the Free Churches."

An address like that, on such a historical occasion, is interesting because of two things: (1) It reveals the working of the speaker's mind as he recounts the steps in his intellectual and theological progress during the larger part of his life of study and labor in the Christian ministry. We see theology and life in the making as he opens his mind. (2) It also brings to the minds of the hearers, in a vivid manner, the steps in the progress many of them have made through the years in the development of their religious faith—for we are all much alike in our struggles for an adequqate faith, and many of us are reaching, more or less unconsciously, about the same conclusions. So the hearers, or readers, of such a lecture as that of Dr. Patton go away strengthened in their conviction because of the testimony of one in whom they have come to have confidence.

I should like to reproduce, or at least summarize, the whole lecture; but that is impossible in the limited space. I shall content myself with calling attention to a few physically significant paragraphs.

Dr. Patton says: "Religion is of many kinds and has many manifestations. It does not originate in churces but in the human heart. It exists in churches but also outside of them. It has been so far one of the three or four enduring interests of the human family. In a superstitious age it will be supersitious; in a rationalistic age it will be rationalistic; in an emotional age it will be emotional. It will change and vary as people change and vary. Like art or science or invention or any other human interest it has its ups and downs. All a man needs to know, in order to invest himself in the service of it, is that religion is or can be made one of the great enlarging, purifying, uplifting forces of society. And what we seem to be sure of it, that as society moves up, a better type of religion will hold a larger place in it."

These words stir a ready response in our minds. We have all been enlarged with the passing of the years. Long ago I heard Rev. J. B. Walker—at that time financial agent for Adrian College—refer in a prayer meeting to changes that had come to his religious thinking with the years. One frequently remarks concerning the religious thought and life of a college community, as compared with that of a farming commmunity or of a manufacturing town. If religion is superior—or inferior—in one community it is because of the original differences between the people, as well as differences in their occupations. No church, no matter with what denomination it may be associated, conducts its services or voices its teachings in precisely the same way that it did in 1808—the year in which Andover Seminary was founded.

Religion has changed its emphasis. Says Dr. Patton: "It has become more objjective, less emotional. It has shifted its interest from a merely presonal salvation—achieved by holding the right belief and having the right experience—to justice and opportunity for the average man, and the application of Christian principles to the sum total of human life."

Of course it cannot be fairly claimed that all progress in education, in better conditions for children, in greater opportunities for womanhood, in more just and humane treatment of labor, is due to the church. But we do maintain that Christian teaching and influence have greatly aided and advanced these and many other interests of human society, making this a better world in which to live.

The dogmas of the past are not so unquestioningly accepted. Calvinism has crumbled. Dr. Patton discerningly continues: "What astonishes us now about Calvinism is its sureness. How did it ever find out about decrees, and foreordination, and election, and all? How did it get hold of the 'secret councils of the Trinity?' It was a noble system, inclusive, majestic, symmetrical—beginning at the beginning, proceeding to the end, with everything and everybody accounted for. But it was too sure to last. Persons who end by believing nothing generally begin by believing too much. Perhaps the notion now prevailing is some quarters that we know nothing about God and the human soul and that Theology is all guesswork, is a natural reaction from a time when we knew too much."

I used to remark to the pupils in a boarding school: "The trouble with you girls is that you know so many things that aren't so." The trouble with many high school pupils, of today, who do not have any religious connection worth speaking of is that they are the children of parents who still think that they themselves know all about religion and the Bible and have no sympathy with any one, young or old, who calls in question any of their conclusions.

Authority in religious belief is a subject of perpetual interest. Dr. Patton has some good words on that: "We have come to the position, implicit in Protestantism but not until recently so clearly seen or freely admitted, that in a spiritual religion there cannot be any authority outside of the soul itself. A man must make up his own mind about relgiion as about business or politics or anything else. If he is in doubt, he has the same resources in religion as in everything else—the opinion of other people, the experience of the past, his own reason, and his own heart. Why should he want anything more?"

The trouble with Protestants has been that they have not been sufficiently Protestant. Many of them have held onto the idea of the necessity for an external, infallible authority. They have been slow to realize that there is no such thing. They have not had sufficient confidence in the human soul made in the image of God, and to whom He speaks. Developments during the last fifty years have succeeded in placing greater responsibility on the individual—and thus enlarging his capacities and increasing his power.

Let me close with two significant paragraphs dealing with the subject of revelation. Hear Dr. Patton:

"With the decay of dogmatism and the shift of authority ber when my own feeling was that nowadays we know about has come a changed conception of revelation: I can remem-God by thinking and experience, but there was a time when we knew about Him in some more direct and immediate way . Ordinary people had to guess about Him or make up their minds as best they could. But in ancient times and especially to the prophets of Israel he spoke as man to man. So an older conception of revelation was that we went as far as we could, but when we had come to the end of that God stepped in and revealed to us what we could not find out by ourselves.

We have come to understand that the mind is active in knowledge. You can take the pail to the faucet and fill it with anything you will, irrespective of what it thinks about it; but the mind is not an empty container which you can fill irrespective of what is in it so far. It is an activity rather than a thing. It can take in only what it can take in, and you cannot put anything else into it. The content of the mind is in a sense the mind itself. Any way the idea of either God or man putting into any mind ideas that the mind itself could not take in now looks illogical to us. So the Hypodermic theory of inspiration (if I may so call it without offense) has given way. The antithesis between knowledge and revelation has disappeared. Whatever a man discovers is revealed to him, since if it were not there, he could not discover it. But whatever is revealed to him he must also discover, since there is no other way of getting it into his mind. This is no new idea. But like all general ideas, it has made slow progress with ordinary people. I believe ordinary people who stop to think about religion have now come to see it. So far as they have, it gives us a new view of inspiration as a process going on always and everywhere, but nowhere independent of the mind of man."

BANKS AND BANKING

By DWIGHT DAVIDSON, JR.

[Mr. Davidson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Davidson, members of our church at Gibsonville. With this oration he won the oration contest at High Point College during Commencement.]

After considering the importance of the banking institution—an institution upon which the citizens of any nation are dependent for their economic development and advancement—an institution which out of necessity should and must have as its basis, unquestionable honesty, integrity, and security, an American citizen cannot help hanging his head in shame as he considers the relatively small amount of attention which has been directed toward this institution in the United States. We have allowed our banks to develop along the lines of least resistance without a great deal of forethought, supervision or restriction. The advocate of drastic changes in our banking structure by no means must have the eyes of a communist or be socialistically inclined. A change is imperative because of the interdependency of every nation on the banks of another.

Our nation was founded upon the principles of freedom. The ideas with which our ancestors were imbued as they laid the cornerstone for our great nation were very idealistic. Few regulations were believed to be the basis for great progress, since the early settlers same here to escape restrictions. Theoretically, this was a feasible plan, and it is true that by it, we, as the youngest nation in the world have acquired the highest of economic heights; we have gained the title as the richest nation in the world. Despite our seemingly impregnable position, it has taken the experience of the present day conditions to reveal to us the internal weakness of our structure. An institution of such importance to the people as the banks should never have been allowed to develop along the trial and error method. Experience is a profitable, yet, sometimes fatal teacher. A disaster was only recently averted as a result of our banking situation.

In the olden days when wild-cat banking came to the fore it was a simple matter to establish a bank. The prosperous farmer, lawyer, or laborer who had acquired a surplus amount of capital might easily establish a bank. The reason for this can easily be found in the principles of freedom and unrestricted banks.

Turning the pages of banking history, we find the same custom existing in later years. The prosperous farmer or lawyer establishes a bank for social advancement. The title banker always has and always will be considered one of prestige. The money man forms a bank, he is quickly elected president of the new concern, which immediately advances his wife's social standing in the community. Consequently, scores upon scores of our banks have been built up in this manner; banks which were without the service of a BANKER; banks which did not have the assets that would sufficiently insure the safety of the deposited funds. As a result of this, it is an easy matter to see why the United States has suffered ten thousand banking failures in the past decade. The United States has become the laughing stock of the other nations in the world because of the exposed and apparent weaknesses in our banking structure. Uncle Sam is the proud father of the weakest banking system in the world. His bansk were built upon sands, the shifting sands of freedom, the principles of which cannot suffice our present day needs.

Our next door neighbor, Canada, has suffered not one bank failure in the past decade. When Canadian banks are safe, and we cannot trust our own, then changes should and must be effected. Such condition must not be allowed to continue—it will mean the death of our world economic order. The widows, the laborers, who deposit their meager earnings with the village banker have no earthly way of knowing they will one way. Banking is a gamble, yet our national laws forbid ever receive one cent in return. Our situation is apparently gambling. The expression of saving for a rainy day has again come to the fore, but this time it is done by sewing money in the mattress or burying it in the tin can to save for the day of the banking failure. Hoarding money is unpatriotic in any sense,, but the citizens cannot be expected to do anything else when suitable assurance cannot be furnished for the safety of their money.

The evils of the banking situation are clearly portrayed by the simple figures—one per cent of the banks control fifty per cent of the resources of the entire banking system. Again, such conditions must not be allowed to continue in existence.

Years ago the terms liquid and frozen assets were unknown in the vocabulary of the average American citizen. Today, the interpretation of these terms has been forced upon the depositor at his own expense. The widow, the laborer, the small industrial unit have watched their savings dwindle away—watched them become frozen in a defunct bank.

The United States came into her own as the richest nation in the world by our unprecedented principles of freedom. By these same principles, we accepted the responsibility for the stability of the world economic order; by our unprrcedented principle sof freedom and unrestricted banking houses, a feeble attempt has been made to retain this position. However, trade is unable to flow freely, high tariff barriers have been built up, because of the instability of the world. Instability, which is due to the inherent weaknesses in the financial structure of the key nation of the world. Trade will find its direction in almost any direction, over or around almost any tariff barrier, if it be financed.

As soon as further moves are made toward strengthening the weak places of our financial walls, then the wheels of industry will once more begin to turn, ships will ply the seas with loaded hulls, bread lines decrease and business in general on the upturn, but these measures must be permanent.

The Federal Reserve System of the United States is strong in itself but it is not extensive in its holdings. Apparently the only way to eliminate the existing evils would be to extend the Reserve System. ll banks should become nationalized or a part of the Federal Reserve. Roger Babson foretells "that unification of all banks into a single national change appears inevitable and salutory." The major weaknesses in our banks today are that they are unable to secure proper diversification on their loans and assets and economy of management in order to insure the depositors. Yet through our Federal Reserve Chain were it made more extensive these factors would be abolished.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt has met the banking situation face to face. The new legislative enactments will of a certainty alleviate some of the evils, but in themselves they are not enough. More must follow, and unless they do preparations are merely being made for future chaotic conditions. The widow, the farmer, must be assured they may withdraw just as much money as they place within a banking institution. Such measures must be brought about in order to safeguard the interests of the American citizen and the American nation. The merger with its branches would result in normal stabiltiy, sound assurance and proper management of a large concern.

In our ever changing and ever shifting traditions must be abandoned as we face the future. The changing economic order has shifted the center of business to the larger cities. As a result the small banks are without the business of the industrial order. Their very foundations have been washed away. Despite the untold changes in our industrial order, we have allowed our banks to remain the same throughout the years, with regulations, abiding by the principle sof freedom. We have too long clung to the ancient laissez-faire policy, which has become obsolescent. It is now time for us to junk our ancient ideas of freedom and allow the federal government to step in and look after our banks. One does not have to be a socialist to see this, neither does one have to be a socialist to advocate this.

Such measures, if adopted, will not destroy one ounce of our so-called freedom, but it will mean more freedom for us, and for the posterity, from the devastating effects of depression. These enactments in our banks may not completely prove a panacea for our present conditions, but they will aid us in our industrial recovery.

HIGH PARK

(Toronto's Summer Playground)

We enter the City of Toronto on the west side, and drive along Bloor Street. A short journey and we are at a beautiful spot known as High Park. This park, with an area 335 acres, is in the natural state of hills and valleys with most attractive bush. The roads wind in many directions, making the place much to be desired as a drive. Large areas are planned as picnic grounds where parties of children and grown-ups can spend a very enjoyable time and forget they are so near the throbbing heart of a great city. As one sits upon one of the hills and looks down at the pretty spots below in their new dress of green, one may readily exclaim: "How wonderful! Who could look at this picture of beauty and doubt there is a God?" Yes, it inspires a feeling of the nearness of God. There is an entrance to the eastern side erected in memory of Mr. Howard, whose old home still stands on the south-west side. It is open daily for strangers to visit. Let us take a trip down one of these winding roads, with here and there a little rustic bridge over a small stream leading to a beaten footpath. We are tempted to leave the road, cross the bridge and see where the pathway may lead us, but, no, we will not yield, we follow on the winding road till at length we come to a path that leads up a steep slope. Can we pass it? No, we must climb. When we reach the top we find ourselves looking down into a ravine. No one speaks, but all feel the awe-inspiring silence of nature. Yes, we are reminded to listen for the "still small voice." We must not linger too long, but slowly retrace our steps. Going a short distance, looking to the right, we see a little family having their tea on the grass by the side of small bushes.

Following the road a little farther we come to a pond enclosed with wire fencing and pretty bushes. It provides everything to make bird life happy, a wee island all for their use, little birdhouses peeping above the water. As we follow the wire fence we see many birds. Among them are the Scarlet Ibis, Ruddy Spoonbill, Stanley Crane, Asiatic White Cranes, Indian Purple Gallimule, American Flamingo, European Flamingo, Straw-necked Ibis, Crowned Crane, Egyptian Duck, Blue-winged Teal and many others. We turn to leave Goose, White-fronted Goose, Wood and Black Duck, Comb the pond, after having fed the birds a few crusts, and follow the road turning east. Soon we find ourselves at the boundary of the park, and step out into the busy city street with its noisy traffic. Here we part to go our different walks in life, but the same God whose presence we felt in the quiet of nature goes with us to protect and govern. M. E. MAUNDRELL.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

October, Pay-up month

Second Sunday in October, Rally Day, Promotion in Sunday school, etc.

November 8, Annual Conference meets at Thomasville Community church.

Looking Ahead

I have just compiled statistics showing some of the activities of our conference during the past decade. These are being used for small group study. The facts reveal something of the results of the pastors and church members in our churches for this period. I am wondering if it would not be profitable for us to forecast the activities for the decade; to decide upon certain objectives and then to determine the methods to be used in bringing these nigh. Many churches do plan their work a year ahead, I know of none that plan for a longer period, and yet every growingbusiness enterprise capitalizes the future—the time element is made to work mightily in bringing to pass the desired goals.

If a local church or pastoral charge should begin now to plan for certain objectives for the next decade; say to double the membership, to erect and to pay for a new plant, to make that church the religious and social center of the community, to present a church membership all of whom are active in the work of the kingdom. Some such objective would certainly stir a local church to greater faithfulness.

My idea is to apply such a course upon the entire conference. That is, to set before the conference those objectives which would appeal to the churches in the conference and then lay plans which would be large and long enough to cover the ten-year period for most churches, might be attained by some in a shorter time, but all are to reach the goal in ten years. Does such a plan appeal to the forward looking members of our church?

A Request of Pastors

As will be seen below, my appointments are made out into September, we shall appreciate it if any pastor who especially desires a visit with the president on one of the remaining Sundays that he write me at once, naming the Sunday after the first Sunday in September.

Next, I want to attend as many fourth quarterly conferences as possible during October. Write me, giving the date you want me for these.

Four Months Then Cometh Conference

A look at our calendar reminds us that the days are slipping by rapidly. One-third of the year only is ahead of the conference worker. Not much had been done at the end of the first six months which makes it more necessary that much shall be done with the days yet to come.

There is a more hopeful attitude of our people. Many mills are now running full time, farm produce prices are better, there has been a letting up of the pressure on those indebt—more time is allowed for making settlements of those claims which were only recently pressed very hard. Altogether, we are all in a better state of mind to work than we were at the beginning of the year. Now, therefore, let's press forward and do our best with the time and the means at our hands.

Midland Charge—Rev. W. D. Reed, pastor

I visited all the churches on this charge, Pine Bluff, 10 a. m.; Love's Grove, 11:30; Rose Hill, 3 p. m.; Mill Grove, 8.

It was indeed a strenuous day, preaching four times with the mercury pressing the cover is quite a test of one's physical endurance. The travel incident to making these appointments was possibly about one hundred miles from the first appointment to the last. The congregations for the day were about the average, except at Rose Hill, or Pageland, that was a special appointment and had a very small congregation.

Love's Grove has a new church, that is, it was built of recent years. It is of brick, seated with opera chairs, Sunday school rooms and a piano. The church boasts of one of the best choirs in that rural section of the state and there are evidences of life in the services. Sofar as I could learn there was no debt on the church building.

Pine Bluff and Mill Grove are badly in need of new church buildings. Pine Bluff is located near a public school and appears to be well located. Mill Grove is outside of Midland, the original location, on a highway, but quite some distance from the people who live in the town. And here our church is practically the only church that is alive and well attended. The other church is quite weak, has but a few members and they take but little interest in it, I was told. I think it would be a good move to take our church down amon gthe people. We have suffered greatly in many instances formerly by staying out of the towns until it was too late to enter and build up a strong organization.

Rose Hill, or Pageland, was once was with Bethseda, New Hope, and Bear Swamp churches. The present arrangement does not appear to be the best possible arrangment for this church. The church membership has greatly suffered of recent years. The loss of interest by the members as well as by the loss of members, and financial reverses of the faithful ones have all conspired to greatly weaken the loyal band. But there are yet those there who are quite faithful and might furnish a fine nucleus for a stronger church were the church situated so it could have much of the time of the pastor spent in the town.

Pastor Reed is faithfully carrying on here. His friendly contacts with all his people and frank discussions of their problems greatly adds to his efficiency as their pastor. We were pleased to see Mrs. Reed greatly improved since we saw her last.

THE CHRISTIAN'S EASY CHAIR

Perhaps you have heard of the aged, afflicted saint, living alone, too feeble to work, and who was dependent upon others to minister to her needs. The place she called home had little else for furniture than a bed, a chair, a table, stool and cupboard. Asked if she never murmured at her lot, she admitted that Satan at times did tempt her to do so. Asked what she did then, her reply was.

''Why I just ask the Lord to put me in the easy chair to keep me quiet.''

The visitor looked about in vain for anything like an easy chair, and wanderingly said: ''I don't see any easy chair: I don't quite understand you.''

''No, you don't see it, but it is always close by, and when quiet'' My easy chair is Rom. 8:28. 'And now we know that He sets me in it I rest, and just say to Satan, 'Now you be all things work together for good to them that love God.''

This promise is indeed an ''easy chair,'' in which those can rest who love God, and take Him at His word. But so often we hear it said as a sufficient explanation of the happenings of one's life, whatever may be as consequences of one's own choices and actions, ''Well, you know the Bible teaches that all things work together for good,'' utterly ignorant of, or disregarding the qualifying condition—''to them that love God.''

There, too, is often a misconception of what is ''good.'' Here God's definition and man's are often at variance. Men count wealth, fame, office, material achievements or worldly pleasures as the highest good, but ''that which is highly esteemed among men,'' may be ''an abomination in the sight of God.'' It comes to this—that only is good which gives ease of conscience, abiding satisfaction in the consciousness of the Divine Presence and guidance, peace that passeth understanding, joy unspeakable, love that casteth out fear, and a hope, ''both sure and steadfast, which entereth into that which is in the veil.''

How comprehensive the assurance—''all things.'' Afflictions are working out ''a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.'' ''Perfect through sufferings.'' Mistakes teach wisdom, our falls make us more charitable and sympathetic. Losing earthly treasure we lay up more in Heaven: the treachery of earthly friends drives us closer to the Heavenly One who ''sticketh closer than a brother.''

Some one who once visited a carpet factory thus describes what he saw: ''I saw wool siezed by iron teeth, combed, carded, pressed under huge rollers, condensed into rolls, spun into yarn, dipped into blue, and black, and crimson, till vast piles of bobbin met my eye. But I did not see how these piles of colored yarn could be woven by the swift shuttles into a carpet of such exquisite pattern and beauty. All seemed confusion, and without intelligent design.

''The superintendent took me above the noise of the looms and flying shuttles to the next floor, where he showed me a diagram of perforated cardboards, the exact patten of the carpet designed—a plan unseen by the weavers below but a plan connected with the looms, and centralizing all the shuttles of varied hues, thus guiding all the weaving of all the threads into a web of marvelous beauty.''

To us down in the dim shadows of earth the events of life may seem confused, incomprehensible, but God, who sees the end from the beginning, and the relation of each event with every other event is working out for us the pattern of a grand design.

REMEMBER

When things go wrong from a human point of view; when we are stricken down with sickness; when we pass through a time of bereavement; when we are sorely tempted; when we are right down in the valley as far as we can get; when we think that everything is contrary to us, let us remember that Jesus is yet alive; and is Governor.

All authority has been granted unto Him in Heaven and on earth, and He has pledged Himself to be with us every day, every hour, every second. Morever, it is quite within the realms of probability that many of us shall really see Him before we die.—Ernest Barker.

WHY WE SHOULD LOVE THE JEW

Many are showing a bitter hatred to the Jews today. Is this not a call to us to prove our love for them? Mr. David Eades, writing in the ''Friends' Witness,'' says:

''Surely our attitude toward the Jews ought to be determined by the attitude of Christ toward them.

''(1) Christ testified that He was specially sent to them. 'I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of Israel' (Matt. 15:24). All His disciples were Jews. His mighty miracles were wrought—His wonderful words spoken—His perfect life lived —in the midst of the Jews.

''(2) Think of the words he uttered, and the tears He shed, over Jerusalem. (Hatt. 23:37).

''(3) What were His dying words—'Father forgive them; they know not what they do'.

(4) His last charge to His disciples was that they should 'preach the Gospel to every creature', 'beginning at Jerusalem'. 'To the Jew first'. This is the will of God, and so cannot be set aside without a great spiritual loss and damage.'' —Life an dLiberty.

THE DOCTOR'S STORY

"Children, I have a story to tell you," the old doctor said to the young people the other evening. "One day—a long, hot day it had been, too—I met my father on the road to town.

" 'I wish you would take this package to the village for me, Jim,' he said, hesitatingly

"Now, I was a boy of twelve, not fond of work, and was just out of the hayfield, where I had been at work since daybreak. I was tired, dusty and hungry. It was two miles into town. I wanted to get my supper and wash and dress for singing school. My first impulse was to refuse, and to do it harshly, for I was vexed that he should ask this after my long day's work. If I did refuse, he would go himself. He was a gentle, patient old man. But something stopped me.

" 'O course, father, I'll take it,' I said heartily, giving my scythe to one of the men.

" 'Thank you, Jim,' he satid 'I was going myself; but, somehow, I don't feel very strong today.'

"He walked with me to the road that turned off to the town. As he left, he put his hand on my arm, saying again: 'Thank you, my son. You've always been a good boy to me, Jim.' I hurried into the town and back again.

"When I came near the house, I saw a crowd of farm hands at the door.

"One of them came to me, the tears rolling down his face.

" 'Your father,' he said, 'fell dead just as he reached the house. The last words he spoke were to you.'

"I am an old man now, but I have thanked God over and over again, in all the years that have passed since that hour, that those last words were, 'You've always been a good boy to me'."—Unknown.

GIVING RUSTY A LESSON

Donald threw the boards he was trying to build a house with in several directions.

"They fall apart all the time and the nails go in crooked. I'm not going to try to build a house," he sad crossly.

Father looked up from the paper he was reading and asked, "How many times have you tried to build the house, Donald?"

"This is the third itme."

Father did not say, "Try again," as he usually did. Now he laid down his paper, then whistled for the new dog.

"Shall we teach Rusty some tricks?" father asked as he sat down on the porch step.

"That will be fun," Donald said as he seated himself beside his father. His eyes were shining and his face had lost its frown.

"Suppose we teach him the trick of getting something and bringing it back to us."

"Hurray," cried Donald. "What do we do first?"

"Bring a small stick from the garage if you please."

Donald ran to the garage, and returned with a round smooth stick about six inches long.

"Now you may throw it," father said. "Not too far; we want him to find it without too much hunting."

Donald threw the stick, then the fun began.

Rusty got the stick and brought it back, but it took much patient coaxing to get the dog to lay the stick down. If Donald tried to take it from Rusty's mouth he just held on and pulled back.

Donald was inclined to be cross, but father kept on coaxing. Very gently he worked the stick from Rusty's mouth. Then Donald threw it again.

When Rusty came back the second time, father said, "Will you let me have the stick Rusty?" but Rusty held on as tight as before.

For an hour or more they played with Rusty. Finally the stick was laid down.

Donald cried joyfully, "I told you he'd lay it down ,father, if we did not give up."

"So you did. But how many times do you think we have tried to get him to lay the stick down?"

"I don't know. A thousand times?"

"Not quite that many," laughed father, "but it took a number of times and it took a lot of patience. I wonder if he would have done it if we had tried only three times, the way you did with your house."

Donald had forgotten all about the house. Now he looked at the scattered boards.

"When I've given Rusty some grapes I'll try again to make that house, but it won't be as much fun as training Rusty. But if I work as hard as Rusty did I'll get it made, and I'll do it if I have to put it together a hundred times." There was now a happy smile on his face.—Inez Wilson in Sunshine for Young People.

A DEEP LESSON

A lady who had been a Christian worker told Dr. Torrey that she could no longer believe in God, because when her husband was ill she had prayed for his recovery, and God had failed her. Dr. Torrey pointed her to I John 3:22, and asked if she were obeying the coditions laid down.

"I am afraid I was not," she admitted.

"Then God has not failed you, but you have failed Him," said Dr. Torrey.

So completely did the cloud over her life roll away that when the evangelist said, "Let us pray," she was ready to kneel with him and take the whole matter to the Lord.

The great lesson of life is to be subdued before God.—Rev. John Macbeath.

OUR NEED OF FRIENDS

Scripture Text, Phil 4:10-20

A Friend

We will not say a true friend, for if he is a friend he is certainly true. A friend loves us as his own soul. We are told in the Bible where Jonathan loved David as his own soul. We can take this example of friendship enduring through difficulties. A friend will not love you only in time of joy and prosperity, but when joy ceases and sorrow comes he is still faithful.

Choose Your Friends With Care

Daily we see young people who are not choosing their friends with care. The old proverb, "Birds of a feather flock together," is true to a great extent. One is known by the company he keeps, and his friendships are chosen from his associates. Many a life has been utterly ruined by the wrong choice of friends. The Christian Endeavor offers a priceless service by acording abundant opportunities for young men and women to choose the right kind of friends. The Prodigal Son had acquaintances whom he called his friends, but when he had lost all his substance they forsook him. He then returned home to find his great friend, his father, ready to welcome him home. True friendship becomes richer and finer as it passes through the fire of misfortune. Oftentimes we do not know the real value of a friend until we have lost him in death. Sometimes we have friends we are not aware of. When sickness visits us, sorrow or even death confronts, we find a great number of them coming to bring some token of their love to our weary hearts. While we are naming our dearest friends we cannot overlook the greatest Friend of all, Jesus Christ. He loved us so well that he died that we might have everlasting life. He knows us better than we know ourselves. He knows our most secret thoughts, our deepest longings, and our fondest dreams. Truly, He is a Friend that sticketh closer than a brother or any other.

A TURNING IN LIFE'S PATHWAY

There's a turning in life's pathway, friends of mine,
There's a turning in life's pathway and the parting is in view,
And I feel a little tugging in my heart for all of you.
And it's hard to take the turning where I find the turning sign,
When the turning means to love you, friends of mine.

But I'm glad I found this pathway, friends of mine.
I am glad I found this pathway, for good friends are all too few,
And though the way's been rugged, I've found you to be true.
Now I'm richer in my friendships, and we never ought to whine;
It's been good to be together, friends of mine.

Turns are part of life's whole pathway, friends of mine,
Turns are part of life's whole pathway, there are little fits of gall,
That in every cup is tasted, if we mean to drink it all.
So I'm turning where I find the turn, and none of us will pine;
Time will heal the pain of parting, friends of mine.

But in leaving at this turning, friends of mine,
It's not easy to be turning just where the path is steep,
But God, who does the keeping, is standing yet to keep.
Then may joy as well as sadness be found in every line,
Of this farewell, as I love you, friends of mine.

THE HIGH POINT COLLEGE LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

The Leadership Training School of the North Carolina Methodist Protestant Church was held at High Point College from June 26 to July 1. It opened on Monday afternoon with a registration of around a hundred and upon completion of registration Tuesday about one hundred and fifteen.

Following registration the young people with many of their friends enjoyed a tempting picnic supper in the college dining hall which, due to a shower of rain, could not be held by the lakeside as had previously been arranged.

The Monday evening service consisted of a musical contest between four of the church choirs of the state, namely, Graham Junior Girls, Shiloh Church, Vance Charge, and Henderson choirs. The last was voted best while special mention went to Vance. This was a new feature added to the school program by Rev. E. Lester Ballard and received much favorable commendation. Miss Cornelia Howard, a diploma pupil in piano of High Point College, also delighted the audience with her graduation recital.

The worship programs conducted each morning were under the leadership of Mr. George K. Mather, of Westminster, Md. He had skilfully worked out, in a clever, convincing way, a group of services centering around the theme of "Seeing God" in various things of life and presented them in such a pleasing manner that the audience was held in what seemed a truly worshipful mood. On Tuesday evening he presented a lecture on "My Father's World," illustrated by various beautifully colored scenes from this world of our. These, coupled together with his appropriate selection and timely rendition of many of our choice gems of literature, made one realize more fully that "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof," and that He may be found in any part of His wonderful creation with a message for us.

The other evening services were conducted by Dr. Fred G. Holloway, president of Westminster Theological Seminary, Westminster, Md. Each evening, after indulging in a few pleasantries of speech, he would turn to his presentation of "Christ" as is found recorded by Mark and John. In a most unique method of presentation, namely, that of dialogue, he held his audiences spellbound. On Friday evening he concluded his address with an impressive consecration service in which some of the young people dedicated their lives in whole or part time service for the Master.

In the quiet of the evening, about the sunset hour, vesper services were held on the lawn in front of Woman's Hall under the auspices of Mrs. J. T. Bowman. One would have to participate in such a service to be able to realize the inspiration and enrichment that comes to one's life through them.

On Friday evening a young people's banquet was observed with about 115 in attendance. Rev. F. L. Gibbs, associate executive secretary of the Board of Christian Education, acted as toastmaster and Dr. P. E. Lindley as after dinner speaker. This was another new feature added to the school program and provided an opportunity for good social fellowship. Aside from this, a peppy recreational program was conducted throughout the week under the guidance of Rev. J. W. Braxton.

Of the number enrolled in the Youth curriculum 25 received certificates of credit. These pupils showed, by their active part in the commencement exercises, that they did a week of splendid and valuable work. They were instructed and led by Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Maier, Miss Maxine Taylor, Rev. J. C. Auman and Mr. Eugene Lamb.

Seventy-four, which was practically all of the number enrolled in the standard courses, received credit. Instructors for these courses were Dr. C. E. Forlines, of Westminster Theological eSminary, Dr. T. M. Johnson, Dr. F. W. Paschall, Rev. N. G. Bethea, Rev. E. Lester Ballard, Rev. J. W. Braxton and Rev. J. T. Bowman.

The school was brought to a close on Saturday at noon with a brief commencement exercise. At that time Rev. T. J. Whitehead, president of the North Carolina Council of Religious Education and dean of the school, made a plea to the young people, urging that they carry back to their respective churches a more willing spirit to serve the Master in whatever ways they were needed and also asked for the co-operation of the entire church in giving their hearty support to the coming Leadership Training School of next year. He then presented the candidates of the various groups for credits and same were awarded by F. L. Gibbs.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

PRACTICAL HELP FOR PINE RIDGE

The following letter is being sent out by a committee appointed at the Missionary Convention. Our Pine Ridge Mission has always appealed strongly to all our hearts and I hope many of our churches and Auxiliaries will do something special to help carry on the work there.

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN, Cor. Sec'y.

DEAR FELLOW-WORKER:

We are asking your co-operation in promoting a practical line of service that was suggested to our women at our recent Convention.

In the report of Dr. Woodford on the Pine Ridge work, our attention was called to the fact that the operation of the store for second-hand and contributed new clothing has been greatly hampered because so much less clothing has been sent in by the Branches during the last year. The increased demand at home makes a certain decrease inevitable, but the women of the Convention felt that this matter should be called to the attention of Auxiliaries and more systematic effort made to supply this need.

The purpose of this store which we wish ot help to re-stock is two-fold: to provide an income for the school, and to give the people of that community the opportunity to supply their urgent needs for clothing at small cost. To this end we are launching throughout our Branches what we are calling a summer Bundle Day for Pine Ridge.

We suggest that during the summer months a committee of women in your Auxiliary be made responsible for securing good used clothing and also make plans for working up new material; these garments to be sent to Pine Ridge during the months of September and October, when demands are greatest.

A suggested list follows:

FOR THE SCHOOL

Muslin sheets (single).
Pillow slips.
Striped or checked dish toweling (red).
Dresser covers.
Aprons for dining room (light percale).
Aprons for kitchen (dark gingham or percale).

FOR THE STORE

Used clothing for both sexes, and for all ages (except high heeled shoes, men's vests, summer hats).

New garments of all kinds, especially for babies, little boys and little girls.

If each Auxiliary responds to this appeal with even a small number of garments, think how greatly the Pine Ridge School will be helped!

Thanking you most heartily for your co-operation in this project, we are,

MRS. RUSSELL KENNETT, Ohio,
MRS. O. W. BOLTON, Pittsburgh,
MRS. J. W. ARMSTRONG, Maryland.

ENGLISH ANCESTRY OF THE LIBERTY BELL

Few people know that the Liberty Bell, beloved symbol of an early struggle by the American subjects with their monarch, George III, was cast in England and shipped over here in the fall of 1752.

A famous bell founder of his time, Thomas Lester, received an order for a bell from Isaac Norris, chairman of the new State House in Philadelphia. The bell was finished and loaded on the good ship "Myrtilla" with a Captain Budden at the helm.

It was set up in the State House yard, on its arrival in America, but as Norris wrote later, "it was cracked by a stroke of the clapper without any other violence." There was nothing to do but return the bell to England for recasting. It so happened that at the last moment Captain Budden could not take the bell for the return voyage. He had a full cargo already. That is what started the bell on its American career.

There were "two ingenious workmen," Pass and Stow of Philadelphia, who offered to tackle the job of remolding the Liberty Bell. Their mold was made "in a masterly manner," more copper was added to the broken bits of the bell to overcome brittleness, and it came out a fine looking specimen. Its tone, however, was not so very pleasant. The two "ingenious workmen" were the butt of many a Philadelphian's joke.

Meanwhile arrangements had been made with Lester to take back the material and cast another bell from it with a small additional payment, but before the ship commissioned to return it to him could arrive, the two American bell founders, offended by their countrymen's taunts, had perfected a second mold.

Again the result was not satisfactory, and again Norris wrote to Lester to order another bell, and promised the material from the first would be returned later. This second bell from the mother country came in 1754, and to the credit of the Americans there was found to be no appreciable difference between the two. It was decided to keep both of them, the American one being hung in the State House steeple.

This bell bearing the inscription "Proclaim Liberty throughout all the Land unto all the Inhabitants Thereof," rang out the message of liberty, but it wasn't on July 4, 1776, that we celebrate now; it was on July 8 when the formal proclamation was made. A year later it rang out again to commemorate the first anniversary of the proclamation.

Soon Redcoats began crossing the Atlantic. General Howe was in the neighborhood. If they got hold of the bells they would melt them down for cannon—that would give them an advantage. The journeying of the Liberty Bell had begun. It traveled by farm wagon to Allentown, and under the stone flooring of the Zio Reformed church remained until it was safe a year later to return it to Philadelphia to its appointed place in the State House.

After that it escaped being sold when the state capital was moved to Harrisburg, by coming into the possession of the city of Philadelphia in 1818. Ten years later plans were made for a restoration of the State House belfry and the bell was to be sold to the church. There were some legal difficulties over it, however, and the British made bell instead of the LibertyBell was sent to Saint Augustine's church. Fortunately is was so, for in 1844 the church was demolished in a riot.

There has been occasional ringing of the "Tocsin of Freedom" to commemorate special events, but the most irreparable damage was done it at the time it tolled the funeral of Chief Justice Marshall in 1835. Now it has become the duty of its guardians to prevent the widening of the crack and to eliminate all unnecessary jarring to this monument of an early and significant event in American history. No more trips to Allentown will be made with the Liberty Bell—no more trips anywhere. It will remain in the place where it has been enshrined and the object of the love of the American people all these years.—The Pathfinder.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Rockingham.—Rev. C. W. Saunders filled his appointment here Sunday and brought us a fine message. He took his text from the 10th chapter, 25th verse of St. Luke, "Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" It was a soul-inspiring sermon.

At 7:30 o'clock in the evening our children's Day program was given under the direction of one of the young ladies of our church. It was a splendid program. A large congregation was present for this exercise. Much credit is due to the one who prepared this program.

RUBY MARTIN, Reporter.

◆

Roberta Charge.—Our third quarterly conference met at the church Saturday night, July 1st. The usual business was transacted. Robert Sutton was elected delegate to the next Annual Conference. One of the members suggested that we have Dollar Day July 9th. We had special music by Mr. Zeb Starnes and his children; also Mr. Caldwell Yates' three children. The music consisted of string music and beautiful singing. The Roberta quartet sang several selections. There was a large crowd present. We raised $45.00 on preacher's salary. We are going to make special effort to bring our pastor's salary up to date between now and Sunday, July 23. On this Sunday we are again to have special music. And we invite the public to come and enjoy the day with us.

◆

..West Forsyth.—Our revival meeting began at Stony Knoll churer the first Sunday in this month and continued through the following Friday night. Rev. Wayne Curtis, of Burlingto, arrived in time for the first service on Sunday, and rendered splendid service as director of the music during the meeting. The writer did the preaching except on Tuesday night when Bro. Curtis delivered the sermon. Bro. Curtis sang a number of effective solos in addition to directing the congregational singing. We are pleased to report that the meeting was the best we have had at Stony Knoll during the pastorate of the writer. There were 48 professions and reclamations and 11 members were received during the last two services. We are expecting a number of others to unite with the church at the next appointment, the first Sunday afternoon in August. The people of the community, Methodist Protestants, Baptists, Quakers and non-church members attended the services and co-operated in a splendid manner.

The writer administered the ordinance of baptism by immersion to eight persons, members of Tabernacle church, at the Yadkin river the first Sunday afternoon in this month, at 3:30 o'clock. About three hundred persons were present to witness the baptism.

The annual revival meeting will begin at Baltimore church the fourth Sunday in this month. Rev. J. P. Pegg, pastor of the Glenn Raven charge, will assist the pastor. We are expecting him to arrive in time for the first services on Sunday. There will be three services on Sunday at 11 a.m., 2 p. m., and 8 p.m. The services will be held during the week at three o'clock in the afternoon and at 8 o'clock at night. We are looking forward to a good meeting. Pray for us.

Our appointments for next Sunday will be at Pleasant Hill church at 11 a. m. and Tabernacle church at 3 p.m.

We are expecting the famous Palmer Sisters, of Davidson County, to sing for the preaching services at Pleasant Hill and Tabernacle next Sunday. They are well known singers, who have rendered programs in various sections of North Carolina and have sung in other states.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Charlotte, Richland Charge.—It has been quite a while since our church has been reported, but it is not because there is nothing to report.

Our Sunday school attendance has improved very rapidly since the beginning of the year. We now have around 100 every Sunday.

Our pastor, Rev. Q. L. Joyner, has filled his appointments the first Sunday in every month.

The members of our church are very proud of the piano purchased recently.

The church grounds have been improved and peas sown to enrichen the ground. Grass will be sown later. The church has been repainted also.

We had our Children's Day exercises the fourth Sunday night in June.

The Woman's Auxiliary holds its regular meetings and is doing some splendid work. At the last meeting the patches were taken off a missionary apron and $14.67 was counted. In February we reorganized and elected Miss Sallie McCain as president and Mrs. A. B. Bulla, secretary. The first Sunday night in June we gave a missionary play, "Farmer Brown's Conversion to the Doctrine of Stewardship." A large crowd attended and the collection was good. The Kearns quartette furnished music. The auxiliary served supper to the Rotary Club and Kiwanis Club this summer and will serve them again the 20th of this month. The money will be used for church purposes.

Miss Frances McCain, a member of our church, was married to Mr. Winford Bruton the Fourth of July. We wish for them a happy and most prosperous married life.

Our revival meeting begins the first Sunday in September.

Hope, Siler City Charge.—As we have had no report from our church recently I want to say that we are still "carrying on." Our pastor has been meeting all appointments faithfully, and has been doing some real pastoral visiting. He has been into the homes of most of the members, and the ones whom he has not reached yet he plans to visit soon. We certainly appreciate this interest that he takes. Last Sunday at the 11 o'clock service he read for the Scripture lesson the 8th chapter of Matthew, using a part of the 26th verse as a text: "And there was a great calm."

We are planning to hold our Children's Day service next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

We are holding a prayer and song service each Friday evening. We feel that this should mean much to the church in the way of preparation for the coming revival. We were glad to have Bro. Isley with us last Friday evening. He promises to be with us again next Friday evening.

Our revival will begin on the second Sunday in August. On that day the 60th anniversary of this church will be observed. Dr. Andrews will preach the anniversary sermon at 11 o'clock, and Dr. Paul S. Kennett and a number of other former pastors and friends will be there and take part in the afternoon service. We invite our former pastors, members and friends of this church to attend. Rev. L. E. Mabry will come on Monday to do the preaching throughout the week. Let's pray for a revival, first of all in our own hearts.

We were glad to have Mr. C. C. Routh back with us in the services Sunday. He is recovering from a serious operation which he recently underwent at Duke Hospital.

KARA ANDREW.

◆

Whitaker's Church.—On the first Sunday night in July we observed Children's Day. The program was well carried out. Much credit is due those who had charge and took part. The offering was very small; not what we wished it might have been.

Our special services were held the week following. Rev. L. W. Gerringer was pulpit help and gave us some good messages. Am sorry to say the visible results were very disappointing. Hope some good may have been accomplished.

Our Sunday school is holding up very well in spite of the usual going and coming and still several on the sick list.

We will hold our third quarterly conference in about two weeks.

Best wishes to the Herald and editor.

REPORTER.

First Church, Winston-Salem.—The third quarterly conference was held Thursday, July 6th. It was found that Mr. N. B. Braswell was elected delegate to the next Annual Conference.

The Woman's Auxiliary will hold its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the church. The circles are doing splendid work. Our entire body of women members is well organized in the Woman's Auxiliary, making two circles of the women, one of the Business Women, one of the Young People, one of the Mission Band, one of the Sunshine Circle, and one of the Precious Jewels. From the youngest to the oldest is included. Each of these groups is well organized and are carrying out their programs and duties well. Mrs. J. E. Pritchard is the capable president of the Auxiliary and under her direction and helpful guidance the work should advance splendidly this year, and we feel sure it is going to do so.

Dr. Pritchard is to be in a meeting at Shoals this week with Rev. A. L. Hunter. May they have great success in winning souls into the Kingdom.

On Monday evening a meeting was held at the home of Mrs. J. E. Kirk, and the club is to be called "Seth Parker Club." Much interest is being shown all over the country in these clubs.

The Business Woman's Circle of the Auxiliary is sponsoring a "Womanless Wedding" in the Sunday school room of the church Tuesday evening, July 11, at 8 o'clock. Who do you think is the beautiful bride? (Mr. B. K. Millaway). Who could the preacher be? (Mr. C. H. Smith). But everybody wants to know who the exceptionally lucky groom could be? Well, we'll let those who find out tell those who don't know.

We hope all those who are vacationing will have a pleasant one.

PAULINE BRANSON, Reporter.

First Church, High Point.—On Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, after the assembly of Sabbath school at 9:45 under the direction of Supt. John C. Whitesell, "Joash Chest" Day was observed for the thirmd time. Joash was a good king of Israel, and when it was necessary to repair the temple and the contributions were not sufficient, he ordered a chest brought with a slit in the top, and placed it at the right of the door, in which the people placed their offerings. While Prof. Stimson sweetly played on the organ, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," the members of the congregation marched by the chest and deposited their donations therein. Mr. F. R. Auman, chairman of the board of stewards, announces that the offerings netted $150. Then the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, delivered an inspiring and practical sermon on the text, "Let us do good unto all men, especially those of the household of faith." He stressed the fact that when the members of a church cease to pray for and exhort each other, then that church is dying. An instinctive sense of comradeship rules among the family of Christians. Timothy says, "If anyone does not provide for his own, he has denied the faith and is worse than an infidel." Those who regularly absent themselves from church services cannot exhort each other. The effectiveness of every army is the solidarity of its soldiers, and the church must be so beautiful and attractive that outsiders will be won by its appeal. He then made a strong and forceful plea for patronizing our own membership in a business way. The church roll reveals 36 different professions, doctors, dentists, lawyers, hosiery manufacturers, merchants, grocerymen, architect, casket manufacturer, funeral director, etc., and he pleaded for all to support his fellow members when other things are equal. Mrs. J. H. Allred sang very sweetly the favorite, "One Sweetly Solmn Thought."

At the evening service the congregation joined in the union services on the City lot adjoining the First Baptist church, when the message was presented by Rev. D. W. Allen, pastor of St. Mary's Episcopal church.

The different circles of the Woman's Auxiliary held meetings this week.

Pine Hill, Davidson Charge.—Our Sunday school has been running regularly with very good attendance.

Our meeting begins the fifth Sunday in July. We are hoping to have a good meeting.

The children's exercises and songs were givn in the morning program and in the afternoon the young people presented a pageant, "The Hillside of Blessings." A picnic dinner was enjoyed in the grove.

Our Sunday school attendance has increased. For the past month the young people's class has been going to the arbor for class, the class room not being large enough to accommodate the new members and visitors. We hope that this fine record will not stop.

Mr. J. W. Crew and the writer visited the home of Rev. H. S. B. Thompson this Sunday afternoon. We found the entire family enjoying normal health. Bro. Thompson appreciated our visit, and entertained us in his characteristic jovial way. He is no doubt somewhat lonely, isolated as he is from the Conference brethren. A few friendly lines from any of the pastors would cheer him up and do him good. Bro. Thompson now lives two miles west of Halifax. His address is Halifax, N. C.

Wm. H. NEESE.

Union Grove, North Davidson Charge.—As we did not get to have our Children's Day service in last month we are planning to have it next Sunday, July 16, at 3 p. m. Everyone is invited to come.

The date for the meeting at Pageland will be fixed in the near future and the time announced.

Dr. Andrews closed his official visit to this charge last night. In order that he might visit all the churches on the charge it was necessary that we travel 85 miles, preaching him four times. He ended the day like the Irishman's horse, with increased strength and vigor, giving us the best at the last. Each message was appropriate to the needs of each church. They were practical and pointed and the people were edified and the pastor was encouraged.

As discussed privately by us, he is launching a great program of diagnosis of the ills of our Conference that promises to be one of the most progressive programs, to my mind, ever launched by any president in our Conference. Dr. Andrews is not a quitter—he will perform the doing of it.

W. D. REED.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—The revival began at this place the third Sunday night in June. Bro. Trollinger preached the first sermon. Dr. Fred Paschall came to us on Monday night and did the preaching the rest of the meeting except the 11 o'clock service on the fourth Sunday. Dr. Paschall preached soul-stirring sermons and we had a wonderful meeting. Church members were revived, and four accepted Christ as their Savior. These four have given their names for membership and will be received into the church the fourth Sunday of this month. We learned to love Dr. Paschall and hope he can come this way again. The meeting closed on Monday night.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. Christian Endeavor was conducted last Sunday night by Pattie Bartee.

We have prayer meeting on the third Sunday nights after Sunday school. We think these meetings are helpful. Pray for us.

We are still moving on by the help of the Lord and prayers of our loved ones and friends, and I pause to say, Please do not stop praying for prayer changes things and works wonders to and for those who love the Lord. And I assure you that our prayers go out to the entire world.

We are happy to note at this writing none of our members are seriously ill.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Steele are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, Bobby Eugene, on Tuesday, June 27. Mrs. Steele was formerly Miss Rena Carter. Mother and baby are getting on nicely.

The Ladies' Aid, Circle No. 1, met on Monday, July 3, at 7:30 with 10 members and one visitor present at the home of Mrs. W. T. Kiser. After a business session they were served delicious refreshments.

Circle No. 2 met with Mrs. N. F. Harris on Monday evening, July 3rd, at 7:30 with seven members present and 1 visitor. After all business was completed a social hour was enjoyed at which time the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Mildred Weaver served a delicious ice course. On Sunday morning, July 9th, Miss Gladys Morris, sister of our pastor brought a beautiful story to the children in the 11 o'clock service. Taking "The Red and Gray Squirrel" as her topic she brought out the story very clearly to the smallest children, and it was really a good lesson to the adults as well. Following this, our pastor delivered a wonderful message, taking his text from Psalm 133:1, "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." The Lord's Supper was administered at this service with a majority of the members and several visitors.

To our members: We miss you and will be glad for you to remember us by your presence at church Sunday. Visitors are cordially welcome at all times.

MRS. X. E. G., Reporter.

First Church, Concord.—Our pastor, Rev. Mr. Morgan, gave us two good sermons Sunday, and we were very happy to have Miss Adelaide Reed sing a solo for us. Miss Reed has been in school for several years, and we know she will be a great help to her church. Her mother, Mrs. Lee Reed, was a church worker as long as she was able to attend church, and if God permits us to see back in this world we know her mother is proud to see and to know that Adelaide has such a sweet voice and that she is singing in the church that she loved so well. We are proud of our Junior choir. Any choir would have to sing mighty good to equal them. The Junior choir sang two specials for Mr. Plato Wood Sunday night a week ago and they seemed to put their whole hearts in the singing. Mr. Plato Wood is a blind friend. He is a very dear friend to everybody in Concord that knows him and especially a friend to all the children. He is a member of the Baptist church and assistant teacher of the Young Men's class. Plato is a fine boy and we are proud to have him worship with us. We were glad to have Rev. Mr. Taylor with us since our last report. Bro. Taylor came through here on Wednesday night and our pastor was out of town, so he came back on Sunday night and preached for us. He was here in the interest of the Loyalty League.

The wedding bells have been ringing again. Last night Rev. Mr. Morgan introduced Mr. and Mrs. Erskin Newton to the congregation. They were married June 10. Mrs. Newton before her marriage was Miss Sallie Blackwell. Mr. Marvin Blackwelder and Miss Jenkins were married two weeks ago. Mr. and Mrs. Blaecwwelder will make their home with Mrs. Blackwelder's sister, Mrs. Ross Little. Mr. and Mrs. Newton will make their home with Mr. Newton's sister, Mrs. Luther Davis.

Miss Helen Blackwelder, of Weaverville, is visiting relatives in Concord and we are glad to have her worship with us.

Our pastor is away helping in revivals during the weeks along now, so he appointed a committee to see about the Wednesday night prayer meeting. This committe has asked the Junior choir to sing for us Wednesday night and also Miss Agnes Litaker and Miss Mary Lille Nash will sing for us. On next Sunday night the Baraca boys will have charge of the service. Bro. Morgan has decided that it will be a good plan to let different classes and societies have charge of the Sunday night services for a while. The Intermediates were supposed to have charge last Sunday night but after the sad deaths of the little Scarboro brothers it was postponed to a later time. Our hearts are so sad and we are in much sympathy for parent and grandmother and all the family. We can not express our sympathy in words; we can only weep and sorrow with them.

BERTHA EARNHARDT, Reporter.

Asheboro.—On the first Sunday in July at 11 o'clock, Children's Day was observed in our church with a splendid program composed of 40 or more children. A committee with Mrs. L. F. Ross as chairman did splendid work in the training of the children. An offering was taken for missions.

There were 284 present at Sunday school last Sunday with an offering of $9.73. At the 11 o'clock hour the pastor's subject was "Why Join the Church?" Mrs. Stubbins and Miss Dorothy Lewallen sang very sweetly, "Just a Word With Jesus." This being membership month, 21 children and young people united with the church on profession of faith. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Lovett came by letter from the First M. E. Church, South, and little Mary Moore Lovett and Willie Mae Briles were christened. The church welcomes all these into our membership. We have been worshiping at the Tabernacle for the evening services. The Union Revival which was led by Dr. Fox and Evangelist Jones as song leader, assisted by the pastors of the town, closed last Sunday evening after six weeks, with over 200 professions.

Mrs. O. W. Rich underwent an operation in Burrus Memorial Hospital. High Point, about two weeks ago and is doing nicely. Miss Florence Whitcomb is confined to his bed with sickness. We are hoping for the recovery of these members.

The church sympathizes with Mr. J. R. Brown and family in the recent death of her father, Mr. D. W. Hill, of Central Falls; also with Mr. W. L. Ward and family in the death of his father, John B. Ward, of our town.

LOLLIE JONES, Reporter.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Charge.—the first Sunday night was so stormy few attended the service. Sunday morning, Rev. P. E. Bingham brought us an inspiring sermon. His text was "Kindness." I am sure this message helped a great number. As the offering was being taken Mrs. Baldy Green beautifully played on the piano, then Misses Evelyn and Mary Virginia Hawkins sang "In the Garden."

On the third Sunday Miss Erma Hawkins conducted prayer service. Her subject was "Home."

Fourth Sunday our quarterly had a review and the last lesson was "Our Living Lord." The Intermediate teacher asked Miss Mary Green to write a letter to Japan, imagine she was one of the three that visited the tomb and how they felt and what was done and said. She read it to her class; it was so good she was asked by the superintendent to read it before the Sunday school.

Miss Evelyn Hawkins is our Herald chairman. She will be glad for you to subscribe. Don't wait for her to come to you—go to her.

We were glad to have some of Mr. and Mrs. Bingham's relatives to worship with us Sunday.

Mrs. J. D. Pittard and Mr. Will Pepper and Mr. George Thompson are improving after short illneses.

Mr. Raymond Hawkins was the guest of his mother the Fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Cullom and son, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hawkins, Mr. Willie Green, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Hawkins, and Misses Fannie Mae and Elizabeth Hale visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Pittard Sunday night.

Miss Easter Hawkins and her cousin, Miss Clara Hawkins, spent last week with Easter's grandmother, Mrs. Mollie Hawkins. Miss Clyde also spent Friday evening before last with her.

Miss Elizabeth Hawkins is visiting friends in Greensboro, N. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Harris and little Bert Butts spent Sunday with their mother and grandmother, Mrs R. E. Green.

MRS. CLAUDE HAWKINS, Reporter.

Brower's Chapel, Richland Circuit.—We are having a very good attendance at Sunday school. We had our Children's Day the fourth Sunday in June. The children did well, and the program was real good. Mr. George Laughlin made a short talk for us.

We are having three services at our church: Rev. Q. L. Joyner preaches the second Sunday evening at 3 o'clock and the fourth Sunday at 11 o'clock. Mr. Frank McDowell, of Asheboro, preaches at 11 o'clock on the third Sunday in each month. Everybody is cordially invited to come out to our church. We had our church re-painted. We are having some dry, hot weather through our section, and crops are badly in need of rain.

We regret to say that Mrs. Tom Bonkemeyer pasesd to the great beyond a few days ago. She was a member of our Circle; also Mr. David Hill, of Central Falls, died a few days ago.

We will have the township convention in July. Our protracted meeting will begin the second Sunday in August.

EFFIE BROWN.

First Church, Lexington.—July 9 is a date that will remain in the minds of many of our people. At the 11 o'clock hour our memorial service was held. Mr. John Hayes, now of Thomasville, but a former member of our church, was with us, and preached from Mark 14:8, "She hath done what she could: she is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying." After the sermon the roll of the honored dead was read by Mr. W. C. Gibson; 42 names appeared on this list. At this service we were favored with special music rendered by Miss Davis and Miss Mann, of Winston-Salem.

At 2 o'clock our Home-Coming Day was observed. At this service Mr. Hayes again spoke to us, stressing the fact that time cannot be redeemed at any cost and that we should bestow it well while we have it. He emphasized the necessity of using our time in preparation for our "home-going."

The next speaker of the afternoon was Mr. George Berrier, a former superintendent of the Sunday school at Fist Church. Mr. Berrier used as a text Luke 15:6, "And when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and neighbors, saying unto them, Rejoice, with me." Mr. Berrier spoke on a familiar subject, "The Home." The home, he said, is an institution of training, a place of safety, and a place of rejoicing, He also stated that the home is responsible for the community, the nation, and the world.

Following Mr. Berrier, Rev. Wayne Curtis, who has been with us many times before, made a few remarks relatives to the Home-Coming in Heaven.

After Bro. Curtis, Mr. Jeff Berrier spoke of the home in connection with saving the world.

At this service we enjoyed special music rendered by the Canaan chorus and a duet by Bro. Curtis and Miss Davis. A capacity congregation was present for both services

At the evening service Bro. Curtis preached. As a text he used a part of the first verse of the sixth chapter of Amos, "Woe to them that are at ease in Zion." Bro. Curtis is alweys welcome in our midst.

MARGARET LEE SWINK, Reporter.

Gibsonville Chuch.—Silence of the reporter does not mean that everyone is silent. We have a wide-awake pastor who has an interesting and well-planned sermon for us at each preaching service.

The Christian Endeavor meets each Sunday evening at 7:15 o'clock in the hut. The program last Sunday was in charge of Miss Douglas Yow. Miss Dorothy Wall will be in charge of the program for next Sunday evening.

The young ladies' Missionary Society will meet on Tuesdaya evening of this week at the home of Miss Marie Summers on Whitsett avenue.

Instead of the regular preaching service on last Sunday evening at our church a union meeting was held in the M. E. church. At this meetig Rev. Mr. Bethea spoke on "What I Would Do If I Were a Layman." Miss Opal Ozment spoke on "What I Would Do If I Were a Preacher." Dr. W. T. Whitsett represented the Lutheran church; he spoke on the subject, "What I Would Do If I Were a Preacher." A similar meeting was held in the M. P. church the fourth Sunday evening in last month.

On Saturday evening, July 1, the members of the Young Men's Bible Class and the members of the Men's Bible Class entertained the members of the Young Ladies' Bible Class and the members of the Women's Bible Class with a barbecue at the Rock Creek Dairy Farm.

A Children's Day program is planned with the children under the direction of the teachers and superintendent of the Hut. This program will be given next Sunday morning.

Mrs. Albert Wilcox and children arrived last Friday morning for a few days' visit with Mrs. Wilcox's parents, Rev. and Mrs. N. G. Bethea. REPORTER.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—The third quarterly conference will meet at Fairview church Saturday, July 22, at 2:30 p. m.

Pastor Love brought us two interesting messages last Sunday. We are sorry that Mrs. Love was taken ill Sunday, and hope she is better.

The fourth Sunday night the C. E. Society had an interesting program on Temperance. The meeting was led by Miss Lottie Harrison. It being a special program and one of so wide a range, some Juniors and honorary members took part. We hope some good was accomplished.

Our revival meeting, as usual, will begin the second Sunday in August. We ask the prayers of all praying people for a real old-time revival. May God's Holy Spirit descend on us, we pray.

Spring Hill, North Davidson Charge.—A singing program was rendered here on the third Sunday in June. This marked the end of a singing school taught by Mr. J. B. Swaim. Other churches were represented in this singing. .

The regular preaching services have been carried on. On the first Sunday evening in July the subject for the sermon was "Service," the text being, "Silver and gold have I none: but such as I have I give to thee." Christian service is what is needed. We render service to others by giving to the physical needs, by prayer, and by inviting them to Christ.

An interesting Children's Day program was given on last Sunday. Those in charge of the program were Miss Bessie Swaim and Mrs. Everett Swaim. The English Street choir added much interest to the program. At the close of the program, Rev. Mr. Hill of English Street church gave an interesting talk.

The annual revival meeting begins at this church on the third Sunday in July. Bro. Hill will do the preaching during this meeting. He will preach his first sermon on Sunday evening at 2 o'clock. We extend a welcome to all who can attend this meeting and request your prayers.

REPORTER.

State Street, Lexington.—Dr. Maier filled his regular appointment at Bethesda Sunday morning and brought to the State Street congregation a fine address Sunday evening. The sermon delivered for us a week ago Sunday, the second Sunday, was one of the best ever heard in Lexington. Almost all who heard this splendid sermon spoke of the great uplifting and helpful influence of it. The subject was, "The Value of the Eternal or Unseen Things."

We feel that we were well represented at the Leadership Training School recently held at High Point College in that we furnished three teachers, Dr. and Mrs. Maier and Mrs. C. L. Koonts, and that Miss Margaret Leonard, one of our fine young ladies, was given an "A" by Dr. Elderdice on her studies.

Dr. Maier gave the young people of his class a higher appreciation of the value of the Bible by his interesting and enlightening course on "The Bible in the Making," or "How Our Bible Caame to Us." "Adventures in Christian Living" was taught by Mrs. Maier, and fortunate are the young people who have the privilege of being taught by one so efficient and consecrated as Mrs. Maier.

Mrs. Koonts' class received inspiration and a deeper interest in missionary work by her course, "Our Neighbors."

One of the best and most highly complimented dinners we have ever served was served last Saturday evening. Tables were placed on the church lawn and all who preferred were served there ,and all who preferred the church dining room were served there. Between $36 and $37 was cleared.

The Woman's Auxiliary met at the church Monday night.

There will be a meeting of the official board Tuesday night. The regular mid-week prayer meeting will be held Wednesday night. All who attend these Wednesday night meetings receive a spiritual feast. They are looked forward to by those who attend them as something priceless. Those who do not attend are missing something.

Bethel, Randolph Charge.—We had a very beautiful service at Bethel church last Sunday morning, which was our annual Children's Day. About 50 children from the age of 3 to 12 years took part in the program. They spoke and sang with smiling faces. Our beloved pastor and wife were with us and helped in the service. We can always depend on Mr. Suits to say just the right things. The offering received for Misions was $11.50, for which we are very thankful, and are hoping that it may help in teaching many to love Jesus.

We are expecting to begin our special meeting the third Sunday in August. At the request of the church members, Mr. Suits will do the preaching. We feel sure that he knows better what message the people of our community need than a stranger would. We are glad that Bro. Suits is not afraid of what man may say of his preaching. "It is better to serve God rather than man."

THE FRENCHMAN'S TABLE D'HOTE

I've tried all kinds of menus,
My taste to satisfy,
From beef and Yorkshire pudding
To home-made apple pie.
Spring lamb is appetizing,
On garden peas I dote,
But it's a feat for me to eat
The Frenchman's
Table
D'hote!

Soup printaniere is filling,
Goujon with pommes-de-terre,
Le pied de veau and barde de larde
Are said to banish care.
The maitre d'hotel will recommend
Poulet, laitue, carottes,
But I confess it gives distress,
The Frenchman's
Table
D'hote!

Creme renversee or bome glacee
The waiter brings to you,
With cafe noir and a cigar
Your dinner's almost through.
The list is long and intricate,
I know the names by rote,
But when I dine I now decline
The Frenchman's
Table
D'hote!

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Brother C. H. Hardin, of Julian, N. C., who was more than 90 years old, fell and broke his hip on June 29 and died July7. The funeral services were conducted at Tabernacle on July 8.

Until the Julian church was organized, Bro. Hardin was a member of Tabernacle. He is the last of the trustees who served when the present Tabernacle church was erected. He was the father of Mr. Ernest J. Hardin of Greensboro, who a short time ago died as a result of an automobile accident near Morehead City.

Grizzard

Mrs. Mary Grizzard, aged 86 years, passed on to her final home July 9. For 72 years she was a faithful member of Spring church. As the frailties of the body which are incident to advanced years crept on, her faith never faltered.

The funeral was held from Elam Baptist church. The writer was assisted by Geo. A. Finch, Baptist minister.

Wm. H NEESE.

Burroughs

Mrs. Mary Sue Burrougs, widow of the late John Eaton Burroughs, of Dabney, N. C., passed on to her reward May 1, 1933, aged 86 years, ten months. Sister Burroughs for many years was an active members of Harris Chapel Methodist Protestant church. Truly it can be said she wasa friend to the ministers, and her greatest delight was to look after the needs and comforts of her pastor.

For a number of years she has been ill, though complaining little, and never stopping. As we pause to choose words to describe this beautiful life, we find we are at a loss; for we wonder what could be said to make those who did not know her, understand and appreciate the blessing which has been ours. Her life was like a flower; all who entered the radius of her sweet and helpful personality responded to its beauty. Her mission seemed to be to help others. Her beautiful Christian character, her patience, love and courage, was an example to those who mourn her vacant chair. She is survived by three children, Mrs. S. W. Clark, of Dabney; Mrs. W. B. Burroughs, of Dabney; Mr. J. L. Burroughs, of Fernandian, Fla., and a number of grandchildren and great-grandchildre. May the dear Lord bless and comfort those who mourn her departure.

* Subsidy paid in full.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

DOLLARS or DOTS?—WHICH?

The possibility that some churches and charges may have forgotten the classification into which they fall in the HERALD Subsidy scale prompts its presentation to refresh the minds of those who may not remember just the amount asked of their church toward the support and continuation of the HERALD.

Churches with less than 100 members contribute	$ 2.50
Churches whose membership is from 101 to 200	5.00
Churches whose membership is from 201 to 300	7.50
Churches whose membership is from 301 to 400	10.00
Churches whose membership is from 401 to 500	15.00
Churches whose membership is more than 500	20.00

A glance at table showing the receipts on Subsidy is convincing proof of the effectiveness of the plan. If your church or charge has not done its part, the doing of your bit will help to lift the load that crushes. The blank spaces in the Subsidy column are gradually diminishing. Let's put Dollars in the place of Dots!

The Graham church will celebrate its 30th Anniverasary the fourth Sunday in July. All former pastors and members are cordially invited to attend, Rev. G. F. Millaway, the first pastor, and the President of the Conference will be the chief speakers in the morning service. There will be dinner talks by former pastors and a service at night.

IS THE DROUTH A BLESSING?

The writer believes that the prolonged drouth which has greatly affected the growing crops and vegetables for the past several weeks will prove beneficial to the spiritual welfare of the people in general. We have held two revival meetings since the dry weather began, and have observed a tendency on the part of the people to look towards God and religious things. The churches where we held the meetings were filled at almost every night service, and the day services were attended by larger crowds than they were last year . At the last church where we conducted revival services, the church was filled to overflowing nearly every night.

Can we doubt the statement that the drouth may prove a spiritual blessing to the people, and draw them closer to God: also bring them into a condition of deeper consecration and greater loyalty to our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

Rev. J. W. Hulin is now in the Duke university hospital in Durham. Any of our pastors or laymen passing that way, he will be glad to have you call. We ask both preachers and laymen to join us in prayer for his restoration to his home, his community and his church.

Partnership With God

If we are to build a good character we must take God into our program of living, for our problems of life are too much for us to try to solve with our own human powers. If we could only realize our own weakness and God's strength we would see the need of being in partnership with God. St. Paul said in his letter to the Corinthians, "For we are laborers together with God."—I Cor. 3:9.

Jesus worked in harmony with the will of His Father. He seems to express this spirit in His prayer, which we call the Lord's Prayer. When He was praying in the garden He said: "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me! nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt," Matt. 26:39.

Is it not necessary for us to say way down in our heart of hearts, and soul of souls, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." If we are to build a good life there must be a spirit of unity between us and the Heavenly Father. Our will must be lost in His will. Who of us can tell what God has in store for His children unless there is a spirit of oneness between us and Him. Jesus said, "I and My Father are one," John 10:30. Our wills are so small in comparison to His will. We are too small to do much without Him If we would only say, "Mould me and make me after Thy will," what a great and useful life we would build. St. Paul said in his letter to the Philippians, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Phil. 4:13.

But is it playing the game fair to trust God for everything? Is it wrong for us to trust God for things we can do ourselves? St. Paul seems to feel that we are laborers together with God, and that we can do all things through Christ. He also says, "But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereon." I Cor. 3:10.

The kind of life we build depends a great deal upon our own activities. God helps those who help themselves. God is not going to build us a good character and give it to us. We have power to be used and not to be abused. God wants us to use His power, but He does not want us to abuse it. Let us trust God and do all we can to help Him.

Jesus would not allow Himself to trust God for everything. When the devil took Jesus up into the Holy City, and set Him on the pinnacle of the temple, and said to Him, "If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down:" he was tempting Jesus to use His power of trusting wrongfully. He did not intend to use His divine power. It was not necessary for Jesus to jump off the temple. It was not necessary to trust God for something He could do for Himself.

God gives us all the things that are necessary to grow a beautiful flower except planting the seed and cultivating it. Our homes are often without beauty because we fail to be partners with God. He sends the rain and sunshine. If we fail to have beautiful flowers around our homes it is not God's fault. Each of us knows of a lovely garden where some one is working in partnership with God.

God does not need us to be partners with Him in all things, for He makes the sun set, the rainbow and the storm. In these and many other things He does not need our aid. But the thing that He needs most of all and the thing He is most anxious about is that we be in partnership with Him in getting the message of His Son to a hungry people. He wants us to live and to teach the way of the "abundant life in Christ Jesus." There are many who are not partners and colabourers with Him. So realizing that He needs us for this task alone we ought to be busy in our Lord's vineyard that His sacrifice may not be in vain, and that the world may be won for Him.

E. O. Peeler.

Yieldedness or Doom

Everything in nature must yield itself to the purpose of its creation if it justifies its place in the world.

The cow that cannot be induced to yield her milk is doomed to the slaughter. The horse that serves not the purpose of his owner is doomed to the bone-yard. If my pen serves not the purpose for which I purchased it, I cast it to the rubbish heap. The fig tree that bears no figs must wither under the Master's rebuke. The tree that bears no fruit must be cut down and burned. I saw a man hurl a $20 watch against a wall and shatter it to pieces when it registered incorrect time and caused him to miss a business engagement.

The acorn yields to its intended purpose and covers the hills with giant oaks. The sun is literally consuming itself in the prosecution of its task of making life possible on the earth, scientists tell us. The sheep yields its fleece and flesh to clothe and feed our bodies. Coal yields to its intended purpose, and generates energy in the throbbing locomotive, and kindles fires on our frozen hearths. The clay yields to the touch of the potter's hand and becomes a vessel meet for the Master's use. These can only justify their place in this world by their yieldedness. What is said of these may be said of man likewise.

The church that justifies its place in the community must serve the intended purpose of its Founder—be a soul-saving station, a lighthouse to direct storm-tossed souls into the harbor of rest; must be an enlistment station for recruiting the armies of God, a kindergarten to train youth and young converts in the art of godly living; a herald of gospel freedom, a hand pointing souls to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.

PERSONALITY IS SUPREME

"I must say I don't like John Alvord's personality." And my friend Jones shrugged his shoulders sifnificantly as he thus delivered himself.

"What do you mean, personality?" I meekly inquired.

"I don't know precisely what personality is. But, whatever it is, I don't approve of the particular brand of it that John Alvord exhibits in himself," was Jones' indignant reply.

"I take it that you do not like Alvord." Jones indicated that he had no possible use for Alvord or any of his kind.

"Then why don't you simply say, 'I do not like Alvord,' and let it go at that? People will understand what you mean, will they not?" I pursued.

"I use the word personality," countered Jones, "even though I do not know its exact meaning, because it seems to sum up a man and give me a somewhat definite spot where I may strike him effectively if I so desire."

I think my friend, Jonse, hit the nail pretty squarely on the head. Personality is a practical and effective word to use, even though the speaker may not be able to give a satisfactory definition of it. We personify, animate and inanimate objects for the purpose of making our statements concerning them more vivid and convincing to the average mind. We speak of God as a person, and we feel sure that we thus make Him more vivid and intelligible to our understanding.

There is today considerable tendency to blur the personality of God. Some go so far as to deny that there is behind the idea of God any real being. They hold to nothing more than a conception, an idea, a thought, a nothing of any consequence.

What is personality? A person is an individual, and personality is that which constitutes one an individual. It is the man himself in the totality of his being. Especially does personality consist in that inner self that distinguishes a certain person from all other things and persons. Perhaps some reader feels like helping me by suggesting that I am talking about the soul. I was afraid some one would do that! We do speak much about souls, of saving souls, and we report so many souls added to the church during the year. I am in sympathy with the young Japanese when he said: "I wish people were not so much concerned about my soul and were more interested in me." Paul declared, "I seek not yours but you." He considered the personality, the you, as the central thing.

A tree, a flower has personality—some of them a great deal of it. They are set aside from other trees and flowers and things. We usually speak of this as distinction or character.

Horses and dogs have personality. Some of them are outstanding in this respect. They are not treated as ordinary horses or dogs. They are thought of by their masters as fit companions and friends. Some of them are retired in their old age and furnished with every possible comfort, provided for in wills, and buried wtih every manifestation of respect.

The more personality a tree or a flower, a horse or a dog has the more it amounts to, and the higherup it goes in the scale of being.

When we come to men we come to personalities far and away beyond anything seen in trees and flowers, in horses and dogs. There is no other creaeture in the same class. In his houses and roads and language he has far outstripped all other creatures. In his inventions and facilities for securing food and clothing and comforts he is a marvel. In his educational and religious conceptions and development he is a wonder to himself.

Not all humans are equal in personality. There are all sorts and grades. It isn't a matter of schooling, or wealth, or political power. Age and experience do not always bring it. Opportunities do not guarantee the possession of it. Individuals in the so called backward races often disclose a far finer personality than many among the higher peoples possess. Frequently one sees individuals who show distinct marks of the lower animals—the bear, the tiger, the wolf, the bull, the hog.

What we are most concerned about is the fact that we have all known, directly or indirectly, such wonderfully fine specimens of human personalities—Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Paul, Barnabas, Washington, Lincoln. It is such personalities as these that are, and are to be, increasingly produced as the ages go by. Nothing higher than human personalities, more and more freed from imperfections and limitations, can be expected or needed in this world. And we feel that such qualities as they possess should and will be continued in a higher life beyond.

A word in closing as to the question of the personality and probable existence of God. Man's personality, as a being over and above the creatures about him—and his outlook on the infinities about and beyond him—argue the iexistence of a personality above and beyond and within him. Man has increasing dominion over the fish of the sea, the fowls of the air, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the sea. But man did not make these things, much less the immensities the limits of which his strongest telescopes are unable to reach.

Personality is the highest and finest thing that man knows. Naturally he thinks of the Creator and Sustainer of the universe as being a person. A person like himself, but with wisdom and power and goodness far beyond his own.

It would seem natural that this infinite Personality—whom we call God—should reveal Himself to men, should b esought after by men, that there should be developed fellowship should be a prominent agency making for the progress and satisfaction of mankind. Most people are willing to rest the matter at that point, the point reached through the development of the idea of God in the Old Testament, and supplemented and confirmed by Jesus in the New Testament.

I am not greatly in fear that recent emphasis on Humanism—with its rather unwarranted definitions and implications—will take God away from us. Conceptions of God have been greatly modified from time to time—often successfully in the interest of clear thinking and better religious living—but God has remained. He will continue to be man's indispensable friend, inspiration, guide, and comfort.

SOME OF OUR PREACHERS

Yesterday I picked up a special issue of Our Church Record (now M. P. HERALD), dated February 28, 1901, which contains such interesting things about so many of our ministers that I have copied some of them. Sorry I cannot copy the pictures of these young men. The quotations are abbreviated.

"John D. Williams is a native of Orange County. After the public schools he was at Yadkin College twenty months and Siler City school five months. He is one of our most promising young men. He is now pastor of Liberty circuit."

"Henry Lee Powell is a native of Surry County. He attended school at Yadkin College, then preached a while, then entered Oak Ridge Institute and completed the literary course. Last year he was married. He preaches very acceptably, judging by reports, and seems to be growing in power and favor. He is now on Littleton Circuit."

"William F. Ashburn is from Surry County. He attended school at Yadkin College for four years after leaving the public schools. He has had a successful ministry. His kindly manner and his evident sincerity readily gains for him the favor of the people he serves. He is a self-sacrificing man and the people feel it. At present he is serving Cleveland Circuit."

"William M. Pike is a native of Chatham County. His schooling ended with a course at Oakdale Academy. He is modest and unassuming, but wins his way into the warm affections of his people. We have never heard him preach, but his preaching is favorably spoken of. He is now serving Vance Circuit."

"Horatio Seymour Blair Thompson has a large name and is large enough to bear it. He was born in Alamance County. He attended Bethel Academy, High Point High School and Yadkin College High School. He is one of our most conscientious preachers. He is bold and aggressive against evil and yet is gentle toward those seeking the way of righteousness. At the present time he is on Randolph Circuit."

"George Franklin Millaway is a Guilford County boy, now somewhat overgrown. He completed his schooling with the literary course at Oak Ridge Institute. He is one of many who have left Episcopal for non-Episcopal Methodism. He has been well received by the Methodist Protestant Church, and has rendered good service. He is nearly always a good preacher, but is especially good in revival meetings. He is now pastor of Burlington station."

"Thomas Fillmore McCulloch was born in Guilford County, near Tabernacle church. He attended the common schools, Tabernacle Academy and Yadkin College. He studied Theology under the direction of Rev. J. H. Page. He entered the ministry at a nearly age. He is a student of the Bible and also of his people. He is now pastor of Alamance Circuit."

"Aquila L. Hunter is a native of Forsyth County. He attended the 'free schools' and afterwards spent one term at the Kernersville High School. He was pastor of the church that entertained the last Annual Conference. He gives promise of a useful ministry. He is now pastor of the new field called Pinnacle."

"Neil Graham Bethea was born in Cumberland County, but moved with his parents to Burlington, where he came in contact with Methodist Protestant people, and cast his lot with them, though his parents are Presbyterians. He spent two years in the school of Prof. F. P. Fonville in Burlington. He is one of our youngest and yet one of our most earnest preachers. He has strong faith, is of a hopeful and cheerful disposition and gives promise of a highly useful ministry. He is now pastor of Broad River Mission."

More later. Maybe I will get the rest of you next time. I take no credit for any of this. The only thing I have done is to copy it. The credit belongs to our good editor who has served us for so many years.

HUMAN WELFARE ON THE BLOCK

Postmaster General Farley says the repeal of the XVIII Amendment will bring in $800,000,000 annually for taxes on liquor. Granting that one-fourth of the liquor trade were to return in revenue for the government, this means that the huge sum of $3,200,000,000 would be spent by the American peoeple for this greatest hurt of mankind. But what matters human welfare when money is involved, especially money taken from the many to be put into the coffers of the few. The welfare of men, women and little children are once more put on the block here in free America.

This is the old argument for human slavery. Negro slavery was profitable and therefore it could not be done away with save at a great loss of money. This was the final word until there arose the issue of the rights of property set over against the rights of man. Since human beings have the right to eat the bread that their own hands have earned and the right to be set free from the slavery of dollars on the auction block, the day finally came that human freedom was put above the profits that accrued from human slavery. The divine rights of property had to give way to the divine rights of man. Even the divine rights of kings has had to do the same, though just now some are ready to subscribe to the old slogan, "The king can do no wrong."

So now, with the slogan of the new deal ringing in our ears, the burden of the liquor trade must be put once more on the backs of men and women and little children of America in order that big money may be forthcoming for revenue and reduction of the income taxes of the rich. During all the yeaers of prosperity, wreck and ruin, resulting from the liquor traffic which brought big profits to those engaged in the trade, it has remained for these profiteers to foster the liquor business. These days and conditions are no longer. Now the entire administration at Washington is for repeal of that which has done most for the control of liquor in spite of the determined effort to make it non-effective. This, too, in the face of the loud avowals that each state should be left free to do as it pleases in this matter . Prestige, patronage and money are being used to override the sovereign will of free states because of the money there is in it. We are all on the auction block in this "land of the free." Common honesty demands better for us of Washington.—Editorial in N. C. Christian Advocate.

THE HERALD SUBSIDY

I wish nothing more needed to be said about the Herald situation, but perhaps it is best to keep those who are interested informed whether it is favorable or unfavorable. And it has been distinctly favorable. The charges that have sent in the amount asked for as a subsidy have helped materially in keeping the deficit down to a minimum. And those who are most concerned with that deficit, the editor and the publishers, are very grateful for the interest the pastors and charges have shown in this matter.

But we come now to face the future; and we face it with some concern. The weekly deficit has been kept down because the charges have sent in their subsidy allotments. But if the charges that have not responded to that appeal do not send in any money for the subsidy, the deficit will begin to mount and it will increase from week to week in proportion to the failure of the charges to do their part in raising the amount asked for.

We are therefore appealing to pastors and those interested in seeing that the money is forthcoming to do their best to raise the amount that each church is asked to raise. We believe if the matter is presented at some preaching appointment at each church, or taken up in the Sunday school, or at some meeting of an organization in the church, it will not be difficult to raise it. The Herald needs the help not only of these charges and churches that have already shown their interest by doing their bit for it, but of the others who have not thus far responded. If the Herald should fail, it will fail not because some have helped, but because some have failed, or refused, to help. ''Cursed be Meroz, because they came not up to the help of the Lord.''

RARE TREASURE AT CHICAGO

The great chalice of Antioch, part of the famed Kouchakji silver treasure, is now on display at the Century of Progress Exposition in the Hall of Religions. This cup is unique and of such value that it will be guarded night and day until the Fair closes. The insurance valuation on the chalice is $300,000.

Sir Galahad of the legendary Knights of the Round Table spent most of his life in a fruitless search for the Holy Grail, the cup believed to have been used by Christ and His Apostles at the Last Supper. But in 1910 a silver chalice was unearthed at the ruins of ancient Antioch that is believed by archaeologists, art, and Biblical scholars to be the long sought treasure.

Standing nearly eight inches high with a capacity of more than two quarts of liquid, it could well have been the sacred cup. It is of two parts, the outer being of silver, coated with gold, the inner of crude silver.

A controversy has waged over the date of the chalice, some experts contending that it was no tearlier than the fourth century, others that it was of the first century, but additional data has come to light since then and it is generally conceded to be of the earlier date. It is thought also that only the inner cup may have been the one used by the Apostles, and that it was set into the outer cup at a later date. Dr. Gustavus A. Eisen, who was the first to clean and examine the treasure has called the cup the last treasure of the golden age in Greek art. An eminent authority on Oriental art, Prof. A. T. Olmstead, head of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago, declares positively that the cup is of the first century, for it is known that glass blowing was discovered in the middle of the first century and after that the shape of the vessels became changed. Likewise in the portraits on the chalice there is a form of brutal realism here, ''particularly in that glorified gorilla, St. Mark,'' which was characteristic of ''late Greek times.'' He says further, ''We can take each element of design: the ivy leaves, the manner in which the vines are tied, the Roman eagle, and every other such element, and prove that these elements were never used later than the first century after Christ. Thus the evidence to a professional archaeologist, whose special field is that of the Greek and Roman art, of this period, proves with absolute certainty that the chalice was made by an artist who was no doubt a converted pagan, thoroughly familiar with the art motifs of his itme, and within 50 years of the death of Jesus, when there were still men who had known Jesus in the flesh.''

During the World War the great chalice was brought to America from Paris for safe-keeping, and deposited in a vault in New York, where it has been until it was moved to Chicago to go on display.—The Pathfinder.

"LET GOD"

A young man, who was struggling to let the Lord have His way in his life knelt to pray. He had been advised to ''Let God do the work for him.'' But as he was kneeling, he cried, ''I want to let God have His way, but I can't.''

The day before he had cut out of paste-board the letters ''LET GOD'' and tacked them on the wall. He rose from his knees and with a feeling of defeat and despair, he left the room and slammed the door with a bang, saying, ''I can't 'Let God'.''

On his return to the room, he was startled to note that the slam of the door had loosened the letter D on the word GOD causing it to fall to the floor, and changing the motto to ''LET GO.''

''I will, I will, Lord Jesus,'' he cried and threw himself on his knees at the side of his bed. ''I will 'Let Go' and ''Let God','' and he did.—The Gospel for the Youth.

CASTING OUR CARES

Jesus Christ, is able to deal with our cares. But it is important for us to notice how He deals with them. He deals with them as He deals with our sins—by taking them upon Himself. He bids us cast all our care upon Him. That is the open secret of peace, the open secret of complete and continuous victory over this cruel enemy.

When we cast all our sins upon Christ, there is no sin upon us, and so we enjoy pardon; when we cast all our care upon Christ, there is no care upon us, and so we enjoy peace. If we keep the cares we cannot have the peace; if we cast the cares we cannot help having the peace.—Rev. George H. C. MacGregor.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

October, Pay-up month

Second Sunday in October, Rally Day, Promotion in Sunday school, etc.

November 8, Annual Conference meets at Thomasville Community church.

Shall We Go Up or Give Up?

Every highway has its hills for the traveler to climb. There they are to challenge his strength and wililngness. Shall he climb them and get a glimpse of what is beyond or shall he surrender to the call of the defeatist and never attempt the stiff grades?

Likewise life has its steep ascents which we must clamber up. It is at the steep grades that our helpers forsake us and we are left alone to make our own decisions. It is at such times that men seek the shade of the juniper tree or the shelter of the Doubting Castle. Shall we consort with the prostrate ones under the juniper tree or fellowship with Giant Despair?

Oh, but someone cries out, we have hard problems to solve, as though it has not ever been thus. Some of these problems are beyond our ability to solve. Ought one not to try those which are easier because he cannot solve the hard? Twelve million people were recently reported to be out of employment. Twelve million is a great host, but that is not quite one-tenth of the population of our country; what about the others? One or two per cent of the homeowners have lost their homes within the past two years. That is bad indeed. But what about the 98 per cent who have not lost their homes? In the economic shifts many business enterprises have gone on the rocks. We all deplore it, but not all are stranded; there are yet others in the game.

Shall We Give Up or Will We Climb the Grade?

The Church is just now in a great hazard because some who did support it now cannot. But business is coming back. The farmer is beginning to come into his own. Prices of the products of the farm have doubled within three months. Is it not time that we forget to talk of the panic? Shall those who are returning to their old jobs and who are receiving increased wages continue the practice of the past several months of refusing to support the church because they want to spend it upon themselves? I greatly fear for the spiritual safety of such. And yet it is likely that many will do that. During the panic they kept all they got for their own personal use, and now when their incomes increase they may do the same thing. Can the church survive much more of this sort of thing?

Doing Our Best

means that I will do MY best and that YOU will do YOUR best. Our best can be done only when you and I have both striven for our highest success. The church is without question the most noble and worthy of all institutions, but it cannot be such wherever it is made up by members who are unwilling to bear their part of the tasks of the church work. The fact that we have ever had some in the church who were shirkers should not keep us from our best efforts to make the church a glorious church without spot or wrinkle.

So little has been received on the Annual Conference Budget up to this time that we are greatly embarrassed by it. Surely there are some of our churches which can raise at least half the assessment for this cause now and send it to the Treasurer.

Pinnacle Charge, Rev. A. L. Hunter, Pastor

I visited Mount Zion, Pilot and Shoals churches in the order named. A revival season was to begin at Mount Zion that day. Bro. Bethea was expected to come and conduct the evening service. The congregation was good, the attention good. This is the strongest church numerically on the charge. It is likewise the oldest church on the charge. We have some substantial members here who have stood by the interest of the denomination in ways that are praiseworthy. We were at Pilot in the afternoon. The congregation in the afternoon is never so good as that in the morning, the pastor said. However, we had an average attendance and very splendid attention. This church has lost through death rather heavily.

At night we were at Shoals. Here the congregation was quite good. A revival meeting had just closed. Dr. Pritchard was the preacher. I was informed that the meeting was good but should have continued longer, but due to the fact the meeting was set for Mount Zion for Sunday it had to close. Brother Hunter has served this charge for 24 years. He served it first for eight years, left it for two years, then came back and served it for six years, and after serving Vance, Welch and Fallston charges he returned for his third period. I do not know of another minister in the North Carolina Conference who has remained so long on a charge, or who has been assigned for three times to the same charge. The years which he has served alone testify to his ability to get on well with the people and to carry on the work. This is a rather compact group of four churches and while the salary is not large, the people are kind and usually stand by their pastor. We enjoyed our visit to this work and appreciate the courtesies shown.

THE SIN OF PRAYERLESSNESS

As a people we attach great value to right motives but are constantly in danger of minifying the importance f outward forms and observances. It was against this danger that Mr. thinking, 'Because I am filled with love, I need not have so Wesley wrote in his third advice. "Beware," he says, "of much holiness. Because I pray always, therefore I need have no set time for private prayer. Because I watch always ,therefore I need not particular self-examination'."

Perhaps more than we think, this antinomian tendency has fastened itself upon us. "We have the spirit of worship, therefore we do not need to regularly attend the services in the church. We live in the spirt of prayer and therefore do not need set times and places—in fact do not need to observe private devotions at all. We have been cleansed from sin, therefore do not need to observe special seasons of confession and humiliation. All we have is the Lord's, therefore we do not need to set aside the separated portion. We live holy every day, therefore do not need to keep the Lord's Day." Satan never invented a more subtle heresy than this. God has given us the Lord's Day that its proper observance might hallow all the other days of the week. The tithe is the Lord's and when faithfully set apart makes the whole money question sacred. God requires stated reasons of public worship that He might hallow our private life. If a man has the spirit of the Law he will keep the Law, not break it. If he has the spirit of worship, it will send him to the church or to his place of private devotions joyfully. Beware of this heresy of making void the Law or any part of it through faith.

We often wonder how many of our people have set times and places for personal devotions, and hasten lovingly and joyously at the appointed time to hold communion with their Lord. Rev. Andrew Murray has been called the "Apostle of Prayer," and the Christian world has long regarded him as the greatest exponent of the devotional life. He gives an account of a conference held by two ministers for the deepening of the spiritual life. The chairman was led to ask the following question: 'Brethren, let us today make confession before God and each other. It will do us good. Will every one who spends half an hour every day with God in connection with his work, hold up a hand?" One hand was held up. He made a further request: "All who thus spends fifteen minutes hold up hands." Not half the hands were held up. Then he said, "Prayer, the working power of the Church of Christ and half of the workers make hardly any use of it!" "All who thus spends five minutes hold up hands." All hands went up. But one man came later wih tthe confession that he was not quite sure if he spent five minutes in prayer every day. "It is," said he, "a terrible revelation of how little time I spend with God." And this is always the consequence. Those who do not have appointed places and set times, soon find their devotional life entirely dissipated.—Herald of Holiness.

THE PRESENCE OF GOD

The presence of God is the great privilege of God's people, and their only power against the enemy. Moses understood this, and he refused to accept anything else than God's presence. It was this gave Caleb and Joshua their confidence: The Lord is with us. It was this gave Israel their victory over Jericho: The presence of God. This is throughout Scripture the great central promise; I am with thee. This marks off the whole-hearted believer from the worldling and worldly Christians around him; he lives consciously hidden in the secret of God's presence.—Andrew Murray.

Yieldedness or Doom

The Wesleys yielded and the dying embers of religious fervor burst into a glorious flame on ten thousand altars. Moody yielded and set in motion works that can never perish from the earth until Christ is crowned Lord of all. Fanny Crosby yielded, and the product of her pen is being sung around the globe. Charlotte Elliott yielded, and wrote "Just As I Am," and thousands under its inspiration have laid hold of their new-found joy of Christian devotion. Call the roll of the world's wrecks, blots, blanks and failures, and you will find their wretchedness lay in their lack of yieldedness to the purpose of their Creator. Wars, bloodshed and crime; armies, navies and war implements; courts, penal institutions, and maintainers of social order; the billions spent for crime, are some items in "the high cost of low living" due to a lack of yieldedness to the high purpose for which man was created.

Saint Paul knew the value and importance of the yielded life when he admonished us in Romans 6:13 to "Yield your selves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God."

OUR STORY PAGE

THE SECOND MILE

"Father," said Harry, "there was a verse in our portion last night that puzzled me." "Was there, son?" said his father, "what was it? We were reading in the fifth chapter of St. Matthew, were we not?"

"Yes," said Harry, "in the forty-first verse you read, 'And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain'. If anyone is so unreasonable as to ask you to walk a mile out of your road with him, why on earth should you make it two?"

Harry's father smiled. "Christ often makes us do things that seem to the world to be unreasonable, my boy," he replied. "He means that when we are compelled to do something for somebody, we should be ready to go further, to go 'out of our way,' as the saying is, to lend a helping hand. The first mile is all that is asked, the second is given freely out of love."

Harry was really interested, but like many another boy he said little.

Some weeks passed by, and examination time at Harry's school drew near. There was one that he was especially concerned about, as most of the questions had to be answered orally. He set himself to master the subject. When the day came, full of hope and anticipation, he set out on his bicycle for the four-mile ride to school, his parents' prayerful good wishes ringing in his ears.

But Harry never reached the school that day! Another school-fellow, named Bob, joined him on the way. When they had covered only half the distance to school a serious accident befell Bod. He was a careless rider, and failed to notice a car coming toward him in the opposite direction, with the result that he had a head-on collision, and was badly injured. It took Harry a long time to get help, and a doctor. After seeing his chum safely in the hospital he cycled back to break the news to Bod's mother.

When Harry's father returned home late that evening, he found him seated by the fire trying to read a book; there was a troubled look on his face. His father had heared the news from a neighbor, so he was prepared. "Well, Harry," he said after the usual greeting, "I've heard all you've done today, my boy. Poor Bob, what a sad accident!" Harry's only reply was, "I've lost the prize!"

His father understood the feeling of keen disappointment. "I know," he said, "and I sympathize with you; but you lost it in a splendid cause."

"What do you mean, father? Anybody else would have done what I did, in the circumstances."

"No, Harry, they wouldn't have. When Bob was on his way to the hospital, by riding hard there was still time for you to get to school; but you chose to cycle two miles in the oppostie direction to relieve the anxiety of Bob' smother."

"Oh, that," said Harry, "that was nothing! Something seemed to compel me to do it, and Bob's mother was ever so grateful. Say, father, was that going the second mile?"

"Yes, Harry, I think it was. You put the interests of others before your own. You will not lose by it in the long run. God will reward you, I feel sure."—Uncle Tom, in The Christian (London).

SOMETHING FOR ALL TO DO

"A bad break it is," said the Doctor as he came quietly downstairs where other children were waiting to hear his report. "Yes, her leg is broken in two places. She has had a bad fall, but is very fortunate in escaping with her life."

It was Maggie, the venturesome girl, as she was called. She had climbed into one of the tall maples in the yard after an empty bird nest, and had fallen down. Poor girl, it would mean a long time for her in bed, and much pain till those bones would knit together again.

Maggie felt quite important for a time. Her little friends brought her pretty flowers and good things to eat. But one night, the pain grew so much worse and she couldn't sleep. Try hard as she could to be brave, the tears would come. The days grew dull and full of pain and sometimes she thought she couldn't stand it another hour. However, she looked forward to the Doctor' svisit as the greatest pleasure of the day, even though it did pain to have her leg touched.

One day the Doctor asked Maggie whether she would like to look at some pictures, as he handed her an envelope.

"Perhaps you know I have a sister in India who is a teacher and so I have brought you some of the pictures of her boys and girls in India and her letter to read."

The next morning when the Doctor came Maggie had many questions to ask about his sister.

"Oh, I wish I could do something,—but I can't even walk across the floor, and besides I'm only a little girl."

"But these two things need not keep you from helping the Master in His work," said the Doctor. "Why little girl, did you ever cut out patch-work? Tomorrow I'll bring you a sample of the work the Indian girls do. Each little girl cares for her patch-work quilt more than anything else she has."

"Oh, goody, goody. Something for me to do. I'll begin tomorrow."

There was no more idle time in Maggie's room, and the leg didn't seem to pain nearly as much any more. Such pretty rolls of "pieces" came from friends who grew interested. And then at last the work was finished, and Maggie packed it and father sent it away.

She was well enough to walk to the door when the answer came, and the letter from the Doctor's sister told her how her work had helped do just what the Master needed done at that time, and how three more little girls had been won into school through her patch-work blocks and the money she and her friends had sent with the pieces.

My young friends, there is always something we can do for Jesus.—Rhoda R. Eby, in Beams of Light.

PRAYING FOR FOOD

''Give us this day our daily bread''—Matt. 6:11.

A gentleman saw two children sitting in front of him in the train—a boy and a girl. Both looked tired. They were traveling alone. Toward noon the little girl got up from her seat and presently he saw her kneeling on the floor, with her head bowed on the cushion. Was she ill? Did she find this an easy way to sleep? No, she was praying.

''What are you doing, my little girl?'' he asked when she got up.

''I was saying, 'Our Father, who art in Heaven'.'' she said.

''And what are you saying it for now?'' he asked again.

''I'm so hungry,'' she said.

''We've been traveling all day,'' said the boy, ''and our food is all gone.''

The gentleman wished he had something in his pocket, but it was empty. At the next stopping place he went out himself and bought something for the children to eat.

When he handed it to the child, ''I knew it would come,'' she said, looking up with joy in her face. ''Did God send you, sir?''

Yes, God sent the gentleman. The child did not see how the train was going to furnish the ''daily bread,'' going so fast. But the Son of God taught her to pray, ''Give us this day our daily bread,'' and the little girl believed it. She asked Him, and God well knows ever so many ways to answer our prayers.

There is a small word in the Bible of which some people ask, ''What does it mean?'' The word is ''faith.'' What is faith?

It is asking God, believing and trusting Him. That is what the little girl did! and it is the kind of asking which God loves, and loves to answer.—Publisher Unknown.

JOHN'S EXPLANATION

A True Story

The little family had gathered around the supper table, father and mother and the three small children. The children were telling their adventures of the day, when in the first pause that came, Billy, aged seven, suddenly announced:

''Mother I don't see how God's Spirit can be in my heart and in someboy else's heart at the same time.''

Before mother could get her explanation ready, John, aged nine, said:

''I'll tell you how it is, Billy. It's like this. When I am out in our yard the sun is shining on me, and when you are over in Aunt Ethel's garden the sun is shining on you, and it's shining on the boys' school across the river at the same time—and it's all the same sun. Then at night the moon looks in my window, and I think it is my moon, and it looks in your window and you think it is your moon, but it is the same moon. And God's Spirit is like that—it is so big it can be everywhere.''

Mother was quiet for a little time. She felt that John had answered his younger brother's question better than she could, and in a way the little fellow could understand. Billy was satisfied with John's explanation.—Mary Mathews in Apples of Gold.

GOING "ANYWHERE"

''I think a Christian can go anywhere,'' said a young woman who was defending her continued attendance at some very doubtful places of amusement.

''Certainly she can,'' rejoined her friend; ''but I am reminded of a little incident which happened last summer, when I went with a party of friends to explore a coal mine. One of the young women appeared dressed in a dainty white gown. When her friends remonstrated with her, she appealed to the old miner who was to act as guide of the party.

''Can't I wear a white dress down into the mine?'' she asked petulantly.

''Yes'm,'' returned the old man, ''there's nothing to keep you from wearing a white frock down there, but there'll be considerable to keep you from wearin' one back.''

There is nothing to prevent the Christian wearing his white garments when he seeks the fellowship of that which is unclean, but there is a great deal to prevent him from wearing white garments afterwards.—Sunlight for the Young.

HE LOVED US

''Unto Him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in His own Blood''—(Rev. 1:5).

He loved us. We never can tell why. To have found us and to have borne with us would have been wonderful indeed, but the blessed Lord Jesus not only manifested His patience is bearing with us—He loved us!. And what a difference it makes when one is truly loved. We may recall those who have found it possible to bear with us. By some means they have succeeded in developing sufficient patience to take into consideration our many infirmities and suffer the same. Some there are who have found it possible to respect us, nothwithstanding all our weakness, but in the mercy of God we have been blessed with another class, a smaller circle of friends, it may be, who have really loved us. And in the last analysis, those who love are your friends. We read somewhere of one who asked Hudson Taylor the question: ''Are you always conscious of abiding in Christ?''

''While I was sleeping last night,'' he replied, ''did I cease to abide in your house because I was unconscious of the fact? We should never be conscious of not abiding in Christ.''

''Unto Him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in His own Blood.'' Let us never lose the consciousness of our Redeemer's undying love.—The Alliance Weekly.

OUR DEEP NEEDS

When once you have put your mind in the true attitude of prayer, then the Holy Spirit will help you. That is one of the ways in which to prove to ourselves the action of the Holy Spirit. He kindles our aspirations, and does not let us rise from our knees until we have said something that is worth saying to God. Do you want nothing from God? . . . .

Do you need no divine help in increasing your control over yourself, in bridling that tongue of yours which has in its time wrought so much unhappiness to yourself and others, in getting rid of that selfishness which has been a curse to you, or in practicing that self-denial which is the secret of your happiness?—Archdeacon W. M. Sinclair.

Turning Home

When this reaches the readers we will be nearing the end of our brief vacation and will be headed back toward home to take up anew the duties there.

Cloth Needed

Many dresses must be made in our sewing room during August and early September. And we haven't the necessary cloth with which to make them.

Will our solicitors and other women workers please see if mills or stores in your community will donate prints or cotton broadcloth for school dreses, and also cloth of any kind which will make nice little Sunday dresses for girls from 6 to 17 years of age. Remnants with two to three yards in them will be fine.

If you can do this at all please do it at once because these dresses must be made while our larger girls are out of school. We thank you, and may the dear Father bless and prosper each of you.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON, Superintendent.

RADIO SERVICE

Believing that Methodist Protestants like to hear Methodist Protestant ministers,, I am asking hat those who have radios tune in on sation WSJS at Winston-Salem each morning at 7:45 for the week beginning Monday, July 17 and closing Saturday, July 22 for the devotional services to be conducted by Rev. R. A. Hunter, the pastor of Forsyth Charge. While this station is not a strong one, it can be heard under normal conditions as far as Charlotte and Hickory.

LOYALTY LEAGUE

The status of the League to date is as follows: total enrollment in League 565. Total amount pledged per mnnth $219.15. Average monthly payment per members about 40 cents. Number of charges that have enrollments in the League, 27. The number of pastors that have enrolled is 35. The largest enrollment plege by any one individual is $5 per month. The largest family enrollment is $10 per month. The following charges have enrollments: Spring Church, Henderson, Orange, Mt. Hermon, Burlington, Alamance, Mt. Pleasant, Siler City, Tabernacle, St. Paul, Reidsville, Forsyth, First Church Lexington, Concord, Denton, Davidson, Pleasant Grove, First Church High Point, Lebanon, Kernersville, Anderson, Saxapahaw, Charlotte, Shiloh, Guilford, Thomasville First, Thomasville Central.

Asheboro has the movement on and expects to enroll a large group in that church. There are other charges, too, that have assured us that they will be represented in the League.

If we could enroll our full goal of 5,000 members at the present rate of monthly contributions, the annual income from this source would amount to $20,000,—not a sum to be despinsed. And yet the amount given by each individual is so small that surely it cannot be a burden to any one. And this, in my opinion, is our hope for paying the debt on High Point College. We cannot hope to get BIG money from a few individuals, but we surely can expect to get small amounts from a great many folks. And in that way our required aggregate would be raised ultimately. Let me say again for about the tenth time: THERE IS MERIT IN THIS LEAGUE.

A meeting of the committee appointed by the Board of Edcation to foster this movement, was held last Thursday, July 13. A full report of my work was made to the committee at this meeting, and according to agreement with the committee and Lebanon church, I was released from further League work. The committee was unanimous in the opinion that the League should be kept before our people for the remainder of this conference year, and further enrollments secured. Plans for this are in the making, and announcements regarding this will be made soon. The committee is also of the opinion that our conference in November will make definite and full provision for pushing the League until our full goal of 5,000 members has been reached.

The following enrollments have not been reported:

Lebanon Church: Mrs. J. A. Hedgecock, Miss Lula Thacker, Mrs. Henry Lee, Mrs. Vester Smith, Lee Smith, Lois Hedgecock, Lela Hedgecock, Mrs. J. S. Hedgecock, Young Men's Class, Circle No. 3, Class No. 5, Class No. 2, Rainbow Class, Miss Ollie Brown's Class, Willing Workers' Class, Baraca Class.

First Church, High Point: J. C. Whitesell, A. J. Koonce, F. R. Auman, Mrs. F. R. Auman, C. C. Robbins, C. C. Robbins, Jr., Ann Robbins, J. B. Spencer, J. A. Gray, Mrs. J. A. Gray, Dr. A. A. York and Mrs. A. A. York.

Siler Charge, Hope Church: Clara Johnson.

I wish to thank pastors and people for the kind consideration and hearty cooperation that was accorded me in my efforts to promote the League. Where personal contacts were made there was almost invariably an expression of interest and a desire to help.

And now do not forget this: The strategic point now for the success of the work that has already been done in the local church. If the League secretary and treasurer keeps up with the work there, and makes monthly collections, the League will succeed. If this is not done, the League breaks down. I urge that pastors give special attention to this all-important phase of the undertaking.

And now this final word: Let's keep the League alive, and make it glow.

S. W. TAYLOR.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Spring Church.—Our special meeting will begin at Lebanon on the first Sunday in August. Rev. M. P. Chambliss is our engaged helper. We are expecting him on Sunday.

Various people on the charge continue to express their interest in a substantial way. Recently, Mrs. W. W. Grant gave a box of edibles. Mrs. Chas. Moore one frier. Mrs. J. W. Crew, one ham. The C. E. society of Pleasant Hill made a cash donation to apply on Mrs. Neese's hospital bill.

Don't forget the first district rally at Hawkin's Chapel the fifth Sunday in July

Kannapolis.—Due to the status of our church finance we talked up the subject of tithing. Tithing literature was distributed in our congregation for about two months which was to be followed by a sermon on "Stewardship and Tithing." This sermon was delivered June 23 by Rev. C. P. Morris, our pastor. He used for his text Mal. 3:8, "Will a man rob thee? In Tithers and Offerings." After the service we had a church meeting and organized a tither's league. Nineteen were enrolled, and we're expecting to greatly increase this number.

I think that tithing is the only successful way to finance any church. This is God's plan, and if practiced will solve all financial problems hindering the progress of the church. With it God has given a promise: "Bring all your tithes into the storehouse, and I will open the windows of Heaven and pour out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it." If we believe it and put it into practice it will work successfully, and God will reward us accordingly.

Pray for us that we may be true to our pledge and pay one-tenth of our income into God's treasury. You will hear from us again, for we are going over the top for Jesus. Praise the Lord.

Tabernacle-Stony Knoll, W. Forsyth.—After having been with these churches in their revival meetings of recent date, I feel that I should say the Lord was with us.

Our first meeting was at Tabernacle. The attendance here was good. The interest shown by the people of this church was such that is not often seen. "The people had a mind to work," and of course God gave an increase.

The young people have also organized a Bible class that has been successful so far. The Sunday school gave an ice cream supper Saturday night and made a good sum of money. Our Children's Day exercise was also successful this year and now we are looking forward to the meeting to start.

Every one is welcome at Antioch at all times. GEORGIE GORDON.

First Church, High Point.—An impressive installation service was observed Sunday morning when the new officers of the Senior C. E. society were iducted with appropriate ceremony by the pastor. Miss Irene Reynolds is the incoming President; Miss Myrtle Davis, vice-president; Miss Esther Pritchard, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Theodore Ballard, press reporter; Miss Margaret Snipes, chairman flower committee; Miss Elizabeth Welch, pianist, and Mrs. Ralph Vance, chairman program committee. These young people are to be highly commended for their loyal and faithful service. The congregation was pleased to hear a pretty tenor solo, "When I Behold," by Clara Edwards, rendered by Wm. C. Ferree, Jr., with organ accompaniment by Prof. E. B. Stimson. Rev. R. I. Farmer then delivered an impressive, practical sermon on the subject, "Three Men Who Live in High Point," basing his remarks on the first three chapters of I Corinthians. These three men, whom he might mention by name, are the natural man, the carnal man, and the spirtual man. He said that all religion rests on the relationship between God and some man, woman, boy or girl. The Roman poet, Ovid, said that God made man in His own image to live in a high sphere. The spirit is to function through the body of man. The only way we may judge a man or woman is by his or her actions. Everybody is a member of a group that stands for good or evil. Channing said that every man is a volume that all his friends and neighbors may read. The natural man is the one who receives not the things of God. He is the man of animal spirit, "of the earth, earthly," in whom the animal attributes predominate. Some of them belong to the church, but have never been regenerated. The original meaning of the carnal man is a babe in Christ, who is led by fleshly appetites instead of by God. The carnal mind is outwardly religious but is not dominated by the power of God. He is broad-minded and likes to boast of it, but is not spiritual-minded. Mr. Farmer here took the opportunity to attack in no uncertain tones those who are members of the church, but break its laws by drinking intoxicants. He said that many men criticize the ministers for being afraid to censure the drink evil, but he wants to go on record as one who will denounce it with all his strength and as long as life lasts. In Heb. 6, Paul gives us a beautiful picture of the spiritual man, distinguished from his fellows by being spiritual and having practical insight into the Gospel. He is alive with God, strong and loyal to the spirit of God. Christians do not need to wear blinders like horses, but to keep the face and eyes turned straight ahead toward the goal. "By their fruits ye shall know them." It is a solemn thought that each of us is living his funeral sermon day by day, his friends and neighbors being aware of his consistent walk or the reverse.

"Count that day lost whose low descending sun Views from thy hand no worthy action done."

At the Sunday evening service the congregation joined in the union open-air service on the city lot, when the mesage was delivered by Rev. F. L. Conrad, pastor Emmanuel Lutheran church.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was held in the Philathea room at the church Monday afternoon with the President, Mrs. J. C. Whitesell, in the chair. A beautiful devotional service on the topic, "The Patience of Jesus," was conducted in an admirable manner by Mrs. Richard H. Shaw. The Auxiliary then enjoyed a pretty vocal solo by Miss Helen Johnson. The circles made splendid reports, showing an attendance of 43 members and 140 visits made with several baskets of flowers and trays sent to the sick. The assistant treasurer, Mrs. R. H. Shaw, made an excellent report. The Auxiliary has paid $200.00 to the Building Fund, $10.00 per month to the maintenance of needy families, $40.00 per month to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, treasurer, and has a balance of $157.00 in the treasury.

The different circles, seven in number are well up with their quotas of $25.00 per month for the yearly budgets, and one reports more than its allotment paid. The women of First church surely "have a mind to work." They voted to sponsor a skating contest on the streets of the city some evening in the near future.

L. Gray, Jr., sang very beautifully a number of vocal selections, which were much enjoyed by the audience.

We are exceedingly sorry to note that the condition of Capt. A. M. Rankin does not improve, and his familiar figure is sadly missed at the church services where his genial presence has been an inspiration ever since First Church was established in 1897.

A wedding of much interest to former students of High Point College was solmnized in the First Methodist Protestant church of Asheville on July 12 at high noon, when Mr. John Perry Dozier of Greensboro, son of the late

Miss Sue Underhill of Asheville, a schoolmate of the bride of Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, was maid of honor, and Mrs. Grover L. Angel of Mars Hill was the groom's best man. After the ceremony a luncheon for the bridal party was held at the George Vanderbilt hotel, and later the happy pair left by motor for a honeymon trip of a week or more, after which they will be at home in Asheville, N. Garland McPherson, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. D. McPherson, Woodrow Ave., has recently been appointed tax collector of the special sales tax in this district at a good salary.

Mr. and Mrs. James T. Ryan and children have returned from a stay at Myrtle Beach, South Carolina.

High Point finds itself again in the throes of a strike similar to the one of July a year ago. Yesterday (Monday) morning 39 furniture and hosiery mills were closed after more than 5,000 workers left their posts. The long grind of waiting for a settlement of differences between mill owners and workers, has just started. The workers will be without pay and the mill owners without production for an indefinite period. The general understanding is that no effort to re-open the hosiery mills will be made until after August 1, when the new code may go into effect. Everything is quiet and orderly, but the situation is deplorable.

Gray's Chapel, Randolph Charge.—It has been some time since the reporter has sent in a report, but the work has been progressing and we trust much good for the Lord is being accomplished.

On the second Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, our annual Children's Day program was given under the direction of Mrs. Roy Davis. This program consisted of several recitations and songs by the young members of the Sunday school, followed by an address by our pastor, Rev. Edw. Suits.

There was a good congregation present and we hope they all enjoyed the program.

On the coming fourth Sunday morning at the 11:00 o'clock preaching hour there will be a special service held for tse members of the church. We hope as many as possible will attend. We feel sure it will be interesting.

First Church, Concord.—Our pastor gave us a beautiful message this morning. The Scripture lesson was found in the fourth Chapter of Nehemiah. Text the 6th verse: "So built we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof; for the people had a mind to work." Nehemiah was the king's cup-bearer and he did not know what to do when he heard that his own home town had nearly been destroyed, the walls broken down and the gates burned. He loved his people and he wanted to see the city rebuilt. He prayed much and wept about the city being torn up. And when he went in into the king the king saw he was very sad and he asked him to tell what made him sad. So after he told the king all about it and told him he wanted to go home and help his people rebuild the city tht king let him go. It was with much prayer and weeping that Nehemiah was able to do this great work. God was with him and he knew that they could rebuild the walls. Often we feel like we are called to do some work for God and for humanity but we feel so weak and unworthy. But if we would only go to God in prayer we would know that sometimes God takes the weak things to confound the mighty. Oh, that we might all put faith in prayer as Nehemiah did. We know that prayer can cause many wonderful things to happen, some several years ago I was very sick and friends and relatives had no hopes for my recovery but at that time I had a loving sister who put all faith in God. And when she went to Him in prayer she knew her prayer would be answered. One night I was very sick and they told me after I was restored to health that my sister was missing in the room when all had given me up and when they found my sister she was getting up from beside a chair where she had been praying. They said she was brave and told them I was not going to die that night because she had been talking to God about me and she asked them why they did not pray when they told her they had been praying, she said your prayers are too weak.

God called my sister home not many years after that and I could not understand why He called her and left me when I felt there was so much work here she could do and I felt so weak and unworthy. But I know her short life was finished and that I had been left here for some purpose. God grant that I may be able to do whatever He left me here to do. My sister's influence helps me so much some time; my feet almost slip then I can think of her and her beautiful life. I am a great believer in prayer, and somehow Mr. Morgan's sermon got hold of me and brought many memories back to my mind.

Right at this time our people are much in prayer for the grief-stricken parent and grandmother of little Jack and Bobby Searboro. It is sad for us to give up one but we know it must be awful for the news to come that two are drowned at the same time. Jack was a member of the church, and both were members of the Junior church. We miss Bobby and Jack so much and our hearts go out in sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Searboro and family.

We are glad to report that Mrs. P. J. Mann is some improved. She is able to sit up for a short while each day. Mrs. W. B. Newton is in the Charlotte hospital; we hope she will soon be able to return home. Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Newton had as their dinner guests Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Erskin Newton, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Davis and son, Wayne, and Mrs. Dunn and daughter, Alice, from Charlotte.

The Baraca boys had charge of the service Sunday night and we all anjoyed it very much. Mr. Will Widenhouse made an interesting talk and the singing was fine.

Each circle of the auxiliary is doing something in a definite way once a month to earn money. Two of them have sold sandwiches, cake, ice cream and iced tea on the church lawn and one, Mrs. Johnson's circle, has given a tea party at the home of Mrs. J. H. Streetman. All the projects have proved successful in both a financial and social way. The other circles are going to follow with the sale of refreshments on the church lawn. Thesales are all held on Saturday nights and large numbers of people are glad to avail themselves of a delicious light meal in such cool and pleasant surroundings.

The entire auxiliary sells numerous household commodities and hosiery to raise money. We have been so successful so far that we are encouraged and work on feeling sure that our goal will be attained.

This month's auxiliary meeting was a large and interesting one. Refreshments were served by Circle No. 1, Mrs. A. H. Evans, chairman. Some new plans were made at this meeting and are being carried out to increase our funds. Mrs. Maier presided at this meeting in the pleasing and efficient way that she does things always. A beautiful devotional program was given by Mrs. Joe Johnson.

In my article of last week I called Dr. Forlines, Dr. Elderdyce through mistake. As both of these gentlemen are of the finest type from every standpoint, I feel sure I need make no apology to either.

Shiloh.—Today at the worship hour, Rev. R. S. Troxler delivered his message from I Kings 5:5, "Behold I purposed to build a house unto the name of the Lord my God." Every person has his or her particular work to do, and they can perform that God-given task better than any other task. Solomon's greatest work was the erection of the temple, which was the greatest temple of worship ever built. The church is our temple of worship; our bodies are the temples of the Holy Spirit. Both are holy and should be kept clean. God only asks us to keep out those things that hurt and surely that is not unreasonable.

First Church, Lexington.—Our pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, filled his appointment at 11:00 o'clock and preached an unusually good sermon. For a text he used Genesis 14:10, "And the vale of Siddim was full of slimepits; and the kings of Sodom and Gomorrah fled and fell there." As a subject he used "Modern Slimepits." The chief of these, he said, are Sunday desecration. disrespect for law, and worldliness.

In the evening Rev. Isley spoke from Mark 9:27, "But Jesus took him by the hand, and lifted him up; and he arose.' At this service Mr. Grubb and his quartet sang several numbers.

Mt. Hermon Church.—Service was opened by the pastor, Rev. L. E. Mabry, singing by the choir. Scripture was read by the pastor II Tim. 3:1-9. The text was based on the entire nine verses and each verse was analyzed and made plain.

This service being the beginning of the annual revival meeting which will run throughout the entire week. Rev. Mr. Peeler, of Enfield, being the pulpit help.

We are looking forward to having a great revival and expect a large attendance throughout the week. REPORTER.

NEW TOMBS DISCOVERED

Workers under the direction of the Egyptian government Department of Antiquities recently uncovered four rolay Byzantine Nubian tombs while excavating in upper Egypt not far from Abou Simbel. These tombs were smaller than any others found in this region but were much older and were clearly connected with those found on the opposite side of the Nile last year.

Perhaps the most interesting of these newly found tombs is one composed of four connecting rooms. An unusual fact is that most of the Egyptian tombs were for individuals while this one seemed to be a family tomb.—The Pathfinder.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Hopkins

Again, Bethel church has been saddened over the passing of one of its best-loved, eldest and loyal supporters, B. L. Hopkins, or "Uncle Joe," as he was lovingly known by his friends. One instinctively felt when in his company that he was in the presence of a good man.

He was a quiet, unassuming gentleman and his life was an inspiration to others. He was converted and joined Bethel M. P. church when compartively a young man. He was the instigation of the Sunday school rooms being built and completed at so early a date.

He was born in Cabarrus county in 1860, and was called from this life March 31, 1933. He was the son of Moses Hopkins.

He was happily married to Miss Allice Martin, May 3, 1883. To this happy union were born five children, all whom are living. Mrs. A. C. Penry, of Erwin, Tenn.; Miss Mary Hopkins of Winston-Salem; Miss Genie and Sanford Hopkins of Mocksville, and L. P. Hopkins of Martinsville, Va. There are five grandchildren and a host of relatives and friends to mourn his going.

Funeral services were conducted by Pastor Rev. G. B. Ferree and W. M. Howard and the body laid to rest in Bethel cemetery. The large number of relatives and friends, and the beautiful floral tribute showed the high esteem in which he was held.

Scarboro-Scarboro

Last Thursday afternoon God called little Bobbie and Jack Scarboro home; we can't understand why He took them in the way He did. They were so happy when they left home with their grandmother, Mrs. W. H. Scarboro and two aunts, Mrs. L. W. Burris and Mrs. H. H. Scarboro and an uncle, C. W. Widenhouse and several small cousins and a number of little playmates just went to the river to have a good time and let the children wade in the water. While the uncle and a blind friend, Mr. Pato Wood, were dresing, Jack and Bobbie waded across on the rocks and went up the river and got in a boat. In just a few minutes C. W. and Plato came back ready to go home but they could not find Jack and Bobbie. Oh, it was awful for the grandmother to have to come home and tell their mother about it. It seems almost more than the mother and father can bear. We can't understand yet we know that God never makes a mistake and we know that if we live right and do God's will that some time we can go live with Bobbie and Jack in a much happier home and it is so sweet to know that little Jack tried so hard to save little Bobbie's life. They were both so ful of life and they will be missed not only in their home but on the street with their litte playmates. They rode on their pony so much and would take their little friends to ride. Jack was a great lover of books for he had read many books in his short life and Jack loved to have friends older than himself; he loved to hear older folks talk. Jack was a Boy Scout and he talked so much about how he hoped to win a medal some time and he won his medal trying to save Bobbie.

The many flowers showed that Bobbie and Jack had made many friends during their short lives. Thousands of people came to view them and the church could not even half accomodate the people. Revs. Morgan, Lindley, Fogleman and Hendry had charge of the funeral services. Rev. Fogleman was Jack's pal while he was pastor here. Jack was small but he loved to go to the parsonage and talk with Mr. Fogleman. As Rev. Lindley said: "We know they are safe in the arms of Jesus, safe on His gentle breast."

UGLY GIRL WANTS HUSBAND

All girls are pretty when they are mentioned in the newspapers. That is, all except Wanda Limperg of Danzig, who recently wrote a letter to the Washington Herald, explaining that she was a poor fishergirl, ugly, and with long hair, but that she wanted an American soulmate — "A steersman who would pilot her ship of life." The news is not that she wants a husband but that she admits she's ugly.—Exchange.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE SECRETARY OF TEMPERANCE

The Methodist Protestant church has always taken a decided stand on all moral questions so it is most fitting that in the list of secretaries of Women's Work there should be found a secretary of Temperance. It is understood, moreover, that this secretaryship is for the promotion not only of prohibition and law observance but also of all other movements that have to do with Christian citizenship.

Her Qualifications

The Secretary of Temperance should be a woman who is broad-minded, and public-spirited. She should be informed on the moral questions of the day, and be personally a member of some of the organizations that are promoting good citizenship and as far as possible be actively engaged in such work.

Her Duties

The Secretary of Temperance shall promote temperance education in every department of her local church not only in the Auxiliary, but in all departments of the Sunday school and C. E. circles. This shall be done by arranging at least one program a year where the cause of Temperance may be adequately presented in each department. She shall keep on hand a supply of temperance literature for judicious distribution. She shall act as a connecting link between interdenominational groups organized to promote temperance, and her Auxiliary. At the time of election, she shall urge every woman to use her right of suffrage for putting into office men of honorable character.

But not only in the temperance question should she seek to educate her women, but along such lines as World Peace, Sabbath Observance, and the Protection of the Home. She would do well to enlist the co-operation of the pastor of her church in having these subjects properly presented at an evening service, or informally discussed at a mid-week service.

In brief, her task is to develop the Christian attitude and to rouse the Christian conscience toward the all-important moral questions of the day.

The Secretary of Temperance in the Branch should have the same qualifications that are necssary in the Temperance Secretary of the Auxiliary. She should secure the appointment of a Secretary of Temperance in each Auxiliary and co-operate in every way posible in her work of educating her women in Christian citizenship. She should have appropriate literature on hand to display at the Branch meetings to furnish on request, at nominal prices. At one of the Branch meetings during the year she should arrange for the discussion of methods that Auxiliaries might use in presenting causes for which her office stands.

She shall make an annual report in writing to the Branch of her activities during the year.—Leaflet, Committee on Education.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. PROTECTING THE PUBLIC AGAINST BAD SECURITIES

If investors buy worthless securities now it will be their own fault and not the government's. Regulations for protecting the public against such securities have been completed by the Federal Trade Commission. By these rules the commission will administer the Federal Securities Act passed by the special session of Congress and signed by President Roosevelt on May 27.

In an announcement promulgating the new rules for enforcing the act the commission listed protection of the investing public without handicapping business as its chief aim. And publicity is to be the chief weapon used in enforcing the law, which is regarded as an aid to old securities as well as to new issues.—Pathfinder.

DOLLARS or DOTS?—WHICH?

The possibility that some churches and charges may have forgotten the classification into which they fall in the HERALD Subsidy scale prompts its presentation to refresh the minds of those who may not remember just the amount asked of their church toward the support and continuation of the HERALD.

Churches with less than 100 members contribute	$ 2.50
Churches whose membership is from 101 to 200	5.00
Churches whose membership is from 201 to 300	7.50
Churches whose membership is from 301 to 400	10.00
Churches whose membership is from 401 to 500	15.00
Churches whose membership is more than 500	20.00

A glance at table showing the receipts on Subsidy is convincing proof of the effectiveness of the plan. If your church or charge has not done its part, the doing of your bit will help to lift the load that crushes. The blank spaces in the Subsidy column are gradually diminishing. Let's put Dollars in the place of Dots!

HIGH POINT COLLEGE AND OTHER DENOMINATIONAL COLLEGES IN NORTH CAROLINA

I am giving some figures below pertaining to our own school at High Point in comparison with other colleges of the state which largely draw enrollment from the area served by the Methodist Protestant Church and High Point College.

				Rank in
College	Age	Enrollment	Cost	Age	Enr'l.	Cost
A	82	357	$420	6	3	7
B	96	631	583	4	1	2
C	46	285	406	7	7	8
D	95	225	470	5	10	3
E	99	255	396	3	9	9
H. Point	9	286	392	9	6	10
F	42	335	390	8	4	11
G	162	318	450	1	5	6
H	161	273	700	2	8	1
I	99	622	460	3	2	4
J	42	318	459	8	5	5

In the column of cost is included room, board, tuition, college fees and students activities fee for a whole year.

Though High Point College is the youngest of the standard institutions, other colleges ranging in age from nearly five times to over 19 times her age, she occupies sixth place in enrollment and in the matter of cost there is only one other school on this table cheaper than High Point College, and that school is only $2.00 cheaper.

This record should give encouragement to our people and should challenge their wholehearted support.

Eternal Punishment

We hear a great many cavils against future punishment. At these we should not so much wonder, but for the fact that the Gospel assumes this truth, and then proposes a remedy. One would naturally suppose the mind would shrink from these fearful conclusions to which it is pressed when the relations of mere law are contemplated; but when the Gospel interposes to save, then it becomes passing strange that men should admit the reality of the Gospel, and yet reject the law and its penalties. They talk of grace; but what do they mean by grace? When men deny the fact of sin, there is no room and no occasion for grace in the Gospel. Admitting nominally the fact of sin, but virtually denying its guilt, grace is only a name. Repudiating the sanctions of the law of God and laboring to disprove their reality, what right have men to claim that they respect the Gospel? They make it only a farce—or at least a system of amends for the penalty of God's moral law.

What is the penalty of God's moral law? "The wages of sin is death." This death is endless misery, corresponding to the death penalty in human governments. Everybody knows what this is. It separates the criminal from society forever; debars him at once from all the privileges of the government, and signs him over to helpless ruin. Nothing more dreadful can be inflicted. There can be no doubt that eternal death spoken of in the Gospel is intended to correspond to the death penalty in human governments. No penalty less than infinite and endless can be an adequate expression of God's displeasure against sin and of His deetermination to resist and punish it. When men talk about eternal punishment being too great a penalty for sin, what do they think of God's efforts to restrain sin all over the moral universe? What do they think of the death of His well-beloved Son? Nothing less than the death penalty could give expression for the authority of God's law.

If the penalty be not endless death, what is it? Is it temporary suffering? Then how long does it last? When does it end? Has any sinner ever got through; served out his time and been taken to heaven? We have no testimony to prove such a case, not the first one; but—we have the testimony of Jesus Christ to prove that there never can be such a case. He tells us there can be no passing from hell to heaven or from heaven to hell. A great gulf is fixed between, over which none shall ever pass. You may pass from earth to heaven, or from earth to hell; but these two states of the future world are wide extremes, and no man or angel shall pass the gulf that divides them. The Bible representations with regard to the final rest of the saints and doom of the wicked are exceedingly striking. Spiritual truths are revealed by natural objects: On the one side, the gates and walls of the New Jerusalem to present the splendors and glories of the heavenly state. On the other side, the veil is lifted and you come to the very verge of hell to see what is there. All is fearful and full of horrors. What do you think? Has God said these things to frighten our poor souls? Did He mean to play on our fears for His own amusement? No. It grieves the great heart of God when sinners will not embrace salvation through His grace, but He is a God of Justice as well as a God of Mercy. If we are to believe and preach what the Bible teaches about heaven, why not believe and preach what the Bible teaches about hell?

The Value of Worship

"O come let us worship and bow down."—Psalm 95:6.

How many of us who go to church really go to worship? The great need in the modern church service is not more attractiveness, but more worship. Dullness is not devotion; but we ought to guard our services from an appearance of becoming mere entertainments. Our opening words at every service in the church should be: "Let us worship God." This should be the key-note. These words express the real object of our assembling together. We must, however, have no narrow notions of what the worship of God is. Some people go to hear a sermon, with little or no thought of worship. But the sermon, if it be the right kind, and the hearing be also of the right kind, will be worship. Worship is no mere emotion; it is thoughtfulness also. A person does not really worship until he wills the good. Worship is: The reverent concentration of the whole inner being upon its supreme ideal, that movement of the soul which leads it into the light of love and the presence of the righteous Father. Whatever helps that concentration helps worship. If we want a truly blessed religious service each one should aim for that reverent concentration. When we give way to divine worship we feel the evil weakening in us, and the good is raised up. That is just what we need in a religious service. The idea is to weaken the evil in us, and to give strength to the good.

How do we prepare our minds for a worship service? I belong to God; my fellowmen and I are really one family. Do we realize this? You see how the idea of entertainment should be kept out of divine worship. We should try to realize that we are spiritual beings, have spiritual nature, and great spiritual needs. You can not win men to religion by giving up the supreme claims of religion. Let us never drag our banner in the dust to please anybody, nor to fit custom! This is why there is a bowing down in worship. It is the homage of the soul to truth and to God. When we thus bow before God we may expect to hear the voice of God as Ezekiel did:

"Son of man, stand upon thy feet, and I will speak unto thee."

God wants men to realize their worth. God would have us to understand that there is a will higher than our personal will, and that there is a way higher than our way. So we should be glad to hear the invitation, "Come, let us worship and bow down." In this bowing there is strength for rising into a stronger and nobler life. You will not have less self-respect through bowing to God, but more. The man who worships God is the man who is most able to stand erect in the world. Worship is a yearning towards God and the fullness of His life. We should ask ourselves this question: What is my true self, and my relationship to my God, and to the Lord Jesus Christ? Worship is not true unless it makes us better. You can not worship God while you hate your fellowmen. It it useless for a man to say that he loves God if he does not love his brother. For where is divine life to be lived except in the world of human relations? If it stops with your nation then you are worshiping a tribal God. If it stops with your sect, then you are worshiping a sectarian idol. The worship of the highest means service for the lowest. This is the high standard in worship we must aim at. Come, let us worship and bow in spirit before the highest, that we may rise to receive from God the power to live the larger, and a better life. O. B. WILLIAMS.

DENOMINATIONALISM AND CHURCH UNION FROM ANOTHER VIEWPOINT

The organization of many of the denominations can be justified, historically.

The Methodist Protestant denomination was born because groups of members of the Methodist Episcopal Church were denied the privilege of organizing societies which met to discuss two things: (1) Equal rights in the annual conferences for laymen and ministers. (2) The desirability of doing away with bishops and presiding elders.

A large majority of present day church members have little or no knowledge of the history of their respective denominations. The reasons for their organization as a rule mean nothing to the members. Most denominations have undergone so many changes with the years that the original members would probably be unwilling to fellowship with them now, even if they could recognize themselves, indeed, we are to think that the departed have made considerable progress in religious and theological thinking.

When the Methodists North and South were voting on reunion, some ten years ago, the most violent and effective opposition on the part of two or three southern bishops was not on account of slavery, nor because of the present or prospective status of the Negro. These men were scared because they believed their northern brethren were slipping from the ancient moorings. Without having changed the articles of faith, the North was inclining too much—so the southern men thought—to liberal views on the Bible, the church, and Christion beliefs and practices. This, you see, had nothing to do with the original separation of these two branches of Methodism.

A few years ago I met the late Dr. George Elliott, for many years editor of the Methodist Review. Methodists and Presbyterians were at the time making overtures to each other looking toward union. I asked him why the Methodists did not look toward union with Congregationalists—a combination, in my opinion, much more feasible.

"Personally," Dr. Elliott replied, "I should very much enjoy being associated with Congregationalists. I appreciate their attainments in education, their culture, and their marvelous development of the missionary enterprise. But our people are not yet up to such a union. Perhaps they will be by and by." Here, you see, was no reference to differences in doctrine, in church government, or to the matter of vivid Christian experience and holiness.

Social level has much to do with one's loyalty, or disloyalty, to a denomination, or to a particular local church regardless of denomination. When persons remove to a different city where there are two churches of their denomination, one will say: "I am going to Second church. The folks there are common, friendly people—my kind. I am sure to feel at home with them." Another will say: "I am going to First church. The folks there are more ambitious, more progressive. I like the way they do things, and I shall have a better time and get along further by working with them." Still another person may say: 'I think I should feel rather more at home with the people of Second church, for they are common like myself. But I am taking my family to First church because my children are in high school. They intend going to college, and First church young people are the sort of folks they will want to be associated with in the years ahead." He is living in and for his children.

Much the same thing holds when the stranger finds only one church of his denomination in his new town. If that church is of the First church type, he may choose to go to a church of another denomination because that one is of the Second church type—his kind of people. Or if the church of his denomination is of the Second church type he may go to a (to him) more congenial First church type of another denomination.

A few weeks ago I spoke in a Quaker church here in Washington. At the close of the service I met a man who told me that he and his wife were both descended from a long line of Quakers, extending back to the early days of the William Penn settlement. Both of them are now members of a Christian church. Many years ago they were thrown into a situation in another part of the city where it seemed wise to cast in their lot with that denomination. "But," he said, "I like to come over here occasionally. The old associations, and the sort of service held in a Quaker church give me a good home feeling."

Years ago I was intimately acquainted with a Presbyterian young woman who was married to a Baptist young man. They naturally went to a large Baptist church where he had long been a member and held the offices of trustee and deacon. She was invited to join the church. She had been baptized in infancy by sprinkling, and would need to be immersed in order to become a Baptist. This did not appeal to her. She said to me one day: "If we were to move to another city where there is a Congregational church I think we would both very readily unite with that church—though, of course, my husband could not leave his church and unite with the Congregational church here.'' Many couples have solved their difficulties by compromising on a mutually satisfactory church of a denomination different from one in which either of them has been a member.

Self-seeking may creep into some of these situations and combinations, but any reasonable person will see that in many cases the solution has been a wise one.

Jesus wanted harmony and co-operation amongst His disciples. Paul in his day deplored division and tendencies to make much of unavoidable differences of opinion and practice. No one can justify the present breaking into fragments of the church of Christ, which is His body, with all the consequent seeking for the honors and emoluments connected with leadership and high place.

I am determined to work for intelligent church union—even though it is possible that if organic union on a large scale were achieved it would not be long until parties and divisions would again prevail.

Along with efforts for reunion I am increasingly keeping my heart and hand open toward all of God's children—worshiping with them as opportunity offers, studying their history and plans and Christian ideals, and joining with them in all practicable union efforts to promote education, missions, and the well-being of men in the world.

LUTHER K. LONG.

THE WORLD CONQUERORS

Moffatt translates I John 5:4 ''conquerors,'' where the older translations have ''victory.'' The change is rather fitting, since the world is disposed to surround its conquerors with halos of glory and honor. The name sof Alexander the Great, Julius Caesar, and Napoleon Bonaparte are household names throughout the civilized world. The names of those holding world boxing championships are better known than the names of the Presidents of the United States. The open road to fame seems to lie in the ability to conquer in some field of nature, or in the world of humanity. Many ambitious lives have been sacrificed, in their endeavors to excel their competitors, in exploits that might bring to them lasting fame.

However, John was not chanting the praises of those, who had conquered in the world of nature, or the world of humanity; but the victors in the spiritual realm. He was handing garlands of victory to the cloud of competitors who had conquered all the adversaries the world of darkness could marshal. Surely, most of them would never make reading in the daily press, nor receive the plaudits of men; but in the sight of God they are the salt of the earth; the light of the world, and the good seed of the kingdom. They celebrate their victories with songs of Moses and the Lamb, rather than pining away as Napoleon Bonaparte is reputed to have done.

The key to the successive victories and the final triumph of these world conquerors is their faith. This may seem trite and commonplace to many; but it is really necessary to both stability and progress in society. That prince of American preachers, Phillips Brooks, was convinced that the soul must possess something from above in order to overcome in the lower realm. Christians must be both moralists and mystics. The Scriptures tell us that it was through faith kingdoms were subdued, righteousness wrought; the mouths of the lions were stopped: the power of fire was quenched; the weak were made strong, and the armies of the aliens were put to flight.

Paul exultingly proclaims, ''We are more than conquerors through him that loved us.'' History proves that the lot of the conqueror, in this world, is a very undesirable lot. Alexander the Great was himself conquered by his own lust of power and sensuality; Julius Caesar was murdered, and Napoleon died an exiled prisoner, brooding over his mistakes. They are fair representatives of all conquerors in the world of humanity. My blood almost chilled the other morning as I viewed a picture in the daily press. It was the day after the last world champion prize fight contest. There lay the ex-champion in the ring, with the referee standing over him, while the new champion looked on from a distance. I just offered up a prayer of thanksgiving to Almighty God for the fact that we are more than conquerors.

Perhaps some readers of this brief message were privileged to attend the 13th Commencement of Western Maryland College, and hear the eloquent Alumni sermon by the late Dr. J. T. Ward, who preached from this text, and commented on victory as follows: ''Victory over death in any sense and under any circumstances is a grand victory, but victory over death, with heaven in view, is the grandest of all triumphs.'' The rewards that follow the Christian's victories make him unspeakably more than a conqueror. He waves the palms of victory, wears crowns of glory, and shouts hosannas to the Son of David: blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest. What we shall be will some day be fully manifested.

WAS IT FAILURE?

A Moravian missionary named George Smith went to Africa. He had been there but a short time, and had only one convert, a poor woman, when he was driven from the country. They found this man dead one day. He had died praying for the Dark Continent. Failure? And yet when they celebrated the one-hundredth anniversary of the founding of that mission, the people were told that years after, a company, accidentally stumbling upon a place where he had prayed, had found the copy of the Scriptures he had left. They also found one aged woman who was his convert. They sought to sum up his brief life, and reckoned more than thirteen thousand living converts that had sprung from that life which seemed such a failure.—Peniel Herald.

THE GOLDEN YEARS OF LIFE

The advanced years of life should bring mellowness and contentment. Many activities and interests must necessarily be modified or relinquished. Simplicity should govern the daily life, and patience predominate.

Lovableness should constantly increase through gentleness and good-will. The mind and heart at peace, there should be much quiet meditation about God and the loftier aspects of life. The advancing years of life should be rich in love for mankind and in nobility of character.—Grenville Kleiser.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

October, Pay-up month

Second Sunday in October, Rally Day, Promotion in Sunday school, etc.

November 8, Annual Conference meets at Thomasville Community church.

The Dedication of Self and Service

The month of September is being set apart as the time for this service. The plan: Announce the time of the service in advance, telling the people of its purpose—to meet the pressing claims upon the Annual Conference treasury. There are many obligations which have been carried over for years, in addition to the expenses of the present year, which must be paid. Urge all the people to bring in their tithes and offerings upon this day. The Joash Box may be used, if preferred, the people may give through the regular channel, or may bring their gifts to the altar if this is desired. We do not prescribe a method, but do urge all to participate in the gifts. If more is brought in than is needed to pay the assessment for the Annual Conference Budget, then let it be given to other interests of the church, but let us make a supreme effort to pay up this claim on that day. Appeal to the people to attend worship service more faithfully and to dedicate themselves to the services of the kingdom. Let us pray for more efficient and faithful leaders in the work of our church; not that we do not have faithful officers in our churches, but that we need MORE of them to carry forward the work of the church to greater achievements.

To these causes let us all dedicate ourselves and our possessions and earnings, praying the Lord who has promised His people that if they will bring their tithes into the storehouse so that there shall be meat in His house, He will open the windows of heaven and pour out a blessing upon them which there shall not be room enough to receive it.

Graham, Rev. J. Clyde Auman, Pastor

July 23rd. This was a Home-Coming service the congregation had put on. It was an all-day affair. The attendance at Sunday school registered 20 more than they had on the previous Sunday. The membership had set for its task the payment of an old debt for street assessment of about $1,000, and the pastor reported most of it in hand, and was expecting before the day was over to have all the desired amount. I could attend only the 11 o'clock service. Brother Millaway occupied the time. He spoke with vigor and ease and was heard with pleasure by his many friends who were present. I believe he organized the church. Our people here are hopeful and are getting in shape to do a fine piece of work. It was a great pleasure to me to spend a few hours with them.

Bethel, Alamance Charge, Rev. J. A. Burgess, Pastor

Three o'clock found me at this church. It was sizzling hot, but there was a very good attendance upon Sunday school, which preceded the preaching service. We were glad to see Bro. G. W. Holmes here and to hear him teaching a class of men. This is one of our most dependable rural churches. They have Sunday school rooms and are talking of building a parsonage for the charge close by this church. We found here some of the people talking about the 18th Amendment. I am sure that if the members of the churches in North Carolina would stand the measure there would be no majority for repeal in this state. We are praying that our people shall not be deceived by the arguments of the repealists.

Gibsonville, Rev. N. G. Bethea, Pastor

The 8 o'clock hour found me here after a refreshing visit and an appetizing meal in the parsonage. The pastor did not think we had more than an average night congregation; there were but few of the official members present. Those attending gave respectful attention to the message and although it was one of the hottest days for this preacher we were able to get through without collapsing.

Wesley Chapel, Rev. R. L. Hethcox, Pastor

We attended a Circuit Rally here on the fifth Sunday. The pastor had arranged for this meeting. It was the hope that every church would be represented at the meeting, and while I could attend only the morning service I think that all the other churches were represented. There was a large congregation, and we hope that the pastor's plans for the afternoon worked out in a most satisfactory manner. We had to hurry from this appointmnet to another in the afternoon on Littleton Charge.

Hawkins Chapel, Rev. P. T. Bingham, Pastor

This was a meeting of the First District, comprising Creswell, Enfield, Whitakers, Halifax, Spring Church, Littleton, and Greensville Charges. I saw people from many of the nearby churches as well as the following pastors: Neese, Bingham, Fogleman, and Peeler. I found Mr. Harrison there when I arrived. He was speaking in the interest of a Student Loan Fund for High Point College from that District, and succeeded in getting much towards it. This meeting was likewise well attended and from what I learned it had been a good meeting. It was quite warm and difficult to interest people in the work of the church. But conditions are better in that section of our work and we expect the reports to be much better than last year.

This was one of our hardest days, although I spoke only twice. The travel and the heat made it a hard day. But the people were kind and appeared to appreciate what we are trying to do. But at Hawkins I was approached by two men and called Dr. Taylor. One was a member of that church and had evidently stood on the outside while I was introduced or was not listening when I was presented. But here is expressed one of the difficulties the church has to face: ignorance, which is the outgrowth of an indifference to the activities of the church that is killing it.

Plan of Appointments

August 13—Siler City Charge; 11 a. m. Hope; afternoon, Sapling Ridge; evening, Liberty.

August 20—Mount Hermon 11 a. m., Friendship 3 p. m., Fountain Place 8 p. m.

August 27—Rock Creek 11 a. m., Bellemont, afternoon, Haw River church 8 p. m.

THE WAYS OF WILD HORSES

Between the northern boundary of Montana and Old Mexico, a region which embraces the states of Utah, Idaho, Nevada, New Mexico, Arizona and parts of California, there are said to be more than a million—some say two million—wild horses, free as their own desert winds, as unbranded as antelope, and as untamed as the lightning. Over these empires of Silence they roam as they list, their nostrils like twin sacraments and their necks clothed with thunder.

Some conception of this vast region of the Blue Still, and its untamed condition, may be made when it is stated that, if one were to make, say, Boise City, Idaho, a starting point, one could ride straight north to the headwaters of the Yukon and never cross a fence. Or one could go straight south through Arizona and Old Mexico to the Pacific ocean and never have to turn aside for wire or rail. Then one could go East for a thousand miles with the same open spaces before him.

This will give some idea of the region over which these untamed creatures roam, a kingdom of the Wild many times the size of Europe. These statements will seem like exaggerations to those who have never visited these vast domains, yet, on a grand scale of approximation they are absolutely true.

The wild horse shares his territory with the elk, deer, bear cougar, and all the other creatures of the wilderness. He hears the singing of birds which keep far from town, the crashing of antlers in deadly combat, and the yapping of the coyote, that little skulking gray brother of the wolf, that greets the twilight and the breaking of the day with his mournful cosmic cry.

Wild horses distribute themselves with a nice eye to sevral things. Always there must be plenty of grass, and several diffrent places to drink. Then, the country must not be too rugged. A horse is too heavy for mountain running. He selects his home according to numbers. If there is a small "band," smaller grazing ground will do. If there is a large "band," he must have more.

It is quite well known to those of us who grew up with wild horses that they observe a clearly defined social system and order of family life which positively prevents inter-breeding. They are organized on the Patriarchal plan. The females are collected into groups of from ten to fifty, and are always presided over by some lordly male, that is sure to be a relentless tyrant. These groups, which are usually called "bands," locate in some region which strikes their fancy, and if not molested will remain there indefinitely.

If in a snowy country each "band" will have a "summer range" and a "winter range." These are occupied according to the seasons.

Having collected a nucleus for a following, the male builds it up by many methods well known to polite human society. For instance, he will make long, solitary journeys to some settlement, and endeavor to lure away domestic stock, and in this he is usually successful. With wide-open mouth and flattened ears he will drive these stolen females to his "band," and once they have become members of his wilderness fraternity these runaways from the ranches immediately become as wild as the others.

Sometimes, as one knight stormed the castle of another, taking everything with it, these chieftains of the Unfenced will go boldly and take by force the entire group of another male. But no patriarch ever surrendered his following without first doing wild battle with the invader. These combats are ferocious and deadly in the extreme, in which the gladiators rend each other with their teeth and mangle one another with their hoofs. If one goes down the other will kneel upon him trying to crush him with sheer weight.

But, when whipped, outclassed, the defeated one will wander about until he has collected another following and found another range.

There is also a process of weeding out by which a male deletes his own offspring from his "band." These that are driven out join other societies here and there, so that there is a constant trading of members going on all the time, between the different groups. In this way wild horse blood is kept perfectly pure. As the younger males build up their "bands" new territory is pre-empted, and so the growth of this species is extended.

When some lone rider approaches one of these groups, the patriarch, always on the lookout for danger, gives the snort of warning. The mothers paw their colts awake and the "band" rushes together and dashes away in the opposite direction. Usually the male keeps between the intruder and his following, driving in the laggards, and putting the entire group at full speed.

The territory of one "band" is never invaded by another "band." These range rights are strictly respected, so that each male reigns in absolute splendor alone.

In the summer time wild horses go to drink around ten o'clock each morning. When within half a mile of the spring, or a water-hole, they fall into single file, with a selected leader, and go down one of their trails in a long string, but always very cautiously, for a wild horse has inherited from his prehistoric ancestors the ear of what may lurk for him at his drinking places. While drinking, some are always on guard. They never all drink at the same time.

To protect themselves from flies they often roll in the mud and let it dry on their bodies, but this is not generally practiced among them. When quenching his thirst the wild horse will take a few swallows of water, then fling up his head and look about him to see if anything is trying to creep up and spring on him. When done drinking, he usually whirls, as if under great nervous tension, and dashes away like a thundrebolt.

Wild horses do not always go to the same spring to drink. This is sort of an innate precaution observed by many wild animals. Having drunk their fill they usually stand, or lie, near the water-hole till about four in the afternoon when they move away to their feeding-grounds, and do not drink again till noon of the next day.

It is a very interesting fact that wild horses do not feed twice in the same direction from their springs. Today they move away to the west. Tomorrow they feed to the east, and so on. In this way they keep their range fresh all the time. The trails which come down to each watering-place always fade out a little way back on the slopes. These paths are made when the horses come in to drink, not when they leave the spring.

Wild horses always keep their feet in perfect condition. One never sees long, overgrown hoofs on the range, like those which develop in stalls. Just as a deer polishes his horns on the bushes to keep them sharp, a horse will travel just enough to keep his feet in good order.

There is a beauty and grace about a wild horse, and a pride of movement, with a bounding, unfettered spirit and redness of nostril and flashing of eye, which pass like a shadow when they are captured and ''broken.'' And though they may go wild again, after returning to their unfenced home, this beauty and spell never return to them. Once the withering touch of Man has reached them it never departs.

Wild horses have facial expressions, just like humans. Some are coarse, ugly, with sinister, inky eyes. Others are pretty, dainty, with the most lovely eyes and expression imaginable. They are also moved by the same feelings of attraction or repulsion which actuate us. Often, one sees cases of ''falling in love'' among them, in which a handsome young male and some dainty graceful female become deeply attached to each other, so that wherever seen they are together, and if separated in any measure they become frantic till they are reunited. These exhibitions of sentiment are very interesting as well as very beautiful.

Wild horse mothers are very devoted. When it is warm the colts lie at full length on the ground and sleep very soundly. Upon the appearance of danger the mothers seek to awaken them by touching them with their muzzles, or by quick, short little snorts. If this does not bring them up she will paw them with her foot. These colts are long-legged, and when very young will run with the ''band'' for several hours at full speed.

Also wild horses get homesick. If driven to a corral and finally mastered by rope and harness, they will seem to surrender to the inevitable, and to be content with their lot, but one should not be deceived by this seeming docility, for deep within him the wild horse retains a clear recollection of the old range where he was born, and a changeless love for it, too, and some day he will go back.

Numberless cases are known where such horses have been taken hundreds of miles away only to come back at last. If the owner happens to be keen of eye, and to have a good understanding of wild horse nature, he may detect a pair of these exiles some day standing very close together, their heads in opposite directions. He will see them touch noses often, indulging in some mysterious communication. Also they will be to themselves, very watchful, and seemingly not in the least hungry. These are the symptoms of migration, and sometime that night they will vanish.

For, among many other things in the heart of a wild horse is home-sickness, and you may be sure he knows the way back. —Our Dumb Animals.

"THERE IS A MERIT IN IT"

There is merit in what?

There is merit in this ''Loyalty League'' which Dr. S. W. Taylor has labored so courageously to establish.

Now that Dr. Taylor has fulfilled his agreement with the committee to give full time for a stated period as promoter of the League, and has returned to his pastorate, the League enters a second stage in that it rests entirely with pastors and interested laymen and women to promote it.

Dr. Taylor, in his report in the HERALD of July 20th, gives interesting facts and figures as to the present status of the League, such as the number of pastor enrolled as members, the number of charges that have enrollments, etc. Would it be too much to set as our goal during the remaining four months until Conference to make it unanimous as to enrollment of pastors and pastoral charges? Would it be too much to set as another goal to get one thousand members by Conference? Think it over.

As president of the Board of Education I wish to express for the Board appreciation of Dr. Taylor's strenuous efforts; also of Lebanon church's generosity in releasing Dr. Taylor from pastoral duties for a stated period that he might give full time to this work. Also the Board appreciates the response of all who have become members, and all who have given time canvassing for members, and all that have given co-operation in any way.

It now remains for us as pastors and people to carry on, procuring new members, collecting and making regular monthly payments. Will pastors and local treasurers of this fund give careful attention to this last-named phase of the work.

More to follow.

T. M. JOHNSON, Pres. Board of Education.

TO GAIN FAITH

I suppose that if all the time I have prayed for faith were put together it would amount to months. I used to say, ''What we want is faith; if we only have faith, we can turn Chicago upside down,'' or rather right side up. I thought that some day faith would come down and strike me like lightning. But faith did not seem to come. One day I read in the 10th chapter of Romans, ''Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God.'' I had closed my Bible and prayed for faith. I now opened my Bible, and began to study, and faith has been growing ever since.—D. L. Moody.

OUR STORY PAGE

TO THE UTTERMOST

"I came home one night very late," says the Rev. Matthew Hale Smith, in his "Marvels of Prayer," "and had gone to bed to seek needed rest. The friend with whom I boarded awoke me out of my first refreshing sleep, and informed me that a little girl wanted to see me. I turned over in bed, and said:

" 'I am very tired, tell her to come in the morning, and I will see her.'

"My friend soon returned and said:

" 'I think you had better get up. The girl is a poor little suffering thing. She is thinly clad, is without bonnet or shoes. She has seated herself on the door-step, and says she must see you, and will wait till you get up.'

"I dressed myself, and opening the outside door I saw one of the most forlorn looking little girls I ever beheld. Want, sorrow, suffering, neglect, seemed to struggle for the mastery. She looked up to my face, and said:

" 'Are you the man that preached last night, and said that Christ could save to the uttermost?

" 'Yes.'

" 'Well, I was there, and I want you to come right down to my house, and try to save my poor father.'

" 'What's the matter with your father?'

" 'He's a very good father when he don't drink. He's out of work, and he drinks awfully. He's almost killed my poor mother; but if Jesus can save to the uttermost, He can save him. And I want you to come right to our house now.'

"I took my hat and followed my little guide, who trotted on before, halting as she turned the corners to see that I was coming. Oh, what a miserable den her home was! A low, dark, underground room, the floor all slush and mud—not a chair, table, or bed to be seen. A bitter cold night, not a spark of fire on the hob, and the room not only cold, but dark. In the corner, on a little dirty straw, lay a woman. Her head was bound up, and she was moaning as if in agony. As we darkened the doorway a feeble voice said: 'Oh, my child! my child! why have you brought a stranger into this horrible place?' Her story was a sad one, but soon told. Her husband out of work, maddened with drink, and made desperate, had stabbed her because she did not provide him with supper, that was not in the house. He was then upstairs, and she was expecting every moment that he would come down and complete the bloody work he had begun. While the conversation was going on the fiend made his appearance. A fiend he looked. A brandished the knife, still wet with the blood of his wife.

"The missionary, like the man among the tombs, had himself belonged to the desperate classes. He was converted at the mouth of a coal-pit. He knew the disease and the remedy—knew how to handle a man on the borders of delirium tremens.

"Subdued by the tender tones, the madman calmed down, and took a seat on a box. But the talk was interrupted by the little girl, who approached the missionary and said:

" 'Don't talk to father; it won't do any good. If talking would have saved him, he would have been saved long ago. Mother has talked to him so much and so good. You must ask Jesus, who saves to the uttermost, to save my poor father.'

"Rebuked by the faith of the little girl, the missionary and the miserable sinner knelt down together. He prayed as he never had prayed before; he entered and interceded, in tones so tender and fervent, that it melted the desperate man, who crid for mercy. And mercy came. He bowed in penitence before the Lord, and lay down that night on his pallet of straw a pardoned soul.

"Relief came to that dwelling. The wife was lifted from her dirty couch, and her home was made comfortable. On Sunday, the redeemed man took the hand of his little girl and entered the infant class, to learn something about the Saviour 'who saves to the uttermost.' He entered upon a new life. His change was thorough. He found good employment, for when sober he was an excellent workman; and next to his Saviour, he blesses God for the faith of his little girl, who believed in a Saviour able to save to the uttermost all that come unto God by Him."—Our Young Covenanters.

HOW LONG IT TAKES!

"Oh, I'm so hungry!" cried little Johnny, running into the house from play; "give me some bread and butter, quick!"

"The bread is baking, so you must be patient," said his mother.

Johnny waited two minutes, and then asked if it was done.

"No," answered his mother, "not quite yet."

"It seems a long while to make a slice of bread," said Johnny impatiently.

"Perhaps you don't know, Johnny, how long it does take," said his mother.

"How long does it take?" asked the little boy.

"The loaf was begun last fall"—Johnny opened his eyes wide—"it was in the making last winter, all summer; it could not be finished until the autumn."

Johnny was glad it was autumn if it took all that while, for so long a time to a hungry boy was rather discouraging.

"Why?" he cried, drawing a long breath.

"Because God is never in a hurry," said mother. "The farmer dropped the seeds in the ground in September," she went on to say, partly to make waiting time shorter, and more, perhaps, to drop good seed by the wayside; "but the farmer could not make them grow. All the men in the world could not make a grain of wheat, much less could all the men in the world make a stalk of wheat grow. An ingenious man could make something that looked like wheat, and at first sight you can hardly tell the difference."

"Put them in the ground and see," said Johnny.

"That would certainly decide. The make-believe wheat would lie as still as bits of iron. The real grain would soon make a stir, because the real seeds have life within them, and God only gives life. The farmer, then, makes neither the wheat nor the corn to grow; but he drops it into the ground and covers it up; that is his part, and then leaves it to God. God takes care of it. It is He who sets 'Mother Earth' nourishing it with warm juices. He sends the rain, He makes the sun shine, He makes the seed spring up, first the tender shoot, then the blades; and it takes May and June and July and August, with all their fair and foul weather, to set up the stalks, throw out the leaves, and ripen the ear. If little boys are starving, the corn grows no faster. God does not hurry His work; but He does all things well."

By this time Johnny had lost all his impatience; he was thinking.

"Well," he said at last, "that's why we pray to God, 'Give us this day our daily bread'. Before now I thought it was you, mother, that gave us our daily bread; and now I see it was God. We would not have a slice if it were not for God, would we, mother?"—Publisher Unknown.

THE BOY WITH A CONSCIENCE

"A strange thing happened to me when I was a lad," said an old gentleman the other day. "When I was ten years old my father died and my mother was left with a large family to support. As soon as I was old enough, therefore, I had to find a job in a clothing store. The work was not hard, but there was one particular duty that troubled me. A wealthy old customer of the firm I was working for had a curious habit of keeping a bottle of whisky and a glass in my corner of the store. He apparently found it convenient to come and have a quiet drink in our place instead of going where whisky was sold. It was my duty to get the bottle and glass out for him and put them away. Well, my mother had brought me up tee-total, and this task was not a bit to my liking. It got properly upon my conscience that I was helping this old fellow to get further into the grip of his bad habit. I knew he was too big a customer for my firm to offend, but at last, plucking up courage, I went to my boss and told him I wouldn't serve this whisky any more. 'My conscience,' I said, 'would not allow me to help any one to drink.' He was very angry and said, 'See here, my boy, you are just trying to be impudent.' 'No, I'm not, sir,' I replied, 'but I don't feel it is right for me to do it.'

" 'No one stays in my business who does not obey orders,' he cried in a rage. 'You may get your pay and leave at the end of the week.'

"Knowing how my mother was struggling, my heart sank at that news. When I got home, I explained to her. She sighed and said, 'You did quite right, my boy. I wouldn't have you disobey your conscience for all the money in the world. It will be all right.'

"At the end of the week I was dismissed with my pay, but to my astonishment, my master was quite kind. 'I can't keep you here,' he said,' but I admire your pluck and before you go I want you to choose a new suit as a present from me.' My leave-taking was quite cheerful after that, but something else was to happen. I had not taken a dozen steps from the clothing store before a chemist whose shop was next door called out to me. 'Come in here, lad,' he said, leading the way into his. 'Do you want a job?' I was too astonished to answer. 'I have heard,' he said, 'that you are leaving next door because you have got a conscience. Is that true?' I explained the circumstances to him, whereupon he exclaimed, 'Well, that kind of fellow is needed in our business. You cannot have too much conscience in a chemist's shop. Some one's life might depend upon it.'

"By this time I had recovered my wits. 'I will be glad to come, sir,' I said, 'and I will do my best.' Then I took this wonderful bit of news home to mother. The tears stood in her eyes as she said, 'I knew you would be all right, my lad, though it is not often that God sends His rewards quite so quickly. But your new master is right, we cannot have too much conscience in every-day life, there is too little of it these days.'

"And I felt it worth remembering after that that for every man who finds a boy with a conscience awkward, there is another who will thank God for him and find him useful because trustworthy. How is your conscience? 'Alive and kicking,' I hope as they say."—The New Chronicle.

MABEL'S THANK OFFERING

"O mamma," said Mabel one morning, "I want a nickel just so bad!"

"What would you do with it, my dear?" questioned mother.

"I'd buy some of those nice chocolates I saw in Mr. Seyb's restaurant yesterday," replied Mabel. "They did look so good!"

"Well, since my little girl has helped her mamma so well this morning, she shall have the nickel.'

Mabel jumped up and down with delight, and in a few moments she was hurrying up the street with the money tightly clasped in her right hand. When she returned, her face was all aglow, but she had no chocolates.

"Why, Mabel, where's your candy?" asked her mother. "You surely saved mamma a piece?"

"I didn't buy any, mamma," explained Mabel, her cheeks dimpling with a smile. "Just before I got to the restaurant I came up to a blind man standing on the street, begging. I heard him say: 'O God, if I could only see Your beautiful world, how happy I would be!' Then I thought of what our teacher said. She told us to give a thank offering this week to some one who did not have some blessing we had, so I just dropped the nickel into his cup. When he thanked me somehow I had such a sweet, good feeling in my heart that I did not want any chocolates."

Mabel's mother could not help but kiss her happy little girl, and tell her how glad she was that she had made the thank offering.—Publisher Unknown.

JUST TRUST HIM

The converted African has a wonderful way of expressing some things they read out of the Word. Where we read from the Psalms, "My times are in Thy hands," the black man translates, "All my life's whys, whens, and wheres and wherefores are in God's hands." A good translation, is it not? We have learned a precious lesson when we can "just trust Him" under every circumstance.—The Pentecostal Evangel.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

INDIA

The Critical Situation of our India Work as Revealed in the Following Communication Recently Received from Rev. Paul Cassen

"We now turn to the mission and its needs, and here the situation is appalling. On May 1 I discharged three field men and one teacher thus making the financial demands of the Boys' school less for the future by a 10 per cent cut. I had received the Government Grant for the upkeep of the school. The grant is a yearly one and it paid in April, so that I was able to meet practically all of the school obligations for the month both to workers and bills for food for the Boys' school with that money.

Miss Miskimen was barely able to do the same for the Girls' school out of the grant money, but since her grant was less than ours, she is further in debt than we are in the Boys' school. When she heard about the possibility of having to wait two months for the money, she could not contain herself, and just gave way to tears.

Mr. Minnis had to sell the horses, much needed for the district evangelistic work, on the first of April, in order to pay the workers in his two departments of the evangelistic work and the farm. He had no money to pay off on the first of June and what the poor people are going to do I cannot say.

We have cut down on the work as far as we are able without closing down altogether, and we feel that unless the Board can do something more for us very soon that our work will be seriously crippled. I have cut the Boys' school as far as possible, for if I have to dispense with the services of any more teachers the school will not be able to function at all. We have a lot of children who are absolutely dependent on the mission. We simply cannot turn our orphan children out. We must do for them if we can do nothing else. So far as I am personally concerned, we have reached the ilmit. We are looking to the Board to tell us a way out of our difficulties. We feel that the recent Board meeting has found a way out and we are banking our hopes on the report of that meeting."

This is appeal enough for our North Carolina people to rally to the appeal to raise $1,000 for Brother Minnis' salary. If the Board of Missions is without funds to carry on the work, our own people must come to the rescue. Put yourselves in the position of our missionaries in India, and "do unto others as ye would they should do unto you."

Gillburg Daily Vacation Bible School, Vance, 27 pillow cases, ten toy baskets, three pieces of plastic work, and $2.00 in cash as reported above.

Enfield, by Mrs. O. E. Peeler, two coats, two dresses, two shirts, two pair pants and one suit underwear.

We are thankful for all the above gifts. We are so glad the Herald force could have a week's vacation. Because of that and because of our own vacation, our report this week covers nearly three weeks.

Please Note

If the church and Sunday school offerings for the Home this year come anything like up to other years the offerings for August, September and October must be stressed a bit. During late August or early September we must put in two car loads of coal, and at the middle of Sepember we must start about 100 children to school. All parents with children know what that means. Please come to our aid. We hope every Sunday school in the conference will respond with a monthly of-

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

West Forsyth.—Our revival meeting began at Baltimore church on Sunday, July 23, and closed the following Friday night. Rev. J. P. Pegg, pastor of Glen Raven charge, arrived in time to preach his first sermon on Sunday night. He preached at all of the services during the remainder of the meeting. We had large congregations for every service. The day services were well attended, there being as many ae 125 persons present, while the night services were largely attended, the church being filled at each night service. Rev. Pegg seemed at his best in his preaching, and his sermons were interesting and uplifting. They were comparatively brief, no sermon being over 29 minutes, and the shortest being sixteen minutes.

While the results of the revival meeting were not what we expected, there were three professions and four additions to the church. One elderly woman, Mrs. Sarah Hutchins, was among those uniting with the church, coming from the Baptist denomination. The others were young girls, Ruby Hutchins, Ola May Bruce and Bertrice Smitherman. The attendance was better than last year, according to some of the members.

Our next revival meeting will be at Union Hill church, beginning the second Sunday in August. Rev. L. W. Harkey, of the Northern Metahodist church, will be my help.

Appointments for next Sunday will be at Baltimore church at 11 a. m., and at Stony Knoll church at 3 p. m. The pastor will administer the ordinances of baptism at the Yadkin river near highway No. 60 following the service at Stony Knoll, when three members of Stony Knoll church will be baptized by immersion. C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Pleasant Grove.—Silence on the part of the reporter is no indication that our church is dead. Our Sunday school is growing, new members are being added. Our faithful Superintendent, Mr. Clyde Payne, has been working hard for the upbuilding of the school and that is what we all want is to see the school grow spiritually as well as in number.

The members of the church have just put down a new carpet on the floor of the church which adds very much to the interior.

Our pastor, Rev. D. R. Williams, has been in bad health for some time. We pray if it be God's will, that he be restored to health.

Our revival meeting has just closed. We feel that our church has been greatly revived. Dr. Taylor from High Point was the pulpit help. He brought to us some real soul-stirring messages that came from the Throne of God. On Friday afternoon the first week of the meeting, Dr. Taylor gave a special message to the children. The children seemed to thoroughly enjoy it and so did the messenger. He used for his subject, the Parable of Jesus feeding the Five Thousand. We feel like this was one of the best services of our meeting for the children are the bright hope of the future. At the close of this service he asked all the children that were willing to give Jesus their eyes, mouth, ears, tongue, hands, heart and feet to stand up and all that had not done so before stood up and seemed to be deeply interested in the upbuilding of God's Kingdom. As a result of the meeting nine were added to the church roll.

The members pledged themselves anew to fight the battle of sin and to stand by the church and work harder for the advancement of God's Kingdom.

Words won't express how much we appreciate Dr. Taylor for his wonderful messages, and the work that he did during our revival. But we want to say Thank You and God Bless You.

On Wednesday night, July 26, we held our third quarterly conference. Mr. Homer Veach was elected delegate to the Annual Conference this fall.

The Ladies' Aid society will meet Wednesday afternoon, August 9, with Mrs. A. L. Cecil in High Point. REPORTER.

Calvary, Greensboro,—When this appears in print I shall be, thanks to the action of the quarterly conference, enjoying a vacation with my family at our shack at Weaverville. The folks told me to take the month of August off if I wanted to. But I don't want to. I shall be back for the fourth Sunday in August.

The quarterly conference also voted to ask our superannuates to supply the pulpit in my absence. And they have all consented to do so. The schedule is as follows: August 6, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk; August 13, Rev. T. F. McCulloch; August 20, Rev. W. F. Ashburn. Rev. T. F. McCulloch will have charge of all the services, but will preach only once. There will be no evening services during the month of August.

Our special meeting is planned for ten days beginning on the Wednesday before the second Sunday in September (Sept 6.) and continuing through the third Sunday. Rev. R. A. Hunter is to assist. We are hoping and praying for a good meeting.

I am taking the opportunity of thanking all the friends, within and without the charge I serve, for their interest and prayers for Mrs. Bates' recovery. She has done remarkably well. The doctor has ordered her to rest for a couple of months. Part of that time will be spent at Weaverville.

The work is making fair progress. The congregation last Sunday night was one of the best in a long time. C. W. BATES.

Spring Hill, North Davidson Charge.—The annual revival meeting was held on the week following the third Sunday in July. Rev. Hill of English Street church, did the preaching during this meeting. Rev. Hill is an old time preacher and preaches in the old-time way. This was surely an old-time revival. His massages were very uplifting. One very interesting sermon was on the subject "When God's Troubles Will End," using as the text, "When the Son of man shal come in His glory and all the holy angels with Him; then shall He sit upon the throne of His glory; and before Him shall all nations be gathered"—Matt. 25:31,32. God's troubles will end when the text comes to pass. In this message he pictured every one at the Judgment standing before God waiting for his destination. We shall at this time be fearing or be joyful, according to the way we have prepared. Another subject he preached on was "The Father's Will and His Executor.'' The Father has willed us all a home in heaven and the Son is the executor of this will. If we go in Christ's pathway, we will receive the will and if we don't we lose it.

There were 14 conversions during this meeting. The doors of the church will be opened on the first Sunday evening in August for the reception of members.

Words cannot express our appreciation to Rev. an d Mrs. Hill for their work and fellowship during the week. We appreciated the presence and prayers of every one during the meeting. REPORTER.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—The third quarterly conference was held at Fairview church last Saturday afternoon. Mr. Wilburn Smith, of Fairview church, has been elected to represent this charge at the Annual Conference and Mr. H. R. McClimon, alternate.

The singing the third Sunday I am sure was enjoyed by all who like good singing.

The Ladies' Aid society met at the home of Mrs. B. A. McClimon last Thursday. The topic for the afternoon was "Friendliness." After the meeting a social hour was enoyed and cake and ice cream was served by Mr. B. A. McClimon and Mrs. H. R. McClimon. The next monthly meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. W. R. Harrison. The subject will be "Giving."

Many friends of Miss Lucille Davis, who underwent an operation in the General hospital at Spartanburg, Monday, July 17, will be pleased to learn she is recovering satisfactorily. Lucille was at church Sunday, but was taken Monday morning, and was operated on Monday night. We earnestly hope that her recovery will be rapid and that she will soon be able to attend church services.

Remember our revival services start the thirteenth of August. May it be successful.

Mt. Lebanon, Randleman.—Sunday school attendance at Mt. Lebanon continues to be good. The collection is also on the up and up. Our pastor, Rev. J. B. Trogdon preaches excellent sermons and church attendance is also good.

The Ladies' Aid society met Thursday evening with the President, Mrs. L. B. Von Cannon. Twelve members were present at the meeting. This is a very active organization and is doing splendid work.

Last Sunday evening the Children's Day program was given. The church was beautifully decorated and the program was very artistically rendered. Mrs. J. B. Trogdon, Misses May Caudle and Inez Trogdon deserve very much credit for their untiring efforts in coaching the children. Especially good was the song and march, "We'll Do Right Instead of Wrong," and the pageant "Hillside of Blessing."

The collection amounted to $15.00, most of which was collected by the children.

Mrs. Trogdon offered a little token of reward to the child bringing in the largest amount of money. Little Lucile Daniel was the winner. Lucile was all smiles when she received her gift. She is to be commended. May she continue to work.

The third quarterly conference was held at New Salem Saturday afternoon.

Home Coming Day was observed at Level Cross Sunday. In the morning the children gave an excellent program. The afternoon was given over to special singing. Talks by former members of the church were also enjoyed. The pastor made a very impressive talk on the subject, "What Will You Do With Your Life?"

Revival services began at Worthville Sunday evening. It is hoped that these meetings will be well attended and that much good will be done.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Circuit. — Sunday, July 23, was a good day for us. Our pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams, gave us a splendid sermon. A very good congregation was present. The Lord's Supper was omitted.

Sunday school seems to be moving along very nicely, but it would be lots better if parents just would go to Sunday school and carry their children more.

Our revival meeting will begin the fourth Sunday in August. Christian people pray for this meeting to be the best that has been here in many years.

The Ladies' Auxiliary met after preaching service with 15 or 20 present; a good report from each circle was had.

The rock masons will soon have the church underpinned. It is greatly improving the appearance of the church and grounds.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Union Grove Church, Mocksville Charge.—Our superintendent, Mr. Blain Madison, has returned from school, we certainly are glad to see him get back. Mr. Clay Madison is leaving our community where he has obtained work. We're sorry to see him have us but wish him great success.

Mr. Clay Madison delivered a wonderful message last Sunday evening. Our pastor had to be absent and Mr. Madison filled his appointment.

Our C. E. elected a new president, Miss Lois White. Our Christian Endeavor is very successful, but we hope it wil be better in the future.

Our Sunday school is successfully rallying on. It has selected a general theme for all the classes to work toward. And under this theme each class has taken a subject for its class work.

May we all be happy in Jesus Christ.

Gideon Grove, Flat Rock Circuit.—The revival services were held beginning the second Sunday in July. The pastor, Rev. J. R. Hutton, preached two splendid sermons on that day, and a large crowd was present. Rev. J. M. Morgan of Concord came Monday and did the preaching during the week. We were sorry that on account of sickness the pastor could not be with us for all of the services. But we were glad to have him return very much improved on Friday. The services which were well attended by good crowds came to a close on Friday night.

Mr. Morgan did splendid preaching and the people of the church were very grateful to hime for the good sermons, and faithful services he rendered in our midst during the week. We hope that it will be possible to have him with us again. There were several professions and two expressed a desire to join the church. They with others who wish to unite with the church will be received on the next second Sunday at regular preaching services.

The Children's Day services were rendered on the second Sunday in June at 10 o'clock. Under the direction of Mrs. R. W. Pegram, Misses Virginia Lemons and Grace Angel. The program was well rendered by the children, and was inspiring and helpful to the older people. Much credit was due both to the children and to the committee.

The Sunday school under the direction of the Superintendent G. A. Middleton is in session each Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock. The attendance was very good.

The Woman's Auixiliary meet on Monday nights after each second Sunday. The next meeting will be held with Mrs. S. G. Lemons.

It was inspiring to have so many visitors during the revival services and we want to extend an invitation to them to visit us at any time.

Rev. Paul Pegg, a former pastor of this circuit, but now of Glen Raven, was a visitor in the community and attended two services during the revival. Mr. Pegg and family are remembered very kindly here and their visits are always welcomed.

We are having a good revival in our village conducted by Rev. Erickson. Many souls are benig blessed.

We are glad to report that Brother C. H. Hil of High Point will be with us the 29 and 30 to preach for us. We go to the M. E. church Sunday night, July 30. Hollister.—We are still in existence even though we do not report very often. Pastor Fogleman brought us a very interesting message Sunday morning. The text used was Romans 14:17, "For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." After the sermon, the Lord's Supper was administered. We were pleased to see so many people partake of this service. The attendance was fairly good at both Sunday school and preaching service Sunday morning.

Class No. 3 of our Sunday school is planning to go on its annual picnic Wednesday, July 26, at Balanced Rock, near Henderson, N. C. Mrs. E. T. Ellington is teacher of this class. We are hoping to have Mr. and Mrs. Fogleman to go with us on our picnic.

Hollister Woman's Auxiliary held its regularly monthly meeting at the parsonage on Tuesday, July 11, 1933, with Rev. and Mrs. Fogleman as host and hostess. The meeting was presided over by the President, Mrs. Mae Alston. A very interesting meeting was held and enjoyed by all present. After the program and business part of the meeting our hostess served delightful ice cream and cake. During the social hour the host took all the members out and let them inspect his watermelon patch and garden. They all made favorable reports. Mr. Fogleman said Sunday that he had weighed one of the largest melons and that it weighed approximately 43 pounds. He is a good farmer as well as a good preacher.

Our revival meeting will begin the fourth Sunday in August with two services on Sunday and dinner on the grounds. We are hoping to have a great "revival" in our church and community.

Rev. and Mrs. Fogleman were dinner guests in the home of the writer on Sunday.

We are hoping that some of our people can attend the District Rally next Sunday at Hawkin's Chapel church.

We are expecting Dr. R. M. Andrews to be with us on the first Sunday evening in September and to conduct service for us at 7:30 o'clock. We hope to have a large congregation out to hear him.

Asheville.—Our Vacation Church school was brought to a most successful close on Friday evening, July 28, with a commencement exercise in which sixty-one certificates were awarded. There had been an enrollment of 101 students, but only students having regular attendance were given certificates.

The success of the school rested largely upon the fact that there was an excellent corp of teachers. Miss Verda McIntire acted as dean and instructor of music. She was assisted by Miss Elizabeth Shoenfelt of Altoona, Pa. Mrs. E. A. Bolick, Miss Josie McNeill and Mrs. Patterson taught the beginners, while Mrs. C. B. Baker guided the work of the primary department. Miss Nancy Clouse taught the junior girls and Mr. Carroll instructed the junior boys. The intermediates were under the leadership of Miss Margaret Fawcett.

Following the excellent commencement program, Mrs. J. A. McIntire assisted by Mrs. G. M. Foster and Mrs. C. C. McNeill, served punch to all those in attendance. On Thursday evening of the second week the entire school was served with a watermelon treat. On Monday those students who have perfect attendance records will be given an additional party at Acton Park.

First Church, Thomasville.—A large crowd was present at First M. P. church Sunday for the annual Home Coming. This day has proved to be one of the outstanding events of the church calendar. A very interesting program was presented in the morning with J. Clyde Auman, of Graham, delivering the Home Coming address. Mrs. Auman also spoke to the ladies during the Sunday school hour.

A special feature of the day was the very sumptuous dinner spread on long tables at the noon hour.

The high spots on the afternoon's program included the church's history, by Mrs. A. H. Ragan, and remarks by Rev. Edward Suits, first pastor of the church; Rev. George Reynolds, Rev. Fred Surratt, Rev. T. G. Madison, present pastor; D. R. Connell, superintendent of the church, and Ralph Vance of High Point. Special music for the occasion was furnished by quartettes and duets, selected.

The Summer Vacation Bible school which has been in progress in this church for the past two weeks, came to a close Sunday night. The sponsors of the school are proud of the fact that around 75 young boys and girls attended each day's session. The Beginners' department was in charge of Mis Virginia Tyson Jarrett; the Junior department was under the direction of Miss Ollie Mae Howard, girls; and Mrs. Fleet Madison, boys; The Senior girls were under the instruction of Miss Pauline Bailey, while the boys were under the leadership of Rev. T. G. Madison. A splendid study and meditation was participated in throughout the two weeks, and the church feels deeply grateful to these able young instructors for their faithful and splendid service, which made possible the success of the school.

The graduation exercise took place Sunday evening at 8:00 o'clock. Each teacher of the department gave a review of the work carried on in his or her class, and the Beginners and Juniors gave a program including readings, songs, memory work, and stories. The Seniors presented a mission pageant entitled "The Challenge." The spirit and effectiveness of this pageant brought to the minds of the people the call for missionary work, and the significance of "Go ye into all the World."

Mrs. Carl Lloyd is satisfactorily recovering at her home following a recent operation at the City Memorial hospital.

The Ladies' Auxiliary will meet Thursday, August 8, with Mrs. Charles Witty.

The Young People's class will give a lawn party at the church on August 12. The public is invited. The proceeds will go for the benefit of the church.

Many are planning to attend the Sunday School Convention at Coble's church on August 10.

The church is planning a Home Coming Day in September the date to be announced later.

The annual meeting will commence the fourth Sunday in this month. All day services will be held on Sunday with dinner on the grounds. May God bless the Herald and its readers.

Kannapolis.—We are indeed thankful for the blessing the Master has given (and continues to give) us. The saying is really true, "A Continuance of Prayer Changes Tings." He also tells us "Where two or three are gathered together in his name he will be with them," and we feel that we have that many or more.

But while He is blessing us we are hoping and praying for the entire conference and out in all the world that this year will be one to be long remembered as a financial and spiritual gain and we trust that the entire conference membership is with us in this prayer.

Our pastor is doing some fine work with the co-operation and support of the members and community. We are to commend him on his interest of the church and pray that he may never fall short of his duty to the Lord.

We have organized a Tithers' League. Several have joined but the list is not completed yet; the names will be mentioned later. We are also making an effort to get new song books.

We are sorry indeed that the pastor's sister, Miss Gladys Morris, had to leave us. She left here to go home to teach but we hope she remembers us daily in prayer as I am sure that she has a part of our prayers.

On Saturday evening, July 29, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Marlow were hosts to the former's junior and intermediate C. E. classes at their home on North 8th Street, to a social. After an hour of fun, several contests and games were enjoyed. Delicious refreshments consisting of mixed cakes and ice cream were served by Mrs. Marlow, Mrs. Frankie Widenhouse and Mrs. W. I. Kiser.

After the fun and display of gifts the guests were invited to the dining room. A beautiful table arranged with mixed garden flowers, was loaded with delicious eats consisting of cantaloup, cake and lemonade. It was then announced that Mrs. Mary Smith, sister of Mrs. Weaver was sharing the honor with her as they were celebrating their birthday anniversary. There were 40 present to view the gifts and 17 gifts were presented.

The Ladies' Aid Circles Nos. 1 and 2, through the untiring help of Mrs. N. F. Harris have purchased new silverware and a tea kettle for the parsonage which was greatly needed and appreciated. As the time is drawing near the close of another conference year, we are hoping, trusting and praying that everybody will keep their shoulder to the wheel and our eyes toward God and prove to be worth-while in the upbuilding of His Kingdom.

First Church, High Point.—At a congregational meeting following services on Sunday, July 23, Mr. J. H. Everhart was elected delegate to the Annual Conference at Thomasville next November.

A large number of students of High Point College were saddened to learn of the tragic death by drowning of Miss Eva Spencer and here sister, Miss Anna Spencer, in a small lake at Mt. Pleasant, six miles from Greensboro on Saturday, July 22. The girls were attending a picnic, and went swimming, when the younger sister, Miss Anna, stepped in water over her head, and Miss Eva went to her rescue, but both were drowned. This deplorable accident cast a gloom of sadness over the community, where they were popular and well loved. The attendance at the funeral on the following Sunday was estimated at 2,500 persons. Miss Eva would have been a Senior at High Point College next September; she was popular and highly esteemed by her teachers and fellow students. Dean P. E. Lindley represented the faculty at the funeral services, and assisted at the last rites.

Holy Communion was observed last Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The third quarterly conference convened on Wednesday evening, July 26. During the absence of the pastor on his annual vacation, the pulpit will be supplied by different ministers to be announced later.

Congratulations are extended to Mrs. J. C. Welch, Sr., upon reaching her 80th milestone on Sunday, July 30, and this interesting event was celebrated by a delightful dinner given in her honor by her daughters, Misses Ruth and Elizabeth Welch, at the home, 630 N. Main St. Mrs. Welch is unusually well preserved and active, and countless friends send best wishes for many happy returns of her birthday to this popular and beloved matron, who with her husband, J. C. Welch, Sr., was a charter member of First Church.

Miss Anne Robbins has returned home from a visit of a week to friends in Columbia, S. C.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Gibson have moved to Durham to make their home. Prior to their departure, her sister, Miss Margaret Snipes, entertained for her at her home on Steele St. Many friends regret to lose these young people from the church and city. Mrs Gibson was Lois Snipes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Snipes, prior to her marriage a year ago. From childhood she has been an active worker in the Sabbath school and C. E. society.

Alson Gray, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Gray, is spending two weeks in Chicago at the World's Fair.

After spending two weeks at Myrtle Beach, S. C. with friends from Lenoir, where she taught in Davenport College last year, Miss Claire Douglas has returned home and in a few weeks will leave for Lees-McRae Institute, where she will teach and serve as Dean of Women for the coming school year.

Sunday afternoon Rev. R. I. Farmer, his two children, Mary Elizabeth and Joseph, and his niece, Miss Helen Johnston, left by motor for Denison, Ohio, where they will spend a month as the guests of relatives. Rev. Mr. Farmer, according to annual custom, is taking his vacation during the month of August. Mrs. Farmer expects to return home from Tucson, Arizona, next October.

Prof. Ernest B. Stimson and sister, Miss Kathleen, left a week ago for their old home in Statesville where they will reside. For five years he has been the popular and proficient head of the music department of High Point College, and has played the organ and directed the choir at First Church. He and his sister have greatly endeared themselves to the church people, the faculty and the students of the college, and the citizenry of High Point generally, and they will be sadly missed from our midst. The love and best wishes of a host of friends follow them to Statesville, where Prof. Stimson will teach music in Mitchell College.

We are pained to announce that Capt. A. M. Rankin does not improve, and will be taken to Guilford General hospital again the latter part of this week. He is still suffering from his eye.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander M. Rankin, Jr., have returned from a stay at Morehead City.

Lebanon Church, High Point. — Sunday school attendance last Sunday was 219. The work in all departments is progressing in a very satisfactory manner. The Woman's class, Mrs. J. W. Montgomery, teacher, has challenged the Men's class, Dr. S. W. Taylor, teacher, to try for 100 per cent attendance during the month of August. The challenge was unanimously accepted. May every member of these classes take notice of this and show his loyalty to his class and church. It would be very gratifying, indeed, if both classes would win. That is possible, of course, in event that every member is present every Sunday. But, in case of an absence, one will be a loser. It is hoped that in this attendance interest will hold good for the preaching service, also.

Our pastor delivered a splendid sermon last Sunday at 11:00 o'clock on the Parable of the Talents, found in the 25th Chapter of Matt. In this message he emphasized the importance of national industrial and social righteousness. Christ is counting on us for a life that will count for Him.

Our congregation has voted to give the pastor a little vacation in the way of a few services off by leaving off evening services for the month of August.

On next Sunday morning there will be another of those fine little four-minute sermons to children just before the usual sermon at 11:00 o'clock. Will all parents please remember this and see that the boys and girls remain after Sunday school?

We regret the illness of some of our members. Mrs. John Reddick underwent a serious operation in Guilford General hospital a week ago. She is reported as resting verp satisfactorily.

Mr. Guy Lee is also in the same hospital, having been operated on for appendicitis about a week ago. He is getting on very nicely, we are so glad to learn.

Miss Betsey Neal Hammer, of Gibsonville, is visiting her grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Guyer, on Route 1.

That Cloth

Some of you are going to send some cloth for girl's dresses and underclothing. Please do it quickly as most of this sewing must be done before the schools start.

Thank You

Several people have kindly given a number of our children an outing from the Home of from one to two weeks this summer. We greatly appreciate this and the children have greatly enjoyed it. More later, when all the children are back. Thank you and God bless you.

Yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON, Superintendent.

P. S.—Please gather and send to Mrs. A. G. Dixon all the Octagon coupons possible during the next three months. Those that are in and those sent during the next three months will count on the contest. A. G. D.

JOURNAL MONEY NEEDED

I have had an urgent letter from Brother Reiner asking for some money on our Journal account. The amount due him is $412.00. I have paid nothing on it. And nine months of the Conference year have passed. The money that came in earlier in the year is tied up in the North Carolina Bank. Fortunately it is not much. But very little has come in since. So little is on hand to meet the bill. Only 29 charges have paid for their Journals so far, just a little over a third. I am appealing to the pastors to send in the money they have received, so I can help Brother Reiner and discharge our obligation.

C. W. BATES, Secretary.

MONEY FOR THE CONFERENCE COUNCIL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

We are anxious to pay our subsidy fund to the Herald. We need money to carry on our program. Pastors, Sunday school Superintendents, and C. E. Presidents, please take this matter up with your schools and societies within the next week or two.

President of the Conference
Council of Religious Education.

MARRIED

Lewis-Hayes

A marriage of interest to a wide circle of friends, many of whom are readers of the Herald, was solemnized in the First Methodist Protestant church of Henderson Monday morning, July 24, at 10:00 o'clock when Miss Helen Hayes, of Henderson, became the bride of Mr. William Dunbar Lewis, of Atlanta, Ga., and of High Point.

Mrs. Lewis is the daughter of Mrs. John W. Hayes, Sr., of Henderson. She received her A.B. degree from High Point College a few years ago, and since then has been teaching in the Asheboro City school. Mr. Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Lewis, of High Point, attended school at both High Point College and Duke university. For the past two years he has been engaged in business and has recently been transferred to Atlanta, Georgia.

These are splendid young people. Both of them are thoroughly interested in the church and the things that make for the better life. We hope and predict for them a life of usefulness and happiness.

After a wedding trip through Western North Carolina they expect to motor to their new home at the Bonaventure Arms Apartments, 189 Ponce De Leon Avenue, N. E., Atlanta, Georgia. L. W. GERRINGER.

Dosier-Hayes

The marriage of Miss Charlotte Clinard Hayes, daughter of Mr. Horace B. Hayes, of El Paso, Texas, and the late Mrs. Hayes, to Mr. John Perry Dosier, son of Mrs. Mamie N. Dosier and the late Rev. John F. Dosier of Greensboro, was solemnized in a quiet ceremony at the First Methodist Protestant church in Asheville on July 12, at high noon. The pastor, the Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, college mate of the groom, officiated in the presence of a small company of close friends.

Miss Sue Underhill of Asheville, who was a schoolmate of the bride at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, was the maid of honor and only attendant to the bride. She was attired in white pique with matching accessories. Mr. Grover L. Angel of Mars Hill, college classmate of the groom, was the best man.

The bride wore a traveling costume in brown and white with white accessories. After the ceremony a luncheon for the bridal party was given at the George Vanderbilt hotel and later Mr. and Mrs. Dosier left by motor for a honeymoon of a week or more. Upon their return they will reside in Asheville.

Mrs. Dosier, who is a granddaughter of Mr. Frank Clinard of Hickory, attended the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina two years and then was graduated from the University of North Carolina in the class of 1931. She did graduate work at the university the following year and for the past year, has been clinical psychologist with the "Child City" orphanage at Mooseheart, Illinois.

Mr. Dosier was graduated from High Point College in 1930 and received his M.S. degree at the University of North Carolina in 1931. For the past two years he has been connected with the chemical laboratory of the American Enka Corporation. J. ELWOOD CARROLL.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Gibson

One of the oldest members of the Henderson Methodist Protestant church passed to his reward when Brother John W. Gibson died Sunday morning, July 23. He joined the Henderson church 37 years ago during the pastorate of Rev. T. M. Johnson, D.D., and when the late Rev. W. A. Bunch was President of the Conference. The testimony of his fellow church members is that he was a faithful members. For several months he had been unable to attend services. However, he kept the faith and went through the dark valley trusting in God.

He leaves his wife and one daughter, Mrs. W. E. Wood who mourn their loss but rejoice in his triumphant release.

Funeral services were held at the grave in the family cemetery about eight miles from Henderson Monday morning at 10:30 by the pastor.

Weatherly

On Sunday night, July 16, while we were all hushed in slumber shortly after the midnight hour, God sent His angel to claim for His own, Thomas Coe Weatherly, the loving affectionate husband of Mrs. Thomas Weatherly. We thought he was sleeping sweetly when he entered the portals of Heaven. His spirit had flown to God who gave it. We don't understand why the angel came and took him away from us so suddenly, for he was sick less than an hour, but sometimes we hope to understand.

He was a great believer in prayer and spoke so often of being prepared when the call came to go to the Great Beyond. He went about his work with a prayer on his heart, not only for himself but for those whom he loved so much. His kindly manner and sympathizing spirit many times was an inspiration to many of us to live better and nobler lives. He knew the joys and sorrows, hopes and fears and self-sacrifices of life. He will be greatly missed by his friends and relatives, but most by his wife because he was so devoted to her; always thinking of her and endeavoring to make her home life most pleasant. He always made friends easily and to know him was to have great admiration for him.

When a very small boy he professed faith in Jesus Christ and joined the Moriah Methodist Protestant church, where his membership was until death. Since he had been away from that community he worshipped the Lord here in the church in Greensboro.

The funeral was conducted at the home of his sister, Mrs. E. W. Teague, south of the city. Funeral was in charge of Dr. C. W. Bates, pastor of Calvary Methodist Protestant church, assisted by Rev. Charles Darsie, pastor of Elm Street Christian church. Burial was in the family plot at Green Hill cemetery.

Pallbearers were: Ed C. Kivett, Clay Taylor, John Williams, Lon Clegg, J. T. Soffey and Floyd Reynolds.

A fine tribute was paid to him not only by relatives and friends attending the funeral but by the lovely flowers, that they sent. He was a lover of flowers and only Sunday afternoon he gathered a bouquet for the home.

Mr. Weatherly was a son of the late Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Addison Weatherly. He is survived by his wife, the former Miss Pauline Wootton, two sisters, Mrs. Ernest W. Teague, Mrs. R. W. H. Stone of Greensboro and a brother, Carl Weatherly of Miami, Florida. The late Mrs. Talton W. Johnson who preceded him a few years was also a sister.

May this message console the bereaved and most devoted wife.

A MESSAGE FROM PARADISE

What if the clouds surround you,
You can the brightness see,
'Tis only just a little way
That leads from you to me.

You there—I here—though severed
We still at heart are one.
I only just in sunshine
The shadows scarcely gone.

I was so very weary,
Surely you could not mourn
That I a little sooner
Should lay my burden down.

Then weep not, weep not, my darling,
God wipes away all tears,
'Tis only yet a little while
Though you may call it years.

A FRIEND.

Causey

When the news came last Wednesday, July 19, that "Miss Jo," as we all knew her, had passed away, it came with mingled feelings of sorrow and relief. Sorrow that we had to give her up; relief that for her suffering was ended.

She was buried in the cemetery of Mount Pleasant church, the church of her childhood and young womanhood, the following afternoon. As the committal service was being conducted at the grave a gentle rain was falling, as indeed it had for a good part of the day. Some of us were distressed because it rained at such a time; but one of her loved ones said it was most appropriate—"Miss Jo" loved the showers.

A short service was held at 3:00 o'clock at the home, conducted by her pastor. This was followed by the service at the church where Revs. T. M. Johnson, T. F. McCulloch, and C. W. Bates took part.

It was my privilege as her pastor to pronounce the eulogy.

"Miss Jo" was a lover of nature. The poet has said of some that:

"To him who in the love of nature hold communion
With her visible forms she speaks a various language."

Certainly God spoke to her through the flowers of the woods and the mountains. During her illness her room was constantly filled with flowers; but those which pleased her most were the wild flowers, flowers that only God had made.

"Miss Jo" was a lover of folks. There is something beautiful about the clannishness of families; the mutual helpfulness and interest of the mefbers. "Miss Jo" belonged to such a family, and was a devoted member of it. But her interest did not stop with the members of the immediate family. She loved folks, and the circle of her friendship went far out. For 13 years she was a teacher in the Greensboro City schools. How many young people passed through her room during those years would be hard to estimate—scores of them at least. They came strangers to her, many of them. They soon became acquaintances. They left with an abiding friendship. And the same was true of all who came in contact with her through the years.

"Miss Jo" was a lover of the church. When I came to Calvary church almost six years ago, I found her teaching a Sunday school class, active in the Christian Endeavor society, a faithful attendant on the services of the church; always interested in its affairs. That interest never ceased.

"Miss Jo" has gone from us. She is out of our human sight, but she abides, and will continue to abide, in our memories. Why God should take one who was in the prime of her usefulness; who was filling so large a place in our lives, is a mystery we cannot fathom. We are comforted in the belief that He knoweth best.

May God bless and comfort and keep those who miss her so much in the home, the family, the school and the church.

"All ye who love me well, when I am dead
Look at my quiet face that laughed the while It lived. Restrain your tears, and give instead
A gentle word, an understanding smile.
Oh, if you really love me, do not cry
To see me lying there, my laughter stilled—
Surely you know that I can never die—
I for whom every day is strangely filled
With some sweet happiness. Gather me flowers
And pile them high for me to come and see—
They will remind my spirit of the hours
Of joy I spent on earth. Think of me free
Of body's pain, and you will find your grief
Changed to an overwhelming, sweet relief."

WORM-CATCHING PLANTS

Persons who may have thought that ferocious plants which capture and devour animals exist only in stories and the minds of their authors will be interested in a report by Dr. Charles Dreschsler of the Bureau of Plant Industry. These plants and their victims, he says, are so small as to be seen only through miscroscopes.

They form a jungle from which they extend their feelers or limbs to capture the small worm-like animals as they pass along. The plant then releases a chemical strong enough to quickly dispose of the unlucky prisoner.

EARTHQUAKE CAUSES UNKNOWN

Recent earth tremors have started a flood of inquiries as to the cause of earthquakes. There are many theories as to probable causes, such as explosions accompanying volcanic eruptions, avalanches or landslides, falling in of subterranean caverns, etc., but the principal one is believed to be the faulting or slipping of a great body of rock under the earth's surface.

The usual points of origin for such changes are estimated to be 10 to 20 miles below the surface. It was found out after the California earthquake in 1906 that along a certain known fault nearly 300 miles long, the strata had shifted from one to three feet, thus bearing out this theory.—Pathfinder.

* Subsidy paid in full.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

DOLLARS or DOTS?—WHICH?

The possibility that some churches and charges may have forgotten the classification into which they fall in the HERALD Subsidy scale prompts its presentation to refresh the minds of those who may not remember just the amount asked of their church toward the support and continuation of the HERALD.

Churches with less than 100 members contribute	$ 2.50
Churches whose membership is from 101 to 200	5.00
Churches whose membership is from 201 to 300	7.50
Churches whose membership is from 301 to 400	10.00
Churches whose membership is from 401 to 500	15.00
Churches whose membership is more than 500	20.00

A glance at table showing the receipts on Subsidy is convincing proof of the effectiveness of the plan. If your church or charge has not done its part, the doing of your bit will help to lift the load that crushes. The blank spaces in the Subsidy column are gradually diminishing. Let's put Dollars in the place of Dots!

INLAND WATERWAY OPENS

Another of the great dreams of pioneer Americans has at last come to pass. As much as 250 years ago men thought of an inland water route from the Gulf of Mexico to Lake Michigan. What a boon it would have been to transportation in those days when practically everything was shipped by water. Despite all our modern methods of transportation the need for such a waterway was strong enough to urge its completion—and at a cost of $105,000,000.

From the Gulf of Mexico boats could go up the Mississippi river, then up the Illinois river almost to Chicago on Lake Michigan. All that separated them was a 60-mile stretch of land between the Illinois river and the Chicago river. That doesn't seem like a great distance, but when you go to cut a canal, there are other things to figure besides distance. The great problem is the difference in altitude between the end of one canal and the other. In the case of the new Illinois canal there was 139 feet difference in altitude between the upper and lower end. The only way this difference could be taken care of was to build locks to lift or lower the freight boats. That's why the new canal has four powerful locks. But the entire new waterway is 96 miles long, including 36 miles of rivers and canals in and near Chicago.

Upon the recent completion of the canal Secretary of War George Dern and Speaker Henry T. Rainey of the House of Representatives flew from Washington to Chicago to participate in the dedication ceremonies, and witness the first four barges of north-bound freight towed into Lake Michigan. In just this manner millions of tons of cotton and other products of the Mississippi river states will now make their trip north, while Iowa, Illinois and Nebraska grain and Indiana steel will go south on return trips.

In his dedication speech Secretary of War Dern said: "The linking together of the lake cities of the North, and the gulf cities of the South, and the great cities of the interior should bring about a restoration of the economic parity of the Middle West with the rest of the country."—Pathfinder.

NEW ROAD LIGHT TESTED

Radical changes in highway lighting will soon be made if a new light recently demonstrated proves as good in practical use as it did in the tests. Inside the bulb is a small amount of neon gas and metallic sodium. As the filament is heated by the current the sodium is vaporized giving off a brilliant yellow light.

At first glance the new light appears dim compared to that of present types but actual seeing is made easier because of the absence of glare. The new sodium vapor light gives off but one color while daylight is made up of all colors. For this reason the new type lamp will probably be confined to the lighting of highways for the present where color discrimination at night is of smaller importance than the clear lighting up of objects. —Pathfinder.

VOLUME XXXIX GREENSBORO, N. C., AUGUST 10, 1933 NUMBER 37

The Case of Hannah

Reproach for Hannah's childlessness
 Pierced her to her deepest heart;
It daily came from neighbors near,
 Hurting like a fiery dart.

Her lot was sad and sadder still,
 Bearing mark of Heaven's will;
What God hath fixed is fixed to stay—
 Powerless men can't change His way.

But Hannah's faith triumphant rose,
 In boldness it approaches God;
For surely there is hope for her
 If in Aaron's budding rod.

Her program God in full approved—
 Gave her more than all she sought—
By her short-lived sacrifice
 Everlasting gain was bought.

Puzzles

For the past year or two jig-saw puzzles have been quite the fad for many people. The puzzle is made from a cardboard picture that has been cut into many different-shaped pieces and jumbled together. The game is to so re-arrange the pieces as to restore the picture. We have seen some players become worried and fretted because they could not solve the puzzle, and throw the part down, declaring someone had lost a piece, or it was not made right in the first place. They were quite sure it was the puzzle and not themselves that was wrong.

Is this not so with life in general? Our existence in the world seems jumbled like the pieces of the jig-saw puzzle, with some pieces that do not seem to fit in anywhere, and we feel like throwing life down in despair and blaming all on someone else, never stopping to think that we ourselves are more than likely to be the one in error.

Reasoning from the less to the greater, our personal experiences find us puzzled with the many tendencies and conflicting personalities in ourselves. Yet we have been given the full power whereby we may work out our salvation—setting our lives in that true relation with God and man that will make a picture like no one has ever seen before.

The parents of a family of children find themselves puzzled in trying to direct and adjust the different personalities found in the average home,—knowing that no two are alike. The pastor has to be tactful and patient with the many types and temperaments of his membership in order to keep "peace and harmony" on his charge.

The men who play the game of business and politics know how puzzling it is to arrange men in labor positions and political office.

Yes, everyone in his field of experience finds puzzles that seem unworkable, but such is not the case. Some worry and fret and quit because they cannot solve the puzzling things at a glance, or in their own way, and say, "It's no use to try—it can't be done," while there are others who are patiently and painstakingly solving them all.

Indifference

When we talk about sin, we naturally think of the sins of commission, such as lying, stealing, cursing, gambling, committing murder or adultery, etc. But there is a sin of omission for which the penalty is death.

Our Savior said when He compared men and women with trees: "Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire." Matt. 7:19. He also said to the dresser of the vineyard, "Behold, these three years I come seeking fruit on this fig tree, and find none; cut it down. Why cumbereth it the ground?" Luke 13:7. The slothful servant was condemned, not because he wasted his Lord's money, but because he failed to put it to use.

Several years ago when I was in the State of Mississippi I heard one employee say to another: "The boss is mad with me. I haven't done anything for him to be made with me about." The other employee, who seemed to understand, remarked: "That is just the trouble with you—you haven't done anything."

No doubt God is displeased with a number of us who belong to the church; not that we are committing some great sins, but because we are living careless, indifferent lives, and are doing comparatively nothing.

Undoubtedly the sin of indifference is doing more to hinder the growth and the success of the church than any other sin, not the indifference of the people out of the church, but indifference among members of the church.

We find a number of church members who are interested in clubs, secret orders, and other things, but are entirely indifferent toward the church for which Christ shed His blood, and which is the greatest institution in the world. If we love Christ, how can we be indifferent toward His church?

In Amos 6:7, He says: "Woe to them that are at ease in Zion." That means us, if we are indifferent toward His church and the salvation of those around us.

We find a number that are indifferent about some great moral question at stake because it does not affect them. We find a number of people who are indifferent about the efforts that are being made to repeal the 18th amendment of our Constitution. They say it will not hurt me or my family. They seem to forget that they are their brother's keeper.

Jesus says "He that is not for me is against me." We are on one side or the other. When we have the opportunity to oppose an evil, and fail to do so, we are consenting to the same.

It has been said that in most of the states that have recently voted wet that only about 35 to 60 per cent have gone to the polls to vote; and in states were 60 to 80 per cent have gone to the polls the wets have been defeated. Now if this statement be true, a number of states are going wet because so many of the dry forces stay away from the polls. Then what will you do about it? Will you be indifferent and let this evil flood our country and ruin our boys and girls? I think we all know what Christ would do about it if He were here. And I think we know what He would have us do about this question. May we pray much about this question and be willing to be led by the Spirit of Him who gave Himself for us.

The same may be said about all other moral questions. We can't afford to be indifferent, and we can't be neutral.

We are facing a crisis, a time when God needs men and women. He can't use indifferent folks to accomplish His purpose. God needs wide-awake, active, consecrated men and women who are not afraid to stand for the right—men and women like Daniel and others, who will stand for the right in the face of death.

"God give us more such men and women."

C. L. Spencer.

SOME THINGS REMAIN

Charles M. Melden

I have just passed the eightieth anniversary of my birth. Since 1875 I have been a licensed preacher in the Methodist Episcopal Church. If I were asked to preach an anniversary sermon I should take as my text "He hath founded it upon the seas, and established it upon the floods." My subject would be "Permanence in the Midst of Change."

I understand that these words, Psalm 24:2, originally were applied to the physical universe—at least to our earth. However, without violence they may be affirmed of the truths of revelation.

During the last fourscore years great changes have taken place in every field of human thought and endeavor. The discoveries of science, the inventions of genius, the results of exploration have modified and in many respects completely revolutionized our conceptions of the universe and man's relation to it. But it is wise to distinguish between reality and our conception of it. While the latter may change, the former remains unchanged. Truth abides like its Author immutable. It is the same yesterday, today, and forever.

For example, it is a far cry from the groping of ancient astrology to the magnificent adchievements of modern astronomy; but the stars are the same as when they sang together at creation's dawn or provoked the awe and admiration of the Psalmist. It is a vastly impressive change in our conception of the universe from the geocentric view of ptolemy to the heliocentric theory of Copernicus; but the sun is the same. It was and is the source of light and life to an otherwise dark and lifeless world.

Great changes have also taken place in our theological thinking. The heresy of yesterday is the orthodoxy of today. But we need to distinguish between our conception of truth and the truth itself. It is not affected by our changing views.

During the course of my rather long ministry, discussion concerning some of our doctrines has often been heated. Our scholars have differed widely in their interpretation of them. Nevertheless, the foundation of God standeth sure. The great fundamental truths are unmoved. They rise like mountain peaks from the turbulent seas. They are unshaken in the midst of the yeasting waters of controversy. Thus, the fact of God.

Men's conceptions have radically changed, but the fact that God is remains. Belief in the supernatural is inwrought into the very nature of men. It has assumed many strange and grotesque forms, but the belief is ineradicable. Whether it appears as the coarse animism of the savage or as the universal spirit of the Christian, faith in the supernatural abides.

Our thought has traveled far from the conception of Jehovah as the tutelary divinity of a tribe of escaped slaves through monotheism to the revelation of Him as the Father of all men. This is the highest conception of God thus far reached: it is doubtful if it is ever surpassed.

Men may philosophize concerning the divine nature, his absoluteness, his limitations, his immanence, and his transcendence, but beyond this relevation of God as Father, thought will not go.

As "Father," men need God today as perhaps never before. In the midst of ruined fortunes, loss of positions, financial and social disasters, personal bereavement and afflictions, men need the assurance of a Father's love and care; need to feel that in Him they have a refuge, a help in trouble. Humanism is a broken reed; it will not sustain the wounded spirit or comfort the breaking heart.

Another great truth of our religion which abides through the changing years is that Jesus, the Christ, is the Saviour of men. For nineteen centuries men have disputed concerning his nature and office. Some say he is Elias or John the Baptist or one of the prophets. But, irrespective of differing views concerning his person and mission, the fact remains that he wins men from a life of sin to a life of holiness.

Discussion may continue as to his supernatural birth, his literal resurrection, the reality and nature of his alleged miracles, but it cannot be denied that by inspiring personal loyalty to himself he saves men from the dominion of sin and establishes them in righteousness. In this he is unique.

Through all the changes of all the years it is also true that Christian experience remains an indubitable fact. Theory follows theory among psychologists, but, explain it as they will, it is true that the consummation of this personal relation to Jesus, the Christ, results in certain experiences, new, strange, precious. The subject of them is conscious of deliverance from the sense of sin, its guilt, the fear of its consequences. He is conscious of a new, strange, victorious power in his life. His loves and hates are changed. He triumphs over temptation, is comforted in sorrow, is buoyed up by a bright hope of immortality. He is a new creature.

The testimony to this experience is given by multitudes too wise to be deceived, too honest to deceive. It is clear, positive, unequivocal. It cannot be impeached.

If I were a young man, I would emphasize in my preaching these great truths. They never were needed more than today. I would leave my questionings in my study; in my pulpit I would preach a positive gospel.—Zion's Herald.

THE CHRISTIAN'S DICTATOR

If the noted tributes which have been paid Jesus Christ through the ages were collected in volumes there would be a library of surpassing interest. Balaam called Him a star, and Jesus called Himself the bright and morning star. Isaiah said, "You shall call his Name Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace." Heaven's tribute, "This is my beloved son, in whom I am well pleased." Nicodemus said, "Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God; for no man can do the signs, which thou doest except God be with him." Peter answered, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." I once heard Billy Sunday pay a gripping tribute to his Lord, as follows: "If I had it within my power to stack the mountains of the world, I would stack them all for a base for a throne for the Lord Jesus Christ."

Perhaps there is no more fascinating tribute paid our Lord than that one by His own mother, namely: "His mother saith unto the servants, Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it." It was the mother's will to make her Son dictator at the wedding feast. In feeling so, she sensed the need of the world. Paul Morrison, writing in the New York Christian Advocate, said: "The styles of government change about as often as the styles of clothing." History shows that the nations of the world have been ruled by Theocracies; Monorachs, absolute and limited; Republics, and the most popular type today is Dictatorship. God has given His own begotten Son to be the Dictator of the world.

This view of Christ may not sound so inviting to many who love liberty and enjoy independence; especially to those who have for their motto, "Nation without a king and a Church without a bishop." Perhaps all of us have made too emphatic the gentleness, meekness, lowliness, longsufferings, mercy, and goodness of Christ, as to overshadow the fact that He is also "The Lion of the tribe of Judah," and "The strong Son of God," to quote Lord Alfred Tennyson. He has all power in heaven and on the earth. He laid down in no unmistakable terms the conditions of discipleships, namely, "He that taketh not his cross and follow after me, is not worthy of me." Hear his final word to those who excused themselves for not attending the Great Supper: "None of those that were bidden shall taste of my supper." It is hoped that the turn toward distatorships in the world may result in a fuller realization of Christ's power.

Dr. E. Stanley Jones notes that nations accept dictatorships when they have lost confidence in governing themselves. Dictators usually appear in times of great crises, and are more or less temporary expedients. The people of this world were in a mess of sin when Jesus came, with the words of eternal life. Here the analogy between the dictators of the world stops. Jesus is no temporary expedient; but is the Christian's everlasting Dictator and Comforter, and the Sinner's Advocate. "Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it." He is the Christian's companion during his entire earthly pilgrimage.

All attempts to limit the dictation of Jesus to the higher realms fail. "If He is not Lord of all our lives, He is not of any," to quote Robert E. Speer. He has the final word on forgiveness in both precept and example. When the multitudes were hungry, He said, "Give ye them to eat." He never was silent to human needs. Whether we heed it or not, He has a word for us at every step of our lives. Paul's prayer should never be missing from our hearts: "Lord, what wilt thou have me do?" Taking orders from the Captain of our salvation guarantees success. Jesus is our unseen guest at every meal, our silent listener to every conversation, and our co-laborer in all our undertakings.

This may be too much meddling for some. We often hear it said: "I wish he would let so and so alone and preach the Gospel." Such objectors are usually guilty of some questionable practice that will not bear the light of the Christ. Paul wrote, "Let the peace of Christ rule (arbitrate) in your hearts . . . let the word of Christ dwell in you richly."

A HOBBY FOR YOU

To those in quest of an interesting hobby, may I suggest the writing of poetry? Not necessarily for financial gain, but for the sheer joy of weaving words into fascinating form.

The practical value of poetry is not generally appreciated. Many persons think of poetry as something sentimental, dreamy, intangible,—a balm or plaything for love-sick maidens, spinsters, and long-haired neurotics. There are many types of poetry, however, that can be turned to very practical use. The reading of a fine poem may entirely change one's mental outlook.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes once said that "Anybody can write poetry!" and whimsically added: "Come! Who will be my pupils in a course,—Poetry taught in twelve lessons?" He referred poets to the dictionary, where they could draw out words like fish from a pool—and summed up thus:

"Just so with your verse,—
'Tis as easy as sketching,—
You can reel off a song
Without knitting your brow.
As lightly as Rembrandt
A drawing or etching.
It is nothing at all, if you
Only know how."

THE EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT CAN BE SAVED

By LEIGH COLVIN

The Eighteenth Amendment can be saved if the Christian forces in the states yet to vote will renounce defeatism, and go to work with the earnestness and consecration which the crisis demands.

Although the wets have carried the states that have thus far voted, they are carrying them by a minority vote, most of them by a vote of from 27 per cent to 37 per cent of the numbers of voters who ordinarily vote.

In the days when the states were adopting Prohibition, and carrying Prohibition in 30 out of the 32 states in which buinding referenda were held, Prohibtion received the votes of about 55 per cent of all those who voted in the general elections, and the wets polled about 41 per cent. Now the wets are polling a still smaller percentage notwithstanding the fact that the state which have thus far voted include most of the wetter states of the Union.

The wets are voting, but the difficulty is that so many drys have been rendered indifferent by the continuous bombardment of wet propaganda that they are not going to the polls. The remedy is to overcome that indifference.

A second difficulty is that the present campaign is the most one-sided campaign in our history. The wets are pouring out millions to win, and have captured the political machines, whereas the drys seem transfixed by a spirit of defeatism and are handicapped by pitiably small funds.

Repeal can be defeated if a fighting spirit can be awakened, and extraordinary efforts put forth immediately. There are 20 to 23 states where there is yet a possibility of a majority vote against sanctioning the liquor traffic.

Repeal Will Destroy Constitutional Power

The dry voters need to be awakened to the fact that these elections are not like the old local option elections when if defeated in one election they could come back in the next. If defeated now we cannot re-enact National Prohibtion. Repeal would deprive the Federal Government of the power to prohibit. The Federal Government is a government of limited powers and in the absence of a Constitutional Amendment it would not have the constitutional power to prohibit or even regulate the liquor traffic. Furthermore the states separately cannot cope with the liquor traffic when it it legally entrenched in adjacent states.

Now or Never

The Christian forces should awaken to the fact that our generation is at stake. If the liquor power is re-entrenched in the revenue system and in politics, it will take defensive measures to prevent its being outlawed again for a long time to come. The history of the three great Prohibition waves of the Fifties, the Eighties and the Nineteens, shows that in each case after recession there was an interval of 30 years before the crest of the next wave. Those now of middle age should awaken to the prospect that if they do not fight and prevail now, when the Constitution is on our side, they are likely to go to their graves with America still in the grip of the legalized liquor traffic. They will have to spend the rest of their lives in an alcoholized society. They will have to endure a liquor environment. They will have to live in a period when the vision of the Kingdom will be darkened. The Christian message will wither if the soil is that of alcoholized brains. Christianity's influence on non-Christian lands will tumble if the foremost Christian nation surrenders to alcohol.

The menace of liquor's dominance in our Nation's life should stir the moral forces to unprecedented sacrifices to save America from such a calamity.

The Emergency Committee

The National Prohibition Emergency Committee, Investment Building, Washington, D. C., was set up by the combined church and dry organizations of the country to carry on a unified campaign to prevent repeal. In connection with this a campaign for quarters was instituted by the W. C. T. U., using the slogan, "No Quarter for the Liquor Traffic, Thousands of Quarters to Retain the Eighteenth Amendment." Most of the meager funds which have been sent to the campaign state came from these quarters. The campaign for quarters should be intensified through the co-operation of the churches and the W. C. T. U., but much more than quarters are needed to block the liquor power.

The Eighteenth Amendment can be saved by an aroused Christian Conscience and a widespread determination to do the extraordinary, the sacrificial.

THE SECOND STAGE

As already announced, the Loyalty League is in the second stage. That is, there is no one in the field to direct the work and to move it forward. It is for the pastors and local workers to do this, including the treasurer in each local church appointed to collect the monthly payments on pledges—a very important part of the work.

Some churches are now making the canvass. We hope in the near future to have good reports from these. Others report they are about ready to put on the canvass. Still others must be making preparation, unless they are so busy in the canvass that they do not have time to report—we have heard nothing from them.

How about it, pastors? Are we going to make it unanimous by the time Conference meets? Will you individually make it unanimous so far as your part goes?

T. M. JOHNSON.

FOR THOSE WHO FAILED

I remember a flash of righteous indignation that swept over Dr. Scofield's face once as he said, "People talk about the bird with the broken wing—'The bird with the broken pinion never soars as high again.' As though we did not all have a broken wing! For most of us both our wings are broken, and both legs, and our necks!"

The bird without a broken pinion is never going to know victory. One qualification you must have for the victorious life is the broken pinion, the broken nature, uttermost weakness. God makes no offer of victory to people who have not failed and failed utterly. But for sinners He has a Gospel. —Milk of the Word.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

October, Pay-up month

Second Sunday in October, Rally Day, Promotion in Sunday school, etc.

November 8, Annual Conference meets at Thomasville Community church.

A Correction

Ordinarily I never make corrections of mistakes which appear in my letters, but the one in last week's Herald of my report of my visit to the Graham church must be an exception. The item said, "Rev. G. F. Millaway occupied the time of the morning hour." I intended to write that Brother Millaway and I occupied the time—at least, that is what happened, as all who were present know; so now those who read but were absent may also know.

The NRA Code

We have something quite new in the National Recovery Act of our President. It fixes the minimum wage for the industrial workers and attempts to stabilize the price of farm products. It is by such means that an attempt is made to restore a degree of prosperity which should enable the people to live in more comfort than in many months. The plan is too new and its operation is too brief for us to predict the final outcome. There are so many selfish people to oppose it and so many unscrupulus lawyers who major in defending the criminal part of our population for us to be sure the plan will work out all right; but we are hopeful of its success. We want to see those whom we know and love and who have been denied so many of the comforts of life for lo these many months able to live normally and that right soon.

Also

We want our pastors to share in this recovery. I know that most of them have shared in the losses and penury of their people and that they did it gladly. No real pastor wants to live better than his people. They would not be happy in receiving substances from their people which they were not able to give. And now with the rise of prices of farm products and the increase of wages of the industrial workers, is it not fair that you shall remember these men who gladly gave their best for you? For in these times both pastor and people have denied themselves; you have suffereded together. Now let them rejoice with you in the returning prosperity that attends your labors.

Lincolnton Charge, Rev. J. D. Cranford, Pastor

I visited all the churches on this charge. At 11 a. m. we were at Lincolnton. They have a new church here since my last visit. As the readers of the Herald know, the old church was burned a few years ago and they erected a commodious brick building in its stead. There is an ample auditorium to seat all the people they will doubtless have in the next few years at any regular service. There are several Sunday school rooms in the basement, which takes care of the Sunday school very well. There are possibly 200 members of this church and they pay their pastor's salary weekly. It is a fine custom. We secured in cash and subscriptions and a pledge from the cahirman of the board of stewards the assessment of this church for the Annual Conference budget to be paid by the third Sunday in September.

Fairfield Church, 3 P. M.

This church is located something like 20 miles from Lincolnton, and they receive one appointment each month. We were told by the pastor that this church would also pay the Annual Conference budget in full. Besides the offering taken that afternoon, certain members had devoted patches of cotton to this cause which would bring up the balance, the pastor thought. The congregation here was very good and the interest was fine. From outward appearances this church has made considerable progress since my last visit many years ago.

Bessemer City, 8 P. M.

There is usually a large congregation here at night, the pastor told me. He is giving this church and Lincolnton four services a month, alternating with the morning and evening services, and it has had good results. We were given a sympathetic hearing here and I was told that this church would likewise pay their assessment for the Annual Conference budget. This was quite good news to me, as we are in need of funds so badly for this budget.

The people appear pleased with the services of their pastor and we felt that he was rendering them efficient services. There is no parsonage on this charge, and the salary is not large for a small charge; however, the pastor lives in a most comfortable house at a very small rental, and we are hopeful that the salary promised shall be paid in full this year. The majority of our people on this charge are industrial workers and are now working full time, thus making it possible for them to pay their church dues with greater ease than in three years. There was a fine motto hanging in the choir-loft of the Lincolnton church—"Onward and Upward," it reads. We hope it shall become a slogan of the entire church membership. We were entertained in the parsonage during our stay on this charge.

SEVEN AGES OF A GANGSTER

First the infant; squirming and crowing in its monther's arms as it fondles a toy of shining metal moulded in the form of a gun, bought for the child by its mother.

Then the little lad, as he inspects his toys on Christmas morning. "Gee! a toy pistol, just like a real one, lots of caps, too. Now I can play shooting and killing with the other kids."

Then the growing boy with plastic mind, receiving impressions to be retained through life. He hears his father say, "Son, I have bought you an air rifle, you can have lots of fun shooting birds and stray animals which pass through the alley seeking food and water. Only be careful not to hurt yourself."

Next the hunter. "Say, fellows, father has bought me a shot gun! He is going to take me hunting with him, he says he is going to teach me to shoot birds on the wing 'n' everything."

Then the young man at the crossroads, choosing the path of shadows. "I want to get an automatic, please, a good one which can be depended upon never to miss fire."

And now the full-fledged gangster. "Next time we put guy on the spot I want to handle the machine gun myself. You birds shoot like a bunch of amateurs."

Last scene of all. "The condemned man walking to the gallows between two rows of guards, all heavily armed."

Was he altogether to blame? His pathway from the cradle has been laid upon a foundation of murderous toys!—Our Dumb Animals.

RELIGION AND BUSINESS

(A question that is pertinent to present day conditions has been well answered by Dr. S. Parkes Cadman in his "Everyday Questions" column. Greed, intemperance, and "cleverness" misused, are the outstanding causes for the economical upheaval we are experiencing. Economic success depends on mutual fairness and sympathetic co-operation on the part of employers and employees. Big business and little business would do well to respond to the principles that Dr. Cadman has pointed out in the following article.—T. M. Johnson Jr.)

What do you recommend for the uplift of business?

"I hesitate to reply. Every man to his trade, as you know, and mine is not directly related to manufacture or trade. Yet the pastor has to market his wares, and I am convinced that our industrial organizations must be shot through with mutual understanding and honest purpose to give and take in the temper of fairness, or they cannot succeed and may cease to exist. As I write, institutions are tottering and characters are being blighted because men persist in dishonorable practices and non-social methods. The street term for their behavior is 'smart;' the Biblical word is 'Thou fool.'

"We have to contend against the peril of imperonal association of capital and labor in which human beings are mere pawns to be moved chiefly with regard to increasing the profits, and with little consideration for flesh and blood. We shall have to insist that they are not tools, but souls rendering personal service, and to be treated accordingly.

"Magnates who sit in guarded offices are too often non-conductors of the sympathetic interest which lubricates the human elements in production and distribution. Even with the best intentions they cannot feel as they should what life means to No. 2020 on the list of "hands." Hands imply hearts, and hearts resentments, threats and reprisals as well as good will and loyalty. The behavior of employers who grind the faces of the poor, or distribute immense bonuses to the rich, is a dangerous reef in the social stream. Should the Reds every triumph they can attribute their victory to corrupt and greedy capitalism. Its fate is in its own keeping."

YOUR SPEAKING VOICE

By Grenville Kleiser

To improve your speaking voice there is no better way than to read aloud daily from the Psalms. Ten minutes' practice every day will yield surprising results in a short time. Preferably, the reading should be done in a standing position, in order to breathe freely from the diaphram.

The following passages are especially good for developing flexibility, resonance, and brilliancy of tone:

I will praise thee, O Lord, with my whole heart: I will shew forth all thy marvelous works. (Ps. 9:1.)

O sing unto the Lord a new song: sing unto the Lord, all the earth. (Ps. 96:1.)

How excellent is thy loving-kindness, O God! Therefore the children of men put their trust under the shadow of thy wings. (Ps. 36:7.)

I delight to do thy will, O my God: yea, thy law is within my heart. (Ps. 40:8.)

Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name. (Ps. 103:1.)

Be glad in the Lord, and rejoice, ye righteous; and shout for joy, all ye that are upright in heart. (Ps. 32:11.)

O come, let us sing unto the Lord: let us make a joyful noise to the rock of our salvation. (Ps. 95:1.)

Thy throne is established of old: thou art from everlasting. (Ps. 93:2.)

Read slowly and with variety of expression suited to the thought. Try constantly to clarify your interpretation of the selected passage. Conscientious practice leads steadily to improvement.

JIMMY

A bright-eyed, shabby youngster was working his way through a crowded street car selling his papers. An old man bought a paper and said, "Sonny, can you make a living selling papers?"

"Yes, sir, me an' Jimmie does. He's home an' can't work much,' replied the boy.

"Oh, I see," said the man; "that makes it hard for you."

The shabby boy stood erect in an instant, and denial was prompt and indignant. "No, sir, it don't. Jimmie's somebody to go home to. He's lots of help. What could be the use of havin' luck 'if nobody was glad? Or of gittin' things 'f there was nobody to divide with?"

"Fourteenth street!" called the conductor and the newsboy jumped out into the gathering dusk.—Unknown.

OUR STORY PAGE

DARKNESS LOSES ITS DREAD

"Grandpa," asked Ted, "do angels ever come to people now-a-days?" "Why do you ask such a question?" asked the kind-faced, white-haired old grandfather, who was seated in an old-fashioned rocker by the fire-place.

"Because," said Ted, "our Sunday School lesson today was about Elijah. He ran away from the wicked queen. When he was all tired out he lay down and went to sleep under a tree. Then an angel touched him and woke him up. There was food and drink for him that the angel brought. Our teacher asked us if we thought angels ever came to help people now. I never saw or heard of one, did you, Grandpa?"

Slowly the old man took off his glasses and laid aside the paper he had been reading. Then he cuddled Ted up in his arms. This was the way grandpa always did when he had a story to tell. Ted was delighted and waited eagerly for the story he was sure would come.

"Your grandma always believed in angels. She thought each person had an angel appointed to take care of him, and there have been some strange things in my own life that I can hardly understand unless there are angels now.

"I remember one incident in our family that might have proved fatal. A load of people were going about twelve miles to attend a quarterly meeting. I had gone the day before, but grandma and the children were in this load. Suddenly the driver's seat gave way and he was thrown from the wagon. The horses became frightened and rushed headlong down a steep hill. Grandma tried to get hold of the lines that were dragging on the ground, but she could not. It was only a short distance to a river where a sharp turn in the road led over a bridge. It would have been impossible for the wild horses to make this turn without upsetting the wagon and throwing the people into the river. Grandma was praying earnestly for the Lord to spare their lives. Suddenly, when within about fifty yards from the turning point, the horses pricked up their ears as if they saw something in the road, made a wide turn and started back up the hill as hard as they could go until they were tired out. Grandma always thought that God sent an angel to stand in the road to save their lives. She was sure the horses saw something invisible to the terrified people in the wagon.

"At another time, during the Civil war, I had been drafted and was obliged to go, leaving grandma with two children to care for. It was impossible for me to get letters to grandma very often, but she prayed that God would send His angels to protect me.

"Once I was in a dreadful battle. The bullets were flying and soldiers were falling dead on every side. It must have been an angel sent in answer to grandma's prayers that guided my steps. A bullet whizzed past me, going in and out of my coat collar at the back of my neck. I put up my hand, expecting to find a wound that must prove fatal. I could hardly believe my eyes, when I looked at my hand and it was not covered with blood. The bullet had merely scratched the skin on the back of my neck. The bullets kept flying, my clothes were filled with bullet holes but I escaped unharmed. The report was carried to grandma that I was killed. She refused to believe it. When the war was over and the soldiers were coming home, grandma declared that she knew I would come on a certain train, although she had been informed but a few days before that I was dead. She was combing the children's hair, getting ready to meet the train, when I walked in at the door. Grandma did not seem surprised in the least, for she was sure the angels had cared for me."

"The angels must have taken care of you," said Ted, "but did you really see one?"

"No, my child," said grandpa, "but the Bible says that there are angels all around us, keeping us from harm. Their bodies are different from ours. Some time when you are older, I can explain it to you.

"I shall never be afraid in the dark any more," said Ted, as he walked quietly away.—Publisher Unknown.

JIMMY'S TEXT

One day it was pouring down rain and Aunt Carrie was getting just run out of stories. So Jimmy Bates said, "Let's play church!"

There were five Bates children and four visiting cousins so that made a congregation. They put rows of chairs together for pews and the big armchair was to be the pulpit and the hassock for a step to get up.

The pulpit was so fine that each wanted to be the minister. But Jimmy said he ought to be the minister because he knew the most texts, so he must be the "goodest."

"Why, Jimmy!" said Aunt Carrie.

But the other children said he might if they could all take turns passing the plate.

The plate was mother's tray. They had a lot of buttons to put in as money. They began by singing a hymn very prettily.

Then Jimmy, with grandpa's old spectacles way down on his nose, mounted to the pulpit by way of the hassock. How they all envied him!

"My friends," began Jimmy.

"You should say 'brethren'," said little Helen softly.

"And brethren," said Jimmy crossly. "My text this afternoon is, 'Do unto others as you would—' "

"Oh Jimmy!" wailed a reproachful voice in the first row, "you can't have that. You know you took my bouncing ball away from me and I wanted it so this morning."

Jimmy grew red.

"Never mind," said he hastily. "My text today is, 'Judge not—' "

"But, Jimmy," piped another voice, "you said this morning you guessed Benny Green played truant yesterday because he wasn't in school."

Jimmy was getting pretty cross. He swallowed very hard and thumping the back of the chair with his fist, he said, severely, "Here's another, 'It is more blessed to give than to receive'."

"Oh, Jimmy," howled the whole congregation, "not that.

You ate up the whole of the jam at the dolls' tea party so we didn't have any!"

At this the poor little minister broke down and cried. But Aunt Carrie said: "I know the best text of all, 'Love one another'."

So Jimmy preached a short sermon on that. And he also found out that just knowing texts isn't much use unless we try to live them.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

THOUGHTS AND WORDS

Your thoughts and words seem little things;
Do not forget that they have wings,
With wondrous power to travel far
Around the earth or toward a star.

Your hidden thought, whose secret nest
Seems snug and safe within your breast,
Cannot be stayed—it soars away
On every careless word you say.

A thought may mar the whitest soul,
A word spread havoc, grief and dole;
A thought may be a beam of light,
A word may make the whole world bright.

Think noble thoughts, and every word
Shall be a blessing where 'tis heard;
Think worthy thoughts, for they are seeds
That blossom into shining deeds.

Mr. Meant-to has a comrade,
And his name is Didn't Do;
Have you ever chanced to meet them?
Did they ever call on you?

By the ghost of Might-Have-Been.

INCONSISTENCY OF THE WETS

Who are the people who profess to be horrified at bootlegging in our country? THE WETS. Who are the people who patronize the bootleggers and so create the bootlegging business? THE WETS. Who are the people who say prohibition can't be enforced and must be repealed? THE WETS. Who are the people who oppose enforcement and thus create its difficulties? THE WETS. Who are the people who claim there is more liquor drunk than before prohibition was adopted? THE WETS. Who are the people who are doing the drinking? THE WETS. Who are the people who assert that prohibition is a failure, that those who believe otherwise are bigots and hypocrits? THE WETS. Who are the people who pretend to want respect for law and order and are undermining law and order by propaganda and conduct? THE WETS. Who then are the original hypocrites? —The Allied News.

WHO IS THY NEIGHBOR?

An old gentleman, living in a quiet Eastern village, had a visit—the first in many years—from his son, a prosperous storekeeper in western Canada. On Sunday father and son went to church, where they listened to a sermon on Christian missions. Throughout the service the old gentleman was restless.

"I'm sorry," he said, as they left the church, "that I brought you here today. I'm sorry that you listened to that sermon. I don't believe in missions. They're a stupid waste of men and money."

The young man made no reply at the time, but when he reached home he asked his father and mother to let him tell a little story.

"A few years ago," he began, "a young man left his father's farm to seek his fortune in the Canadian West. He got into bad company, and was left one day by the roadside drunk and unconscious.

"At that place, living in a little sod-covered shack, there was a young man who had been sent out by a missionary society. He was brave. He loved men and sought them in the spirit of his Divine Master. He found the drunken fellow, who had been left by his companions to die from alcohol exposure, and carried him to his shack, placed him in his own bed, and worked over him until he brought him back to consciousness. Then after he had fed him, he remonstrated with him for wasting his life, and prayed earnestly with him, that he might repent.

"The young man confessed his sins and sought pardon. His after life proved the genuineness of his conversion. He has become an honored and respected citizen, and as the world goes, a prosperous man. He is an officer in his church, and in order to add to the comfort of his aged parents, he sends them gladly five hundred dollars a year.

"Father and mother, I am that man, and I tremble to think what I should have been but for that faithful missionary."—Youth's Companion.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

SPRING CHURCH CIRCUIT AUXILIARY

Spring Church Circuit Auxiliary met on August 2 at 2:30 p. m., in the home of the writer with 11 members and four visitors present. The devotional was conducted by the hostess. Every one present took part in the study of "The Loyalty of Jesus."

Mrs. Demick was program leader. "Temperance" was discussed by Miss Virginia Grant and Mrs. Vassar took up "Motion Pictures."

Mrs. Neese had charge of the Question Box. She gave the Auxiliary some good suggestions recommended at the convention at Pittsburgh.

It was voted that we pay $10 toward the Student Loan Fund for High Point College, which is being raised by the First District. It was also voted that each member donate at least one garment at our next meeting to be sent to the school at Pine Ridge, Kentucky. We will make some print dresses and sell them to increase our funds this month.

We are glad that we can report Mrs. Neese is getting along nicely since her operation, and we were delighted to have her in our meeting.

We have been invited to hold our next meeting in the home of Mrs. H. S. B. Thompson, near Halifax.

MRS. R. M. ROBINSON.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE SECRETARY OF SPIRITUAL LIFE

"Putting First Things First"

The Secretary of Spiritual Life has the most important work of the Auxiliary assigned to her, and through her consecrated efforts the spiritual life of the women of the church should be quickened.

Her Qualifications

The Secretary should in her own life and work exemplify the power of prayer and of the study of God's Word. She should be a woman of deep spiritual life so that she may be used of the Master to lead others to deeper consecration of life. She cannot successfully urge Bible Study for others and be careless of her own observance. She will not convince others of the power of prayer if she does not know its influence in her daily life.

Her Duties

Her work may be outlined under certain general heads, although the resourceful, prayerful Secretary will often blaze new trails in this work.

1. Prayer life of the Auxiliary.

The officers of the Auxiliary should always covenant together for daily prayer for each other, for God's blessing on the Auxiliary, the local church, the Pastor and the Church at large.

Urge the organization of Prayer Bands throughout the Auxiliary. Every circle should be a Prayer Band, its members covenanting together to pray daily for each other and for the advancement of the Kingdom. The regular Circle meeting should open with a circle of prayer, every member taking part.

Prayer meetings should be arranged for at such times and places as suit the convenvenience of all. These may be small groups meeting separately or larger ones coming together to a central meeting place. Remember the promise to those "gathered together in my name."

Urge the use of the Prayer Calendar and have the names of those for whom prayer is requested published in the weekly church bulletin.

Promote the use of home-made Prayer Lists. It is easier to pray definitely for things, when one has them listed, and the new subject for which prayer is asked is simply added to the list.

Mark off the Answered Prayers and see what a mute testimony to the power of prayer these cancelled petitions become in time.

Strive to make prayer a vital, living factor in the life of the Auxiliary. "Lord, teach us to pray."

2. Bible Study.

In every posisble way enlist the women in studying God's Word. Urge the Auxiliary to have carefully prepared devotions at every meeting of the Auxiliary. Those in the Year Book may be used, or any other Bible lesson desired, but make it a regular part of every Auxiliary meeting to have a part of God's Word studied.

Organize a Bible Class for regular and systematic study of the Bible. This class may meet weekly and should have a good leader or leaders. It may or may not be large in numbers, but its influence will be felt in the church as well as in the lives of its members.

Sometimes one or more Circles of the Auxiliary will take a course in Bible Study at their regular Circle meetings.

Have different kinds of classes, one for girls, with an inspiring leader, another for Business Women meeting in the evening. Develop teachers by suggesting methods of Bible Study to them. "Search the Scriptures."

3. Personal Evangelism.

Personal evangelism is one of the responsibilities of the Secretary of Spiritual Life and at least one class in Methods of Personal Work should be held each year. Your pastor will probably be the best one to lead this class and it should be held several weeks in advance of your yearly evangelistic service. Personal soul-winning is the Christian's greatest privilege.

4. The Family Altar.

If we are to bring higher levels of spirituality into the lives of our women, we must begin in the home, by gathering the family daily around the Throne of Grace. To accomplish this means prayers and work on the part of the Secretary of Spiritual Life. She should very quietly and tactfully make a canvass of the Auxiliary to learn the number of Family Altars. Through printed pages and spoken word, the responsibility for family religion should be driven home to the hearts of the women of the church. Make this one of the subjects for prayer for the Prayer Bands. Let every woman resolve, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

5. Literature.

The Secretary of Spiritual Life should see that good literature on all the above subjects is available for the Auxiliary and circulate it freely.

6. Co-operation.

All things that make for the spiritual growth of the membership come under the duties of this Secretary, and the Auxiliary Prayer Bands should pray daily for her, that she may have consecration, vision, tact and that "wisdom that cometh only from above" for her important work.

The Secretary of Spiritual Life of the Branch should possess all the qualifications suggested for the Spiritual Life Secretary of the Auxiliary. She, too, must be a Bible student and a woman of prayer. It shall be her duty to secure a Secretary in each Auxiliary to whom she may send helpful suggestions as to literature that may be used to promote Bible study and to deepen spiritual life. She shall serve on the Program Committee of the Branch and help to plan the devotional part of the Branch meetings. She shall seek an opportunity at some Branch meeting during the year to present to the women the value of the Quiet Hour, of systematic Bible Study and of Family Worship.

She shall arouse interest in observance of the World's Day of Prayer and announce any other calls of prayer that may come through denominational or interdenomination sources.—Leaflet, Committee on Education.

3,500,000 BACK TO WORK

Secretary of Labor Perkins estimates that 500,000 persons in the United States found employment in June. Figures for July are not yet available. While the July record of re-employment is not expected to equal the June record, it is known that many persons found jobs during that month.

At the same time the secretary pointed out that there has been an upswing in employment for the last several months. But she cautions that this should not be taken to indicate that the upward swing will continue. Since the new administration came into offiice it is claimed that more than 3,500,000 people have gone back to work. That is a large number to take out of the breadlines.

Before the upswing started labor organizations claimed there were something like 13,000,000 unemployed. If that figure was anywhere near correct only a small beginning has been made. The administration's goal accomplished, unemployment will cease to be a problem.—Pathfinder.

HOPE CHURCH 60 YEARS OLD

The 60th anniversary of Hope Methodist Protestant Church will be observed next Sunday, August 13. Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of our Conference, will preach the anniversary sermon at 11 a. m., and Dr. Paul S. Kennett, our Conference historian, will make the historical address in the afternoon. Others are expected to make brief talks. Special music will be furnished morning and afternoon. All members and friends of this church are cordially invited to be present.

The annual revival will also start at this time. Rev. L. E. Mabry will be the pulpit help after Sunday.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

First Church, Lexington.—There was no 11 o'clock service at First Church Sunday as the pastor, Rev C. G. Isley, filled his regular appointment with Mr. Carmel church where the Annual Home Coming Day was observed. The choir from First Church was also present and sang several numbers. This choir also filled an engagement with Canaan church recently.

On Sunday evening Mr. Isley brought us an inspiring message using as a subject, "There is no Gospel Substitute," and as a text Acts 4:12, "For there is no other name under heaven given among men, whereby ye must be saved."

Last week Rev. Isley assisted in a revival meeting at Kernersville. He reports that the meeting was highly successful.

Wedding bells have been ringing out in our community. On July 21, Miss Irene Ridenhour became the bride of Mr. Floyd Koontz at Galax, Va. Both of these fine young people are active members of First Church. Mr. Herman Yates another members of First Church, and Miss Madeline Campbell were also married recently. A host of friends extend to these young couples congratulations and good wishes for a happy and prosperous married life.

MARGARET LEE SWINK, Reporter.

First Church, High Point.—Dr. A. G. Dixon, superintendent of the Children's Home, filled the pulpit last Sunday morning, and the congregation was much pleased to hear him. He was pastor here for nine years from 1908-17, leaving when appointed as Secretary of the Board of Young People's Work by the late Dr. T. H. Lewis. Dr. Dixon has always held a high place in the hearts of First Church people.

Circle No. 6 of the Woman's Auxiliary, Mrs. Vance, chairman, will meet Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock for the usual monthly meeting at the home of Miss Myrtle Davis, 709 Parkway.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Riggins announce the birth of a daughter at Burrus Memorial hospital on Friday, August 4. Congratulations are extended to this popular young couple. The little lady will bear the name, Alinor Dare Riggins.

It is a source of much regret that Prof. L. R. Johnston has resigned his position as the principal of High Point high school to accept a similar post in Hawthorne, New Jersey, a suburb of the city of Paterson. Prof. and Mrs. Johnston and charming little daughter are among First Church's most highly esteemed and best loved members, and the congregation as well as the citizens of High Point regardless of denomination are saddened at this loss of the community. Mr. Johnston has been an efficient and popular teacher here for the past 12 years, and he and his lovely wife hav endeared themselves to parents and pupils alike. They will leave for their new home September 1, and will carry with them the love and best wishes of a host of friends. Henry Grady Owens is Prof. Johnston's successor in the high school.

Many friends of Capt. A. M. Rankin will be much pained to learn that he underwent an operation on his infected eye at Guilford General hospital this (Tuesday) morning, and he is resting as comfortably as can be expected. The operation was performed by Dr. C. W. Banner of Greensboro, assisted by Dr. S. S. Coe. He will remain at the hospital several days. During this trying ordeal this prominent and beloved layman has the best wishes and prayers of a large circle of friends.

Owing to the strain on her health, Mrs. W. C. Hammond has resigned as Secretary of the Board of Public Welfare of the city. She has been a popular and efficient official during a strenuous period, and must rest for awhile. Miss Euzelia Smart, who has been her assistant in the offiice, will fill her place temporarily.

Miss Rosalie Andrews has returned from a delightful trip to the Century of Progress Exhibition in Chicago and a visit to her uncle, Dr. Earl Harris, in Madison, Wisconsin, where he teaches in the State university.

The Senior C. E. society group enjoyed an outing to the Thomas pool near Greensboro on Monday afternoon. Following the picnic supper, the weekly meeting was held with Mrs. Ralph Vance leading the topic, "How Far is God Revealed in Nature?"

We are much grieved to announce the serious illness of Mrs. J. C. Welch, Sr., at her home, 630 N. Main St. She is under the care of two nurses. Miss Ruth Welch, who was ill last week, is much improved, we are glad to learn.

Mrs. Samuel Harris, of Henderson, who has been the guest of her daughter, Mrs. R. M. Andrews on West College Drive, has returned home.

"Bobby" Rankin and Alson Gray came home Monday evening from a trip to the World's Fair at Chicago. The boys say they enjoyed the " time of their lives."

The local strike has been amicably settled, we are pleased to announce. The furniture factories resumed work more than a week ago, and the hosiery mills opened again last Minday morning.

W. C. Ferree, Jr., is enjoying the sights of the World's Fair at Chicago for ten days.

Forsyth Charge. — Two revival meetings have been held on this charge since my last report to the Herald. The pastor did the preaching for the Maple Springs meeting and although the attendance was good and the interest splendid there were no additions to the church. This church is located in a community of church members and I don't think there were any unsaved people who attended. However, the meeting did good, I am sure, and was well worth the time given it.

At Mt. Carmel Mr. G. E. Brewer, lay evangelist of the Moravian church, did the preaching. There were a number of conversions and reclamations, and eight new members were added to the church roll. The Sunday school of the church enjoyed the annual picnic at Washington Park, Winston-Salem last Saturday, with a large attendance and a fine time for all.

The meeting at Hickory Ridge church will begin next Sunday. The pastor will do the preaching there, and we are expecting to secure some good man to lead the singing. We are hoping and praying for good results.

Recently a number of valuable gifts have come our way, including a number of cans of goods by some of the ladies of Union Ridge church, a ham and a hundred-pound bag of flour by Brother Glenn White of the same church; a side of meat and tomatoes by the Cox family of Hickory Ridge. The Maple Springs folks, who live nearer the parsonage than any of the others, are constantly remembering us with good and useful gifts. We deeply appreciate these kindnesses.

Our third quarterly conference has been held. The attendance was good and the reports encouraging. Brother Fleet Kimel of Mt. Carmel church will be the delegate to the Annual Conference.

The writer and family have recently enjoyed visits from Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Baity and Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Evans and children, Misses Elizabeth Polston, Martha Faulkner, Annie and Betsy Harris, and Mr. Glenn Satterwhite of Henderson. We were delighted to be remembered by these good friends.

R. A. HUNTER.

Mt. Pleasant, Mt. Pleasant.—Mr, Millaway preached for us Sunday morning with a great deal of enthusiasm. He still knows how to preach a good sermon although he has not been filling a pulpit for two years. The text was Hebrews 4:16, "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." Mr. Millaway spoke of God's infinite knowledge and stated that God could understand His people better and more nearly answer their needs because of His great knowledge. The value of prayer for the church and one another was stressed by Mr. Millaway.

The annual Sunday school picnic was held on the church grounds August 5. A large number of people assembled at 12 o'clock to hear Mr. Millaway make a short talk about Sunday school work. He emphasized the importance of having an object in view. In addition to Mr. Millaway's talk, a big dinner songs, games, and contests were the features which contributed to the success of the picnic.

We are very glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Millaway spending a few days visiting in the community. They can not visit everyone this time, but will come again during our special meeting.

Rev. J. Elwood Carroll from Asheville will be the pulpit help during the revival which will begin the third Sunday in August.

Dr. Johnson has secured fruit jars from the Children's Home and the women are filling them.

The Woman's Auxiliary is planning to sponsor a community singing on Saturday night, September 2. There will be cake, ice cream, and sandwiches for sale.

MARGARET CAUSEY, Reporter.

West Forsyth.—We had the usual attendance and interest at the services at Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches last Sunday. After the service at Baltimore church the pastor and family, accompanied by Mrs. Mollie Hartley, of Lexington, attended the annual reunion of the Phillips family, which was held at the home of Brother J. S. Phillips, a member of Baltimore church. A sumptuous dinner was enjoyed by about 300 relatives, neighbors and friends of the well-known family in Yadkin county.

After the service at Stony Knoll church in the afternoon we administered the ordinance of baptism by immersion to three persons who recently united with Stony Knoll church. The service was held at the Yadkin river, near the crossing of Highway No. 60, and was attended by a large crowd of people.

Our revival meeting will begin at Union Hill church next Sunday morning. The pastor is expecting to preach at the morning service, and Rev. W. L. Harkey, of the Northern Methodist church, is expected to arrive in time to preach at the night service and do the preaching during the meeting. We will have services at 3 p. m. and at 8 p. m. during the following week.

It was the privilege of the writer to be with Rev. J. P. Pegg, pastor of the Glen Raven charge, in the annual revival meeting at Fairview church last week. This church is located at the Hub, and in the village of Ossipee. The membership is composed of both rural people and mill workers. The attendance was fairly good throughout the week. Some of the members could not attend on account of having to work at night. We enjoyed the association of these good people and it was a pleasure to be with them in their revival meeting. I shall not report the results of the meeting, as the pastor will doubtlessly make a report of it.

The pastor and family appreciate a number of gifts received during and since the revival meeting at Baltimore church last month. We thank the following for various gifts for the dining table: Mr. and Mrs. Arzie Doub, Mr. and Mrs. George Nicholson, Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Long, of Baltimore church; Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Petree, Mr. and Mrs. U. Walter Long, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Long, of Pleasant Hill church.

The meeting of the third quarterly conference will be held at Pleasant Hill church on Sunday, August 20, with the usual program. Preaching at 11 a. m., dinner at the church, and the business session in the afternoon, beginning at two o'clock. We hope there will be a good attendance of the official members.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Concord, Saxapahaw Charge.—Our revival meeting came to a close Sunday; after being in session for the previous week. Our heart was made glad as the interest of the people were shown in Jesus and His Kingdom. Our pastor started the meeting off with two inspiring sermons. Then Rev. F. W. Paschall came to us during the week and gave his service in a most splendid way. We appreciate his work with us and give to him a cordial welcome to come back to see us.

I would to God that all the people who heard his great messages would live them in their hearts. We also appreciate the good work and the messages that Brother Loy gave us during this meeting.

On Thursday afternoon of that week a service was given for the children, which was enjoyed by all the children and also the adults.

Our pastor closed this series of meetings Sunday morning, which was the most impressive one. Our hearts were made glad as two or three professed Christ as their Lord and Savior. While a goodly number of our people reconsecrated their lives to God during these services.

We hope and pray to be able to render greater service for our Lord and Master in the days to come. We still pray for those who did not accept Christ; that they may before it is too late. In the closing sermon that Brother Loy preached he urged the people to remember their Creator in their youthful days and not to wait until the major part of their life had been spent in waywardness of the world and in sin, and then to come to Christ.

At this time the doors of the church were opened. We were glad to receive into our fellowship Viola Ferguson, Ruby Andrews and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Davis. Mr. and Mrs. Davis coming from other churches, while the others united on profession of faith. Mr. Davis came from Graham Baptist church and Mrs. Davis from the M. E. church of Swepsonville.

We are holding our singing school this week and next, under the leadership of Rev. Mr. Ellington of Graham Baptist church.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Moore plan to spend this week-end with her son in Baltimore; Mr. Raymond Davis is going to accompany them. Mrs. R. L. Woody and her son, Robert, are going to Virginia with them to spend the week-end with her sister.

We are glad to see the most of our people who have been on the sick list able to be at church Sunday.

Best wishes to the Herald.

BESSIE COBLE.

Mebane.—Since our last letter to the Herald our work has been going on as usual, preaching every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock and Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

The Board of Stewards held its monthly meeting Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock with Mr. J. E. Barnett.

The Ladies' Aid met with Mrs. J. M. Kennedy Monday evening at 3:30 o'clock.

Circle No. 3 of the Woman's Auxiliary met Monday evening at 7 o'clock with Mrs. Tripp.

Our third quarterly conference will be held Wednesday evening, August 16 at the church.

REPORTER.

Kannapolis.—We are happy to state our church is progressing nicely in spiritual membership and financial gain. We have some fine and faithful Sunday school workers and we all appreciate their interest nad help.

It is wonderful the blesing that will be showered on an individual or a group that puts forth an effort to accomplish something for the Lord. May we and others put our entire trust in our Master and let Him through us do something to cause the unsaved to stop and think long enough to realize the condition of their souls and repent before it is too late?

Sometime ago there was literature distributed in our congregation several Sundays in succession concerning tithing. After this literature (we hope) was carefully studied, our pastor brought us a message on "Tithing." At this time a Tither's League was organized in our church. A part have joined and others are coming in. Those who now belong are: Rev Clarence P. Morris, Messrs. M. W. Henderson, M. E. Marlow, R. T. Sides, X. E. Grayson, W. T. Kiser, H. W. Sides, C. B. Price, R. B. Query, C. B. McCommons, L. C. Carter, D. A. McLaurin, G. F. Coble, C. L. Hampton, J. G. Lisk, J. V. Dwiggins, E. H. Steele, C. W. Tutterrow, L. M. Bassett, and R. E. Gibson; Mesdames Mildred Weaver, C. B. Price, Annie Lisk, Rena Steele, Esther Dwiggens, and X. E. Grayson; and Miss Colleen Lisk.

We believe this to be the largest tithing group in the Methodist Protestant conference, if there be one larger we would like to hear from it. We are hoping and praying that these wil continue their tithing and others will be added so we may be able to go over the top with our finances.

We are sorry to say Mr. Wililam McCommons, one of our members, has been very sick, but are glad to report that he is improving.

The Ladies' Aid held their general meeting at the church on Monday evening, August 7, at 7:30, with 21 members, one new member, and seven visitors. After the business was finished, plans were made toward adding to our treasury. Rev. Morris brought us a splendid talk. We only hope that each one will endeavor to use the motto he gave us, "Always Forward and Not Backward."

MRS. X. E. G., Reporter.

Graham.—The fourth Sunday was a "red letter day" for the Graham church. The anniversary service, marking 30 years of service began at 10:45 a. m. By an address by the first pastor of the church, Rev. G. F. Millaway. Brother Millaway spoke with great power to the large congregation of sympathetic hearers. He was followed by the President of the Conference, Dr. R. M. Andrews, in an address that was a fitting close to the morning festivities. Lunch was served in the Hut to about 200 guests. The Woman's Auxiliary had this part of the program in charge and did it well. The afternoon program was given over to recalling some the high spots in the history of this church which had made exceptional progress. A brief history of the church was given by Mrs. Heehan Hughes. Our attention was called to the fact that the church was organized in the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. R. Goley with 12 charter members. Rev. O. B. Wililams, a former pastor told in brief the difficulty in getting the people to agree to move the church. Brother J. L. Amik described the actual moving which he had in charge. He called our attention to the fact that when they finally got ready to move the church that the street car company interfered and refused to let the church be moved down the street car track. He pointed out that this difficulty was only surmounted when Brother O. B. Williams, who was then pastor, agreed to transfer the passenger from the point of the church to the center of town. This he did with his model T Ford working from morning at 6 until 11 at night. By the way, I might add here that if any of you have any difficulty in moving churches you might see Brothers Wililams and Amick. The talks by these brethren were followed by an address by Rev. G. L. Curry, "How to Keep the Church Going." The program for the day was concluded by a sermon on church attendance by Rev. O. B. Williams at 8 p. m. The messages by these brethren were highly appreciated by all. I regret on account of lack of space here we cannot give them in brief. Truly it was a great day of spiritual fellowship.

In connection with the anniversary an effort was made to raise the balance due on the church hut and basement, amounting to $800. At this writing there is a little less than $40 yet unpaid, which we hope to raise in the near future.

On Tuesday afternoon the third quarterly conference convened. One of our young men, Junius Neese was present and made known his desire to enter High Point College this fall for his preparation in his chosen life's, the ministry. The secretary of the quarterly conference was instructed to write Dr. G. I. Humphreys recommending that he receive the customary consideration in his tuition fees. We wish for Brother Junius godspeed in his preparation for the ministry.

The election of delegate to the Annual Conference came up and after the votes were counted Brother Don S. Holt, a promising young man in our church and a son of S. S. Holt, was delared eleceted.

The conference asked the Board of Stewards to begin their Every Member canvass drive early enough in order to complete it before the last quartely conference which it to be held two weeks before the Annual Conference convenes.

The matter of making the third Sunday in September as a time when we bring our tithes and special gifts to the church in a special service in harmony with the request of the President of the Conference was left with the Board of Stewards to work out with the pastor and place before the people.

Lexington, State Street.—The past few weeks—the period during which there has been no report from our work—have been very full weeks. The various activities of all the branches have gone on in a splendid way even during the hot weather. The Woman's Auxiliary especially are pleased with the success of their efforts to raise money during the summer.

A dinner has been served each month by the ladies of the church and each of the circles have sold refreshments on the church lawn. There has been quite a creditable sum raised too on the sale of various useful articles and from soliciting advertisements from some of the merchants for the "door knob." The money raised in these ways during July amounted to $389.00.

The circles of the auxiliary met yesterday (Monday) afternoon and night. The members of the night circles are those who work and cannot attend the afternoon meetings.

The quarterly conference will meet at State Street church Tuesday night. Bethesda official will meet jointly with us.

Dr. Maier begins a series of meetings at Bethesda next Sunday.

We are planning a dinner to be served in the church dining room Saturday night.

Pine Grove, Kernersville Charge.—Our revival of the past week has just come to a close and has been very successful. The meeting opened the fifth Sunday with Rev. Eugene Lamb preaching the morning sermon. Our pastor, Rev. C. L. Grant, preached the afternoon sermon. We had our regular Christian Endeavor meeting Sunday night at 7:30 after which Rev. Eugene Lamb made a very interesting speech to the young people. We had several visitors from other churches present.

Rev. C. G. Isley was the pulpit help of the week. Two services were held each day at 2:30 in the afternoon and at 8 o'clock. The attendance was good despite the continuous rain. All of Rev. Isley's messages were well delivered and held the attention of every one. We had 18 conversions, the largest number in several years. Ten united with the church, two of them coming in by letter.

Sunday morning after Sunday school we had Communion service after which four of the new converts were baptized by immersion.

We feel that our church has been greatly helped by our revival and strengthened by the new members.

Connelly Springs Charge.—We have held two of our special meeting. The first began with Burk's Chapel on the first Sunday in July, with Rev. H. W. Bell as pulpit help. Brother Bell did good preaching and made a good impression on the people there. As a result there were six conversions and five joined the church and the church revived.

The second one began at Shady Grove the fourth Sunday in July with Brother B. M. Williams as help. Brother Williams did some fine preaching but the result was not what we had hoped for; only a few conversions and so far we haven't gotten any members. But we are expecting some to join as a result of the meeting.

Our next meeting will begin at Shiloh the fourth Sunday in August with Brother C. H. Grant as help. Pray for us.

L. S. HELMS, Pastor.

Winston, First.—Each Sunday morning services are being held at the County Tubercular hospital. Dr. Pritchard held two services recently and he seemed to have gotten a lot of good out of them himself, and we know those who heard him were greatly inspired and helped. There were about 15 persons who were able to come to the assembly room and the others, approximately 90 in number, listened through earphones.

On July 20, the Sunday school enjoyed a delightful outing and picnic at a lovely lake.

There was a goodly number at Sunday school last Sunday.

Dr. and Mrs. Pritchard are vacationing at present. We missed them a lot Sunday. Here is hoping they are enjoying themselves immensely.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Charge.—The fifth Sunday the First District Rally was held in our church. We are very proud to be honored in having it on our charge. There were many inspiring messages. Dr. R. M. Andrews didn't reach us until the afternoon service. We welcome you all again. But do not wait for a Rally. Come!

First Sunday morning, Mr. E. B. Pair held prayer service and when ever you hear he held it you may know we had a wonderful service. At the close he said, "Let's sing 'Near the Cross." Have you ever thought about it Near the Cross there is a precious fountain free to all."

First Sunday evening, Rev. P. E. Bingham had a wonderful text from 1 Tim. 1:12. "Jesus came into the world to save sinners."

Our revival meeting will begin the second Sunday in August with an all-day service. Rev. Mr. Neese will be the pulpit help. He will not be with us in the morning service, but will be present for the afternoon service. The hours for the week-day services have not yet been announced. We ask your presence and prayers.

Our Sunday school is holding up as well as usual under our good superintendent, Mr. Edward Hawkins. Miss Erma Hawkins, our Senior teacher, has not been present for the past two Sundays. Glad to note she is out of the Roanoke Rapids Hospital where she has been very ill.

The third quarterly conference will be held in Littleton September 1, Friday before the first Sunday, at 2:30 o'clock.

Quite a number of our people are attending the revival meeting at Bethlehem, a Baptist church.

Misses Mary Virginia and Lillian Hawkins were in the home of their uncle, Mr. Claude Hawkins, Sunday.

Mrs. H. S. B. Thompson and little Polly Ann, have been visiting in the home of her son, Mr. Georgie Thompson.

Mr. Raymond Hawkins, of Richmond, Va., spent Sunday and Monday with his mother, Mrs. C. M. Hawkins.

Mrs. Minnie King, of Richmond, has been the guest of her mother, Mrs. G. W. Morgan. She was accompanied home last Wednesday by Mrs. Garnett Hawkins.

Mrs. A. D. Pittard and children were in the home of Mrs. Georgie Green Monday.

Misses Elizabeth and Fannie Mae visited in the home of Mrs. R. E. Green last Thursday.

West End, Thomasville.—August 2nd the third quarterly conference was held in the basement of the church.

On Thursday, August 3rd, the Thomasville C. E. Union held its regular monthly meeting at West End church. West End won the C. E. banner for the next month.

Cottage prayer meeting was held last Friday night, August 4th, at the home of Mrs. Raymond Pierce, with 30 present. Tom Hamm was leader.

The executive committee held its regular monthly meeting August 7 at the home of Roy Armsworthy.

Liberty, Liberty Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. Fred R. Love, brought a forceful message the fourth Sunday morning. His text was taken from Matthew 13:45-46. His subject was "The Pearl of Great Price." This forceful and impressive gospel message was heard by a large, attentive and appreciative congregation.

An old-time revival tent meeting has been held in our town. Rev. and Mrs. E. D. Cornish, of Wilmore, Kentucky, were the visiting ministers. Rev. Mr. Cornish is a graduate of Asbury College. Dr. Akers, who was here some time ago, is president of Asbury College. The meeting was a great success and resulted in 40 conversions. The meeting was in session a little more than three weeks. All the ministers in town were present for part of the services and the good women from all the different churches and all the women of our Methodist Protestant church, except two or three, attended part of the time.

Our Sabbath school is moving along nicely during the warm weather. A program is being prepared by the Senior Christian Endeavorers.

Rev. and Mrs. T. E. Cross, of Greensboro, were guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs.

W. C. Shepard and Miss Bertine Shepard Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Roy Hodgin entertained the Philathea class in her home Monday evening, assisted by Mrs. Fred R. Love.

BERTINE SHEPARD, Reporter.

◆

New Hope.—Our meeting began July 30th and continued eight days. We had large crowds who came and heard the old-time gospel preached. There were 35 conversions and three admitted to church membership. The meeting was conducted by our pastor, Rev. M. C. Henderson. Rev. Earl A. Cooke, of Democrat, N. C., delivered the closing sermon on Sunday night. Our choir-leader was Rev. Clarence Griffen, of Monroe, N. C.

Our Sunday school continues to grow and we are more than glad to see our young people take such great interest in the church and Sunday school. A MEMBER.

◆

Harmony, Yarborough.—We have just closed a week's revival at Harmony church; Rev. N. G. Bethea was our pulpit help, and did some fine preaching. Apparently the spirit of the Lord was upon him; the church was much strengthened, with fire or more re-dedications, three conversions and a godly number expressed their desire to be saved. We believe if he could have continued with us a few days, the results would have been much better, but we realize he is in need of rest, and could not because of other arrangements. However, we greatly appreciate his work and presence with us. The pastor has been much encouraged and inspired for the meetings ahead.

We begin our meeting at Fairview, Sunday, August 6; Liberty the second Sunday; Cross Anchor, the fourth Sunday. We earnestly request the prayers of our friends who read this, that we may have glorious revivals. The pastor will do the preaching at these churches.

J. L. LOVE, Pastor.

First Church, Charlotte.—I am happy to be back on the job. Thanks to the sister who substituted for me.

Since the advent of hot weather we have been having a unified service which has proved a pronounced success, assembling at 10:00 o'clock promptly, our usual church service opening with the sermon by the pastor, Rev. G. H. Hendry, at the conclusion of which the classes go to their various departments for Sunday school; reassembling at the end of 40 minutes for announcement and closing.

The Senior C. E. has seemed to take on new life recently. The members are enthusiastically working and have a contest on for new members and better meetings. There are four captains, one for each week.

The Wilma Shaw Bible class' monthly meeting was held at the home of Mrs. G. W. Stegall, with a large number present. An interesting meeting was had.

The auxiliary met at the conclusion of the class meeting. Splendid reports from Circle Nos. 1 and 2 were heard. The resignation of Mrs. C. H. Daughtry, president, was accepted with regret and Mrs. G. P. Younginer was elected to fill the vancancy. Mrs. Herbert Garrison, vice-president, also resigned and Mrs. A. F. Love was elected to fill the vacancy. Delicious refreshments were served at the conclusion of the busines session.

Rev. R. M. Andrews, President of our Annual Conference, was a visitor in our city Monday.

The third quarterly conference will be held at the church Wednesday evening.

Circle No. 1 will meet Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. A. A. Ledbetter and Circle No. 2 with Mrs. G. H. Hendry at the parsonage Tuesday evening.

The Ever-Ready Philathea class had a picnic and swimming party last week at McAlpine Beach. REPORTER.

LIVE HAPPILY!

(Chief Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes says that the secret of logevity is to live happily.)

If you want to live long,
Live happily.
Tune in with song,
Live happily.
Better smile than to sigh,
To cheer than to cry,
Let depression go by—
Live happily.

If you wish to be well,
Live happily.
Of your great blessings tell,
Live happily.
Don't talk of disease,
Avoid doctors' fees,
Try always to please—
Live happily.

If you long to succeed,
Live happily.
All wise counsel heed,
Live happily.
To win in life's race,
Keep the optimist's pace,
Wear a radiant face—
Live happily.

—Grenville Kleiser.

SPEECH AND SILENCE

I fear no man of boastful speech,
Or one with supercilious air,
Because I know behind the mask
There's much of specious ignorance there.

The man I like and most admire
Is he who frequent silence keeps,
Of modest mien and quiet poise,
Who wisely sows and wisdom reaps.

—Grenville Kleiser.

HOLMES' PHILOSOPHY

A Formula for Long Life

Oliver Wendell Holmes, now at Beverly, has a simple formula for long life. Think happily, he says.

An interesting story is told of the ex-jurist which has to do with this formula of his.

He searched his library for a book on law that he desired to cite in one of his Supreme Court decisions and was unable to find it. His irritation had not lessened when he arose the next morning and resumed his search.

"Where is that book?" he demanded of his Secretary.

"Right here, sir, where you left it," said the Secretary, drawing the book from its customary shelf and handing it to him.

Justice Holmes took the book and wrote on the fly page, "All my life has been filled with troubles; most of which never happened."

Time is the healer of ills. Think happily, and most of the ills will never reach you.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

The Baraca Class, First Church, Burlington, four months, supporting child	$80.00
N. C. Branch, Woman's Auxiliary, Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Treasurer	80.81
Welch Memorial Sunday school	5.37
Oak Grove Church, Cumberland, Ohio	2.00
Baraca Class, Gibsonville, clothing child	5.00

The two large offerings above came in time to help us pay bills at the first of August. The Baraca Class of Burlington, like many of the rest of us, has been tied up in the bank. So finally they sent their offerings for four months in lump sum. We are so thankful for these offerings.

Our Pressing Need—Please Respond Quickly

During this last week our coal dealer, who orders coal for us and charges no commission, and thus gets it for us cheaper than we could get it ourselves, told us that coal prices are advancing rapidly. He said, "To save anywhere from 20 cents to 40 cents per ton you would better order at once." So, with no money in hand to pay for the coal, nor to pay the freight, we placed an order for two carloads of coal. These cars will come in the last of this week or the first of next. We must pay the freight before we unload the coal. It will take a co-operative effort to help us to pay the freight and pay for the coal without embarrassment. Our trust in God and in you led us to make the order. Please help quickly.

Auxiliaries and Ladies' Classes

Women's organizations frequently ask, "How can we help?" Mother Dixon says please tell you to help with the fall sewing. Your class or your Auxiliary can buy cloth and make dresses and under-clothing for five or six or more girls. Please write us and agree to do it, and we will be glad to send you the measurements. Our girls range in ages from five to seventeen. This will be a great help. Who will be the first?

A Piano Needed

In this day of radios many people are setting aside their pianos. We have one old one which has been in use since the Home was first placed in the hands of Bro. H. A. Garrett and his good wife. It is almost useless now and must be replaced. Will someone please donate one which is in good condition one which will not have to be repaired and tuned every little bit and thus entail more expense? We shall be glad to hear from you soon. We have had no music class for the last two years for lack of funds. Miss Margaret Curry is with us and will enter High Point College in September. She will teach music to a few of our children. Hence, our need for the piano.

We thank you and may God bless you.

Yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON, Supt.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Clodfelter

Miss Hazel Viola Clodfelter entered into the Spirit world July 23, 1933. She lived only a little over 19 years, yet she lived a very beautiful Christian life. She became a member of the Community Methodist Protestant Church at the age of ten years. She was never strong in body, and especially the last year or more she suffered intensely. She possessed a cheerful disposition and such a spirit was revealed in the fact that she never complained nor desired undue attention from others.

The funeral services were held in her church by the pastor, assisted by a former pastor, Rev. H. W. Maier, of Lexington. Becoming words were spoken and the floral designs were beautiful.

Her parents, brothers and sister will miss her. But she has gone where physical pain is no more, and life eternal will be shared with those above. May the Holy Spirit sustain and give comfort to the bereaved ones.

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst our co-worker, Mrs. Lucy Rives, and whereas by her devotion to her Master's work, her cheerful and untiring efforts in behalf of His kingdom she has been a source of inspiration to us all; and whereas by her kindness and sweet disposition she has endeared herself to the members of Eden Auxiliary, now, therefore, be it Resolved:

First, that we extend to the bereaved family our heart-felt sympathy.

Second, that through prayer and application the members of this Auxiliary endeavor to follow her example in the furtherance of God's kingdom on earth.

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, a copy to the Methodist Protestant Herald, and to the Enfield Progress.

Respectfully submitted,
MISS WINNIE BURT,
MRS. J. R. DICKENS.

Grandma Adderton

One can hardly conceive of the peculiar functioning of the minds of some of our old people—the majority of whom live over their younger days in retrospection of their childhood days.

These old people, many of whom become infirm, feeble, are often critical of the ways and conduct of the younger generation.

From observation, the majority of them are very self conscious about the lack of attention that the younger people give to them—yet not all young people are negligent to speak and talk to them.

Not so very many weeks ago Denton lost one of its oldest citizens—perhaps the oldest—in this part of the county, familiarly known as "Grandma" Adderton. Now "Grandma," who was nearly 96 years old at her death, was an ardent radio "fan"—and even though very old she took great enjoyment in the company of her neighbors who called to see her every day.

"Grandma" had been blind for many years, and was hard of hearing. Therefore, it was hard for her to visualize just what a radio was. However, she knew that she liked to hear the sermons and music very much.

Not so many days prior to her death she heard someone preaching a sermon over the radio and "Grandma," always having the highest respect for ministers, thought the minister was in the adjoining room, and in spite of all explanations by her daughter that it was not a preacher in the room, but over the radio, yet she persisted that he was in the adjoining room, and had her best dress and apron and Sunday shoes brought to her so that she would be presentable to see the preacher, whom she fully believed was in the room preaching for her. No manner of explanation could ever convince her that the minister was not in the room, queer as it may seem. We do not pretend to offer an explanation of psychology of the thoughts of this good old lady, but list it among the peculiarities of the functioning of the mind of an old person.

"Grandma" has now gone to her heavenly rest. She has heard the final call from God's great broadcasting station above to come and be with Him forever. There the eyes of the blind shall be opened, the infirmities of old age are forever past, and "Grandma" can see and hear the Celestial music from God's eternal chair—and where she will always be "presentable when the minister comes."

W. M. SEXTON.

IT DOESN'T PAY!

It doesn't pay to worry
  Or give up in despair,
When there's so much of gladness
  For you to freely share.

It doesn't pay to grumble
  If things seem to go wrong;
Better drown your disappointment
  In a cheerful burst of song.

If doesn't pay to dawdle
  When there's urgent work to do;
A clear and noble purpose
  Will inspire the best in you.

It doesn't pay to sorrow
  Over chances missed and gone,
For however black the midnight
  There will surely come the dawn.

NUDITY AND INDECENCY

To the clean and proper-minded there is nothing inherently nasty or indecent about nudity. There is, however, something both nasty and indecent about the commercial and sensational exploitation of nudity, and it is on this ground that one must challenge the cheap hypocrisy of the so-called "art school" at the Century of Progress World's Fair, in which, as the papers report, one pays 25 cents admission fee as a "student" to the "art class," where practically nude women are said to be posed. The presentation of a pencil and sketch pad to a "student" only adds to the hypocrisy. We do not refer to the incident from any feeling that there is much hope of furthering a wholesome attitude toward sex and nudity by invoking the powers of police and censorship. The cure for indecency and the hypocrisy in this sphere lies deeper, and it is to be found not in prurient sensationalism, but in the develoment of wholesome attitude, and in furthering such effective protest as would make such exploitation impossible. The purpose of such an absurd arrangement is indecent; and it rests upon a psychology of indecency; but, after all, purposes can be changed only through enlightened and progressive attitudes, and not by narrow censorship, nor by the sort of prudishness that considers nudity in itself either evil are indecent. Merely with honest regard for the consistencies of progress those who are responsible for the Chicago Fair ought to eliminate this and all such sideshows that cater to morbid and indecent spirit. If such a thing be justified or necessary in the carrying out of a World's Fair, let it be upon a plain and open basis without any hypocritical association of the thing with "Art."—Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty.

BANDS OF JUPITER

Study of the bands and spots of the planet Jupiter has convinced scientists the changes in them are caused by two sets of forces—the tidal forces of Jupiter's moons and the changes in the intensity of sunlight. These solar changes also control earthly weather so astronomers are now studying them to determine if weather on earth can be forecast by the changes in the bands and spots on the distant planet.

Looking at Jupiter through a telescope, light and dark bands of a brown or reddish color may be seen. Previous to 1926 these stripes were simple, thin bands very similar to stripes painted on a rubber ball but in two years' time they changed and after 1928 they appeared as irregular dark bands and had many isolated dark spots.

Now these bands appear to be changing back the way they were before 1926 and the astronomers are keeping a weather eye on them.—Pathfinder.

DOLLARS or DOTS?—WHICH?

The possibility that some churches and charges may have forgotten the classification into which they fall in the HERALD Subsidy scale prompts its presentation to refresh the minds of those who may not remember just the amount asked of their church toward the support and continuation of the HERALD.

Churches with less than 100 members contribute	$ 2.50
Churches whose membership is from 101 to 200	5.00
Churches whose membership is from 201 to 300	7.50
Churches whose membership is from 301 to 400	10.00
Churches whose membership is from 401 to 500	15.00
Churches whose membership is more than 500	20.00

A glance at table showing the receipts on Subsidy is convincing proof of the effectiveness of the plan. If your church or charge has not done its part, the doing of your bit will help to lift the load that crushes. The blank spaces in the Subsidy column are gradually diminishing. Let's put Dollars in the place of Dots!

FLOWER GAMES FOR PICNICS

Because picnics are so popular at this season of the year here is an excellent little game to help you enjoy your picnics more. Children especially will be delighted with such a game. It is an unusual game, too.

Each player is given, say, 20 minutes to gather flowers, leaves and grasses of as many kinds as possible. When the players have finished gathering their flowers, etc., they all sit down in a circle. The leader then calls on one player to lay down a single flower. Then all of the other players must match this flower by laying down all the flowers they have of that particular kind.

The player making the first play takes all of them and puts them aside as his own. The next player to his right then lays down a flower of some other variety, which must be matched as before. This continues until every player has had his turn to lay down a certain flower and collect all of that variety from the other players.

In fact, the game can be continued until there is not a single new flower, leaf, or blade of grass left. An important rule of the game is that each player at once lay down all of the flowers he has like the one laid down by the first player. The player who has the largest number of flowers at the end of the game wins. It is also an instructive game if the name of each flower is called as it is laid down for matching.—Pathfinder.

GOOD TIMES

Good times are on the way,
Depression's gone to stay;
No longer doubt or gloom,
Soon looms a business boom.

Good times are on the way,
There dawns the brighter day;
New hopes, new joys, new views,
More work, more food, more shoes.

Good times are on the way,
For all men higher pay;
Send out the word of cheer:
PROSPERITY IS NEAR!

JAPANESE PLOT TO KILL CHARLIE CHAPLIN

A plot to assassinate Charlie Chaplin, the film comedian, concocted by the "Blood Brotherhood," a young Fascist organization of naval officers in Japan, has just been revealed by Sub-Lieut. Kiyoshi Koga, leader of the group of officers who killed former Premiar Inukai on May 15, 1932, 1932. Lieutenant Koga testified at the court-martial that the organization had planned to blow up the home of Premier Inukai during a reception for Chaplin, thereby "causing a war with America and enabling us to kill two birds with one stone." The naval officer said the scheme had to be abandoned before Chaplin's arrival in Japan because of the "need for haste." Chaplin arrived with his brother, Syd, on May 14 and Premier Inukai was assassinated the following day. The "young Fascists" acted quickly to slay the Premier when they learned that no date had been fixed for Inukai's reception for Chaplin. —Zion's Herald.

Limping Through Life

Mount Carmel in Elijah's time was called the Garden of God. The mountain was filled with various kinds of trees, shrubbery, evergreens and flowers. The rocky dells and flowering glades formed a beautiful place for a natural amphitheatre. The plains, lakes and hills of Galilee could be observed from the promontory . So today man is placed in the world, the Garden of God.

In the midst of all the grandeur of nature we see men limping as in the early times. They are not limping because of the ravages of war, the victim of automobile accident or the visitation of a dreadful malady. They limp because of moral and spiritual crookedness. Sin is the trouble. Our sympathy goes out for those afflicted in body and mind, yet we do not seem to be very greatly disturbed about the people tottering in moral opinions.

The people affected in body and mind are removed to an institution for treatment, but what is being done for those who do not know the difference between good and evil? There are some people who desire a compromise even if they know better. They remind us of the mule that died of hunger between the hay-stack and the stable because of the lack of a decision. Perhaps some people do not see the need of making up their minds in moral things. Elijah endeavored to get people of his day to decide between deities, the true and the false. The prophet Elijah discovered the fundamental truth that there could not be any compromise in religious things. No man can serve God and mammon.

The decision man makes becomes a factor in the building of a strong Christian character. In every great conflict there is a crisis, a few minutes when the character of the outcome is decided. Napoleon found out this fact. James Russell Lowell said:

''Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of Truth and Falsehood, for the good or evil side,
Some great cause, God's New Messiah, offering each the bloom or blight
Parts the goats upon the left hand, and the sheep upon the right,
And the choice goes by forever's twixt that darkness and the light.''

To be dishonest with one's self blackens and spoils the life. Procrastination becomes a ''thief of time'' and more—one becomes a murderer of himself. The little ''white lies'' and ''pet sins'' only delude and spoil all true satisfaction. We should not limp in our opinions. Let honest decision lead us into unspeakable satisfaction in life.

H. FREO SURRATT.

Can You Accept the Inevitable Gracefully?

A few weeks ago the church where I was born in Illinois had a home-coming service. Invitations were sent to former members all over the country. Letters were sent from many who could not come, to be read in the meeting; and some of these were printed in the county paper.

Among the letters was one from a boy now 69 years old. He had spent all his early impressionable years in this church and community, and then moved with his wife to the new Territory of Oklahoma. He mentioned some names I had not heard for many years, and told of happenings that had passed out of my mind. All this was very interesting. When he came to speak of the leligious life and prospects I was interested, but not so favorably impressed. He wrote:

''But to get back to Kedron church. There is no such religion today as was preached in that old church; and I dare say that with the passing of those old-timers Kedron has lost a spirituality she will never regain. I have tried to find out who my father's cloak fell on, but know of no one big enough to wear it. And my own dear mother, not so demonstrative as others, but one of the truest Christians I ever knew. Many mothers in Israel there were like her I am sure.

''My guess is that you have nothing like them. I know their tribe is extinct out here, and the world is suffering for their passing . . . My wife and I are members of the M. E., South, and the way they do emphasize that 'South!' I do not remember having heard a local pastor preach a sermon on sin. We occasionally get an evangelist who gives them 'hell' but the local minister shouts straight up for fear he will offend someone.''

My own recollection is that the religious life was very real in those days—and, in the main, sincere. It had good elements in it and served a worthy purpose. But its usual presentation was entirely too individual and emotional. The preacher did not generally make sufficient appeal to the intelligence, and he largely failed to develop and improve social and community ideals and conditions.

Those same ideas and methods are still in existence in many regions. I can take you to some colored churches here in Washington, and to some white churches also, that should abundantly satisfy the desire for the old-time religion expressed by the brother from Oklahoma. But that is not the type of religious experience and church activity that would prove satisfactory to the most of us.

I am sorry that my childhood friend is spending these years in a discouraged and beclouded atmosphere. Such an experience is not necessary. If a man will keep an open mind for truth coming from many directions, and if he maintains sympathetic relations with growing and advancing youth, it will be well with him. He need not look back regretfully and longingly for the good days of old. Better days are here now, and they will be still better in the years ahead.

LUTHER K. LONG.

"WHAT DOES HIGH POINT COLLEGE MEAN TO THE M. P. CHURCH"

(The following speech was delivered by Virginia Massey, a junior at High Point College, Sunday, July 30, on Spring Church charge:)

The idea of a Methodist Protestant College in North Carolinia originated in the mind of Dr. J. F. McCulloch, a native of Guilford County, North Carolina, and a graduate of Adrian College, Adrian, Michigan. He first established the Methdist Protestant Herald in order to create sentiment in favor of building a college, but it was nearly a quarter of a century before he saw the fruit of his labor.

High Point College has for its foundation a phonograph record. When Dr. McCulloch began going around among the people advocating donations for building a pubishing house, he took a phonograph with him. This was his means of drawing the crowd, for few people in those days had seen or heard one. Dr. Kennett, my history professor last year, said that the first he ever saw was that of Dr. McCulloch's. When Dr. Kennett was five years old he attended a commencement. Dr. McCulloch was there, played several of his records, made a spech and passed the collection plate. Dr. Kennett dropped in a dime and now our history professor laughs and says that he is a stockholder in the college.

After many years of agitation and many disappointments the college enterprise began to take shape. Committees were appointed and campaigns launched to secure funds.

Several cities, notable among which were Burlington, Greensboro, and High Point, made a special effort to have the college located in that city. Each city offered a site and $100,000. High Point was chosen and the college was opened there in the fall of 1924.

I wish I could tell you what a wonderful place I think High Point College is and how much I love the place where I have spent two of the happiest years of my life. But I know that this group of Methodist Protestant people who helped to make High Point College possible, want more than sentimental reasons for cherishing and supporting the institution.

I would like to give you a detailed record of the achievements of High Point College and tell you how it compares with other colleges, but perhaps that is not the thing to do. Though High Point is the youngest of standard denominational institutions, other colleges ranging in age from nearly five times to over nineteen times her age, she occupies sixth place in enrollment. It is doubtful if any school established within the last 50 years can point to a record like that of High Point College.

The chief aim of a college education is to help one to live a well-rounded life happily and intelligently. To accomplish this end a college can not be a lop-sided institution, putting emphasis on one phase of student life at the expense of another. It must have a varied program which develops the four-fold life. High Point College is not found wanting in meeting this need.

At High Point College the body is developed. I think no one will question the wisdom of this. A student can not study and learn as he should without a healthy body. At the college we have an inexpensive athletic program which meets the needs of both the girls and the boys.

There are splendid literary societies, departmental clubs, and local fraternities and sororities to make the students' mental and social life richer.

High Point College has a faculty second to none in North Carolina. There are men and women on our faculty whom larger institutions would be proud to claim. The faculty members are kind and sympathetic advisers to the students.

Without an athletic program, literary socities and a competent faculty, the body and mind would surely suffer. It is impossible to live a well-rounded life without these provisions, and it is just as impossible to live a well-rounded life without religious expression through participation in some form of religious activity as it is to live that life wthout physical and mental training. In keeping with what would naturally be expected of a Christian institution, High Point College fosters the religious life of the students in a very fine way. There are several religious organizations on the campus which do much in keeping the life of the students on a high plane. But rather than give the religious organizations credit for the high type of students character that you find at High Point College, I would give the students credit for the high type of religious organizations that we have. I do not mean to say that the student body is perfect. Of course not. But I do believe that it is above the average. Proof of this is found in the large number of students who voluntarily take part in some form of religious activity. Religious interest and participation in religious work is not confined to the ministerial group. A large per cent of the dormitory students and some day students participate.

The religious organizations that we have at High Point are the Christian Endeavor Society, the Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Women's Christian Association, and the Ministerial Association.

The most active and inclusive religious organization on the campus is the Christian Endeavor Society. This society plays a very definite part in the active and devotional life of the students. It holds regular Sunday evening services, at which time the students are given an opportunity to express themselves on the topic. Besides being inspirational and uplifting, these meetings give the student practical experience in public speaking. The Christian Endeavor sponsors a prayer meeting which lasts for about ten minutes every evening. This little prayer meeting adds a great deal to the devotional life on the campus. Besides carrying on several outside projects, the Christian Endeavor Society contributes a great deal to the social life of not only its members but of the whole student body.

The other religious organizations do what would be expected of standard student enterprises such as they are.

What I have said has dealt mainly with the origin of High Point College and what it means to the students who go there. Perhaps a more important consideration now is, "What does High Point College mean to the mother of the institution, the Methodist Protestant Church?"

High Point College is to the Methodist Protestant Church what a school was to the early settlers of our country. Until a school was established a colony was not complete. Without High Point College, the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina could not be what it is today. Without such an institution our Church could not meet the need for training among our own people.

High Point College is a unifying force in the Methodist Protestant Church. It brings our people together and develops a spirit of oneness, especially among the youth of our Church.

High Point is a scholastic investment. It has done a great work in training our ministers. The Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina is 105 years old. High Point College is nine years old. Today there are around 80 active Methodist Proestant preachers in the North Carolina Conference. When we stop to think that around 25 of these are High Point College graduates we can not help but recognize the fact that truly here is a mighty force for good and for advancement.

High Point College is a good place to go, a fine place to send your children, and an institution that is well worthy of your support.

PROTESTANTISM AND PROHIBITION IN PERIL

Startling Analysis of Repeal Vote

Two events of transcending importance to the world occurred during the month of July. It is impossible to foretell the calamitous effect upon the nations involved.

In Germany the Hitlerized "German Christians" calling themselves "The Storm Troopers of Jesus Christ" have triumphed over the United Evangelical Church representing forty million of the sixty-five million population of the nation. Having proscribed the Old Testament and forbidden its use in Protestant churches, in his determination to cut Christianity loose from its Jewish rootage and substitute Teutonic mythology for the Word of God and the German War Lords for the Hebrew Prophets, the German (Catholic) Dictator, whose ruthless warfare against the Jews has aroused the indignation of the civilized world, has arrogated to himself the right to control the policy, name the ecclesiastical dignitaries, determine the doctrine and Hitlerize the pulpit of Protestantism.

A Protestant Pope Named by the State

By the same ruthless methods which characterized the German military policy during the World War, the full power of the Nazi government was used in the ecclesiastical election on Sunday, July 23rd, to drive to the polls those favoring its candidates who will select the Hitlerite Bishop as the spiritual head of the unified Evangelical Church.

Four hundred thousand church officials and elders were chosen by the ballots of millions of men and women who have never seen the inside of a church or contributed a dollar to its support since the day of their confirmation, instead of by the vote of attending and sustaining members as demanded by the United Evangelical Churches. A baptismal certificate was the only qualification for participating in the election of delegates to determine the head of the United Protestant Church of Germany. The full power of the Nazi government, including the government controlled press, radio and other agencies of propaganda, was used to drive those favoring its decree, or fearing its displeasure, to the polls to elect the Hitler ticket.

Rudolph Hess, chief head-hunter for Hitler, ordered every citizen baptised as a Protestant to cast his vote for the Nazi candidates. On the eve of the election the Dictator issued a ukase in the form of a letter to his candidate for Bishop and made a typical speech urging the election of the Nazi nominees in support of the Administration. The results was the election of the Hitlerite ticket by a two-third majority, which means that the former military chaplain, Ludwig Mueller, is scheduled as the Primate of Protestantism in Germany. It is one of the most astounding events in the history of Christianity. It presages the fall of Protestantism and the rise of a Godless Monarchy, or communism in Germany.

American Alcoholic Administration in Action

By similar methods of political coercion Dictator Roosevelt in the United States has abrogated the Constitution and restored the sale of intoxicating liquors in advance of the Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, which, as a part of the Constitution, he swore with uplifted hand, and sealed with a kiss upon the Holy Bible, to preserve, protect and defend.

Like Hitler, he has thrown the full force of his administration for the election of delegates to constitutional conventions favoring the repeal of National Prohibition. He has sent his chief head-hunter, the Catholic Farley, a member of his Cabinet and official distributor of patronage, into the Protestant Southern States to demand the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment in the name of party loyalty, after platform and candidate guaranteed the protection of the dry states against the return of the saloon, for which every wet state in the North is now preparing. He has sent letters to political leaders on the eve of the election in dry states urging the voters of his party to hasten repeal. He has offered the bribe of cancelled excess income taxes to the rich who pay them as an inducement to shift their burdens to the backs of the beer-drinking workers, and urged the calling of elections in the torrid months of the summer, in vacation time and harvest, to wring a precipitous decision from the sorely distressed American people and foist the legalized liquor traffic upon the nation. He browbeat Congress so that entire state delegations, previously dry, like Senator Joe Robinson and every member of the House from Arkansas, voted for the administration beer bill and repeal under duress.

Protestantism in Germany and Prohibition in America are in peril by usurpation of power in the hands of dictators who are prostituting the machinery of the government to accomplish their purposes. Both Germany and the United States are headed for disaster unless the people speedily recover their constitutional right to a free ballot and a fair count.

The Roosevelt Raw Deal

Much as we honor and admire the President for splendid and courageous manner in which he has addressed himself to the financial, economic and industrial recovery of the nation, great as is our faith in his capacity to carr yforward his plans for the return of prosperity, fervently as we pray for the success of the New Deal to bring employment to the millions of idle workers in a new industrial order that will prevent the recurrence of panic and poverty, we shall not excuse nor cease to criticize with unsparingseverity "The Raw Deal" he has given to the overwhelming majority who did not vote for and who do not want the return of the saloon, or the equivalent of the saloon, restored by law and protected by the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

The 20 states that have voted for repeal is confirmation of this conclusion. The charge that Prohibition did not have the sanction of the people is not confirmed by the failure of the people to sanction its repeal. It is evident by an examination of the returns that only those who want to drink or to profit by the sale of drink are voting for repeal. If there ever was an example of government by minority it is seen in the result of the elections held despite all the pressure of the administration to win a wet decision.

The claims of the wet press of tremendous majorities cast for repeal are not sustained by a careful examination of the wet vote when compared with that cast in the Presidential election last fall, which vote was several millions below the registration. A majority of the people are not responding to the pressure of the President or the fulminations of Farley. Only the publicans and the politicians have rejected Prohibition.

Repeal by Minority

Even the wettest of the wet states are not casting a majority of the registered vote for repeal. Take New York for example, containing the largest city in the country with the largest foreign population; the total vote for repeal was 1,946,532. The vote cast in the Presidential election was 4,688,614, leaving 2,742,052 who did not vote for repeal. To this should be added the 662,208 citizens who registered in 1932 but did not vote. In other words, the wets lacked 1,458,260 of having a majority of the registered voters in the wettest state in the Union. Take a look at New Jersey, said to be "as wet as the Atlantic Ocean." The total vote cast for repeal was 573,582, which was 1,050,017 fewer votes than were cast last fall, showing that the wets lacked 476,485 of having a majority of those voting in the November election. In Massachusetts the wets lacked 697,663 of having a majority of the votes cast last November, which is to say that those who did not vote for repeal out-numbered those who did vote for repeal by 256,468! The wet press got a thrill out of the result in Iowa. Of those voting, the wets received a majority of 127,332; but the total vote cast for repeal (377,257) was 635,195 less than the vote cast in the November election, showing again that the vote for repeal lacked 257,938 of being one-half the total vote cast in the election last fall! Strike your own balance in the other states; out of 3,351,304 votes cast in November in Illinois the wets polled 1,133,643; out of 1,573,095 votes in November in Indiana the wets polled 557,000, or barely a third; in wet Connecticut the repeal forces captured 236,000 out of 593,000; in West Virginia the wets obtained 219,225 votes out of 735,855! In California out of 2,257,135 votes cast in 1932, the wets polled 1,137,818, or 77,499 less than half. Try a Southern State where the vote was the closest—Tennessee, which the wets claimed to have carried by 9,000 majority. Of the 385,963 votes cast in the November election the wets obtained 125,000. The other 260,963 did not vote for repeal. The wets, therefore, lacked 135,900 of having a majority of the vote last fall, counting all the phantom voters and repeaters cast by the Memphis and Nashville gang.

Why Prohibition Took the Count

As the result of Postmaster General Farley's speech at Memphis, the city cast 30,000 majority for repeal. Outside of that one city the state of Tennessee voted against repeal by over 21,000 majority despite wholesale frauds committed by the wets. There is not a wet or a dry in Memphis who does not know that the vote cast for repeal in that city was fraudulent. The wet election officials counted only 2,002 votes for the drys and 30,000 majority for the wets! The dry leaders claim 10,000 votes in that city. Farley's gang simply stole the state.

Nashville is another example of Farley's eloquence. In the first ward of that city the wets counted themselves 581 votes and gave the drys 43; in the third ward they counted themselves 215 votes and gave the drys 8, and in the fourth ward they counted for themselves 666 votes and allowed the drys 3. The same ward in the Presidential election, in which twice as many votes were polled in the state, cast a total of 153 votes! This is the "Mandate" of the wets under the leadership of the dictator in the White House who has out-Hitlered Hitler in his determination to lynch the Constitution and speed up repeal so as to bring back the saloon by Christmas! It is the program of perdition for the United States.

What saith the Lord to these things? "Wherefore hear the word of the Lord, ye scornful men that rule this people . . . Because ye have made a covenant with death, and with hell are in agreement . . . Judgment will I also lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet; the hail shall sweep away the rfuge of lies . . . Your covenant with death shall be disannulled, and your agreement with hell shall not stand; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, ye shall be trodden down by it." The judgment of the Ruler of the Nations will come upon this administration. The House of Roosevelt and Rum will fall "and great will be the fall of it."
—Clinton N. Howard.

"God will take care of you,
Through every day, o'er all the way,
He will take care of you,
God will take care of you."

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

The month of September to be when special effort shall be made to raise the Annual Conference Budget. In stations, the third Sunday of that month is the time set, while in the rural churches, the month is set apart for this purpose.

October, Pay-up month

Second Sunday in October, Rally Day, Promotion in Sunday school, etc.

November 8, Annual Conference meets at Thomasville Community church.

Pastor's Reports Due

We shall be glad to have the reports from pastors just as rapidly as these can be sent in. We know that many are busy these days in special meetings, and are making their plans to close up the year's work, but please take time to send these reports in at once.

Your Church and You

is the name of the little booklet just off the press which contains the program of the church and other important matters which were decided on at the Pittsburgh meeting last May. Only enough of these have been sent to me to place a few copies in the hands of every pastor. We wish that every member of our church could have a copy and would read it. We are in need of action which would follow a careful reading of this booklet. You can get a copy from our Publishing House in Pittsburgh if you do not receive one from the supply I have on hand.

The Rally Day Program Is Out

It should certainly appeal to the pastor who wants to put on a good program.

Looking Forward to Conference

In three months this event will be upon us. It ought to mean an occasion fraught with great joy to us. We meet and mingle with many of our brethren whom we hardly have seen since we met last November. Then, it is a day of reckoning, a review of the labors of a year. Likewise it is a time when we are making plans for the year to come. It would certainly be fine if we could look forward through a decade and plan for a successful ending of such a period after taking stock of our shortcomings for the decade just closed.

In Regard to Instructing Your Delegate

Our custom has prevailed for years of instructing the delegate at the fourth quarterly conference for a return or a change of pastors. It is clearly within the right of the church or quarterly conference to do this. It makes it easier for the stationing committee to complete its work, provided this instruction is final is so far as the church is concerned. No special committees or representatives from such a church should be sent with a different request. Furthermore, when the choice of a church or conference has thus been expressed by a majority vote there should be none who fail to abide by this decision. The church has greatly suffered by the failure of those to abide by the decision of the official body.

And Yet

We are not Congregational in our system. After all is done by the local church or quarterly conference, the Annual Conference has a review and a final decision in this matter; that is, when the report of the stationing committee is acted upon. But until that time in the annual session the whole matter has been in the hands of this committee to work out to the best off its abilty. Its work is often queered by some officious delegate or pastor. It is made most difficult whenever either fail to work with this committee. And in some cases the committee seems to have been entirely ignored by a pre-Conference agreement. It then becomes a "rubber stamp" instead of a thinking organism with duties and responsibilities. How long halt ye between two opinions? If we have an itinerary, follow it; if congregational, then follow that.

Hope, Siler City Charge, Rev. H. L. Isley, Pastor

This was the 60th anniversary of the church. An all-day program was staged. At the morning hour I was the speaker. There was a good attendance, attention good and so was the dinner, which was served in picnic style. I enjoyed by stay, though brief. Here we have some of our most loyal people. The pastor was hopeful of closing a good year, expects the budgets to be paid in full.

Sapling Ridge, Alamance Charge, Rev. J. A. Burgess, Pastor

At 3 p. m. I was at Sapling Ridge Church. I was pleased with the new brick church—new to me, though it was built several years ago. This is one of the churches on Alamance Charge. Rev. J. A. Burgess is the pastor. We took subscriptions for the Annual Conference Budget. Bro. Burgess handled this. We hope that the entire amount may yet be secured. This is the second church on this charge we have visited this year. Bethel was visited a few weeks ago, and we hope to visit Rock Creek the fourth Sunday in this month. Bro. Burgess has served this work for several years and is still popular with the people. But without intending to reflect upon his efficiency we believe they are really easy to serve.

Liberty Church, Rev. F. R. Love, Pastor

The rain almost completely filled my appointment here. As it was much neded and we have no control over the weather, we are making no complaint. We spoke briefly to a small congregation made up almost entirely of other denominations, I was informed.

Plan of Appointments

It was only a little thing for Nell
To brighten the kitchen fire,
To spread the cloth, to draw the tea,
As her mother might desire;
A little thing—but her mother smiled,
And banished all her care,
A day that was sad closed bright and glad
With a song of praise and prayer.

'Twas only a little thing to do,
For a sturdy little Ned
To groom the horse, to milk the cow,
And bring the wood from the shed.
But his father was glad to find at night
The chores were all well done.
"I am thankful," said he, "as I can be
For the gift of such a son."

Only small things, but they brighten life,
Or shadow it with care;
But little things, yet they mold a life
For joy or sad despair;
But little things, yet life's best prize,
The reward which labor brings,
Comes to him who uses, and not abuses,
The power of little things.

SECRET OF SEPARATION

A traveler in Scotland once found in a fisherman's hut a striking picture of the Savior. "How did you obtain possession of this picture!" he asked the owner. He replied, "I was way down with drink, when one night I went into a 'public,' and there hung His picture. I was sober, and I said to the bartender: 'Sell me that picture; this is no place for the Savior.' I gave him all the money I had and took it home. I dropped on my knees and cried, 'O Lord Jesus, pick me up out of my sin.' " The prayer was answered, and today that fisherman is the grandest man in that little Scotch village. He was asked if had had no struggle to give up liquor. A look of exultation came over his face as he answered: "When the heart is opened to the Savior, He takes the love of drink out of it."—Publisher Unknown.

"WHERE WE BELONG"

As we look upon Calvary, we may get a new conception of the value of a soul. Here the price of our redemption was paid. Here we find the remedy for sin. Here we are born from above.

The crimson Blood flowing from the great heart of Jesus cleanses our life and washes away the stains of sin.

As we behold our Lord hanging and bleeding upon the Cross, we get a clearer glimpse of the wondrous love that throbs in the heart of hearts. The bleeding side and the pierced hands lay bare the secret springs of infinite compassion. They teach us the meaning of Heaven's sacrifice to save a soul.

Dear reader, your place and mine is close to the broken heart and bleeding side of our compassionate Lord, and as we find refuge there, we may get a worthy conception of life; a motive power possesses our hearts that we gladly tell His message abroad to others, thus leading them to acknowledge the Savior and rejoice in His redeeming love, "for the love of Christ constraineth us."—The Evangelical Beacon.

WHAT KIND OF SINNERS?

The church of which Mr. Samuel Colgate, the great American business man, was a member, entered into an agreement to make special prayer for the conversion of sinners. For some days they prayed earnestly. One day applicants for church-membership were invited to present themselves. A woman came forward. Heart-broken, she told her story of what a sinner she had been and how God had forgiven her for Christ's sake, and she wished to slip into a corner of the church and have the fellowship of God's people as she made the start for Heaven. The silence was oppressive. Then a member arose and moved that action on the application be postponed. Mr. Colgate arose and said in substance: "I guess we made a blunder when we asked the Lord to save sinner. We did not specify what kind. I think we had better ask God to forgive us for not specifying what kinds of sinners we want saved. He probably did not understand what we wanted." They all saw the point. The woman was received into fellowship.—The Elim Evangel.

"THE DECEITFULNESS OF RICHES"

If we really believed our Bibles, believed the words of Jesus, we would be afraid of riches, and would pity rather than envy rich people. It seemed a hard saying of the Savior, "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God;" but we may depend upon it that He knew what He said.

Nothing so stands between the soul and God as self-exaltation, and it is the common effect of riches to enthrone self; the Word—the good seed—is choked by the deceitfulness of riches. Everything about riches most readily conduces to pride, and the proud will never seek God. Let us think of riches as God thinks, and we will be saved from all desire to be rich. We shall use the old prayer, "Give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with food convenient for me."—Publisher Unknown.

OUR STORY PAGE

NELLY, THE ORANGE GIRL

"Oranges! Fine St. Michael oranges! Who'll buy my oranges?"

It was a cold, dreary February day. The streets were ankle-deep in mud and half-melted snow. Though only three o'clock in the afternoon, gas was burning in all the shops and houses. The light of the street lamps blended strangely with the fading daylight and yellow fog.

Tom Noakes, the old pieman at the corner, declared that "it was not fit to turn out a respectable dog in such unnatural weather." So, having sold most of his pies, he raked out his fire, shut up his tin, and went home. Everybody else seemed to be of the same opinion, for the streets were nearly deserted, and the few people left in them hurried homeward with such speed as they could use. Still Nelly Jackson plodded along through the slush and mire, looking up at every window, lingering before every door where there seemed a chance of sale, and crying in a sad, though powerful and not unmusical tone, "Oranges! Oranges! Who'll buy my oranges?"

Nelly lived in the east end of London. Her mother had been dead for some years. Her father, a costermonger, had received a serious injury some months before, which had confined him to bed until death. Like too many of his class, he had lived a profane and godless life, spending all he earned, and not very particular whether he earned it honestly or not. His long illness reduced him and his family to actual want. The donkey, the cart, and the few articles of furniture he possessed had been sold to provide food for himself and four children. Nelly had done her best to gain a living for them all, going out with her basket early and late. The neighbors had been very kind; still they must have fallen upon the parish but for the help which the missionary had procured for them.

Jackson, whilst he was in health, would never allow the missionary to come into his room; at last, a few weeks before his death, he consented to receive a visit from him. The good man not only ministered to his bodily necessities, but by God's blessing, led him to repentance and hope in Christ. Though Nelly was very seldom in the room during the missionary's visits, yet what she heard made a deep impression which was deepened by her father's dying exhortation.

"Nelly, my lass," he said on the night of his death, "try and keep the children together when I'm gone. Don't let them learn bad ways. Ask God to help and be a Father to you when I'b gone. We've lived like the heathen, and I've been a bad father to you. God forgive me and help you, for Jesus Christ's sake!"

The poor fellow could say no more; a fit of coughing came on, and he died soon after. Nelly now found herself left with four young brothers and sisters to provide for, and she herself was little more than a child—so at least she would have been considered in the country, but in London, especially amongst her class, children grow old very early. At fourteen she had the experience and self-reliance of a woman. She could drive as sharp a bargain for a basket of oranges or apples, and sell them as cleverly, as any experience market woman. She set about her task of being a mother to the little ones with a good heart, and, on the whole, succeeded wonderfully well. Her greatest difficulty was not in getting a living. That she could manage with the help of a few friends and the trifle which little Tom and Jane could earn. But what roubled and perplexed her was how to do so honestly and religiously. She had been used to thinking it all fair to get an advantage in either buying or selling by telling a lie; short weight or measure who no serious offense in her code of morals; and Sunday was the best day in the week for making money.

Now she had promised her father on his death-bed, in the missionary's presence, to give up all these things, and to live a good, honest life. How should she set about it? How should she go through with it? It was very hard to see the other girls in the same court, who had only themselves to provide for, earning two or three times as much as she did. But she had given her word, and could not go back, she said, unless she was obliged.

The missionary encouraged her to persevere, and told her of her Heavenly Father, of whom she had never even heard until a few weeks before, giving her the assurance that He would provide for her if she continued faithful. It was very hard to believe or understand this. Still it had come true so far. Often she had been in great difficulties, but she had not yet been reduced to actual want. Alway ssome supply had come. Bread for the children and herself had been provided hitherto; but now she was in her own phrase, "regular hard up."

She had left the children that morning with a scanty breakfast, and no fire, promising to come back as soon as she could get money for their dinner. But everything seemed to go against her. She walked mile after mile with her heavy basket on her head or her arm, but no one would buy. The poor girl was almost ready to drop with fatigue and hunger. At last, having nearly half her stock left on her hands, she turned wearily homeward. Her thoughts were very bitter and unbelieving. She half made up her mind to go back to her old ways, and not try to be good any more, for as yet she knew nothing of the love of God as a motive.

What was her surprise on opening the room door to find a bright fire burning in the grate, and a plentiful meal awaiting. The children could give no explanation than that "a beautful lady" had come in a carriage and asked some questions and gone away again, that then some coals, tea, sugar, milk, bread, and meat had been sent from the shop around the corner. Poor Nelly, whose ideas of Scripture were very confused, at once concluded that it was an angel who had come in the carriage and sent the provisions, and she proceeded to tell the children all she could remember about the various visits of angels in the Bible.

The visitor was not the angel Nelly imagined. She was simply a pious lady, who, having heard of the struggles of the poor girl to do right, had occasionally sent her help through the missionary, and who now resolved to visit the family and see for herself. But the help came from God as surely as though He had sent an angel to convey it.

I cannot say that Nelly's troubles, her temptations and doubts, were at an end; but I can say that this was the beginning of better days with her. Her kind friends watched over her, instructed her, helped her with small sums of money to enable her to buy at a better advantage, and got her brothers into situations as they grew up.

Poor Nelly, when I last heard of her some year ago, was a thriving, well-to-do woman, and better than all, a cheerful, happy Christian.—Publisher Unknown.

THE HELPING HAND

"Please let me go with you, John!" begged Betty. "I wont to be a Helping Hand, too."

"You can't; you are too little," said John, looking down from the pony cart.

"I'm not too little," said Betty. "Please let me go with you."

But John shook his head. "You are too little," he said. "Wait till you grow bigger."

Betty watched the two boys drive away. They were going up the mountain side to take some food and clothing to a poor woman. And, because the woman was sick, mother had sent nurse along with the boys.

The older children belonged to a society called The Helping Hand, and they were pledged to be helpful and kind. Betty thought it was very fine to be a Helping Hand and she could scarcely keep back her tears when she remembered that John had said she was too little to belong to the band. She went back to the house very slowly, and sat down on the lowest step. She turned her little hands palm upward, and looked at them. They were rather small. Betty could not deny that, but she was sure they were not too small to do some good.

Just then father came round the corner of the house.

"The little chickens are in mother's pansy bed," he called. "Who will help me catch them?"

"I will!" cried Betty, starting up. When the little chickens were caught, and put in their coop again, Betty followed father to the garden. She helped him gather vegetables for dinner, and helped him wash them at the barnyard trough. Then she gathered the baby's blocks, and made a tall house for him to knock down. She held mother's yarn while she rolled it into a ball, then she helped Nora shell peas.

"It seems to me this society is doing some good work around here," said father, coming to the door with his driving gloves in his hand. How about it, little Helping Hand?"

"Me?" cried Betty, looking up in surprise. "Why, father, I'm not a Helping Hand!"

"You are not?" asked father. "I think you must be mistaken.'

He caught the little girl up, and swung her to his shoulders.

"How would you like to drive with me up to the mountain orchard, to get some fine peaches for mother?"

"Oh," cried Betty, "I would like that better than anything in the world!"

As she drove away with father she looked at her hands again. And this time she felt very sure that they were not too small to be helpful.—Sunshine.

A WORKER'S PRAYER

Lord, speak to me, that I may speak
In living echoes of Thy tone;
As Thou hast sought, so let me seek
Thy erring children, lost and lone.

O lead me, Lord, that I may lead
The wandering and the wavering feet,
O feed me, Lord, that I may feed
The hungering ones with manna sweet.

O strengthen me, that while I stand
Firm on the rock and strong in Thee,
I may stretch out a loving hand
To wrestlers with the troubled sea.

O teach me, Lord, that I may teach
The precious things Thou dost impart;
And wing my words, that they may reach
The hidden depths of many a heart.

O give Thine own sweet rest to me
That I may speak with soothing power
A word in season, as from Thee,
To weary ones in needful hour.

O fill me with Thy fullness, Lord,
Until my heart o'erflow
In kindling thought and glowing word
Thy love to tell, Thy praise to show.

O use me, Lord! use even me
Just as Thy wilt, and when and where,
Until Thy blessed face I see—
Thy rest, Thy joy, Thy glory share.

OUR PERSAUSION

The catholicity of the redeemed is also their common eternity. A visitor in a hospital asked a dying soldier: "What church are you of?" "The Church of Christ," he replied. "I mean, what persuasion are you of?" The dying man's face flooded with light as he answered: "I am persuaded, that neither life, nor death shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

Robert Bruce, of Kinnaird, after breakfast on the last day of his life, said suddenly to his daughter: "Hold, daughter; my Master calleth me." At these words his sight, unconsciously to himself, failed, and he called for a Bible; but finding that he was sightless, he said: "Turn up the eigth chapter of Romans, and put my finger on verse 39." "Now," he said, "is my finger on it?" They told him it was. Then he said: "God be with you, my children; I have breakfasted with you, and I shall sup with the Lord Jesus Christ tonight;" and immediately he died.—Dawn.

AMERICAN EXPLORER TRAPPED

"It was in Africa. The night was dark and stormy, the hunt was over; grim and powerful black warriors swarmed from the jungle paths; armed and silent they gather in their village stockade. The fires blazed brightly."

The scene struck terror to the heart of the American explorer. He and his party had been searching that wild region for pygmies, but he had become separated from his main caravan and had to take refuge in this native village.

He found himself a prisoner surrounded by naked savages. Barbarous men continued to gather from the bush, each savage clasping a wicked-looking spear or a long, heavy knife. Danger was in the air. The explorer believed himself trapped. He would die fighting.

At this dramatic moment the Chief appeared with twelve stalwart warriors. He ordered his braves to sit. They obeyed. The Chief then slowly approached the explorer with a small bag in his hand, the kind in which the Africans kept their deadly poisons for arrowheads and spear points. The explorer now expected to be poisoned, but he was alert and ready for the struggle.

In the death-like stillness the Chief stopped, put his hand into the poison bag and slowly drew out—a New Testament! Could the explorer believe his eyes! Yes, the Colporteur had been there before him. The explorer was in the house of friends.

Slowly the Chief told how he had secured the Book from a white man who had taught him the story of the Cross and how he was trying as best he knew to pray.

The watch-fires burned out in the night, but the explorer slept without fear.—The Church of Christ Advocate.

BACK TO WHAT?

A railroad conductor expressed his fear and disgust over the possible return of legalized beer and wine or other alcoholic drinks. "For seven years I have had this 'run,' and only once in that time have we had a drunken man on this train. Before prohibition went into effect, almost every week we had to remove a drunken man from the train, or threaten him with forcible removal if he did not remain silent and refrain from vile language. I hope the nation never goes back."

Those now clamoring for liquor will do well to remember how frequently in pre-prohibition days a man disgustingly profane, vulgar, and drunken had to be removed from the railroad train by the combined force of conductor and brakeman. Sunday excursions in pre-prohibition days were characterized by one great newspaper as "hogpen hells." Such and similar scenes vanished with very few exceptions after prohibition was enacted.

Witnessing the present-day advertising of railroads for the patronage of women and children, and the quietness and refinement of railway travel, and noting the automobiles driven by women and young people upon the highways and streets with comparative safety, how can any person advocate or contemplate the return of easy purchase and drinking of intoxicating liquor, without discredit to his judgment or dishonor to his chivalry?—The Christian Advocate.

THE BIG WHISTLE

A friend told us the other day about a little boy that he once saw playing with his Christmas toys. "You have a lot of nice toys, Johnny," said my friend.

"Yeth," answered Johnny, who lisped when he talked, "but I like thith little engine betht of all."

"That surely is a fine engine," said my friend. "Can it whistle?"

"Oh, yeth, it can whithle," said Johnny, as he opened the valve which let the steam into the whistle. The whistle sounded, but the engine promptly stopped running.

"Why, Johnny," said my friend, "what made the engine stop?" And Johnny answered, "Thith engine can't whithle and run at the thame time."

Are there not some people like Johnny's engine? So much of their energy is expended in "blowing" about themselves and their achievements that they have none left with which to work. The most efficient workman is the one who goes quietly about his task, doing faithfully and well the work that is expected of him, and leaving others to do the "blowing."—The Friend.

QUITTING

You will not quit—"for quitting's so easy to do."
It's hard, sometimes hard, to keep plugging along
When the game isn't going your way.
There are times without doubt, when your hope flickers out
And you think it is useless to play;
But just keep in mind that the battle's not lost
Until all of the fighting is through.
Make a contest of it, do not lie down and quit,
For quittings' so easy to do.

It's easy to flinch and it's easy to whine
When foes that are stronger assail;
When your pathway is barred and the going is hard,
That's the time it is easy to fail;
But while you've a chance don't give way to despair,
To yourself and your purpose stay true;
Make a battle of it, do not lie down and quit—
That's the easiest thing you can do.

WORTH TELLING

A story is related in Cassell's "Natural History" of a gentleman who laid a piece of sweetmeat on the table, and then picked up an ant and placed it on the sweetmeat. He was surprised to see the little creature go down by one of the legs of the table and seek his fellows. They appeared to have understood the news. He then at once turned back, followed by a long train of his fellow citizens, and took them to the prize.

Are there not many who know the sweetness of salvation who might learn a lesson from the ant? If we have tasted and seen that the Lord is good, let us do what we can to lead others into like blessings.—The Youth's Visitor.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Kernersville.—It is with indeed a glad heart that I try to write this report, for I feel that we are making such headway in our church and Sunday school that all readers will feel glad for us. Our Sunday school is steadily increasing, many thanks to the hearty cooperation of our members and their steady work.

Although the road that we have had to travel for the past few years has been very rugged and long, we have struggled along and now we see before us a bright future.

Our pastor, Rev. C. L. Grant, is the pulpit help this week in a revival at the First Church Lexington. We wish him the greatest success in his work there and hope that it will be a great revival.

Mr. Roger Linville, an able and intelligent young man of our church, is now in Chicago, spending some time at the World's Fair.

The first and second boys' classes, with the assistance of their teacher, Mr. Marcellus Ballard, is planning an outing for the entire Sunday school, Thursday, August 10, in the form of a watermelon feast at Linville's Springs. An enjoyable evening is expected by all.

The many friends of Miss Lucile Ingram will be glad to know that she is steadily recovering from her recent illness.

JESSIE LOUISE INGRAM, Reporter.

Glen Raven Charge.—Brother C. B. Way was with us in our Fairview meeting last week. He gave us splendid sermons and the church and community were delighted with his visit among us. There were four additions to the church as the result of the meeting.

The pastor was given a generous pounding by the Fairview people during the revival. We greatly appreciate their kindness in this matter.

The Glen Raven church is being enlarged and remodeled. We are doing this work on a pay-as-we-go basis. We are planning to have the work completed by conference if not before.

J. P. PEGG, Pastor.

Hope Siler City Charge.—Sunday, August 13, was a red letter day for Hope church, it being the celebration of the 60th anniversary of the organization of the church.

The occasion was appropriately observed with an all day program. At the 11 o'clock service after the usual preliminaries, devotional and some suitable song selections. Miss Minnie Cooper and Mrs. Herbert Andrew, from Siler City, rendered a duet which was very much enjoyed. Dr. R. M. Andrews brought the mesage of the hour, using as his subject "The Glorious Church," and to say that he did justice to the subject but feebly expresses it. We heard many favorable comments in regard to the sermon, and we all felt that he could not have brought a more fitting message for the occasion.

After lunch, which was served picnic style, and a social hour together, we re-assembled for the afternoon service. Dr. Andrews, having an appointment to fill at Sapling Ridge at 3 o'clock and thus being forced to hasten on, again had the floor for a short while and presented in a brief way his message as Conference President.

We were again favored with special music: Miss Minnie Cooper sang a beautiful solo, "The Church by the Side of the Road."

Rev. W. F. Kennett gave a fitting tribute to Rev. W. W. Amick, the first pastor of the church. A historical sketch of the church was read by the writer, and Miss Alice Talley called the roll of church members. Special recognition was given to Mr. J. J. Andrew, the only living charter member of the church, and also to those who had been members 50 years, or even 40 years.

Next on the program was the historical address delivered by Dr. Paul S. Kennett. This was indeed a treat to most of us for he not only knows the history of Hope Church, but also gave the history of the beginning of our church and the organization of the M. P. Conference which took place 105 years ago. The conference being just 45 years old when Hope Church was organized. He gave many interesting facts which many of us did not know. He also spoke with feeling of his association with the church, it being his mother's and kindreds' church, and also the church of his first pastorate.

While not as many of the former pastors and members who live away from Bonlee were present as we had hoped for, yet it was a real Home Coming Day to many and we enjoyed the fellowship together and thank our good pastor, Rev. Isley, for bringing these splendid speakers to us.

Rev. L. E. Mabry will come Monday afternoon to assist the pastor in the revival this week. Let us pray for the success of the meeting.

KARA ANDREW.

Community Church, Thomasville. — During the summer months the evening meetings have been in the form of vesper services. "Making Everyday Living Beautiful," was the subject for last Sunday evening. This was a rainbow meeting, discussed under the following colors: Red, Service; Orange, Patience; Yellow, Unselfishness; Green, Joy; Blue, Faith; Indigo, Dependability; Violet, Consecration. The poem "Now," was given and a solo, "End of a Perfect Day," was rendered. All parts were taken by young people of the church and proved to be very inspiring and helpful.

The pastor, Rev. H. Freo Surratt, will leave Thursday to assist Rev. J. A. Burgess in a series of meeting at Bethel church, Alamance charge.

Mrs. George McAdams, one of our faithful members, is ill and it has been necessary for her to remain in bed for the past six weeks. She is glad to have her friends call and everyone finds her cheerful and patient.

Mrs. Ralph Clodfelter underwent an operation the past week at Memorial hospital.

C. L. Gray, Jr., of First Church, High Point, sang at the morning service August 13, and his message in song was appreciated.

Miss Daneze Burkhart, of our church, and Mr. Faite Hill, were married in Danville, Va., on August 4. We wish for them both many years of happiness.

A number of classes in the Sunday school have been on picnics during the summer. Rev. Surratt's class of teen-age girls went on a picnic last Thursday night. The young men's and young ladies' classes are planning a watermelon feast at Crystal Lake Thursday night, August 17.

The Boy Scout work is progressing under the direction of Mr. Frank Gardner. The boys recently had a picnic. A committee consisting of Mr. Glenn Finch, Mr. Alva Boyles, and Rev. Surratt were named to assist with the scout work.

The young people of the church met at the home of Rev and Mrs. Surratt last Tuesday night effecting the organization of the dramatic talent of the church. Although the name of this organization is yet to be decided on, the following officers were elected: Sarah Forrest Thompson, President; Marvin Hobbs, vice-president; Odessa Myers, secretary; Marion Stone, treasurer. Miss Imogene Boyles, who has specialized in dramatics in her college work, will be the director.

We rgret to report the death of one of Community church's loyal members, Miss Hazel Clodfelter, on July 23. The funeral services were conducted from the church by Rev. Surratt, assisted by Rev. H. W. Maier of Lexington.

ZONDAL SECHREST, Reporter.

Albemarle.—The third quarterly conference was held at the church Wednesday night with a very good attendance. Reports from the various officers of the church showed some signs of encouragement. The Sunday school report showed a gain in attendance and offerings, over last quarter, with all departments working in harmony. J. P. Green and Ira Smart were nominated delegate and alternate to the Annual Conference.

The August meetings of the Ladies' Aid circles were held Tuesday, August 8. The Lucy Hatley circle met with Mrs. J. P. Green in the afternoon, while the Cam Snotherly circle was entertained in the home of Mrs. C. L. Taylor, at night. Due to quite a bit of sickness among the members, attendance at both meetings was below the average. Plans were made and discussed for several projects to be carried out.

The Cam Snotherly circle sponsored an ice cream supper at the church Friday night. Music was furnished by the Carolina Bluebirds' String Band, and those who came seemed to enjoy the evening. All the ice cream was sold, and a nice sum was realized from the sale.

The Intermediate department, headed by Mrs. C. S. Moton, enjoyed a picnic at Snugg's Park on Monday of last week. A weiner roast was the main event, and those present did full justice to the occasion.

Friday afternoon, Mrs. Ira Smart, superintendent, and the teachers of the primary and junior departments were hostesses to their pupils at a picnic at Snugg's Park. During the afternoon generous servings of homemade ice cream were enjoyed. Quite a large number; including several invited guests, were present at this pleasant outing.

We are sorry to report a number of our members are very ill at this time. Mrs. Ralph Andrew is in the Yadkin hospital, recovering from a serious operation last week. Mrs. Don Helms was carried to a Charlotte hospital last week, for examination by specialists, and still remains there. Her condition is regarded as very serious, and just what will be the outcome of the examinations is not yet known. Mrs. Fred Trexler remains very sick at her home. The six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Burleson was painfully burned Monday, when she overturned a pot of boiling water on her body. Mrs. Marshall Hatley has been suffering for the past week from an infected eye, but is now improving. And Lassiter Hatley, we still remember you up there in the Oteen hospital, glad you are improving so rapidly and hope to see you home soon.

Miss Lois Conie of Atlanta, Ga., who has been spending several weeks in the home of her sister, Mrs. J. R. Anderson, will return to her home the latter part of this week. Mrs. Anderson and children, will accompany her home for a visit with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Powell and children of Salisbury, were week-end guests in the home of Mrs. Marshall Hatley and Ira Smart.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—The community was saddened last week by the death of Rev. Lee Leonard who died early last Wednesday morning. His death occurred after a very brief illness having suffered a heart attack last Tuesday night after making a talk to the Odd Fellows lodge.

Surviving are his wife and six small children, four daughters and two sons, his father four sisters and nine brothers.

Funeral services were held at the Choice Street Methodist church at Greenville, Thursday afternoon. There were many friends gathered at Liberty Hill to view the body before it was laid to rest in the cemetery of the church he loved so well. Although when he moved to Greenville he moved his letter there, he was still loved by all who knew him here. We are glad to have it said—Liberty Hill was his birthplace—physically and spiritually. He will be missed by all who knew him, but we know he is at rest: awaiting the Resurrection Morn. May God be near the saddened family. They have our deepest sympathy and prayers.

Our revival services started Sunday. We are sory that Mrs. Love is sick and hasn't been able to be with us. Rev. Love, himself, has been sick too. But we hope that both are much better.

We were all surprised and overjoyed to have one of our former pastors, Rev. G. B. Ferree, and family come in just before services Monday night, and are happy that they are going to remain with us for a few days. We will enjoy having him preach again for us. We wish other pastors would visit us, too.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

A number of our folks have been attending the revival services which were held at the Gibsonville M. E. church during the past week. Rev. Miller of Greensboro, did the preaching.

Misses Mary and Alma McCollum are reported to be getting along nicely after having their tonsils removed last week.

Miss Katy Lee Taylor of Glenwood is spending a few days here with her aunt, Mrs. I. N. Woodard and her cousin, Miss Hazel Woodard.

Rev. Mr. Isley, pastor of the First M. P. church in Lexington, is to assist Brother Loy in this meeting. Services at night and during the week.

Palestine, Flat Rock Circuit.—As this reporter has been working away from home with a sick mother at home to help morning and night, I have neglected to report but will try to do better.

Pastor Hutton has filled all his appointments and our people have enjoyed them all.

Our revival meeting was held the third Sunday in July. Brother Hutton had as the pulpit help, Rev. W. F. Ashburn of Greensboro, and where is there a dearer, sweeter, soul than Brother Ashburn? He is loved by the aged and he is loved by the children. The writer remembers very well the first time she ever saw Brother Ashburn; then being just a little girl.

I only got to attend one service after Sunday. After hearing those two sermons, I had to say goodbye to go back to work the next morning. Brother Ashburn said, "Grace, I expect to meet you in heaven." I'm going to be looking for a lot of you people from Palestine; and I shall be greatly disappointed if I don't see Brother Ashburn in heaven. I expect to see both Brother Ashburn and Pastor Hutton in heaven.

Only a few more appointments and this year will be closed. Our church budgets are far from what we would like for them to be. What is done must be done in only a short time. Yet we hope that all will look better near the close.

Uncle Calvin Tucker has been very sick, he has improved some.

Mrs. L. A. Tucker, mother of the writer, has been sick for the past three months. She does not improve any. please remember her in your prayers.

A number of persons rededicated their lives to Christ. Only one new member was added to the church but it is hoped that there will be more in the near future. REPORTER.

Orange Charge.—The revival meeting began at Union Grove on August 6, and closed on August 10.

Rev. Geo. R. Brown came in time for the services Monday and did all the preaching from then until the close. Dr. Brown's preaching was well received. Much good was accomplished. The church was revived, 14 were converted, and nine joined the church.

Rev. J. D. Wililams and Mrs. C. A. Cecil attended the services. Tuesday. We are always glad to have them this being their old home church, they feel at home here.

Lexington, Mt. Carmel.—The largest attendance at Sunday school in the history of the church was the first Sunday in August. One hundred and fifty-one in number. This being the annual Home Coming, it drew a large congregation for the all day program. The church was virtually crowded to capacity at the 11 o'clock hour when Judge H. Hoyle Sink addressed the assembly on "Home." Judge Sink is one of the boys who went out from this community and we felt very fortunate in getting him to speak on this occasion. Splendid music was furnished by the choir from First M. P. Church, Lexington, and the Presbyterian male quartette. At the noon hour dinner was served in picnic style under the shade trees. The afternoon program was given over by the Canaan male chorus of near Midway, the Presbyterian quartette, and short talks were made by the following who once attended church at Mt. Carmel: Mr. H. H. Koontz spoke on "Understanding, Love and Sacrifice." Mr. John Hedrick and Mr. John Hege of Thomasville and Mr. Harper Leonard of the Shiloh community and Mr. George Berrier were the other speakers of the afternoon.

The revival began the following day with Rev. C. L. Grant of Kernersville as the pulpit help. He delivered some splendid and inspiring sermons to large and attentive congregations. We had 13 conversions and nine united with the church. We were very glad to have Rev. C. B. Way, a former pastor, with us for one service.

Kannapolis.—We are happy to welcome Rev. J. T. Bowman, a graduate of High Point College and of Westminster Theological Seminary, to our community. He will fill the pulpit for our pastor at the morning and evening service, Sunday, August 20. Everybody is celceme.

Rev. Bowman will be director of the Bible school (the first to convene in our church) beginning on Monday, August 21. The hours are from 9 am .m to 11:30 a. m. All children are urged to attend this Bibel school regardless of denomination. It will continue for 10 days, with four classes, Beginners, Primary, Junior and Intermediate; with the Intermediates ranging from 15 to 17 years. The school wil be under the direction of Rev. Bowman. Under the supervision of Rev. Morris and other teachers will be: Mrs. W. T. Kiser and Mrs. C. B. McCommons. We are also expecting Rev. W. M. Howard, pastor of Spencer, N. C., M. P. church, also a graduate of High Point College, to be with us by the middle of the week.

We call your attention to the new improvements that have recently been purchased for our church which were made possible by the different business firms and individuals of our church and town. There have been new book racks with card holders combined (2 racks) on each pew. Also one hundred and ten new hymnals, "'Hymns of Praise, 1 and 2 Combined," Price 55 cents each. We are proud of these and trust that each one will do his part toward taking care of same, and by the interest and help of Mrs. T. J. Evans of Henderson, N. C., and the different firms of the town we have been able to place church bulletins in the church. We also have the machine for printing.

The church had the privilege of welcoming Mr. Bryan Hurd of Cramerton, N. C., President of the State B. Y. P. U., also Great Junior Sagamore of the Radman Fraternity of North Carolina, to a spiritual and inspiring message on Sunday evening, August 13, taking as his subject, "Life's Highway." We were also favored at this time with a beautiful duet by Mrs. W. T. Kiser and Mr. R. T. Sides.

Rev. Morris, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Hampton and family, spent last weekend with the former's parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. D. Morris of Fallston.

We were indeed glad to see Mr. William McCommons able to be with us at church Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. X. E. Grayson extensively entertained Mr. Bryan Hurd at a birthday dinner Sunday, August 13, at which time it was made known that Mr. Grayson shared the honor with Mr. Hurd in celebration of his own birthday anniversary. Covers were laid for the following: Mr. Hurd, Mr. Grayson, Rev. Morris, Dr. W. H. Drewery, of Cooleemee, N. C., Master Hoyt Grayson, Misses Faynell, Dorothy, Boyce Jean, Phyllis Grayson and Mrs. Grayson.

THE BRIDGE YOU'LL NEVER CROSS

It's what you think that makes the world
Seem dull or bright to you;
Your mind may color all things gray
Or make them radiant hue.
Be glad today, be clear and wise,
Seek Truth amid the dross;
Waste neither time nor thougth about
The bridge you'll never cross.

There's useful work for you to do
With hand and brain and heart;
There's urgent human service, too,
In which to take your part.
Make every opportunity
Worth-while and not a loss;
The best is yours, so do not fear
The bridge you'll never cross.

If life seems drab and difficult,
Then face it with a will;
You do not have to walk alone,
Since God is with you still.
Press on with courage toward the goal,
With Love your shield emboss;
Be strong, look up, and just ignore
The bridge you'll never cross.

BEEFSTEAK OR SWAT FOR PESKY MOSQUITO?

This is "Be Kind to Insects Week." We have had weeks of every other sort, and why not this?

Kindness is a great thing. But try being kind to a Wall Street banker—and see how much good it does you.

Kindness is all right but it should not be bestowed where it will do no good. There are some women who have so much kindness in their heart that they are kind to almost everything. They are kind to the cat, kind to the dog, kind to tramps. They are even kind to their husband—which is going some.

Kindness pays (sometimes). Be kind to moths and they will return the kindness by eating up everything you have. You think you have conquered the moths when you use a vacuum sweeper every day in all the dark places. Then you discover that you are only being kind to the moths in another way, for they will make the sweeper a regular breeding nest. You will never get rid of them until you take the bag off the sweeper and boil it.

Moths do not repay your kindness with kindness; they repay it with millions more moths. Purchase some moth-balls, which are a wasteproduct of the oil companies, and scatter these moth-balls everywhere in your home. Put them in all your clothes and bureau drawers. Stink the whole house up with them; make yourself smell until you become a traveling advertisement for moth-balls. Purchase a can of "Sure-Kill Moth Spray," and spray the stuff all over your belongings. Then smile with the idea that you have beaten those moths at last.

But you will discover that you have been kind to the moths and the big concerns which make tremendous profits by selling alleged moth remedies to the long-suffering public.

With mosquities it is much the same. You can spray them with fancy-smelling liquids and they will eat it right up. They will show their appreciation of your kindness by breeding in still greater numbers and when you arise in the night and endeavor to swat them you will be greeted by their defiant crooning, as you swat in vain.

You might think you could go to the frigid zone and escape the mosquities. But no, they are even worse there. You may travel to other distant places. Everything else may be ideal. The air may be just right, the surroundings perfect, the eats splendid, and they may have a full moon every night—but you will find the locality cursed with mosquitoes. You are then ready to believe the statement made by some great traveler that "a good many of those mosquitoes would weigh a pound"—and you would be ready to admit that it would not take so many of them either.

The Agricultural Department's famous remedy for mosquities, which consists in taking a tumbler partly filled with kerosene and getting up on a stepladder and reaching the glass up to the ceiling and causing the mosquitoes to fall into the kerosene one at a time, is one of the best known. The other classic remedy is to place a piece of raw beefsteak by the side of your bed at night, and the theory is that the mosquitoes will feed on the steak instead of you. We have yet to learn that this remedy has ever been successfully demonstrated—but it does sound good and helps meat business.

If that isn't "being kind to insects," what is? Not many of us can afford to feed on beefsteak, but it is nice to buy a supply for your mosquitoes.—Pathfinder.

WE'RE IN THE NRA

Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!
We're all in the NRA.
Employers big and small
May be backed to the wall,
But by dint of the brow
They can figure somehow
To raise the meager pay
Of those who toil day by day.
It's part of the New Deal,
The workers to better heel.
This is promised, in turn,
To give us money to burn.
Sound the bugle and the band!
Let everybody lend a hand.
Come, on, America, join the fray;
We can do lots on better pay.
We're routing Old Man Depression
For his damnable transgression.
Good times, folks, are on the way—
Thanks to Uncle Sam's NRA!

PRACTICE THESE EXERCISES DAILY

Begin the day, before you rise, with stretching exercises. 1. Lie flat on the back, stretch the left arm overhead six times and return to the side. Repeat with the right arm. Then alternate. 2. With hands clasped, draw the left leg close to the abdomen, bending the knee. Repeat with right leg, then with both legs. Raise the left leg, keeping the knee straight. Repeat with the right leg, then alternate. 4. Lie on right side, raise right arm and right leg. 6. Lie face downward. Flex the left leg at the knee, next the right leg, then both legs. 7. Clasp the hands down as far as possible while raising the head. Do each movement six or more times.—Grenville Kleiser.

We are profoundly grateful for all these offerings. We are pressed for money just now because the offerings for the summer have been exceedingly short, and because one carload of coal came last Friday and another one is on the road. My, how our hearts rejoiced today when the mail brought us a letter from Brother Hughes of Concord with check for $100.00 inclosed. A few individual checks like that along with the Sunday schools and churches, which send their monthly offerings, would soon put us in good shape here. We certainly thank Brother Hughes.

An Offering from Every Sunday School

There ought to be some one in each Sunday school in the conference who is interested enough in the Children's Home to see that the school sends an offering each month for these last three months of the conference year, August, September, and October. It can be done and each school will do it cheerfully if some one will present it each month. So many schools which used to send the regular offerings have ropped out that it is felt very keenly here. Please rally to our relief these three months.

A Good Response

We have already had a good response to our appeal for Women's and Young Women's organizations to make dresses and underclothing for our girls. Measurements for several girls go forwar dtoday to three organizations. Others will help, we know. So if your auxiliary, circle, class or band will make dresses and underwear for two or more girls, please let us know and we will send the measurements. Girls range in all ages from five to 17. Please don't all call for the little ones, for the larger one must have dresses too.

A Piano

We hope to secure a good piano before September 14, when school opens. Who will donate one to the Home?

By this time next week we expect all of our children back from their visits. We greatly appreciate the fine help we have had in getting them out this summer.

We thank all of you for your good interest in the work here.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON, Supt.

CROATANS STILL MISSING

Hope that a community of about 8,000 people living in and around Robeson county in North Carolina would furnish the key to the mystery of Raleigh's lost Virginia colony was blasted by Dr. John R. Swanton of the Smithsonian Institution.

Dr. Swanton believes that these so-called Croatans are descendants of the Cheraw and Keyauwee tribes who have intermarried with the whites. They are undoubtedly of mixed blood but they themselves have no definite idea or history of their own ancestry.. "Croatan was the name of an island," he said, "and an Alonquin Indian town . . . but there is not a bit of reason to suppose that either they or the Croatans went inland. — Pathfinder.

MARRIED

Barrow-Ingram

Miss Gwendolyn Ingram and James D. Barrow were quietly married Saturday morning, August 5, at High Point, with Sev. D. D. Broom officiating.

The couple was accompanied to High Point by the bride's brother, Early Ingram. The bride was lovely in an ensemble of blue crepe with accessories to match.

After the wedding the couple left for a motor trip to western points of the state. Upon their return they will make their home near Kernersville.

Mrs. Barrow is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Ingram and is a graduate of Draughn Business college.

Mr. Barrow is a son of Mr. Thomas Barrow and is connected with the Adams-Millis Corp.

Mr. and Mrs. Barrow hold a wide circle of friends both here and in other points of North Carolina and both are thoroughly interested in the church and the things that make up a better life. We hope and predict for them a life of happiness and usefulness.

A WILLING COW

"She's an awfully good cow. Our children think the world of her. You'll like her a lot," said the owner, in talking to a prospective customer.

"And how much milk does she give?" asked the prospect.

"I don't know exactly; I don't milk her myself and I wouldn't want to deceive you—but she's a nice cow—first class. She won a blue ribbon at the county fair once."

"Well, you must have some idea—does she give a gallon at a milking?"

"I would not want to say; I never kept much track. But if you want a fine cow, there's a fine bargain for you."

"But I would like to have just a rough notion of how much she gives. Does she give as much as a half gallon a day?"

"She is such a willing cow that I have never felt it was kind to check up too closely on her. She's a family cow—the nicest old cow anyone ever had—gentle and willing. If she's got any milk she'll give it to you."—Exchange.

HOW TO GET AND KEEP A JOB

I am not an employment bureau and cannot correct economic conditions, but I have an idea that may help our unemployed readers find work.

Now, here is my plan. Kneel down alone somewhere and have a confidential talk with God. Tell Him that you are out of work and need money—that you would like to go into partnership with Him in business. Tell Him that if He will take you into such partnership and will give you a job you will be only too glad to subscribe to any conditions He may suggest.

1. Now the laws of partnership are as follows: Namely, both parties sign a contract which binds them to certain duties. If one party fails, that releases the other party. So if God fails you, then you are released. On the other hand, if you fail God, He is released from keeping His promises to you.

2. Each partner bears his part of the expenses and shares the profits. Now if God knows He can trust you to be an honorable, upright partner who will not misappropriate funds and will never rob Him of a cent just because you happen to be the treasurer, then, I believe you can secure a position from Him.

A woman whose husband supported the family often longed to have money to give to God's cause. She tried various ways of earning it and failed; she told the Lord that if He would give her money, she would always give one-half to Him. It was remarkable how quickly the Lord answered her prayer. Ways of making money were given her and for years she always had something to give to every good cause, besides having 50 per cent of her profits for herself.

During the great financial depression of President Cleveland's administration, men were considered fortunate who earned 35 cents a day. I believe it was at that time that a gentleman, whom we shall call Mr. Blank, lost his position. He and his wife were in distress. It was imposible to secure anything to do. Finally, becoming desperate, he told the Lord that if He would give him a job of any kind of legitimate work he would give Him half that he earned.

Quickly the answer came and it was not long before Mr. Blank was making small wages. He was grateful indeed but this amount, when divided with God, was not sufficient to meet the needs of the family. What should He do? He was honest and kept his contract with God. If he had managed to live without work, he surely could manage now that he had half his wages for himself! This test was given to see how honorable he was. Later his wages increased untol the family had a comfortable living.

One day as Mr. Blank held God's half of the monthly allowance in his hands, he said to his wife, "That's a pretty large around to give to God; let us keep it this month." He did so and by so doing broke his contract. This, of course, released God from keeping His contract with him and Mr. Blank soon found that he was out of work.

Seeing his sin, he repented and asked forgiveness when God again gave him a job. He prospered him and soon he was making $400 per month. Each pay day found him with $200 in his hand for his Heavenly Partner in business, and Mr. and Mrs. Blank found it the greatest joy of their lives to put this amount where it would net the most good for God and souls.

A wealthy lady told the writer how she made her fortune. Her husband always gave money to the church but would not share his wages methodically with God—didn't believe in it. My friend warned him that some calamity would likely come for his disobedience, but he was stubborn and went on in his own way. Finally he lost his job and was left with a wife and five children on the county!

One day his wife told the Lord that since her husband would not obey Him, she was helpless but that she was innocent and that if He would only let her make some money, she would promise faithfully to give to God's cause a certain per cent. By a very unexpected means a certain recipe for making doughnuts came into her hands. She tried it and they were excellent. She sent samples to her neighbors who gave her their orders. Her little boy delivered the first few dozen in a market basket. Every dime was properly and promptly divided with her Heavenly Partner in business. Orders increased until her husband, who by this time had a temporary job on the railroad, dropped his work to help his wife make doughnuts. She told him of her contract with God. He agreed to help her keep it and now they are delivering truck loads of the finest doughnuts daily to various bakeries and are making a fine profit. But they always pay God his share, for they are laborers together with Him.

I fully believe that some who read these lines will find work by deciding to go into partnership with God. Remember, He will take you in as a partner if He can trust you. —God's Bible School and Missionary Training Home.

FINNEY ON DRESS

"Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord."—Isa. 43:10.

Every Christian makes an impression by his conduct, and witnesses either for one side or the other. His looks, dress, whole demeanor, make a constant impression on one side or the other. He can not help testifying for or against religion. He is either gathering with Christ or scattering abroad. Every time you move you touch the keys whose sound will re-echo over all the hills and dales of heaven and through all the dark caverns and vaults of hell.

Every moment of your lives you are exerting a tremendous influence that will tell on the immortal interests of souls all around you. Are you asleep while all your conduct is exerting such an influence?

Are you going to walk in the street? Take care how you dress. What is that on your head? What does that gaudy ribbon and those ornaments upon your dress say to every one that meets you? It makes the impression that you wish to be thought pretty. Take care! You might just as well write on your clothes, "No truth in religion." It say, "Give me dress, give me fashion, give me flattery, and I am happy." The world understands this testimony as you walk the streets. You are "living epistles, known and read of all men."

If you show pride, levity, bad temper, and the like, it is like tearing open the wounds of the Savior. How Christ might weep to see professors of religion going about hanging up His cause to contempt at the corners of streets! Only "let the women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety, not with broidered hair or gold or pearls or costly array, but (which women professing godliness) with good works;" only let them act consistently, and their conduct will tell on the world, heaven will rejoice, and hell groan at their influence.

But oh, let them display vanity, try to be pretty, bow down to the goddess of fashion, fill their ears with ornaments and their fingers with rings; let them put feathers in their hats and clasps upon their arms, lace themselves up till they can hardly breathe; let them put on their "round tires and walk mincing as they go," and their influence is reversed. Heaven puts on the robes of mourning, and hell may hold a jubilee.

Your spirit and deportment produce an influence on the world against religion. How shall the world believe religion when the witnesses are not agreed among themselves, and the sum of their whole testimony is, There is no need of being pious?

Oh, how guilty! Perhaps hundreds of souls will meet you in the Judgment, and curse you (if they are allowed to speak) for leading them to hell by practically denying the truth of the Gospel.

Truth makes all clear;
Your pathway bright,
Know God is here.

WOOL RUGS CAN BE WASHED

A good wool pile rug which is badly soiled, can be made to look like new by washing, says Mary A. Covert, home management specialist at South Dakota State College. A hot, breezy day should be selected for the washing, since it is important to dry the rug as rapidly as possible, to prevent molding or weakening and also avoid a musty smell. The first step is to make a soap jelly by melting a cake of soap in water and adding two tablespoonfuls of ammonia. Moisten jelly with hot water and beat to dry lather. Apply the lather with a soft brush or sponge, taking care not to dip up water which may have settled to the bottom. Apply this to a small area, working the lather well into the pile of the rug. As soon as the lather shows signs of dirt remove it with a clean cloth and apply clean lather. Repeat until the lather no longer shows soil.

Remove as much of the lather as possible with a soft, dry cloth. Rinse with a sponge dipped in clean, warm water and squeezed almost dry. If the water is hard, add a little borax to prevent any hard water deposit. Wipe as dry as possible with an old soft rag. Continue to wash small areas across the length of the rug until the washing is completed. When the rug is dry, brush up the pile.—Exchange.

* Subsidy paid in full.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

"Well, don't get me mixed up in it," said the father. "If you don't get along together I don't want you to have a chance to say it was my fault."

Publisher—I'll look them over but I cannot promise to bring them out unless you have a name that is well known.

Poet—That's all right. My name is known wherever the English language is spoken.

Publisher—Ah, that's different. What is it? I apologize for not knowing you.

Poet—My name is John Smith.

The printers of THE HERALD can use several pounds of soft cotton rags. Must be clean and of good size, as small scraps are not acceptable. Bring us your surplus rags and convert them into cash. McCulloch & Swain, Asheboro Street at Trinity, Greensboro, N. C.

DOLLARS or DOTS?—WHICH?

The possibility that some churches and charges may have forgotten the classification into which they fall in the HERALD Subsidy scale prompts its presentation to refresh the minds of those who may not remember just the amount asked of their church toward the support and continuation of the HERALD.

Churches with less than 100 members contribute	$ 2.50
Churches whose membership is from 101 to 200	5.00
Churches whose membership is from 201 to 300	7.50
Churches whose membership is from 301 to 400	10.00
Churches whose membership is from 401 to 500	15.00
Churches whose membership is more than 500	20.00

A glance at table showing the receipts on Subsidy is convincing proof of the effectiveness of the plan. If your church or charge has not done its part, the doing of your bit will help to lift the load that crushes. The blank spaces in the Subsidy column are gradually diminishing. Let's put Dollars in the place of Dots!

PUBLIC WORKS UNDER WAY

Nearly one-third of the money authorized under the public works act has already been set aside for specific purposes. To put in in good round numbers, $1,000,000,00 of the total $3,300,000,000 fund has been allotted.

It is not expected that the remainder of the fund will be allocated hastily as enough has been made available to start the wheels turning at a fine rate.

The $400,000,000 set aside for public roads has actually been released for expenditure and there are several other federal projects getting under way immediately. The Tennessee Valley project is to get $50,000,000 to begin operations and the main office has been established at Muscle Shoals with branch offices to be opened at Knoxville and Chattanooga.

In addition there has been allotted $38,000,000 for naval construction; $63,000,000 for the Grand Coulee dam in the Columbia river; $22,000,000, for the Casper-Alcova irrigation project in Wyoming and $50,000,000 is for the Civilian Conservation Corps that has been at work for some time and indications are that this civilian army will extend its work for a year instead of six months. Of the remainder, $11,500,000 will go toward helping with work already started on the upper Mississippi, dredging the channel to permit the passage of deep draft river boats.

The Geologic Survey gets $2,500,000 and a sum of $2,600,000 goes to the Coast and Geodetic Survey to carry on their work of surveys and mapping. In addition to these, the Abricultural Adjustment and Farm Credit Administration will pet $100,000,000.—Pathfinder.

"CODES" NOT SO NEW

Our government, in resorting to a "code" to get people to work together and pull business back over that fatal red line, did not have to invent anything to speak of. In fact, codes are almost as old as the hills.

J. B. Frey, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, has been digging back into the records and he points out that the oft-quoted King Hammurabi, the great ruler of the Babylonians, perfected a code for labor in a period of depression quite a while ago—in fact some 4,000 years.

Mr. Frey makes a very important point when he warns that unless the purchasing power of the working classes is greatly increased, the value of the great wealth which has been produced will virtually melt away and disappear. This has actually happened at various stages in the world's history—so we don't have to theorize about it. But—knowing the danger as we now do—we must prevent such a calamity.—Pathfinder.

WILL HUNT LOST TRIBES

A Washington explorer, Richard C. Gill, with six companions, will leave Gill's ranch in the hills of Ecuador some time this coming fall to try to locate the savage Aucas tribes of "lost people" believed to exist in a "lost world" somewhere in the unexplored section of the Amazon valley of South America.

They will be accompanied by a small band of head-hunting Jivaro Indians with whom Gill has formerly made friends. A unique feature of this expedition is that they expect to carry into the jungles a small portable radio transmitter with which they will attempt to keep in touch with the world left behind.—Pathfinder.

Whimpering Children We!

We must have just what we wish—
If we fail we fret and fume;
Reason leaves our simple minds,
Troubles high and higher loom.

We impeach the ways of God
Formed before the world was made;
Our own plans we substitute,
Though so crude and newly laid.

Rebels 'gainst the common good,
Pleasing self our highest aim:
Living ever cross with God,—
Such a life is such a shame!

The Divine Call to the Ministry

All down the ages God has called for special duties special men—Noah, Abraham, Moses, Samuel, the prophets, the apostles. Is it unreasonable to think that He makes especial impressions upon the minds of men today? Many testify that He does. Some, like Jonah, have to be driven to their duty by aburdened conscience or by afflictions of the body. Perhaps some have gone joyfully to their work. These are to be commended. They heard the Master's call and at once followed Him. Others hearing are slow to obey, feeling that they are incompetent for the work. Others seem to doubt whose voice they hear. Perhaps they need someone to encourage them.

I have always been slow in advising young men to preach. I feared I might in my judgment be mistaken. Then I felt that God in some way can make His will known to anyone without the help of man. But may we not in such opinions go to the extreme, and be ourselves in the wrong? Did not God who called Barnabas and Saul for a special work also say unto the church to send them? May not God, who impresses the mind of some young man that he is wanted for the ministry, also make it known to some devout souls that they should give this young man encouragement?

May not some be mistaken as to what God wishes of them? I served one church that had six or seven licensed preachers. Perhaps all these wanted to be employed by the Conference. Others wanted to be licensed. Some, by their lack of education, can not do the work that would be required of them. Some are handicapped by bodily infirmities, by large families, or by something else, so that they are not acceptable to the churches. Then there are not pastorates for everybody.

Again I say, may not some of these be mistaken as to what God wants them to do? Is it not sometimes just a divine impulse to do all the good they can and to tell to dying men that there is a loving Savior? And did not Jesus, when He sat by the well and preached to one, set an example how all may work?

Again, if these devout men are really called of God to the ministry, and the church will open up no way for them, and if they do all they can in the limited sphere in which they are compelled to move, God will never accuse them of being unfaithful servants.
W. T. TOTTEN.

Keep on Preaching

As I sat in the church last night and listened to the minister characterize this as a jazz, pleasure-mad, skeptical, materialistic, crime-cursed age, I had no mental dissent from his position. On the other hand, I felt forced by the facts to agree with him. And this, of course, marks a downward tendency for the race. With moral standards low, and the bent of mind and heart away from God and the great moral virtues that ennoble character and enrich life, there can be but one course that men travel. It must inevitably be a downward way. And that is true both for the individual and the nation. Society, as such, is no better than the individuals that constitute it.

This picture of our times is not a bright one. But it is no darker than the facts out of which it is painted. Moral standards are low, and vast millions of our people have no controlling conception of holy things, sacred institutions, and the virtues that make for integrity of character, peace and happiness of heart, and the commendation of God here and hereafter.

But when all has been said about the evils of ourtimes, and the picture has been painted just as dark as it is, there is still hope, and that hope is in the Church, and a consecrated, intelligent, and fearless ministry, that will testify to the high and the low, the rich and the poor, the learned and the unlearned, "repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ."

As I sat in the church last night, I mused on the effect that the sermon and the service would have on the thought and conduct of the group present. It is not too much to think that they left the church with good impressions on their minds and good impulses in their hearts. And these impressions and impulses will hold them true to God and the good as they find themselves again in the currents of life.

And it is in just such groups as this that the leaven is to be found that will leaven the social lump of this age. As great multitudes of men and women, young people and children, find their way regularly to the thousands of churches of this land, and listen to warm-hearted, scriptural sermons; as they sing together the God-sent hymns of the church, pray together, meditate together, pay together, fellowship together, and confess their sins and consecrate themselves to God, they will be brought under the influence of a power that can not but be an anchor to their souls. These people who worship in our churches can not go out from the holy place where they really meet God, and straightway forget what manner of men they are. Impressions will be made, resolutions formed, purposes strengthened, and ideals exalted that will be for such worshipers the savor of life unto life. And so it will be that God, through His Church, will preserve a host that have not, and will not, bow the knee to Baal.

Lift up your head, O Church of God; "and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors;" for it is through you that the King of Glory shall come in to save this adulterous and sinful generation.

And you, brother ministers, take heart. "Lift up your voice with strength: lift it up; be not afraid." When you preach next Sunday encourage your heart in the confidence that you are the spokesman—God's spokesman—of the mightiest organization in the world and the one and only institution with a remedy sufficient to save this age from moral ruin and putrification.

Keep on preaching! S. W. Taylor.

AN ALARMING SITUATION

I do not believe that those who know me intimately will accuse me of being either a pessimist or an alarmist. I am neither the one or the other, however, I am not blind to stubborn facts, facts that haunt me day and night and cause me to wonder what the outcome will be.

I recite a few facts here in the hope that our churches will be aroused by them to render heroic service in meeting our financial obligations.

First. To date I have received from all sources the sum of $2,575.83. In this amount is included $500.00 borrowed since last Conference adjourned. Of this amount $1,292.68 was for A. C. B., to be used in paying our President, and in meeting incidental expenses.

Second. At this rate I shall be able to pay about one-half of the President's salary when Conference meets. There will be nothing to apply on our indebtedness, and nothing for our superannuates, except the meager amount that will come in as "special" for them.

Third. Something must be done at our Conference to "balance our budget." As Christians we can not afford to continue to make debts with no prospect of paying them. Brethren, we must face the issue like men and not be afraid or ashamed to adopt drastic measures, if necessary, in order to meet our financial obligations and save ourselves from bankruptcy. This is your problem, and it is your bounden duty to solve it.

SOME PERTINENT SUGGESTIONS ON COLLEGE EDUCATION

By Thomas C. Amick

The high school senior is confronted with many questions. On the day he receives his diploma, he is at one of the cross-roads of life. One of these roads leads to college, another leads to work and the beginning of a career. Which road is the high school graduate to take? His teachers and the college speakers who have spoken at his school have advised the college course and because of this advice he is already predisposed to go to college . However, obstacles are often in the way and many of these the high school graduate can not surmount. One very definite obstacle is poverty, and this has clipped the wings of many who would have gladly mounted higher.

This brings up the question of the value of a college education. Is a college education worth the effort, the struggle, and the cost? Many college graduates would be as well off if they had never gone to college. They have spent their money, their time, and they have passed their work by the grace of their professors, and after the four years of college work they are neither cultured, nor have they learned to think through a difficult problem of life. On the other hand, other students after four years of college work have their minds cultivated, their hearts uplifted, their wits sharpened, and they go out ready to meet and to solve life's problems successfully. For the first class the college course is not worth the cost; for the second class the value of their college career can not be estimated in material possessions. The high school graduate should consider a number of things before deciding to take a college course.

Then there are different kinds of colleges,—the state colleges, the privately endowed colleges, and the denominational colleges. To which should the expectant college student go? That also depends. The smaller college gives and does not profess to give anything but a liberal arts course of study. The privately endowed college and the state colleges offer a wide variety of courses preparatory for some of the most useful and dignified vocations in life. The ideal college education is a liberal arts course followed by a professional course. But this requires a great deal of time and is quite expensive. To make this preparation for life requires about seven years of college work and the cost is prohibitive, except to a favored few. And the high school graduate must decide for himself how much time and money he has at his disposal. A few can earn their college expenses at the larger colleges by their work, but this means a longer time spent in college if the student is to get the most out of the college course.

Another thing that should attract the prospective college student's attention is the fact that each college has a personality, a character, that distinguishes it from every other college. This college personality stamps itself largely on each student who attends. Just like people, so with colleges, and the college personality should be considered before a decision is made as to which college to attend. Some colleges are not standard, they do not do standard work, their teachers are not well trained, and they are running along in the same ruts in which they have run for the last century. If the student does not wish a sickly personality stamped upon him, he should not attend one of this type of institutions. Other colleges are virile, strong, aggressive, and they command respect wherever they are known. They stand for the finest and best in civilization, art, music, science, they stand for rigirous scholarship, they have high purposes and ideals, and they are the institutions from which the student should choose his alma mater.

It has been indicated already that scholarship is to be one of the first and foremost products of a college. But what is scholarship? Is it mere book knowledge? A man may be a walking encyclopedia and yet be one of the most ignorant of his tribe. A few years ago a young man graduated from college and secured work with a good commercial firm. He had amassed, during his four years' college course, a great deal of information and he had, from time to time, studied how to use this information for the advantage of himself and of his fellow man. The firm with which this young college graduate connected himself had new ideas presented and, as a result of the young man's work, found itself growing in usefulness, service, and power. The young graduate infused new life into the firm and made it influential and powerful in its field. This young man possessed real scholarship. Also there was a young fellow by the name of Simon Newcomb, who had no money but possessed boundless enthusiasm and energy and he had the highest ideals. He studied at home, interested himself in mathematics and learned how to apply mathematics to life about him. He was called upon to do much astronomical work for the United States government and finally to head the graduate school of mathematics at Johns Hopkins University when this university was founded in 1876. Here was a man who possessed scholarship although he had never taken a college course. In this same list are Henry Ford, John D. Rockefeller, Andrew Carnegie, Steinmetz, Edison, and others whose names are legion in the earth. Scholarship and culture can be gained outside of college walls, but the way is longer and more arduous. And the college whose chief aid is anything but the highest scholarship and culture is not worthy of the name.

The attitude of the college towards civilization is one thing to be considered also. Some colleges are so radical and their professors are so radical that they would discard the past and build only upon what they call the new. They forget how civilization has been laboriously built up, little by little, through the last six thousand years or more. Values are the bed rock of life and it has taken all these millenniums for mankind to determine just what is valuable. No one people has of itself been able to determine where true value lies. We draw our values not from wells of shallow and stagnant water, but from wells that are more than sixty centuries deep, and what the centuries have determined to be good, true, and valuable, are the values that the colleges should emphasize and teach. As H. C. Morrison says, "Our likes and dislikes have nothing to do with reflective thinking, and still less to do with the fundamental values of life. The standards which have come down to us are the result of untold centuries of social experimentation. The true values have survived and become standard because they are the values which have been capable of constituting civilization. . . . . It appears to be clear that just as organic life has evolved from lower forms, so the values which hold society together today have developed out of forms which served their purpose in holding together more primitive societies."

Speaking further, we might say that the most universally accepted forms of art go back through the Renaissance, the Gothic and the Norman periods, through Rome and Greece into ancient Egypt and beyond. Some of the best designed office buildings today go back for their most essential features to Egyptian temples.

The same is true in literature. Not a piece of literature in which we have any confidence today but that, in its structure at least, goes back through a long process of racial learning through the Greek and western Asiatic until the story becomes lost in pre-history.

Each college should have this attitude. Not that we should, like the Chinese, simply reverence and cling to the past without any idea of progress, but holding to the good and the true and the great ehtical, moral, and social values of the past, the colleges should go forth struggling to use these in building a better and nobler civilization than we now have.

In some colleges faculty members make no pretense towards professing religious convictions and some even avow their infidelity. For such men to teach the growing, developing mind is a tragedy. But, says one, colleges must be liberal. Yes, colleges must be liberal and they must be free, but they are to use their liberality and their freedom in such a way that civilization will be made better, life be made sweeter, and mankind will be made nobler than it has been in the past. And the past has shown us that no civilization has succeeded and that no people has prospered without religion, and that, if the future is to be judged by the past, no nation or people will ever succeed without religion. Religion, like civilization, will make progress but the new will be built upon the religion of the past. As Mr. Morrison again says: "The Hebraic Decalogue is as valid today as ever. It is not enough for modern civilization, but the differences are in the direction of subtractions." Humanity is sweeping onward and upward and man builds on the past in religion, and, utilizing the means at his disposal, he builds nobler structures than the past could build. The denominational college, is fact, all colleges must teach religion. They should not teach sectarianism, but it is incumbent upon them to teach religion. No man could or would object to any college professor's teaching religion in the sense as defined by James when he says:

"Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and keep himself unspotted from the world."

Now it is incumbent on the colleges to keep these facts in the forefront of their work. Parents who send children at great expense and through great sacrifices to college have a right to expect these same children returned to their homes better trained, with deeper feelings, with minds more civilized, with safe and sane religious ideals, with a mind cultivated and trained so that it can set itself to work on life's difficult problems and solve them with success, with a character that no man can gainsay, and with a reverence for the best, the noblest, the truest, in art, literature, and civilization, with a respect for decency, law, and order, and with a profound conviction that he has a work to do in life. To accomplish this is the great work for which our colleges and universities are founded.

DO CARRIER PIGEONS THINK?

Since pigeons were used as messengers as early as the fifth Egyptian dynasty and have served man so faithfully through the centuries, it would seem that they should be given some credit for a feeling of responsibility.

I believe that when a bird is used repeatedly to carry a message, that bird becomes more or less conscious of its mission, realizes that there is a purpose in the flying. The use of these birds is no longer confined to times of war; present-day activities employ them in many other ways. Forest rangers prize their help in the control of fires. Air pilots frequently carry several pigeons as a means of communication should they be obliged to land in an isolated place.

One of the most recent uses for pigeons is in the making of aerial photographs with a small, light camera which is strapped around the bird's body. Sometimes air messages are attached to the same bird's legs. At intervals the camera automatically makes exposures, as the bird flies. I think that the pigeon flying with such an outfit, anyway after a few repetitions, feels himself to be an actor in something important. It is significant that the bird lets nothing happen to the equipment, and seldom gets ''sidetracked.''

Unless pigeons think, how would we explain this: Sometime ago a pigeon-fancier in Dover missed one of the birds from his loft, and tried in vain for several days to locate it. Finally, the man noticed strange behavior in one of his other pigeons. It would fill its crops as full as possible then fly away at great speed. The owner resolved to find out where the bird went, and so the mystery was solved. He traced the pigeon to a certain chimney-stack on the outskirts of Dover, and saw it drop the grains of corn down into the chimney. Ladders were brought and the chimney examined. Down in there, resting on a little brick ledge, was the lost pigeon, and it was still alive, thanks to its mate's care.—L. E. Eubanks, in Our Dumb Animals.

TRUTH

I wonder if you will allow an unstationed preacher a little space in your valuable paper.

My subject is ''Truth.''

I have been told that the world is starving for the truth. Is it true? If so, it is a serious indictment against the church; but who is to blame? Is it the laymen that have made their preachers afraid to preach the truth; or has the clergy carried them on on flowery beds of ease until they can't stand the truth?

The true Christian should not think when the preacher is preaching the truth that it is intended to condemn him.

It should be the aim of the church when employing a preacher, to save the lost and not to have their own ears tickled and their hearts honeyed.

It should be food for the hungry soul of the church member to see the lost being won for Christ, and not to feast on the flowery sermon.

If the world is starving for the truth, then it is a challenge to the church.

Are we going to meet, or even try to meet, the challenge?

I, for one, say let us preach the truth, even if it is not popular.

I will be glad to preach the truth as it is in God's Word at any church to which I am invited, either as help in a revival or in a single service.

I have been reading Luther K. Long's pieces in the HERALD and heartily approve them except his ''Wanted—Directors of Ministers.'' I say, God forbid that any man who has been down at the foot of the Cross and been called to preach should need any other Director but Christ, and no other is fit to preach at all.

Let Truth be our guiding star, whatever others say.

JOHN A. BLACKBURN.

A BOY AND HIS BIBLE

Here is what a Christian boy of 13 writes about his Bible:

''It was my Sunday school teacher who urged me to read my Bible. The more I came to class the more I came to prize and read it. I have used it for about two years now, but I have one regret, and that is that I did not use it more. For the short time I have used it, however, I have been greatly blessed and helped in my Christian life.''

How is it that boys don't love to study God's Word? The following words written by a boy will explain the reason:

''It was not until last August that I really began to love my Bible. And why? Because it was only then that I gave myself entirely to Christ—spirit, soul and body.''

And another boys says: ''It as not until I came to the class and received Christ as my Savior that I got right into touch with my Bible and used it.''

So, you see, if you want to really love and understand the Bible you must know and love its Author; and the only way to do that is to come to the Lord Jesus.—The Life Line.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

The month of September to be when special effort shall be made to raise the Annual Conference Budget. In stations, the third Sunday of that month is the time set, while in the rural churches, the month is set apart for this purpose.

October, Pay-up month

Second Sunday in October, Rally Day, Promotion in Sunday school, etc.

November 8, Annual Conference meets at Thomasville Community church.

September for A. C. B.

It will be a splendid achievement in co-operation if all of our pastors will accept the suggestion that September be the time when the Annual Conference budget is raised. We need to experience more of the benefits of co-operation in our Conference work. And we certainly are in need of the money allotted in this budget. The Annual Conference is in debt to the amount of eight thousand dollars or more. Money was borrowed to help along some of our struggling churches by the Board of Church Extension, then two thousand dollars was borrowed to finish up the Gratitude Gift five years ago, and there were some other hang-over accounts beside the obligations incurred for the present year. All these must be paid, dollar for dollar. They are due our own people.

I know of no one to go to to raise this money except to our church members. We have thirty thousand of them in this Conference in two hundred and thirty-two churches. It is plain that if we can secure even a moderate bit of co-opertion from our membership, the required amount will be gotten without anyone maknig a sacrifice to do it. But, of course, all of us know that only something like 75 per cent of our membership can be depended upon for any part of this money. Therefore, six or seven thousand of us will have to take care of this indebtedness and carry on the projects of the Conference and the local interests of the church as has been done in the past.

Our Appeal

is that September be made the tithing month; that we devote our tithe for the entire month to the Annual Conference budget. And since the Joash box has been used with good success in the past, let the people bring their tithes and offerings to the church and put them into this box upon the designated day. Or, if you prefer, have a roll call of the membership of the church and let them bring their gifts to the altar and while there have a prayer of dedication of their substance and of themselves to the Lord. However, if the Joash Box is used, we suggest the dedication service at the altar. And now that the service may be one that shall not fail of success, begin at once to plan for it. Urge the membership to lay aside as God prospers them and to bring their gifts to the altar. We do not insist upon a method; but we do plead for a hearty co-operation upon the part of all our pastors and people.

Remember the Children's Home

I have found a number of our Sunday schools which do not take a monthly offering for the Home. Some promised to begin it again. The gifts of many that did contribute have fallen off so that it is really pitiful to read the lists as they appear in the HERALD weekly. We can do better and we ought to begin doing better NOW. It is unfair to those who bear the burdens there to neglect this institution as we have done. It is worthy of our best gifts, of our earnest prayers, of our cheerful support in every possible way.

"We Will Do Better This Year"

I hear this statement time and again as our people discuss the financial situation of our church. It expresses not only their hope, but their expectation. I know of one church that is talking of increasing the pastor's salary for next year. That sounds good, and is what ought to happen whenever and wherever possible. Many of our pastors have not gotten a living from their people for a year or two. It not only embarrasses them but it hampers the work. Everything should be done to release the energies and talents of the pastors for doing their best—nothing short of their best ought to satisfy either the pastor or the people. And when the matter of a support no longer troubles the preacher he is in a position to give his entire thought and all his energies to furthering the interests of the church he serves.

Mount Hermon Charge, Rev. L. E. Mabry, Pastor

I visited Mount Hermon and Friendship churches on this charge. Mount Hermon charge is the strongest group of churches, numerically, in our Conference. There are on its membership rolls nearly 1,000 members. The charge consists of Mount Hermon, Friendship, Bellemont, and Cedar Cliff. The churches visited last Sunday are well equipped for Sunday school and church activities. Both have many Sunday school roms, well arranged for the work of the school, and auditoriums large enough to accommodate the congregations at worship services. The charge recently purchased a parsonage on Route No. 62, a few miles south of Bellemont, where Pastor Mabry may now be located.

At Mount Hermon there was a congregation that comfortably filled the auditorium and listened attentively to the message and greatly helped the speaker by their receptive attitude. I saw in this congregation six High Point College students, five of whom are graduates. The largest number of graduates I have found in congregation this year. There was evidence of interest in both the Sunday school and in the work of the church. I was glad to be present at the study period in the Sunday school.

The services at Friendship were doubtless not as well attended as usual because of rain. I did not learn as to this. But here I was greatly pleased to inspect the Sunday school rooms, which were built a year or so ago. It speaks well for a congregation to see such improvement. This is the church where Dr. T. M. Johnson attended before he entered the ministry. L. L. Albright, formerly a missionary to Japan from our church, also came from here. Likewise, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Garrett attend this church; it was his original church home. Bro. Washington Johnson, who recently passed from works to reward, was also a member here and his family is active here. Kenneth Holt, a graduate of High Point College and one of our young ministers, also attends here.

I greatly enjoyed my visit to these churches and am expecting good reports from them at Conference. Bro. Mabry is planning to observe the dedication of substance and self service in his churches during September. The work appears to be moving smoothly.

I enjoyed visits in the homes of Mr. and Mrs. George Isley and Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Garrett, taking dinner with the former and supper with the latter. Mrs. Isley is a daughter of the Rev. J. N. Garrett and is a loyal supporter of High Point College. Two or her daughters are graduates and the son is a rising Sophomore. I am greatly indebted to Bro. Garrett and Bro. M. A. Coble, of Burlington, for fruit and melons which about filled my car. It reminded me of days when I was a pastor.

PHILOSOPHY OF THE CROSS

The enigma of life is insoluable as ever. No philosophy of life has ever succeeded in solving it. Good things come to bad men, and bad things come to good men. True men are rejected as hypocrites, and false men are hailed as saints. And the strangest of all things is the life we live in this world. But one thing settles all questions; and that is the Cross of Jesus Christ. The Cross solves the enigma of life, and makes all true philosophy of life. It is the key to the satisfactory solution of all the knotty problems of life. Walking in the light of the Cross, we stagger not, though confronted with the biggest inconsistencies of life.—The Faith.

WELL DISCIPLINED CHILDREN

We were speaking of certain children whose conduct was not entirely satisfactory.

I remarked that in all probability they would grow up to be very good men and women, for their parents were excellent people.

She spoke of a boy in another family who was recognized as a fine, well-disciplined youngster. Referring back to those other children of whom we had been speaking—not satisfactory in their conduct—she said: "Even if they do turn out well, it seems to me a shame that they should have spoiled so many good times for their folks—and made themselves miserable—because of their disobedience and lack of consideration for the comfort and happiness of others.

A few remarks may be in place here:

1. Every child needs to be disciplined. It is a grave mistake to conclude that—because both parents have been well brought-up, are good people, and want their children to do well—those parents and those children will just naturally do everything in the best way. Even though the parents have been so well trained that they instinctively do right in their personal lives, and sincerely want their children to do the same, the reins must be kept well in hand over the children.

Children do not inherit the discipline and acquired habits of their parents. They are the children of their grandparents and other ancestors farther back, as well as of their father and mother. Fortunate is the child whose ancestry is good. Equally or even more fortunate is the child whose parents realize that they have on their hands a creature who is the heir of many ancestors, the inheritor of many sorts of dispositions and tendencies. Blessed are the parents who calmly, and sweetly, and intelligently go about training the child in accordance with his own nature.

2. Discipline should begin early. It would be well if it began at least as far back as the grandparents, but that is not really essential. It should begin, however, not many hours after the child is born. Bathing and dressing it are important first steps. Composing it for sleep is a serious function. The ways in which it is handled, lifted, moved about and brought to the breast make lasting impressions. Kindness and gentleness are important; but not more so than are decision, firmness, and confidence. There will be temptations to relax in these matters, but such temptations should invariably be put aside. In the first six months a good start may be made, and the years ahead will be far clearer sailing because of this.

3. In dealing with children there should always be in the back of the minds of the parents a clear recognition of the facts that they themselves are imperfect, not fully experienced, and that they are hopeful of becoming wiser and better as the years go by. These are facts, are they not? Well, do not seek to hide them from the child. It will not understand everything all at once, but it will grow to appreciate the situation, and be grateful for the confidence reposed in it. You will be saved the embarrassment of false appearance, and will make an effective appeal to the child's innate sense of honesty and fairness.

I wish all parents might succeed in getting behind the scenes at home and in finding out how frequently children—even very young children—come to a reasoned state of disrespect for their parents. They have watched the words, and attitudes, and gestures of their elders and have been forced to the conclusion that those elders are not as wise, nor as honest, nor as good as they have represented themselves to be. It helps a lot when parents are frank and open concerning themselves and their faults.

When Helen was a few years old she had a spell of asking me the meaning of words used in saying grace at the table. "What do you mean, 'forgive us?' " as one of them . Then, "What are sins?" "Do you have sins, Papa?" I admitted that I had. "What are your sins?" That was getting close home. I had to dig up something that would answer the purpose. Altogether it was an improving session for the entire family. I think that sort of grilling has helped me to keep closer to my children throughout the years. It has been good for me. And they have spoken appreciatingly of the effects on their lives.

4. Financial matters should come early into the picture. The child should not be burdened with the idea that the family is always finding it difficult to make ends meet. "Hard times" and "depression" should not too early get into the child's vocabulary. It is well, however, that he soon begin to realize that food for the family, clothes and toys and automobile all cost money; that money is obtained by labor; that there is usually a limited supply, and that if it is spent extravagantly for one thing it cannot be had in such liberal supply for something else. A child may soon come to understand the unity of the family, the necessity for co-operation in work, the wisdom of making the most out of the resources, and seeing to it that food is not wasted and that clothing, toys and furniture are made to last as long—and kept looking as well—as possible.

I never forbade my boys to use tobacco, and neither of them has acquired the habit. There were many things they wanted—tools, books, magazines, bicycles, sleds, cameras, camping outfits. We sometimes talked of what money could buy, and what were the more desirable things. They calculated how much would be spent for tobacco in a year at so much aday. They figured out what other things could be bought with that same money. It wasn't difficult for them to conclude that they would rather have the "other" things. We also spoke of the filthiness of the habit, and the smell with which its fills the home and the barber shop. Each of them has a boy but, being brought up in the same way, they show no desire to form the habit.

5. The religious element should have large place in the training of the child. Religion is not a thing to be put on or off, as a garment. Religion is, rather, a quality of character, of mind, of spirit, of personality, of life and relationships. It has to do with one's being and living, rather than being a matter of professions and beliefs.

Now, if, from the beginning, there is a feeling of unity and co-operation in the home, there should be no difficulty in making the home and all its members partakers of the good things religion has to offer. Life is largely habit and routine. Religion is a part of life, rather, it permeates ilfe. The forming and maintaining and changing of relgious thoughts and practices call for an even finer intelligence and persistence than is required in relation to any other practices of life. The attitudes of father and mother have much to do with what happens to the religious development of their children.

The habit of Sunday school attendance is a good one. The instruction given there is not worth as much as I wish it were, but parents should count on supplementing it by much teaching at home. I wish ministers and choirs would have in mind the needs and possibilities of children to a much greater extent than they seem to do. These deficiencies will have to be largely compensated for by intelligent parents. Some sort of family worship should still be maintained. This may be at one of the daily meals at which the family is most likely to all be together and least likely to be interrupted. A special service on Sunday when the children can aid by readings, hymns, and prayers of their own. Grace at table may be said by a child, by all the family together using verses of Scripture, or a special grace in rhyme.

Sickness, death, loss of crop, unemployment, wrecking of the car—these are some of the hardships liable to overtake any family. The way in which parents bear up under them —as well as their corresponding successes and good times—will help to determine the feelings of the children. Every incident or accident has its religious significance and implications. Children see, note, and, to some extent, consider. Fortunate for them, and for the parents, if all the members of the family learn to take things philosophically. Life is made up of many things and should be taken, as the Scotch put it, "by and large." The best place to learn religion and practical philosophy is in a family presided over by wise and loving parents.

AMERICA'S HUGE BIRD OF MYSTERY

Few persons know it, but the largest flying bird in the world lives in California, his one and only home. He is the California condor, the king of all condors, and his approximate one hundred survivors are fighting extinction—and losing.

This great bird of mystery, which remains as much of an obscurity today as ever during the past half-century, exists in the original wild state in a certain mountainous region on the Coast Range, less than 80 miles from metropolitan Los Angeles. Yet his existence is almost as legendary—even to Californians—as the mythical roc of childhood tales. This because he is so rarely seen.

A disputed question for years, it is now definitely established that the California is the largest of all living birds that fly. Not even excepting the Andean variety, which is second in length of wing-spread, but usually weighing more. Actual measurement of several specimens of South American and Old World vultures have been made by eminent authorities. These measurements show that the average wing-spread of the adult California condor often exceeds ten, and as much as twelve, feet.

The California condor is a separate and distinct species of the vulture family and is found only in this state. It lays

ESTA'S CAKE

''Give us this day our daily bread,'' repeated the Sunday school children in concert. The ten girls in Miss Bailey's class stood with bowed heads and folded hands while their lips reverently framed the words of ''the long prayer.'' Today that very prayer was in the Sunday school lesson text, too. Miss Bailey had wondered how she was going to teach them anything about it. She had learned from experience that familiar ideas must be presented in some new form if they are to hold the attention. And these children were absolutely letter-perfect in this repetition of the Lord's Prayer and seemed not at all interested in the subject of prayer in general. She tried faithfully, but only Esta Dare seemed to be listening.

''Miss Bailey, can we pray to God for anything at all we want?'' she asked presently.

The other girls aroused instantly. ''Could I ask for a new dress, and get it?'' demanded one.

''You've got plenty of dresses, May Manton. What do you want of any more? I'd rather ask for new roller skates. I broke mine and daddy won't buy any more 'cause I only had 'em a week.''

''Huh! What's roller skates! If I was going to ask for anything it'd be a bicycle.''

''Oh! I'd ask for a milyun dollars, 'n' then I could buy all them things, an' a lot more. What's the use of bothering the Lord for every little thing? I say, get the money an' buy 'em yourself.''

''Miss Bailey, prayer doesn't mean anything like that does it?'' questioned an older girl.

''No, dear. I'm afraid the children have been allowing their imaginations to run away with them. This is nothing like fairy wishes. Girls, listen. Doesn't this say, 'Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done'? Dare you think only of roller skates, and new dresses and bicycles, or even just dollars?''

''But it says, 'Give us this day our daily bread,' '' said May Manton.

''Yes, I know, dear. Doesn't your mother have bread on the table every meal?''

''Yes-s,'' the others nodded.

''Why?'' questioned Miss Bailey.

''We have to have it to make us strong.''

''It's a food to make us grow.''

''Mother says it's good for us,' were some of the answers.

''All right. Why doesn't the prayer ask for pie and cake and cookies?'' asked Biss Bailey .

''Why, 'cause we don't need those things all of the time.''

''They'd make us sick if we ate too much.''

''Just a little dessert at the end of the meal makes the rest taste better, my mother says.''

''Jesus was teaching the disciples to ask for the things that would make them grow up to be good men. He wanted them to think about the 'Kingdom of Heaven,' and He wanted them to know the kind of folks who would have a right to live there. They must feed their souls the right sort of spiritual food. And if we could ask for anything at all that we happen to want, whether it is good for us or not, it might be just like trying to feed our bodies on pie and cake. We have a right to pray for the things we need, for our bodies as well as for our souls. But we must remember that other phrase, 'Thy will be done,' and be very sure that God loves us just the same when He says 'no,' as when He lets us have the thing we ask for.''

Esta Dare was in a receptive mood and the lesson sank into her heart. The poor child had little to encourage her in her home life. Mrs. Dare tried hard to keep the family together. Many of her days were spent over the washtub, and sometimes even these scanty earnings were taken by her husband to satisfy his appetite for liquor. Her heart grew heavier as day by day she saw the fine, handsome lover transformed into a rough, brutal sot. As the children grew older she could see only a dark future ahead. Esta still went to Sunday school, but it wouldn't be long now until she would be shunned as a ''drunkard's child.'' There was so little money for clothes that the poor girl looked neglected, even now.

For this Sunday dinner Mrs. Dare had planned to have a little extra treat. She thought her few coins were safely hidden. But with diabolical cunning Mr. Dare had found them —and they went to help the saloon-keeper pay his tax to the government! The man who had promised ''to love, honor and cherish her until death,'' lay in a drunken stupor. So the Sunday dinner was even poorer than usual.

While Mrs. Dare was in the bitter mood which this fact engendered, Esta came from Sunday school. Her heart was as light as her step. She was singing:

''God will take care of you,
Through every day, o'er all the way,
He will take care of you,
God will take care of you.''

''He will, Mummy. Miss Bailey said so. She said no matter what hard things we had to stand, nor what happened, if we trust Jesus and pray to Him—why, everything will be all right. She said our souls could outgrow our bodies if we prayed enough. It made me feel so happy.''

''Bless you, child,'' and half to herself she added, ''I'm glad somebody can be happy.''

The next few weeks fairly flew for Esta. Her tasks seemed lighter, easier, somehow, for the joy that was in her heart. The surroundings were just as sordied as ever; her father drank in the same way; the baby had to be tended, and the meals were as scanty. But a fountain of joy was bubbling up in her heart. It actually seemed to form a protective covering, which turned aside the unpleasant things. She might have said with the Psalmist, ''The joy of the Lord is my Strength and my Shield.''

Then came Tommy's birthday. Somehow in all the privations, Mrs. Dare had managed to make a birthday cake for each of the children. Most of the time it was only a plain, common cake, but it made a bright spot in the year for each child. But this time the money with which she had expected to buy sugar had been wrenched from her hand and was spent for beer instead.

"Never mind, Mummy. We'll tell Jesus about it. He says, 'Give us this day our daily bread,' but I'm awfully sure that this time He'll let us have cake, 'cause it's for a birthday, and Tommy's too little to understand why," comforted Esta.

Just how the Lord was going to send cake, she could not tell. In fact, her faith grasped only the idea and the manner of its coming was left wholly with the Lord.

The little girl went out into the street. It was not paved, as are so many roads nowadays. She loved to "scuff" the loose soil with her bare feet and see the little ridges she made. Suddenly, on top of one of those ridges she saw a nickel !She rubbd her eyes and looked again. Yes, there it lay! She picked it up and hastily kicked the dirt again. This time a penny came to the surface. After still further exertion another nickel and still another penny were added to her hoard. Evidently someone, sometime, had lost the four coins and they lay hidden in this road dust until Esta's Spirit-directed feet had turned them up.

She scampered quickly to the house and exclaimed delightedly, "Mummy, Mummy, I knew Jesus would send us cake this time. Let me run to the store for the sugar right away!" And she did.

America's Huge Bird of Mystery

one egg, and then only every two years. The adult bird is black, with sizeable patches of white on the wing undersides, and has a naked head and neck, reddish or pink in color. He is an eater of carrion, killing nothing for food. Unlike his cousin, the Andean condor, our own condor does not grasp and carry off small stock and other animals, simply because nature did not provide him with grasping talons. All tales about child and lamb kidnapings to the contrary! The condors are gentle and kindly disposed toward humans, those few who have dared the dizzy heights of his natural retreat report. Yet, while exhibiting no marked unfriendly characteristics toward intruders, they are great "home lovers," seldom venturing beyond their own confines, and never near civilized communities.

The California condor flies at an altitude of about 2,500 feet over peaks, from which his keen eyes can easily see even a small dead animal. This fact often leads the observer to confuse him with the common buzzard or "turkey vulture," which abounds in the Southwest.

To see a condor rise from a crag and soar into the blue haze, on perfectly motionless wings, and at incredible speed, is a sight not easily forgotten—one that will make you waver in your choice of the eagle as the "bird of majesty." After witnessing an exhibition of such expert "natural aviation," you will swear fealty to his reign of monarch of all that flies—not excepting man's awkward contraptions.

The California condor builds no nest. The egg is deposited on sticks or leaves in a shallow rock cave, usually in some inaccessible cliff a thousand or more feet in height. He chooses this because he requires a great deal of room for the "take-off." The old birds appear to mate for life, which may well be in excess of a century. The young condor, for the first few weeks of his life, is covered with a grayish white down. He does not reach maturity until well into the second year.

Because of his near extinction, the California condor is at last actually protected with considerable zeal. Yet his species faces almost certain doom because his means of subsistence has been all but eliminated. Our cruel and heedless civilization has destroyed most of America's original wild life. The grizzly bear—California's emblematic beast—has gone to an inglorious end. And now the decimation of the California condor, a useful and grand creature, which we shall some day appreciate and regard with awe in memory only, is another of civilization's most pitiful crimes. For surely he will not be with us long. There seems little place in the scheme of things for a large vulture now. The vast stock herds of some years past are few; big game animals are scarce, less often are left dead for condors to eat, now that depredations of mountain lions have been so seriously curbed by state control. It but proves the law of the survival of the fittest: yet hardly applicable to animals, as man holds all the advantages.—Robert M. Hyatt, in Our Dumb Animals.

HORSES AND MULES

Government estimates for January 1, 1933, just released, report 12,163,000 horses and 4,981,000 mules. Between January 1, 1920, and January 1, 1933, the asinine craze for motor power has reduced horse and mule population 8,938,552. The reduction in animals actually at work was probably not over 2,000,000 or 2,500,000 but fear that there would not be use or demand for horses and mules kept men from raising them. The result is that we have now not over 2,500,000 horses and mules under four years of age, out of a total of 17,144,000 head on farms—and horses and mules are higher today, measured in corn, oats, wheat, beef, cattle, hogs, or dairy products, than at any time in the last fifteen years.

In January, 1918, it took 54 bushels of corn, 118 bushels of oats, 45 bushels of wheat, 826 pounds of native beef cattle or 613 pounds of fat hogs, to buy a farm chunk costing $100. In January, 1933, it took 312 bushels of corn, 441 bushels of oats, 153 bushels of wheat, 1,500 pounds of native beef cattle, or 2,380 pounds of fat hogs to buy the same kind of horse, though his price in dollars had come down to $75. All comparisons are from Chicago open market prices, and the differences are even greater in many localities.

The most sensible farm relief would come through increasing use of horses and mules, and production of them. A horse or mule at work consumes annually about 70 bushels of oats, 15 or 20 bushels of corn, one to one and one-half tons of hay and an acre of pasture. This takes, roughly, the crops from two and one-half to three acres of good corn belt land.

The decrease in horses and mules in the last twelve years has thrown from 25,000,000 to 30,000,000 acres of land,—some think it may be 40,000,000,—into the production of more wheat, corn, oats, dairy products, or meat animals—and has helped to swell surplus to the present price breaking total.——From the American Horse Association.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

IF NOT PROHIBITION, WHAT?

[The following essay written by Miss Mary Margaret Bates of Calvary Church, Greensboro, received "highest rating" of all sent in in the recent contest set up by the Temperance Secretary of the North Carolina Branch. I hope you can find space for it in the Woman's Work column. I wish that all Methodist Protestants would read it.

MRS. R. M. ANDREWS,

Secretary Temperance N. C. Branch.]

"To stop the leaks, tear down the dam." So say the wets. But isn't a leaky dam better than a flood, and would not it be safer and better to stop the leaks and strengthen the dam permanently?

The wets have suggested the Canadian system of government control, the Gothenburg or Bratt system, state control, and others. Now they are suggesting outright repeal and offer no substitutes. They want simply to tear down the dam and let the flood pour in. After reading numerous articles on these systems, it is my purpose to give reasons why other sytsems have not worked, and why it is best to keep and enforce the Eighteenth Amendment until there is something better to offer.

First of all, there was a suggestion for government control—the sysetm Canada has been using. But ask some Canadians just what is being controlled by "government control," for clearly, it is not the amount of liquor drunk, not the number of people drinking, not the sale of hard liquor, not drunkenness, not bootlegging. (There is proof to back up each of these statements.) Some Canadians are discovering that instead of liquor being controlled by the government, that government is being controlled by liquor. Senator Borah says, "I do not want to see the American flag, which flies over the public schools planted above the grog shop." Government control has not solved the liquor problem for a nation of 10,000,000 inhabitants; it did not solve the problem in the Southern states which experimented with it before prohibition. Will it work for 120,000,000.

Sweden has a government control known as the Bratt system. It's purpose was to reduce drinking and promote total abstinence. Instead, this plan has fostered the drinking habit instead of suppressing it. The increase of drinking among the youth and young women has increased a great deal. The main feature of this system is a pass-book. Nearly 20 per cent of the entire population of the country are holders of these little books. In proportion to poulation, Stockholm has nearly ten times as many convictions for drunkenness as New York City; neither has bootlegging lessened under this system. Has a system which has such results succeeded? Would it succeed in the United States?

State control was tried and failed. The people in a dry state had no way to protect their borders from the states that had no ban on the liquor traffic. The Supreme Court said liquor could not be shipped into a dry state, but could be shipped across; that, however did not prevent the shippers stopping en route. There would be four times forty-eight boundaries to be protected when the states took charge. State control is the method used before prohibition. If it worked so wonderfully, why wasn't the method continued? Because it didn't work so well. Drinking was steadily increasing. There were states, the majority of whose population did not vote to become dry, and these states smuggled liquor into the dry states, and so it went.

Then there is outright repeal. That would result in prohibition days—the days of the saloon, for says Smedley D. Butler, "A saloon by any other name is still a saloon." That would be tearing down the dam to stop the leaks. But we must consider what would happen in the meantime. If you would see the terrible days of the saloon, read "The Cruel Thoroughness of the Old-Time Saloon," as told by Colonel Wallace Winchel of the Salvation Army in the Christian Herald of February, 1933. In it is pictured vividly the saloon days on the Bowery. The Salvation Army people know from experience how terrible it would be to return to those days. In 1912 on the Bowery there were 100 saloons, 156 brothels, and every lodging place was a speak-easy and a place to find the dope pedlar plying his trade. Now there are not more than a half-dozen speakeasies, and there are 64 places selling coffee pot equipment that did sell bar fixtures. Today, there are more banks on the Bowery than speak-easies. The Salvation Army has a hotel there, and it has a barroom, too, with everything that goes with it, but instead of beer there is buttermilk and instead of so much misery and disaster, there is very much less.

This is just one example of the change since prohibition. The wet say, "We don't want the saloons back," but "A saloon by any other name is still a saloon." The saloon was supposed to be an attempt to regulate the liquor traffic. But it failed to regulate it. Shall we go back to it?

France has no prohibition, and conditions there are even worse than they were in America before prohibition. England still has open sale of liquor; and crime, sale of liquor, drinking among young people, is increasing.

Before we repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, let us see where it has failed. It must be a failure if people want to do away with it. But has a law failed that has such results as these:

In the '90's there were 350 institutions for cure of inebriates. Many thousands weer treated annually by them. The Keeley Institute at Dwight, Illinois, alone turned out 50,000 "graduates" annually. As the states began to go dry, the liquor cures went broke. Today there are only 30 of the original 350 in operation. The institute at Dwight has been sold for a veteran's hospital. Under prohibition the number of cures has been reduced 90 per cent.

The wets have fooled the people by repeating statements that are not true. "They say" that more college people are drinking than before, but what proof do they offer? Dr. Alfred Worcester, Professor of Hygiene at Harvard, looks back over a long period of Harvard history and says there is much less drinking there. Class dinners and commencements were scenes of drunkenness. Now there there is only an occasional spree. Athletics are taking hold of college men; they can't drink and still play their best. When asked the question, "Has prohibition increased drinking in colleges?" Alonzo Stagg, Director of Athletics at the University of Chicago, and Fielding Yost, of Michigan University, said "No," and gave proof for it, Stagg says, "As long as those who want liquor have to hunt for it, there will be no particular liquor problem. Yost says that he knows from observation that college life today is better than it ever was before and that prohibition is largely responsible.

"They" say that society is wet, but a distinguished social leader and ardent dry, Mrs. Ruth Strawbridge of Philadelphia sent out 2,300 letters in May, 1930 to find whether or not this statement was true. She received 1,839 replies; 1,454 favored prohibition and dry entertaining; only 385 were opposed. These letters were sent to social leaders in Philadelphia—one of the wettest cities in the United States.

"They" say more people are drinking, but on the Bowery in New York, which policemen will testify was out-and-out hell before prohibition, since prohibition drinking has dropped 60 per cent. Around 1,300 drunks were brought into the Salvation Army every night. Today there is an average of not more than seven.

There is a delightful article, "The Wets Give Me a Pain in the Neck," attacking the thinking of wet leaders and those who, parrot-like, repeat their statements. Berton Braley points out that the wets fail to contrast prohibition days with realities but rely on their wonderful lack of memory concerning this question. He says, "It isn't prohibition, but the lack of prohibition that has built up the gangster business." He states that if there were more drunkenness, more drinking, more laborers, spending more money on drink, we would see more drunkenness, more drinking, and more ragged children—but we don't.

"They" say prohibition costs too much, but these are the official figures for the cost of enforcement: 1920-31: Expenses 107,667,069. Revenue $509,815,463. There were a few other expenses to come out, but they do not come near $400,000,000. This result is one of the few during the depression written in black intsead of red!

The statements of the wet have been disproved with facts. We must educate the people with the truth about prohibition, showing thereby the benefits.

The propaganda section of the department of Health is educating liquor out of Mexico as they did typhoid fever and smallpox. They use posters, lectures, movies—without mincing matters—and teach the Mexicans the evils of drinking.

If we add a bigger educational project and stronger enforcement to the law, prohibition will succeed. "If every worker and every business man will vote strictly for his own interest there is not much doubt as to what will become of the liquor business," says Dr. T. N. Carver, America's greatest economist. If every worker would help enforce the law in the way that would profit him, it would be enforced. Prohibition will succeed if every thinking American will read such articles as appear in the Christian Herald, study the question, and broadcast the results.

I say with Berton Braley, "Prohibition or what'll you have? I'll take Prohibition, thank you, and make it dry!"

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

West Forsyth.—The revival meeting at Union Hill closed on Friday night of last week. Rev. W. L. Harkey, minister of the Methodist Episcopal church, Northern branch, assisted the writer in the services, and preached at all the services after Sunday morning except one afternoon. There were ten conversions and four members received at the closing service. Two names were given to the pastor after the service closed, and these will be received at the next appointment. The preaching by Rev. Harkey was convincing and effective.

Our services at Pleasant Hill and Tabernacle churches last Sunday were attended by the usual congregations. The service at Tabernacle was at night, and was well attended.

The third quarterly conference was held at Pleasant Hill church last Sunday afternoon. Only three of the churches were represented in the attendance. Good reports were made by the three Sunday schools represented by the superintendents. Stony Knoll church reported improvements on the church building, the cost of which was $72.75. The pastor's report showed that he had made a total of 426 visits during the year, and $360.86 received on salary for this year. The vote for delegate to the Annual Conference was canvassed by a committee and the results showed that Brother Henry T. Speas, of Stony Knoll church, was elected. Brother Speas has already been delegate twice during the present pastorate.

W regret to report the illness of Brother Clinton Sprinkle, of Pleasant Hill church, who was carried to the Baptist hospital in Winston-Salem last Saturday. He is to receive treatment for an internal ailment. We hope he will soon be able to return to his home.

Our appointment for next Sunday will be at Harmony Grove church at 11 a. m. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper will be observed.

Lebanon Church, High Point. — Using for his text the Scripture found in Phillipians 3:13, "This One Thing I Do," our pastor, Dr. S. W. Taylor, preached a powerful sermon to a good congregation last Sunday morning. In this discourse the speaker emphasized the importance of Christians making religion their business. While each Christian should have some avocation to break the strain of life yet no one should have an avocation religiously. We should make religion the main concern of life. Jesus made His Father's business the supreme interest of His life. If there's any thing in one's heart that supercedes the love of Jesus Christ that person can not be His disciple.

The Woman's Auxiliary circles have recently had their regular monthly meeting as follows: Circle No. 1, Mrs. Lena H. Thacker, chairman, met with her; Circle No. 2, Mrs. W. M. Crouch, chairman, met with the chairman; Circle No. 3, Mrs. V. L. Smith, chairman, met with Miss Violet Murphy; Circle No. 4, Mrs. Pritchard, chairman, met with Mrs. Lilile Hendrix. Reports were fairly good, conditions in general, considered, but now the year is about half on record and it is important that this missionary work be pressed in real earnest until the budget is paid in full. It is unwise to wait until the eleventh month to do the things that should be finished about the sixth month.

Mrs. Mary Hopkins of Reidsville, N. C., has returned home after a pleasant ten days' stay with her sister, Mrs. S. W. Taylor.

We are pleased to report that Ms. T. M. Reddick, who underwent a serious operation in Guilford General hospital is improved sufficiently to be moved to her home on West Lexington Avenue.

Mr. Guy Lee has returned home from Guilfor General hospital after having undergone an operation for appendicitis. He is reported as making satisfactory improvement, his friends are glad to hear.

Miss Loula Thacker has returned home after having sent three weeks with friends in Caswell county. She attended revival services in New Hope church during her stay there.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. B. Welch and family, left yesterday for a motor trip to Chicago where they will visit the World's Fair for ten days.

Last Thursday evening Mrs. S. W. Taylor was delightfully surprised by members of the Philathea class of which she is an esteemed member.

The class met at the church and from there went in a group to the parsonage. They presented her a huge birthday cake also many individual tokens of love. After an hour of social enjoyment they served cake and lemonade. Dr. and Mrs. Taylor expressed sincere Miss Betsey Neal Hammer, of Gibsonville, appreciation for this friendly remembrance.

Orange Charge.—The meeting began at Hebron on August 13th and closed August 18. Brother Spencer did all the preaching after Sunday 13. His preaching was clear and to the point. The church was revived: five were converted and two joined the church.

We are glad to learn that Dr. Andrews is to give us Sunday, September 10. His appointments for the day are as follows: Chestnut Ridge, 11 a. m.; Hebron, 3 p. m.

Our lastm eeting for this year is to begin Sunday, August 27 at Chestnut Ridge. We expect Brother J. L. Trollinger to be with us for the entire meeting.

Shiloh, Liberty Charge.—Our revival services which began on the second Sunday of this month were concluded with the 8 o'clock service on the third Sunday night. Mr. Love, our pastor, did the preaching with the exception of the four afternoon sermons which were given by Brother Buckner, a Baptist minister and friend of Mr. Love's. After each afternoon service Mr. Love met with the children for a short while in a kind of Bible school during the entire meeting both Mr. Love and Mr. Buckner brought us excellent sermons and we who listened were truly revived. We felt good in our hearts, and deep down in our souls we felt the love of God stir us anew and afresh to do His work more thoroughly. May God send us richest blessings upon such messengers as those two who labored so hard for us.

Professor Rudd Newsom of Wake Forest aided in the singing. He was quite prompt in his work, and he helped us very much.

During the revival Mr. Love has organized a Christian Endeavor society which will meet on Sunday nights. He plans to meet with us on two Sundays out of each month. The newly elected officers are as follows: James Brown, President; Mrs. W. H. Garrett, vice-president; Margaret Pickett, secretary and treasurer.

Our pastor has also created a prayer meeting to be held on Thursday nights. May all of us each and every individual in our community co-operate to make these organizations successful, and May we have the earnest prayers of all the Herald readers in this work.

Bethesda.—We are glad to report of our revival meeting held by Rev. Earl A. Cook, of western North Carolina. He brought us some good old time Gospel messages and the Lord was with us in great power. Twenty-one conversions and five new members added to the church; we had some more experience with the oldtime shouting religion. We are glad to know that is hasn't gone away. We are under the impression that it wil take that kind for us to meet God in perfect peace and be ready to inherit the great blessing that God has prepared for us.

We were proud to have Brother Cook with us because he works with the Mighty Power of God. May God ever bless him and keep him close. We hope that he may be permitted to come back some time in the near future.

As ever, your brother in Christ,

JNO. GULLEDGE.

Antioch, Mecklenburg Charge. — We are moving along very nicely. Our Sunday school is still holding its average attedance at about 53, and we are hoping that it will continue.

Our meeting that started August 13, closed Friday night. Although it was raining through the week our beloved pastor filled all the appointments with excellent sermons. We are hoping that next year people will start building tents and start having a real good old time camp meeting again. Let's everybody that will build a tent.

Our Ladies' Aid is being reorganized today and we are hoping that it will be successful.

The young people's Bible class has been successful so far. Now we want to ask the prayers of our Christian fellowmen that whatsoever we undertake for the good of our own souls or for the souls of our community and for the good of our church will be successful.

GEORGIE GORDON, Reporter.

Draper.—We do not report so often but we are still on the job; the work is moving along nicely and we still see new faces at the 11:00 o'clock hour.

We are still getting some new members. We received one last Sunday and baptized two last Saturday afternoon. We have some real good services and cannot forget the fifth Sunday of last month when Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Hill from High Point were with us. Brother Hill is a former pastor here and he preached for us on Saturday night and also Sunday morning and night. He brought some real inspiring mesages and especially on Sunday night.

I think that every Christian there was shouting and one more soul was saved.

We were indeed glad to have Brother and Sister Hill with us and hope they may be with us again soon.

We held our third quarterly conference. Brother N. H. Stewart was elected delegate to the Annual Conference. We have received pledges to cover our budget.

Rev. Paul Roberts and Rev. Tom Pardue are holding a revival here and many souls have been blessed.

R. L. VICKERY.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge. — Our protracted meeting began the second Sunday in August and lasted till Friday night with Brother Short as the pulpit help. Brother Bingham preached Sunday at 11 o'clock. His was a good sermon. Brother Short came in Sunday evening and did the rest of the preaching. He preached wonderfully and the people seemed to pay good attention. The weather was rainy but there was a fairly good crowd all the time.

The meeting was saddened on account of the death Sunday of Mr. Gloves so near the church. There were five or six converts and four joined the church.

We were glad to have Rev. Short, Rev. Bingham and daughters, Gertrude and Anna Belle, in our home and to take supper. We enjoyed Brother Short's preaching and help in the meeting.

Union Chapel.—The general work of the church is going on very smoothly; we have fair attendance and good services.

Due to not having any lights for the past several months, the Christian Endeavor association was unable to meet, but some of our good members paid the bill and now we have light in abundance, so on the first Sunday night the association was reorganized and we hope to have some splendid work done by our young people.

The revival which was held the fourth week in July was a great success. Dr. S. W. Taylor was our visiting preacher and we can sincerely say each sermon was wonderful. We hope to have Dr. Taylor back with us some day.

We are looking forward to having Dr. R. M. Andrews with us some time in September and hope to have a special program planned for that occasion.

Mr. Spencer brought us a great sermon Sunday; he is improving all the time, each sermon seems a little better than the one before it.

First Church, Lexington.—The attendance of our Sunday school has been somewhat lower for the past few Sundays but we believe that with vacations over it will soon be back to normal.

On Sunday morning Rev. Isley filled his regular appointment and preached for us an inspiring sermon using as a text and subject a part of the first verse of the tenth chapter of Acts, "There was a certain man." This man was Cornelius who was very devout and one who possessed great faith. Mr. Isley stated that faith is the most essential thing in life and yet a thing about which the least is known. Without faith it is impossible to please God.

Sunday evening, Rev. O. C. Loy of the North Davidson charge, filled the pulpit. He preached from Matt. 26:36-50.

Our Wednesday evening prayer services are being well attended and much interest is being shown. Last Wednesday evening this service was led by Mr. Lanning, a ministerial student of the Baptist denomination. Mr. Lanning spoke from Mark 5:1-20. We are always glad to have Mr. Lanning with us.

On Friday evening of last week the choir from First Church sang at Churchland Baptist church. On Wednesday evening of this week they visited Union Grove. We have also sung in several other churches recently.

Rev. Isley is assiting Rev. O. C. Loy in a revival meeting at Union Grove. Last week he was engaged in a meeting in Alamance county.

Last Tuesday evening, Mr. C. Ray Hedrick entertained the Christian Endeavor society at his home. Mr. Hedrick's hospitality was enjoyed by all present.

First Church, Burlington.—The regular services were held Sunday. There were 328 present for Sunday school.

Dr. Paschall, pastor, was in charge of the morning worship. He used as his text Rom. 8:9. A well filled house was greatly inspired by his message.

The Christian Endeavor meeting was presided over by Miss Tula Paul. Miss Paul presented a very helpful program.

Dr. Paschall delivered a very interesting sermon at the evening worship. He used as the basis of meditation, "As He Thinketh In His Heart, So Is He."

Spring Church Charge.—Our special meeting at Lebanon began the first Sunday in August, and closed the following Friday night. The attendance throughout was all that could be desired. Rev. M. P. Chambliss did all the preaching in a manner gratifying to all, There were 15 professions and four accessions.

On Friday, August 18, the ladies of Lebanon put on an ice cream sale on the church grounds. The proceeds amounted to ten dollars, and will apply on church debt.

Mrs. C. E. Dimick recently gave us a real pounding herself. Numerous other items have been given by friends whose names also have been reported frequently. We thank each of you.

Our Spring church meeting begins Sunday. Rev. L. W. Gerringer is our helper.

Anderson, Yarborough Charge.—Our hearts were saddened by the sudden death of Rev. Lee Leonard formerly of the Liberty Hill community. He was a shining example of the workings of Divine Grace. An outstanding Christian character, to know him was to love him. A host of friends mourn his departure.

Our revivals are now past history. The results were a good average for this period of spiritual depression, and soul famine. We can not expect showers of blessing until we cease to halft (limp) between opinions. However we are more concerned in quality than quantity, believing that one genuine conversion is worth more than a dozen shallow professions, our efforts were directed to that end, and we feel the results are substantial and unusually permanent. The membership has been much strengthened which is the primary object of a revival, conversions normally follow, as seeds in a fertile soil.

We were delightfully surprised on Monday evening of the Liberty Hill revival at the unexpected appearance of our good friend, Rev. G. B. Ferree and family. He was a friend in need, for my voice was giving me some trouble as a result of a cold, effecting my voice. He relieved me by exchanging services. We all enjoyed his earnest and well delivered messages. His association was much to be enjoyed, and we feel the richer by his presence with us, and his conrtibution to the revival.

A singing school begins at Fairview for ten days. We feel it will create a new interest and develop the musical talent of the church. Hoping that it will add to the general improvement of the church.

Enfield.—The July meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the M. P. church was held in the home of Mesdames Mary and Egbert Barnhill with Mrs. W. D. Bustin as the assistant hostess.

The meeting was presided over by the President, Mrs. E. I. Bellamy, and 22 members and one visitor were present. Miss Mary Collins was devotional leader, subject, "The Patience of Jesus" was very ably presented by Miss Collins. The program was on "Scholarships." Mrs. P. S. Bellamy gave a very interesting and instructive discussion on this subject.

A report was made of a little shower that had been given Mrs. Pike, one of our faithful members who is now on the sick list, about the middle of July. At this meeting we had the "Country Store," which turned out quite well. The rest of the meeting was taken up with the regular routine of business.

The meeting was held in the yard under the beautiful shade trees. The hostesses served a lovely plate of sandwiches, cookies, pickles and iced tea. After this repast everyone was invited into the side yard where delicious watermelon was served.

Each one left declaring that this had been one of the most enjoyable meetings of the year and were looking forward to our next meeting in this hospitable home.

A "Manless Wedding" will be presented in the graded school auditorium Wednesday night, August 23, under the auspices of the Junior Woman's Auxiliary of our church. The public is cordially invited.

First Church, High Point.—Our congregation lost one of its oldest members this past week, when Mr. Thomas U. Bryant, aged 83 years, passed away at his home on Route 3, Thursday evening, August 17, after a long illness. Mrs. Bryant preceded him in death only a few weeks, having died last May. A short funeral service was conducted Sunday morning by Dr. A. G. Dixon of the Children's Home at the home of his son, Hobart M. Bryant, 1107 Clyde Street. A quartet composed of Messrs. Carey Davis, Noah Davis, Arnold J. Koonce and Wm. Davis, sang two selections "Looking This Way," and "We Shall Sleep But Not Forever." Mrs. J. H. Allred sang very sweetly "Gathering Home," as a solo. At the conclusion of the service, the funeral party left by automobile for Mitchell's Chapel in Yadkin county, where the last rites were conducted by Dr. Joseph Rennie, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of High Point. Interment was then made in the church cemetery by the side of his wife. Mr. Bryant is survived by a large number of sons and daughters, to whom our sincere sympathy is extended.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Everhart have announced the marriage of their daughters, Misses Sarah and Sue, in Danville, Va., on Friday, July 28, 1933. Miss Sarah became the bride of Richard Henry Cook, a son of Mrs. H. L. Cook of thie city, and Miss Sue married Mr. George Lawrence Russell, son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Russell of High Point. These attractive and popular young girls have been reared in First Church, and have taken an active interest in the Sabbath school and C. E. work. A host of friends extend congratulations and good wishes. Both young couples will make their homes in High Point.

On Sunday morning, August 13, Dr. P. E. Lindley, dean of the college, occupied the pulpit and delivered a lovely sermon on "The Lord Speaking to Us," from Isaiah 40, "Fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not discouraged, for I am thy God." He said in part that if we wait for our friends to tell su about God, we may die and never know Him. Let us be calm and quiet before Him so that He may speak for Himself. Being still before God keeps our animal passions in bounds, and gives us spiritual strength. Even the churches can't agree, and no three people in this church can explain the Twenty-third Psalm. If we will clear away all this argument and dissension, and be still before God, we can hear Him. At this service Miss Beulah Moton, daughter of the late Rev. J. H. Moton, played the pipe organ very beautifully.

There was no service on last Sunday morning except Sabbath school with the superintendent, John C. Whitesell, presiding, and there wil be no service next Sunday.

The Woman's Auxiliary held a well attended and enthusiastic session on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the church, associate hostesses being Mesdames W. P. Pickett, Minnie P. Harrell, John S. Pickett, J. H. Walker, Jr., and J. H. Pritchard. Circle No. 4, Mrs. S. S. Coe, chairman, reported that an ice cream and cake sale was held on the church lawn Friday, August 18, the proceeds from which netted the sum of $12.00. The auxiliary is doing fine and faithful work, and is keeping up well with its monthly quotas. Each circle has the leadership of splendid, consecrated chairmen.

We are pleased to announce that Capt. A. M. Rankin is resting more comfortably at his home on Church street, after a second operation on his eye, and the pain is less severe.

Mrs. J. C. Welch, Sr., continues ill at her home on N. Main Street. This is a source of deep sorrow to her large circle of friends.

Judge and Mrs. Lewis E. Teague and small duaghters, Peggy and Jean, have returned from a stay at Myrtle Beach, S. C.

Mis Luicle Pickens returned Monday morning from New York where she has spent the past six weeks studying at Columbia university. She has finished her course in Library Science.

Miss Julia Elizabeth Coe has returned from a pleasant visit to friends in Wilson, N. C.

W. C. Koontz, Jr., is in Chicago where he went to attend the Century of Progress Exhibition.

Miss Annette Pickens is recovering satisfactorily from an operation for the removal of her tonsils last Thursday at the Burrus Memorial hospital.

Mrs. Minnie P. Harrell has returned home from a visit to the mountains of western North Carolina.

Mrs. C. L. Whitaker was in High Point for a few days recently, but is now in Gastonia, N. C. as the guest of her son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton L. Whitaker.

Dr. G. I. Humphreys announces that High Point college will open its doors for the fall session Septembeh 20, and registrations indicate the largest enrollment of students in the history of the institution. No changes in the personnel of the faculty have yet been made.

Mt. Moriah, Cleveland Circuit.—We are still moving on by the help of the Lord and the prayers of our loved ones and friends. Please do not stop praying; for prayer is what changes things and works wonders to and for those who love the Lord.

The revival began at this place the second Sunday in August and continued through the third Sunday. Our pastor did the preaching. Brother Ridge preached soul-stirring sermons and we had a wonderful meeting: church members were received and 17 accepted Christ as their Saviour. Others have given their names for membership and will be received into the church the fourth Sunday of this month. Large crowds attended the meeting and I feel sure each and every one that was present was benefitted. We had a number of visitors with us during the week and we hope they will come back again.

Our pastor has been visiting. He has been into the homes of most of the members and we certainly appreciate this interest he takes.

We were very much pleased with the increase in our Sunday school attendance. The past Sunday and also the preaching service. We had ever 100 present for Sunday school we hope to have more next Sunday.

We have been having prayer services each Sunday after Sunday school and we trust we have done good.

We were glad to have Mr. F. M. Leadford back with us in the service Sunday morning. He has recovered from a broken hip.

May we contiue to do the Master's will.

DAPHINE HUNT, Reporter.

First Church, Concord.—Our pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan brought us a good message Sunday morning. Our night service has been called off for the past two Sunday nights as our pastor is helping in a meeting at Rockingham, N. C. Next Sunday morning we are planning to hold a memorial service in honor of the ones that have died since Mr. Morgan has been with us. This service will be in honor of Grandma Little, Mrs Gertrude Smith, Adelaide Blackwelder and Jack and Bobby Scarboro. Last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Blackwelder placed beautiful flowers in the church in honor of little Adlaide. Last Friday was Adlaide's and Alice's birthday. Last Friday afternoon members of the Cradle Roll class and other friends of little Alice went to her home and enjoyed a little birthday party with her. She was three years old.

We were glad to have some of our members that have moved away back in town and glad to have them worship with us. Mrs Nina Little Byrd and little daughter and Mrs. Mary Newton Wilson and two children. We weer also glad to see Miss Agnes Litaker back from her vacation she has been visiting in High Point and Snow Camp. Grandma Thomas is spending some time in Charlotte with her daughter, Mrs. Dunn. Mrs. Maggie Sides and Mr. Will Widenhouse are the nominees for delegate to the Annual Conference.

We still have some very sick members in our church family. Mrs. P. J. Mann is still real sick and Mr. Robert Gray is in the Statesville hospital in a serious condition. Mrs. W. B. Newton has been back to the hospital in Charlotte but she is now at home and we hope she will soon be well. Harlan and James Nevin Sides have had the measles but we are glad that they are able to come to church. Mr. John Burris went to Charlotte Monday to have his tonsils removed

The Junior C. E. society had charge of the Sunday night service several weeks ago and they sure did put on a good program. They told the life of Jesus from birth to the Crucifixion. Four of the children sang a duet; it was all good and I am sure every one enjoyed it. Miss Agnes Litaker had charge of the Juniors. The next Sunday night the Intermediate C. E. had charge of the service. They put on a good program and they used the candle lighting as they did when they installed their officers. All the children in both societies did fine and they co-operate so fine. Mr. Ernest Litaker had charge of the Intermediate C. E. society.

Next Tuesday night the Ladies' Aid will sponsor a clipping party. We will pay five cents at the door and ten cents to clip a paper bag. Something useful will be in each bag. Mr. Luther Burris and Mrs. Ruth Knight have charge of the program.

Circle No. 1 of the Misionary society gave a Tom Thumb wedding and put on a hat sale and foot measuring. The made 1,420 cents. The Tom Thumb wedding was fine; the little children looked so sweet and did their parts real good.

Our Ladies' Aid society has what we call a traveling basket. One member puts a package in the basket and then passes it on to another member and she takes the package and puts some money in the bank and places another package in the basket and passes it on. We don't pay over ten cents for what we put in the basket but put as much money in the bank as we want to or feel like we can. We hope to have good success with our basket.

Kannapolis.—On Sunday, August 20, we observed a period in the morning worship to the dedication of our new Hymnals. We are really proud of the books for they are the nicest we have ever had; and we are trusting that each one will help to keep them so.

We are glad to note that our Sunday school is increasing some but we still "miss you" when "you" are absent, so come and find the work that the Lord would have you do.

Rev. Bowman brought us a very interesting and helpful sermon both morning and evening, Sunday, August 20. We are happy to have him in our community. He will direct our Daily Vacation Bible school which opened Monday, August 21, with an enrollment of 70 children. Trusting that this training might mean much to the children, for we realize that the children will soon be taking their places in life to carry on the work where the older ones leave off; and may they all be trained and abide by their training until they will know that the way is bright and will let the spirit draw them nearer to the Master. The school will convene each morning of this week and next week at 8:30 a. m. to 11 a. m. All children are urged to attend regardless of denomination.

Cottage prayer meetings are listed for this week leading up to our revival which will begin on Sunday, August 26. Rev. G. W. Vick of Calvary M. E. church, Charlotte, N. C., will do the preaching. Services at 11 o'clock each morning and at 7:30 o'clock each evening. The public is cordially invited.

We enjoyed a "love feast" at our church on Saturday, August 19, and really witnessed a good spiritual time together. Was sorry that it was not convenient for all members and others to be present for you really missed lots.

We seem to be getting along fine but we realize that it is due to the fact that some one is praying so please don't forget we need your prayers always and this mean "you." And while you pray for us just remember we are praying for your.

Me. Hermon.—Services began wtih the choir singing two selections, "Come Thou, Almighty King," and "Holy, Holy, Holy."

The Scripture lesson wae read by the pastor, Rev. L. E. Mabry. The sixth chapter of Galatians. Prayer by the pastor; then the regular offering was taken. The sermon was preached by the President of our Annual Conference, Dr. R. M. Andrews. He took as his text, "The Cause and Cure of Failure," or Galatians 6:9, "And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."

There was a large atendance out to hear Dr. Andrews and everyone seemed to enjoy his sermon.

Shiloh.—Today, the third Sunday of August, has come around once more and with it the beginning of another revival at Shiloh. There were present at Sunday school 326, and at both preaching services the church was more than filled.

At 11 o'clock, the pastor Rev. R. S. Troxler, delivered on inspiring message from Hosea 13:9, "O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself, but thy hope is in me." We have the same human inclination and the same devil today that had to be met in Hosea's day. Man is tempted when drawn away of own lusts and enticed. The trouble is on the inside of our own hearts. Hosea tried to warn the people of impending danger, but he couldn't get them to realize that they themselves were responsible for it. Israel laid her troubles to something else, such as imperfect leaders or ambitious rulers. But Hosea came with the stinging word, "O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself."

It was the sin in the hearts of Adam and Eve that drove them from Eden. Jesus said, "Nothing from without a man, that entereth in can defile him. Those things that proceed out of the mouth come from the heart; and they defile the man."

No person nor the devils in hell can make you fall unless there is in your heart an inclination to do those things. When you give the keeping of your heart to the lowly Nazarene, it is safe, for He died to make it so. He holds the keys of death and hell in His right hand and no man is able to pluck his children out of His hand. With every temptation He makes a way of escape.

No one has to fall; any one can live the Christian life that wants to, for the power of heaven is at his disposal. Jesus said, "Be not afraid, I have overcome the world."

Brother Troxler again preached at the afternoon service. The text was Joshua 7:21, "When I saw among the spoils a goodly Babylonish garment, and two hundred sheckels weight, then I coveted them, and took them."

Joshua and his army had won a great victory at Jericho, and the spoils were to go into the treasury of the Lord; but Achan had taken some for himself and hid them in his tent. He thought it was a secret and possibly no man knew it but himself. But God knew it, and Ai could not be taken because of this sin in the camp. David thought his sin was covered, but God, whose eye sees all, knew it and He sent Nathan to him to say, "Thou art the man." David fell on his face in humble contrition and his confession and prayer for mercy is recorded in the 51 Psalm God doesn't let sin go by and withdraws His presence until it's removed.

There were three steps to Achan's downfall. He saw, then he coveted, and then took. By his sin he brought trouble to Israel, lost his own life and brought death to his innocent children. When sin was removed, God came back to His people and they were again victorious.

There were many visitors with us today and we were delighted to see them. Many of them were homefolks just coming back home to worship at their beloved mother church once more.

Rev. R. A. Hunter will be the pulpit help this week. May God give us a great victory over sin this week and may many more souls come into the Kingdom of Christ.

Pinnacle and Mt. Zion.—Our special meeting began with Pilot church the first Sunday in July, with Rev. Glenn Madison as our help. He was at his best and did fine preaching to the delight and benefit of all who attended. we received four young married people into the church.

The second Sunday in July we began with Shoals church. Brother Pritchard was our help here. I have never known Brother Pritchard to do better preaching. The people were well pleased with his work. We received 12 young people into the church here.

We began at Mt. Zion the third Sunday in July with Dr. Andrews preaching at the 11 o'clock. Brother Bethea came for the night service, and did all the preaching throughout the week. He, too, was at his best and the people were much pleased with his preaching. We received 22 in the church here making a total of 38 on this work up to the present time.

One meeting is yet to hold; the one at Pinnacle beginning the first Sunday night in October with Dr. Pritchard to help. We are hoping to have a good meeting here.

The people continue to show their kindness to us in a substantial way. We visited with Brother O. F. Hauser's family recently, and they loaded our car with many good things. We also visited Brother Hubert Hauser bringing home with us different kinds of vegetables, fruits and melons. Brother Stanley Lane and family drove out to see us one evening recently bringing with them a supply of grapes for jelly. Others have remembered us at different times with vegetables, fruits, milk, etc. For these things we are very thankful. Brother J. A. Allen is elected delegate to the Annual Conference.

Young Men's Wideawake Class, Shiloh.—We had 51 members and 11 visitors present Sunday, August 20, which was the same day that our revival began. One of the visitors, Mr. Curtis Leonard, taught the lesson.

In this lesson, which he explained very fully, we find that Samuel was a very obedient boy and upon hearing the call went to Eli immediately because he thought it was he who called. When Samuel found out that it was the Lord who called him he asked the Lord what He would have him do.

In the last part of the lesson we find Samuel giving his farewell address. He tells the people that he has done what he thought was right; and that if he has taken anything unjustly that he would repay it.

On Saturday, August 12, the class had a social which everyone enjoyed. Addresses were made by Rev. R. S. Troxler, our pastor; Mr. H. A. Leonard, our Sunday school superintendent; and Mr. Curtis Leonard, an old member of the class. After these addresses weiners, sandwiches, cake and lemonade was served.

Every young man who does not attend Sunday school anywhere is invited to join our class. If you live too far away to come to Shiloh, go to some church near you and it will do you good.

First Church, Thomasville.—The Laies' Auxiliary held its regular monthly meeting recently with Mrs. Fred Lloyd on Gray St.

The opening exercises were conducted by Mrs. Sara Westmoreland and Mrs. Alex Lloyd was in charge of the program for that night. The business was transacted after which delicious refreshments consisting of ice cream, cake and grapes were served by the hostess.

The Minnis Circle met with Mrs. R. H. Ragan for the August meeting. The welcome address was given by Pauline Bailey and Finch Jackson directed a very interesting program on the life after death.

Having ended all business and discussion these young boys and girls were invited out in the yard for a watermelon feast. Games were played on the lawn before adjournment.

Mrs. W. G. Myers, president of First M. P. church C. E. and devout worker of the church, has sufficiently recovered from a recent appendix operation to be removed to her home on Cox Avenue where she is recuperating nicely.

The C. E. society held on open air worship program on the church lawn on Sunday night with Miss Ollie Mae Howard, leading.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

FIRST DISTRICT RALLY

The first district rally held at Hawkins Chapel the fifth Sunday in July was fully represented by several of the charges. This district covers so much territory that it is difficult to have a full representation from all the charges.

In the forenoon Miss Winie Burt of Halifax charge took the lead in presenting the Women's Work. Other ladies of the district presented various phases of the women's program. A duet was rendered by two ladies from Pleasant Hill. In the afternoon four young ladies favored the audience with a special selection. This quartet was from Hawkins chapel. Following this number, Miss Virginia Dare Massey, a High Point college junior, from Spring Church, spoke on the college from the students' viewpoint. This was an interesting address and elicited much favorable comment. Rev. N. M. Harrison spoke concerning the Student Loan Fund and easily raised in pledges and cash one hundred dollars.

Dr. Andrews presented in an interesting and able way, the inglorious and the glorious church.

I have mentioned only the high peaks of the program. Every minute of the time was ably taken care of. Every church represented was no doubt greatly benefited. If we have another rally this fall, the chairman will ask each pastor of the district to give a brief address on some church problem, or othe subject of vital inteerst.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

Our dear friends—a call to Baltimore, Md. for the funeral of Mrs. Rosie K. Watts, a sister-in-law, precents our making the usual report to the Herald this week.

You will be glad to know that our two carloads of coal is in our basement ready for winter use. The freight is paid, thanks to those who so readily responded and to Capt. A. M. Rankin who paid the larger part of it out of the funds handled by him. The coal is yet to be paid for before September 1, so we shall appreciate your help.

Clothing for Children

We appreciate the response to our request to make dresses and underclothing for our girls. Young women's classes, or missionary circles or auxilaries who wish to do some sewing for the Home, and at the same time have a good social time and do good at the same time, please let us hear from you soon. Take two or more girls to sew for and Mrs. Dixon will gladly send the measurements. We thank you.

AN EXEMPLARY CHURCH MEMBER

I want you to write up an article and tell that all the loyal members have not quit paying their pledges. We have a member who pledged a good sum and never missed paying each Sunday also when we needed some extra money and he doubled his pledge his car set in the garage without a tag in order to meet his pledge. This man is no rich man, just a working man trying to do God's will filled with the grace of God enough to see what he should do.

You can write this up in your way which is much better than I could do it.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Norwood

James B. Norwood was born April 3, 1867, in Brunswick county, Virginia. He was married to Miss Elena Ellen Balmer, November 7, 1894. To this union 11 children were born. Six boys and five girls. One boy has gone on before, ten of their children are still living.

He first joined Philadelphia Methodist Protestant church in young manhood. After his marriage he moved his church letter to Wesley's Chapel M. P. church, for a few years, then he with his wife came back to Philadelphia. In this church he remained a faithful servant until his death. Brother Norwood suffered from paralysis over two years, yet he never complained or murmured because of his affliction. That gentle, pleasant manner, that was so characteristic of his life, remained until his death. His funeral was conducted from his home on August 3 by his pastor. A large crowd of his friends and neighbors, with many members of the Woodmen of the World, of which he was a faithful member for many years were present to pay their last respects of devotion and love. He was laid to rest at the old William's place under a bank of beautiful flowers, the token of their respect.

He died August 2, 1933 at the age of 66 years, and four months. His widow, with her sons and daughters are committed to the care of Him who doeth all things well. May God bless and bring each one of them with him in that gerat day. R. L. HETHCOX.

Campbell

On July 25, 1933 God said to Mrs. J. P. Campbell, "It is enough, come up higher." She had lived more than 74 years and she had lived well.

Mrs. Campbell lived in and for her children. When her pastor was visiting in her home she would always talk of her children and ask her pastor to take then to God in prayer. Her children never fought a battle but she fought at their side; they never carried a burden but she struggled too; they never suffered but she suffered also.

Mrs. Campbell was a righteous woman. Her motives were Christian; her ideals high. The very expression, yea, the radiance of her face was an index to the beauty of her character. The visitor in the home was made a better person for Mrs. Campbell's friendship was uplifting and inspiring.

Her loved ones will find in God an unfailing comfort and a peace greater than their sorrow. May God's richest blessings be upon each one.

Shallow Religion

A layman remarked, "Religion is mighty shallow these days." It jarred our consciousness, and made us begin to think about the question. We asked ourselves, "Is it true?" and "Wherein is it true?"

Religion is shallow when religion and church membership is used to gain business advantage or social prominence. Often people move from one community to another and join the largest and strongest church because it gives an advantage and prominence not received in the smaller church.

I have known school teachers belonging to the Methodist Protestant church, refusing to attend their denomination in the town where they teach because it was not as large or as influential as one of another denomination.

Another evidence of shallow religion is in the statement, "I keep my membership at my old home church because of loved ones buried there." It is well enough to remember the old home church, but if there is an attachment worthy the name those people will help keep up the cemetery. The truth of the matter is they do not care for the old church, and if you asked many of them the name of the pastor they would not know. This alibi is used to shirk the responsibility of church membership in the community where they now live.

Another sign of shallow religion is refusal on the part of the members to support the church because a certain pastor is serving, when they wanted another. They are out of tune with the church and her Christ, and are making some preacher the goat. Or they do not like some member of the church, and so they refuse to support the church because of hypocrites in the congregation. The truth here is they are hypocrites themselves, and know it, and they also know the church is better off without them.

Another shallow Christian doesn't like to attend a certain church because he thinks he is more intelligent than the common run of members in that church. They forget that Jesus came to lift people mentally, as well as spiritually, and in forgetting this they lost contact with Him.

Where our treasure is, is also the abiding place of our heart. So religion is shallow when Christians, so-called, spend more money for frivolous non-essentials than they give to the church.

When church members advocate the repeal of the 18th Amendment and vote for party rather than principle and swallow the mandate of the liquor crowd rather than stand true to the church in her crusade against wrong, it is very evident that their religious life is dangerously shallow.

Those who live true to Christ and the Church, spending and being spent for the things the Church has always stood for, are the salt of the earth. Proof of having lost the savor of Christian living is found in the things mentioned above and these are evidences of shallow religion. "K.K.K."

Love for the Church

In Ephesias 5:25 we are told that "Christ loved the church and gave himself for it." Because Christ loved the church and gave Himself for it, we ought also to love the church and be willing to give of our time, our ability and what we have in the matter of substance for the support and maintenance of the church.

Christ loved the church because it was His own. In Matthew 16:18 we find a statement by Jesus which contains these words: "I will build my church." The church which Christ declared He would build is the church we have today—a body of believers in and followers of Christ. The utterance of the Master concerning the building of His church was made immediately following the declaration of Simon Peter, who said: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God," in response to the question, "Whom do ye say that I am?"

The church we have in the world today which represents that power and force known as Christianity, was founded upon the principles of love, faith and truth as taught by Christ, the Founder and Great Head of the church.

Why should we love the church which Christ loved, builded and for which He gave Himself? First, because of its purpose. The supreme purpose of the church of the living God in any community is to reveal to the world the love of God and the teachings of Jesus Christ. The purpose of the church may be summed up in these words: "For the enlightenment of men and women who are in the darkness of sin, and to lead the lost to Christ, the Redeemer, by the message of the Gospel which is proclaimed from its pulpitl."

We should love the church, in the second place, because of its benefits to us. The church should be in reality the spiritual home of the people who are members of the church. Our physical home is a place where we go for rest and for food; where we commune with members of the family. Likewise, the church is to provide the soul rest—that peace of heart and conscience—also the food for the soul. The church is the place where praise, adoration, thankgiving and worship are given to Almighty God. It is a place of communion with God.

What should the church be to us? It should be the altar of our devotion; the center of our affection; the source of our dren, find their way regularly to the thousands of churches of this land, and listen to warm-hearted, scriptural sermons; as they sing together the God-sent hymns of the church, pray together, meditate together, pay together, fellowship together, and confess their sins and consecrate themselves to God, they will be brought under the influence of a power that can not but be an anchor to their souls. These people who worship in our churches can not go out from the holy place where they really meet God, and straightway forget what manner of men they are. Impressions will be made, resolutions formed, purposes strengthened, and ideals exalted that will be for such worshipers the savor of life unto life. And so it will be that God, through His Church, will preserve a host that have not, and will not, bow the knee to Baal.

Lift up your head, O Church of God; "and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors;" for it is through you that the King of Glory shall come in to save this adulterous and sinful generation.

And you, brother ministers, take heart. "Lift up your voice with strength: lift it up; be not afraid." When you preach next Sunday encourage your heart in the confidence that you are the spokesman—God's spokesman—of the mightiest organization in the world and the one and only institution with a remedy sufficient to save this age from moral ruin and putrification.

Keep on preaching! S. W. Taylor.

AN ALARMING SITUATION

I do not believe that those who know me intimately will accuse me of being either a pessimist or an alarmist. I am neither the one or the other, however, I am not blind to stubborn facts, facts that haunt me day and night and cause me to wonder what the outcome will be.

I recite a few facts here in the hope that our churches will be aroused by them to render heroic service in meeting our financial obligations.

First. To date I have received from all sources the sum of $2,575.83. In this amount is included $500.00 borrowed since last Conference adjourned. Of this amount $1,292.68 was for A. C. B., to be used in paying our President, and in meeting incidental expenses.

Second. At this rate I shall be able to pay about one-half of the President's salary when Conference meets. There will be nothing to apply on our indebtedness, and nothing for our superannuates, except the meager amount that will come in as "special" for them.

Third. Something must be done at our Conference to "balance our budget." As Christians we can not afford to continue to make debts with no prospect of paying them. Brethren, we must face the issue like men and not be afraid or ashamed to adopt drastic measures, if necessary, in order to meet our financial obligations and save ourselves from bankruptcy. This is your problem, and it is your bounden duty to solve it.

SOME PERTINENT SUGGESTIONS ON COLLEGE EDUCATION

By Thomas C. Amick

The high school senior is confronted with many questions. On the day he receives his diploma, he is at one of the crossroads of life. One of these roads leads to college, another leads to work and the beginning of a career. Which road is the high school graduate to take? His teachers and the college speakers who have spoken at his school have advised the college course and because of this advice he is already predisposed to go to college . However, obstacles are often in the way and many of these the high school graduate can not surmount. One very definite obstacle is poverty, and this has clipped the wings of many who would have gladly mounted higher.

This brings up the question of the value of a college education. Is a college education worth the effort, the struggle, and the cost? Many college graduates would be as well off if they had never gone to college. They have spent their money, their time, and they have passed their work by the grace of their professors, and after the four years of college work they are neither cultured, nor have they learned to think through a difficult problem of life. On the other hand, other students after four years of college work have their minds cultivated, their hearts uplifted, their wits sharpened, and they go out ready to meet and to solve life's problems successfully. For the first class the college course is not worth the cost; for the second class the value of their college career can not be estimated in material possessions. The high school graduate should consider a number of things before deciding to take a college course.

Then there are different kinds of colleges,—the state colleges, the privately endowed colleges, and the denominational colleges. To which should the expectant college student go? That also depends. The smaller college gives and does not profess to give anything but a liberal arts course of study. The privately endowed college and the state colleges offer a wide variety of courses preparatory for some of the most useful and dignified vocations in life. The ideal college education is a liberal arts course followed by a professional course. But this requires a great deal of time and is quite expensive. To make this preparation for life requires about seven years of college work and the cost is prohibitive, except to a favored few. And the high school graduate must decide for himself how much time and money he has at his disposal. A few can earn their college expenses at the larger colleges by their work, but this means a longer time spent in college if the student is to get the most out of the college course.

Another thing that should attract the prospective college student's attention is the fact that each college has a personality, a character, that distinguishes it from every other college. This college personality stamps itself largely on each student who attends. Just like people, so with colleges, and the college personality should be considered before a decision is made as to which college to attend. Some colleges are not standard, they do not do standard work, their teachers are not well trained, and they are running along in the same ruts in which they have run for the last century. If the student does not wish a sickly personality stamped upon him, he should not attend one of this type of institutions. Other colleges are virile, strong, aggressive, and they command respect wherever they are known. They stand for the finest and best in civilization, art, music, science, they stand for rigirous scholarship, they have high purposes and ideals, and they are the institutions from which the student should choose his alma mater.

It has been indicated already that scholarship is to be one of the first and foremost products of a college. But what is scholarship? Is it mere book knowledge? A man may be a walking encyclopedia and yet be one of the most ignorant of his tribe. A few years ago a young man graduated from college and secured work with a good commercial firm. He had amassed, during his four years' college course, a great deal of information and he had, from time to time, studied how to use this information for the advantage of himself and of his fellow man. The firm with which this young college graduate connected himself had new ideas presented and, as a result of the young man's work, found itself growing in usefulness, service, and power. The young graduate infused new life into the firm and made it influential and powerful in its field. This young man possessed real scholarship. Also there was a young fellow by the name of Simon Newcomb, who had no money but possessed boundless enthusiasm and energy and he had the highest ideals. He studied at home, interested himself in mathematics and learned how to apply mathematics to life about him. He was called upon to do much astronomical work for the United States government and finally to head the graduate school of mathematics at Johns Hopkins University when this university was founded in 1876. Here was a man who possessed scholarship although he had never taken a college course. In this same list are Henry Ford, John D. Rockefeller, Andrew Carnegie, Steinmetz, Edison, and others whose names are legion in the earth. Scholarship and culture can be gained outside of college walls, but the way is longer and more arduous. And the college whose chief aid is anything but the highest scholarship and culture is not worthy of the name.

The attitude of the college towards civilization is one thing to be considered also. Some colleges are so radical and their professors are so radical that they would discard the past and build only upon what they call the new. They forget how civilization has been laboriously built up, little by little, through the last six thousand years or more. Values are the bed rock of life and it has taken all these millenniums for mankind to determine just what is valuable. No one people has of itself been able to determine where true value lies. We draw our values not from wells of shallow and stagnant water, but from wells that are more than sixty centuries deep, and what the centuries have determined to be good, true, and valuable, are the values that the colleges should emphasize and teach. As H. C. Morrison says, ''Our likes and dislikes have nothing to do with reflective thinking, and still less to do with the fundamental values of life. The standards which have come down to us are the result of untold centuries of social experimentation. The true values have survived and become standard because they are the values which have been capable of constituting civilization. . . . . It appears to be clear that just as organic life has evolved from lower forms, so the values which hold society together today have developed out of forms which served their purpose in holding together more primitive societies.''

Speaking further, we might say that the most universally accepted forms of art go back through the Renaissance, the Gothic and the Norman periods, through Rome and Greece into ancient Egypt and beyond. Some of the best designed office buildings today go back for their most essential features to Egyptian temples.

The same is true in literature. Not a piece of literature in which we have any confidence today but that, in its structure at least, goes back through a long process of racial learning through the Greek and western Asiatic until the story becomes lost in pre-history.

Each college should have this attitude. Not that we should, like the Chinese, simply reverence and cling to the past without any idea of progress, but holding to the good and the true and the great ehtical, moral, and social values of the past, the colleges should go forth struggling to use these in building a better and nobler civilization than we now have.

In some colleges faculty members make no pretense towards professing religious convictions and some even avow their infiidelity. For such men to teach the growing, developing mind is a tragedy. But, says one, colleges must be liberal. Yes, colleges must be liberal and they must be free, but they are to use their liberality and their freedom in such a way that civilization will be made better, life be made sweeter, and mankind will be made nobler than it has been in the past. And the past has shown us that no civilization has succeeded and that no people has prospered without religion, and that, if the future is to be judged by the past, no nation or people will ever succeed without religion. Religion, like civilization, will make progress but the new will be built upon the religion of the past. As Mr. Morrison again says: ''The Hebraic Decalogue is as valid today as ever. It is not enough for modern civilization, but the differences are in the direction of subtractions.'' Humanity is sweeping onward and upward and man builds on the past in religion, and, utilizing the means at his disposal, he builds nobler structures than the past could build. The denominational college, is fact, all colleges must teach religion. They should not teach sectarianism, but it is incumbent upon them to teach religion. No man could or would object to any college professor's teaching religion in the sense as defined by James when he says:

''Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and keep himself unspotted from the world.''

Now it is incumbent on the colleges to keep these facts in the forefront of their work. Parents who send children at great expense and through great sacrifices to college have a right to expect these same children returned to their homes better trained, with deeper feelings, with minds more civil-dead to outward things, and to evil forces, as to be in perfect league with God and His providences, and, as it were, shut in with God as in a tent.

Hence the next verse says, "Thou shalt know that thy tent, or tabernacle, is in peace." That tent is the living God, in which the soul that has passed through the refining fire to make its home. Then follows the closing stage of such a soul; it is to be fruitful in other souls, and come to the close of life, like a shock of grain, fully ripened for the everlasting garner.—George D. Watson.

THE CENTURY OF PROGRESS

So much has been said and written about The Century of Progress, till one hesitates to write further. Yet, after visiting it there is a feeling that the half has never been told. I recall hearing a speaker addressing a college audience, who pointed out the small per cent of people, who have the privilege of attending college; and emphasizing the debt of those who do to their less fortunate neighbors. With such a feeling I add these few personal impressions and observations. I trust the readers of the Methodist Protestant Herald may not feel toward me as certain members did toward their pastor who had visited Europe. A great convention was being held in his church, and he was kept off the program, except for an invocation, which he began as follows: "Lord, thou knowest when thy servant was in Europe."

Two false impressions that have gone out should be corrected concerning The Century of Progress. The first false impression I found was that the who affair was clouded in obscenity. There are certain art exhibits and manner of dressing that would have been shocking to our fathers and mothers. In the atmosphere of the times in which we live, I failed to see anything that should be shocking to the most unsophisticated. Another erroneous impression that reached me was the prohibitive cost to poor people. The cast of attending is as reasonable as anyone could wish.

The lighting of The Century of Progress amazed me. Forty years ago Grover Cleveland pressed a button, and started the fountain flowing, the wheels turning and officially opened the World's Fair, to the amazement of the world. The Century of Progress was lighted from a feeble ray from the distant orange star, Arcturus, commonly called Job's star. This particular star was selected because it is just exactly forty light years from the earth. The feeble ray from the distant Arcturus that blinked down forty years ago on The World's Fair now floods The Century of Progress with marvelous light. This was made possible by the photo-electric cell and large telescope of Yerkes Observatory.

The vastness of the whole affair is bewildering. The display covers space wide enough for a small town, and about four miles long. As one roams through the vast buildings, either rides on the sky-ride or over the grounds; visits places where fun is supreme, or the more serious and sober displays; one is constantly conscious of the marvelous material progress. The modern American homes exhibited are educational. The pavilions, Indian villages, the Esquimo huts, Southern Mountaineer cabins give one a comprehensive view of the world. Weeks could be profitably spent in studying the exhibits in the Hall of Science, the Parade of States, the Horticultural buildings, the General Food Exhibits, the General Motor demonstrations, the General Exhibit Hall, the Travel and Transportation Building, the International Harvester's exhibit, the Model of King Solomon's Temple, and the display of the National Government.

There stands the olden Temple of Jehol, brought from Northern China in thirty-eight thousand pieces, which baffles all description. To borrow an expression from the late Theodore Roosevelt, a description of the Adler Planetarium and Astronomical Museum "would bankrupt the English language." Just outside the north gate of The Century of Progress stands the Field Museum of Natural History, which is, perhaps, unsurpassed anywhere in the United States. Near this museum stands the John G. Shedd Aquarium, with its over four hundred species of fish, gathered from the very ends of the earth.

The Hall of Religion makes its appeal to Jew and Gentile, Baptist and Methodist, Presbyterian and Lutheran, Christian Scientist and Episcopalian, joining in a solemn manifestation of the supremity of God. Here in this hall can be seen one of the rarest relics of Christianity—the silver chalice of Antioch. This chalice was dug out of the ruins of Antioch by Arabs. Authorities all agree that it is the earliest known object connected with the Lord's Supper. It is rather a common cup inside of a very ornate one, both dating to the first century of Christianity. The inner cup was held so sacred that it was placed within the other for protection. The inner cup was the cup probably used by Christ in the upper room, when He instituted the Holy Communion. The chalice's value is inestimable. When it was displayed in the Musee du Louvre in Paris, it was insured for over a million dollars, and for the period of The Century of Progress it is insured for three hundred thousand dollars.

The following is copied out of the official guide book of The Century of Progress: "The chalice stands 7.56 inches high and would hold about two quarts of liquid. That it was made by a very great artist, all eminent students agree. He has presented in beautiful sculptured figures two scenes of the Christ, each surrounded by five of his followers. One shows Jesus as a mature, yet a young man, beardless, dignified, clothed in a toga. Below Him are Paul and Peter; above, at left and right, are James and Thaddeus. Behind Paul is an old wrinkled man, St. Andrew, brother of John.

The other group shows Jesus as a boy hold in his hand the scroll of the law on two staffs. Matthew, Mark, Luke and John sit around him, and behind Matthew is St. James the greater, the brother of John.

According to orientalists the chalice is truly representative ,in design and decoration, of the golden age of Hellenic art, and probably the last example extant."

A visit to The Century of Progress in Chicago is an experience of a lifetime, and an event of a generation.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

The month of September to be when special effort shall be made to raise the Annual Conference Budget. In stations, the third Sunday of that month is the time set, while in the rural churches, the month is set apart for this purpose.

October, Pay-up month

Second Sunday in October, Rally Day, Promotion in Sunday school, etc.

November 8, Annual Conference meets at Thomasville Community church.

"Be patient in tribulation, continuing instant in prayer." "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; think on these things." "And have that love which beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeful all things, endureth all things."

"Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord." "Rest in the Lord and wait paitiently for Him." "Trust in the Lord and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land and verily thou shalt be fed." "Commit thy way unto the Lord, and He shall bring it to pass." "I will declare mine iniquity; I will be sorry for my sin." "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit with me." "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me with thy free spirit." "Then will I teach transgressors thy ways; and sinners shall be converted unto thee."

If the members of the church will be faithful in practicing the foregoing admonitions they will thereby bring the days of recovery nigh and a glad new day will be ours. These CRA Codes have always worked, when they had a chance.

Rock Creek Church, Rev. J. A. Burgess, Pastor

I visited this church at the 11 o'clock hour. It was the beginning of the revival services. The house was filled and the people listened attentively. An attempt was made to raise the A. C. B., but only a small part of it was pledged.

An addition or entrance to the church has been built this year which greatly improves the appearance and also increases the seating capacity. Rock Creek is one of the older churches which has greatly helped in the building up of the denomination in the state.

This makes the third church on this charge I have visted on Sunday, and was at first quarterly conference at the other; so this really completes my visitation on this charge. Alamance is one of our best circuits and should be the leader in the aggressive activities of the Conference.

Bellemont Church, Rev. L. E. Mabry, Pastor

The revival meeting was also starting here. The pastor had preached in the morning and I arrived in time for the afternoon appointment. There was a good attendance and respectful attention was given the message. This completes the churches on this charge except Cedar Cliff. The work of the circuit appears to be moving on smoothly and the pastor hopes to come out very well with the finances.

Haw River Church, Rev. J. P. Pegg, Pastor

I visited this church at the night service. There was very good attendance and the people appeared to appreciate the message. This is an exceptional little group of workers. Knowing of my coming, they raised the A. C. B. in full and have almost all of the other interests in hand. I know of no other church in the Conference that has done so well. It is not because these are more prosperous than others, nor because they are assessed less than others in proportion to membership—but these folks accept willingly their financial obligations and begin at the first of the year to raise every cent of the assessment and they raise it.

Haw River has a very pretty brick church, well arranged for Sunday school activities and a splendid stone wall around the cemetery. The wall was built by Mr. B. N. Duke at a cost of several thousand dollars. His mother is buried here.

FAITH FOR GUIDANCE

God recognizes our Christian life as a journey. We are pilgrims. Our destination is final. Many snares are set for our feet. There are lures to part us on the one hand; and frights and forces and perils upon the other. We have never gone this way before. Many are going the opposite direction. Some cross our path. And formidable obstacles confront us. Moreover, the responsibility of the journey is our own. None will carry us. All teachers can do is to tell us about it. And the most that even faithful parents can assume is to launch us upon it. We must do our own going.

Sensible we are of our lack of knowledge sufficient for the undertaking and of the deficiency of wisdom for its execution; and the more since demon angels oppose our march. Many souls have gone astray and fallen by the way.

Our need of guidance is, strangely enough, the more apparent to us the longer we are in the way and the farther we get. Our prayer, our cry, is:

> ''Guide me, O thou great Jehovah,
> Pilgrim through this barren land.
> I am weak but Thou art mighty;
> Hold me with Thy powerful hand.''

God has made provision for this necessity in three ways:

He has given us a chart.

He has set us an example.

He has promised us guidance, and this all the way.

The Scriptures are our chart, God's Son is our example, and the Holy Spirit is our Guide; and these three agree in one. Guidance is never contrary to, but always according to, the Scriptures. And the Spirit always leads in the footsteps of Jesus. Our chart and our compass are infallible. None are in safety apart from the Scriptures. None can lose the way while following Jesus. And lower lights are burning, too, along the way in the examples of saints of all ages, but these, too, all shine upon Him who is the way, saying with Paul, ''Follow me as I follow the Lord.''

And it is of the direct guidance of God that we speak here. Keeping in mind that since the responsibility of the going is ever with oursleves, we will distinguish between guidance and control or coercion. Where it is said, ''As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God,'' we are to understand that it is those who consent to be led—those who ''follow'' the Spirit, rather than their own inclination or understanding or the wishes of others or the ways of the world. While the promise is of the leading, the premium is upon the following. This implies and involves a deep and abiding sense of our insufficiency for piloting our own bark, and our dependence upon Him for direction in the way of life.

God Himself recognizes this and has left us such promises as these ''The steps of a good man are ordered of the Lord.'' ''The Lord shall guide thee continually.'' There are many such promises, but these two will suffice. The first assures of guidance in detail—''steps'' not miles; the second of constant guidance not only for great issues or upon momentous occasions but ''continually.''

The conditions upon our part having been met, we are therefore sure of guidance. These conditions, we may note, are threefold: 1. That we are in sonship relation with Him, for it is the ''good man,'' the ''son of God,'' that is spoken of in such texts. 2. That there is the prayer of dependence and of faith for guidance. ''Trust also in him, and he will bring it to pass.'' 3. That there is the purpose to follow Him no matter which way He leads. ''We shall know, if we follow on to know,'' and ''If any man willeth to do his will, he shall know of the doctrine.''

I say if these conditions are met, we are sure of Divine guidance. Now this is a call, and sometimes a challenge, to our faith, for guidance is not always sensible. While sometimes it may come as a flash of lightning on a dark night, letting us see the pitfall to the left, and the straight road to the right, it just as frequently happens that with all the conditions met, we pray and trust and wait, and no such sensible manifestations appear. Then let us look at our handbook on the subject again, and read, ''The meek will he guide in judgment.'' Sometimes He will honor and use the faculties He Himself has created in us, and which we in consecration have laid at His feet. And here we may make a fine distinction; and that is we are not to lean to our own understanding; we may depend upon Him in all our understanding as well as we may in our intuitions. That is to say, we have barred no doors of our mind against Him, and as He may come in our impressions, so He may come in our cogitations as well. Hence, maintain the prayer of dependence and of confidence for His guidance. We may find ourselves led up to the very moment for decisive action without an imperative mandate, but left apparently to our own choice or decision. We make this decision, seemingly, ourselves with the best light then at our command and we are to confifidently rely upon His help in the same. This is Divine guidance as truly as the other. But it tests our faith the more.

Again, while the Holy Spirit does not substitute for ourselves in the responsibility of our going, nor assume arbitrary control of our wills, He sometimes in answer to our prayer for guidance exerts His control of providence in our behalf. Circumstances slowly or steadily change, or events suddenly occur which alter a whole situation and leave us in no doubt as to where we are to go or how we are to act. Indeed, often it is the case that only one way is left for us to go; and we are no longer in any doubt or uncertainty. This may be termed providential guidance, but we will remember that providence is not an automaton. All is personally administered by God; and guidance through events, in answer to our prayer of trust, is as truly guidance of the Spirit as is guidance by impression.

But withal, if we dwell much in the secret place of the Most High, even under such guidance as transcends the senses and leaves us in processes of judgment and the progress of events, we will often hear the still small voice whispering, ''This is the way, walk ye in it,'' or, ''It is I; be not afraid,'' or, again, ''What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter,'' for our Guide is personal, and He is friendly with us by the way.—Joseph H. Smith.

THE SECRETARY MAKES A REQUEST

Hitherto I have sent out return postal cards for the delegates' credentials. In order to save the Conference a bit of money, I am this year asking the brethren to do it for me. Send me the name and address of your delegates, the charge and your name. If you should forget this last item, I can supply it. But I do want, of course, the charge, the delegate's name and address.

Now, brethren, if you will just put that information on a postal card, and send it in at once, I can make up the Conference Roll. And I can make a copy for the President. And he can make out his Committees. And we'll be sitting pretty.

Thanking you in advance—which they tell me is quite improper—I am,

Fraternally yours,
C. W. BATES, Secretary.

A PORTRAIT GALLERY OF MOTHER

Not long before the death of John Quincy Adams, a gentleman said to him, "I have found out who made you!" "What do you mean?" enquired the former.

"I have been reading the published letters of your mother," was the reply.

The old man's eyes flashed brightly. He rose and said: "Yes, sir, all that is good in me I owe to my mother!"

"I suppose," said a little child, "God could not look after everybody, so He made mothers to help Him."

"A kiss from my mother," said West, the artist, "made me a painter."

A student was about to enter a theological college. "Through what minister's preaching were you converted?" was one of the questions put to him.

"Through no man's preaching; but through my mother's practicing," was his reply.

"My mother? 'What was she like,' did you ask?" said an old sailor. "Ah, a better mother never lived! She taught me to pray as a little chap at her knee, and, though she died long ago and I am a grey-haired man now, I have never forgotten the prayer she taught me! I pray that prayer still. A good mother she was, and no mistake! I owe so much to her teaching."

"My dear child," said a lady, one cold, wet night, to a ragged little girl who was sitting on the curb-stone outside a large public-house in a London slum. "My dear child, why don't you go home to bed?"

"What time is it, please, lady?" enquired the poor child wearily. "It's past nine o'clock, little one," replied the lady. "Oh, I can't go home!' said the child mournfully. "I shall have to wait a long, long time yet, till the public house shuts, and then take mother home."

Said a drunken mother angrily to her sickly little boy, "I hate you!"

"Mother," answered the child, "I didn't ask you to born me!"

"My mother!' exclaimed a young soldier to a Christian worker. "Don't talk to me of my mother! I woudn't cross the road to see her. I wish I could forget her existence. She has never been anything but a curse to us, with her drinking ways. I wish she were dead!"

A portrait gallery of mothers! There are good mothers in the world today—thank God for it! Pure, loving, wise, and Godly mothers! The world owes them a debt it can never pay. Christian mothers are a nation's most valuable asset. In fact, no nation can rise higher than its motherhood. It is still true, "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world."

"A good mother is worth one hundred schoolmasters," said George Herbert. But, alas! all mothers are not Godly, as our portrait gallery proves. God help the children who go out into life carrying with them the memory of a bad mother! They have sustained a loss for which nothing can compensate. They have lost a precious heritage which all the wealth of the world cannot purchase. The good mother—the bad mother. Compare the above stories, which are all true. Then, if you are a mother, ask yourself, before God, which are you?

Just one word more: Jesus Christ can take a mother who is all wrong, and put her all right! In other words, He "came into the world to save sinners." So there is no need whatever for a bad mother to remain bad. He can gloriously save and make anew all who come to Him. He is able to do it for any poor sinner this very day.—London Christian Herald.

A LITTLE BOY'S CURIOSITY

Little things and little people are often responsible for great results, and it may be you do not know that the invention of that important instrument, the telescope, may be traced to the curosity of a little boy, and this is how it came about:

The little boy of whom I am telling you was the son of an optician who lived in Holland. He and his sisters loved to play about their father's work-bench, and often they amused themselves by looking at the sea through the little, smooth, concave glass which their father used in his work.

Now, one day it happened that the boy, while playing with two of these glasses, chanced to hold them before his eyes in such a way that the face of the cathedral clock seemed very near.

This surprised him greatly, for the clock was so far away that he could scarcely see the hands with his naked eyes.

For a while he stared at the clock and then at the glasses, each of which he tried in turn; but the clock was as far away as ever, and so it remained, turn them as he would, until by chance again he held both up together, when, lo! as if by magic, the church stood beside him.

"Oh, I know, I know!" he cried aloud, "It's the two together." Then in great joy he ran to his father and told him of his remarkable discovery.

His father tried the glasses in his turn and found that the boy had spoken the truth when he said he could bring the great church clock nearer.

So this was the way people learned that putting a concave and a convex glass together in just the right position would make distant objects seem near. Without this knowledge, we should never have had the telescope and, without the telescope, we should have known little of the sun, moon, or stars.—Publisher Unknown.

OUR STORY PAGE

MARGARET'S CLEAN HEART

I am going to tell you a story about a little girl, Margaret, aged seven years, and how she thought she could get a clean heart.

Margaret was just an ordinary little girl. She went to school, learned her lessons, enjoyed herself at the seaside just like other children do, but she soon seemed to get tired and not have the energy that a lot of children have at her age. Her mother, anxious that she should get strong, persuaded her to eat plenty of green vegetables for dinner, so as to get plenty of good rich blood in her veins.

One day while her mother, sister, and herself were at dinner she remarked to her sister, while eating her green vegetable: ''See, I'm eating this to make me have a clean heart.'' Her mother said to her: ''Eating all the green vegetables in the world won't make you have a clean heart; it would only make more rich blood run through your heart. What would make you have a clean heart, Margaret?''

Margaret sat still for a few minutes but didn't speak, when her sister said to her:

''What can wash away my sins?
Nothing but the Blood of Jesus.''

So then mother explained to her how there was only one way to get a clean heart, and that was by believing in Jesus, and that He died for us, and then He tells us that ''Though our sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow'' (Isaiah 1:18). Some time after, Margaret trusted Christ and was saved.

Margaret was thinking that something she would eat would give her a clean heart, but it won't. Nothing we can do, eat, or take can make us clean and fit for Heaven. There is only one way to be saved, and that is to ''believe on the Lord Jesus Christ'' as your own personal Savior and you shall be saved, and then you will be like Margaret, trusting in the Lord in whatever circumstances may be yours.—A. S., in Sunlight for the Young.

HELPING GOD TO ANSWER PRAYER

Nellie and Grace were both sleepy and so did not want to get up when mother called them. ''Hurry, girls! or you will be late for school,'' she said. This made them jump out of bed quickly, for teacher had offered a prize to all who were on time every day for a month. They had been early every morning so far, and they did not want to miss the prize.

Mother had breakfast all ready when they came downstairs, and it did not take them very long to eat their porridge and toast. Nellie and Grace could hardy wait while mother was putting on their wraps. After they had gone a little piece, Nellie said, ''I am going to kneel down and ask God to get us to school before the bell rings.''

''I am going to ask Him for the same thing, but I am not going to stop to kneel. I am going to ask Him all the time I am running, and I think that will be best. We can ask Him later to forgive us for not kneeling, as we thought He would want us to help to answer our prayers by running as fast as we can,'' called back Grace, who was almost out of breath.

Nellie said, ''I guess you are right, so I will do the same as you are doing.''

Both little girls got to the school just as the bell was starting to ring; they were so happy because they got there in time.

''I am going to get up every morning after this, just as soon as mother calls,'' said Nellie.

''So am I, and I am going to go to bed when she tells me, so then I will not be so sleepy in the morning,'' said Grace.

When they got home from school the girls told their mother how they asked God to get them to school in time and also ran all the way.

''That was right. We should do all we can to help God to answer our prayers,'' she said, as she kissed the girls.—Selected.

"SUN OF MY SOUL"

Two Christian gentlemen met one summer day in a public park, and after expressing to each other their appreciation of God's goodness, strolled quietly along together, discussing religious principles.

''What is your true conception of Jesus Christ?'' asked one.

The other stood for a moment deep in thought, then, pointing to a bed of beautiful flowers, just bathing in the rays of the morning sun, replied:

''What the sun is to those flowers, Jesus Christ is to my soul.''

A realization of what the sun is to the flowers, just magnifies the true value of Christ to mankind, and settles once and for all the true relationship between God and man.—The Elim Evangel.

THE BOY WITH A QUEER NAME

Little ''I Will'' was a very small boy with the sweetest face anyone could wish to see, and under his big white blouse with its big sailor collar beat the dearest little heart that ever was.

Of course ''I Will'' had another name. His really, truly name was Louis, but those who knew him best thought that ''I Will'' suited him better.

''Dear,'' mother would say, ''will you run up-stairs and get me the scissors? You will find them on the sewing machine.''

''I will, I will,'' would ring out the pleasant little voice. And in a twinkling the scissors would be put in mother's hand.

Or, when mother called him to get ready for supper, the cheery little answer would come, ''I will.''

Just as positive was the little fellow when it was proper to take a stand on the other side to answer, ''No, I will not.''

He is a big boy now—big enough to study Latin and all sorts of things—but the sunshine of his merry ways has never faded from his mother's heart. He is clean and brave, ever ready to stand for the right.—Publisher Unknown.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Calvary, Greensboro. — We reached home from almost four weeks spent at our cottage at Weaverville, on last Thursday afternoon. Coming down the road we had visions of a musty house, of a cold supper, and of all the other things that go with a long absence. But when we opened the door we found that somebody or bodies, had been in the house, had swept and garnished it, left a supper of fried chicken, corn pudding, pickled pears, brown sugar pie, tomatoes and grapes, on the table, besides a watermelon on the floor; ice in the refrigerator, with an extra supply of vegetables. So all we had to do, and did, was to sit down to enjoy the supper, and thank the Lord for such folks.

I very greatly appreciate that our superannuate brethren rendered me and the church in preaching for me on the three Sundays I was away. One of the sisters said of their preaching, "We had three good old-fashioned sermons." That may mean that mine are up-to-date, which may mean that they are not so good. (I have heard a few of that sort that were too "modern" for me.)

So far as our pulpit help is concerned our special meeting will begin with the coming of Brother R. A. Hunter on Wednesday, September 6. But so far as our folks and I are concerned it will begin this Sunday. I shall do the preaching at both services Sunday, and on Monday and Tuesday nights. Then Brother Hunter will come and be with us ten days. We are hoping and praying for, and are expecting, a good meeting. We are asking you who read this to be in prayer for us.

Mrs. Bates' friends throughout the Conference will be glad to know that the rest in the mountains did her a great deal of good, and that she is, as the French doctor said several years ago, "every day getting better and better."

C. W. BATES.

Tabernacle, Julian.—Revivals have recently been conducted at both churches. At Julian the date of beginning was July 16, and the closing was the following Friday night, July 21. The pastor did the preaching at all the services. We were indeed fortunate to have with us Brother O. T. Pender to conduct the singing. The interest was fine throughout the meeting. At the close there was one accession to the church. At Tabernacle the revival began Sunday, August 6, and continued for ten days, closing Tuesday night, August 15. Brother Paschall of Burlington did the preaching except at the two Sunday morning services. He brought us great messages at each of the services. It was the first time the pastor or any of the congregation had ever heard Brother Paschall, but we were all highly pleased and edified. There was not as much of an ingathering as we had hoped for but it was not the preacher's fault. Three have thus far joined the church. The attendance at both churches was good to the end. At Julian the people came out to hear Mr. Pender sing; and at Tabernacle Brother Paschall was able to draw the crowds. We sincerely thank both of these brethren for their efficient help.

Our third quarterly conference was conducted Saturday, August 19. Among other matters cared for it was decided to purchase a new church register. Brother R. L. Jones was found to be elected delegate to the Annual Conference. After the conference all present repaired to the grove where a watermelon slicing was enjoyed by all.

The people continue to remember the pastor and family with kindness. This fine generosity has been recently expressed through many nice things from the farms, orchards, and gardens. Watermelons and canteloups have been gifts in abundance. We have had as many as 40 canteloups in our basement at one time and all the while we were consuming all we could. Canteloups to keep us sweet and watermelons to keep our mouths watery! Money has not been so plentiful with us but these good people have so managed that before the last nickel was out of the pastor's purse there was another on hand. God bless the good people of Tabernacle and Julian churches.

GEO. L. CURRY, Pastor.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Charge.—The regular preaching service was held Sunday morning, August 20. Rev. C. B. Way, pastor, conducted the service. After the service members of the church and visitors enjoyed a boutiful picnic prepared by the women of the church.

In the afternoon was the meeting of the third quarterly conference. Members and visitors from other churches were present for this meeting.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the church met with Mrs. R. J. Whitman Tuesday evening, August 15. Miss Lola Long had charge of the devotional and Miss Virginia Sprinkle the program. The two main topics for discussion were "Prohibition,' conducted by Mrs. Lena Hunter, and "Motion Picture Reform," by Virginia Sprinkle. Mrs. W. B. Speas was the winner of an interesting Biblical contest. Mrs. R. J. Whitman conducted the business after which delightful refreshments were served by the hostess.

Shiloh.—The revival meeting closed Friday night. There were 13 additions to the church at the Friday night service, three by letter and ten by baptism. Rev. R. A. Hunter brought very helpful gospel messages all through the week and we were glad to have him in our midst. The following are the texts and subjects used by Brother Hunter during the week: I Cor. 3:9, "Workers Together With God." Jno. 12:32, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me.' Jno. 10:10, subject, "The Greatest Thing in the World, Life." Rev. 3:20, "Behold I stand at the door, and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come into him and will sup with him, and he with me." Acts 16:30,31, "What must I do to be saved? And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house." Romans 14:12, subject, "Loneliness of the Human Soul." I Cor. 29:30,31, subject, "The Time Is Short." Jno. 14:1,2, subject, "Faith in God thy Father." Coll. 2:6, subject, "Walking With Christ." Matt. 17:8, subject, "Jesus Only.'

On Saturday night, August 19, Miss Reva Sink of Shiloh and Mr. Raymond Fritts of Lexington, were married by Rev. R. S. Troxler at the parsonage. Mrs. Fritts is the daughter of Mr. R. B. Sink and the late Lizzie Leonard Sink. She is one of our most capable and popular girls of Shiloh church and we are indeed glad that thy are making their home in our community. Shiloh wishes for them a happy and useful life together.

Mr. P. C. Leonard, a member of the Brotherhood class, was present at Sunday school Sunday. Mr. Leonard has been indisposed for several weeks and cannot see very well, for which reason he fell from a porch at his home and fractured his hip; he is now able to move about with the aid of crutches, if some one guides him.

Mrs. Charlie Mosely is critically ill, and does not seem to improve. May we remember those who are hindered from their usual activities by sickness.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge. — Our revival meeting which has been in progress for a week, came to a close Friday night, August 11. Our pastor, Rev. M. C. Henderson, did the preaching. He preached wonderful sermons and I feel that our church and community were greatly revived by this meeting. We don't feel that just because our meeting has closed that our revival is over but that it has just started in our hearts.

Our Sunday school is also doing good work under the able leadership of P. L. Garmon

Our Christian Endeavor society is moving along nicely. The programs that are rendered each Sunday afternoon are very helpful.

The Ladies' Aid society met with Mrs. P. D. Drye on August 3, 1933 at 2:30 o'clock. Mrs. M. L. Stallings conducted the devotionals and made a helpful talk. Mrs. P. L. Garmon made an interesting talk on the Bible reading. Mrs. M. C. Henderson led in prayer. Instead of having the usual program each month at our meeting we are going to have a Bible study.

After our usual reports and busines was attended to, Mrs. Drye served delicious refreshments. We were dismissed with prayer by Mrs. P. L. Garmon. The next meeting will meet at the church on September 7.

We ask all Christian people to pray for us.

MRS. M. L. STALLINGS.

Why Not.—Our first special meeting for this season began at New Hope the third Sunday in July. Rev. J. L. Moore, one of our local preachers, was our pulpit help. Brother Moore did good preaching and the peole enjoyed it. There were 19 conversions and 17 accessions. This church is noted for its fine crowds of younger people who are interested in Sunday school and all the work of the church. The Sunday school recently won the "Randolph County Sunday School Banner." This banner is given to that Sunday school that makes the greatest mileage in its attendance upon the county convention. I believe this is correct, if not, we will appreciate a correction by some Randolph county Sunday school worker. S. G. Richardson of our Seagrove church is president of this convention.

Our second meeting was at Fairgrove. This was a very rainy week which made it difficult to have a regular attendance. The congregations here were attentive. This is the home church of Rev. J. Clyde Auman and we had the pleasure of having him with us part of the time. We thank him for the splendid sermons he preached for us.

At Macedonia the second Sunday in August we began our third meeting. Rev. L. A. King, another local preacher was our pulpit help. Brother King did some splendid work and the folks enjoyed his preaching. There were 16 conversions and reclamations and nine accessions. The future of Macedonia is tied up in the children and young folks. The pastor talked to approximately 25 of these young people thirty minutes each day in a special service, and found them very responsive.

Our meeting at New Zion has just closed. Rev. L. E. Mabry was our pulpit help, and the people were highly pleased with his preaching and work. This is Mrs. Mabry's home church and the folks were delighted to have her at home with them again. The interest in the meeting seemed to increase each service. The last service was held Sunday at 3 p. m., at which time four were converted and reclaimed and 16 joined the church. Besides this there was a general revival of interest among the membership of the church.

The meeting at Pleasant Hill begins the first Sunday in September and at Love Joy the second Sunday. The last meeting to be held will be at Flag Springs the first Sunday in October. G. L. REYNOLDS.

Liberty, Liberty Charge.—The attendance of our Sabbath school and also our Christian Endeavor has been somewhat lower for the past few Sundays; however, we believe that with vacations over it will soon be back to normal.

On Sunday morning Rev. Love filled his regular appointment, and preached an inspiring sermon using as a text and subject a part of the 23rd verse of the fifteenth chapter of Exodus, "And when they came to Marah they could not drink of the waters of Marah, for they were bitter."

People are hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and they go to the house of God; there they should find kindness and encouragement. They should find the Word of God brought to them in a tender loving way; and that is what our beloved pastor is doing with all the prayerful earnestness of his soul.

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered.

Let us not forget the prayer and praise service on Wednesday night.

The revival will begin at Hickory Grove about two miles east of Liberty the third Sunday in September. Mr. Love is to assist Dr. Johnson at Liberty Grove about one mile north of Liberty the fourth Sunday. Pray that there may be an outpouring of God's spirit at both of these dear old churches.

God meets His people at the small churches as well as at the magnificent structures.

Mrs. John Holt and granddaughter, Miss Helen Isley, were guests in homes of friends in Greensboro last week.

Circle No. 1 of the Woman's Auixialry will meet with Mrs. Mamie Smith on Wednesday afternoon. Circle No. 2 will also meet with Mrs. Smith on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. John Holt, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Shepard, Mrs. Ernest Euliss and Miss Bertine Shepard were dinner guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wade Hardin on Friday.

The cool brisk days of autumn will soon be here. Let's do better church work, read the Bible more, pray more and pay more.

Winston, First.—There was very good attendance at Sunday school and morning worship on Sunday morning. When it's ghastly hot, some people think it is cooler at home than at church, when it's terribly cold, some say it's too cold for anything but sit by the fire and no time to go to church. Sunday was extremely hot, but there are still a few brave soldiers who face the situation as God's heroes should.

Dr. Pritchard's sermon on "God's Call to the Individual," was very inspirational and worth-while, as all of his sermons are. There are great truths driven home in each of his well-prepared messages.

Our Sunday school superindtenent, Mr. B. K. Milloway, and his family are vacationing and we hope they're having a great time.

Mrs. Russell Mooney, who has been ill for quite some time, is no better, we are sorry to learn.

Mrs. Paul Houser has returned from the Tubercular hospital, where she has been a patient since May 2. We are so glad Mrs. Hauser is better and well on the road to recovery.

Dr. and Mrs. Pritchard are back with us after a delightful trip around and about, upon their return Miss Ola Whiteley accompanied them. Miss Whiteley is from Tabernacle church. She attended services at our church one Sunday and we can truly say it was a pleasure to have had her in our midst. She was a most interesting person and may we say "Welcome" to her every time she can be with us.

Haw River, Glen Raven Charge.—Rev. Pegg filled his regular appointment yesterday and we had a good crowd in spite of the hot weather. All seemed to enjoy his message very much. On Saturday, August 26, the Sunday school gave the children an ice cream party at the home of Mrs. Montgomery and all seemed to enjoy it very much.

Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of the Annual Conference, delivered the evening message, his topic was, "An Age-old Question." We also had special music by the Alamance quartette.

On Saturday night, September 2, our third quarterly conference will meet at Fairview church at which we will elect our delegate to the Annual Conference.

Mt. Pleasant, Mt. Pleasant.—Our revival services which started on the third Sunady were brought to a close on Friday night with three reclamations. Mr. Carroll brought us some splendid sermons which seemed to leave an impression on the people to strive toward higher ideals. The large crowds of people that assembled to hear Mr. Carroll preach gave proof of his appeal to the people. Several people from neighboring churches attended the meeting, esecially from Mt. Hermon, Mr. Carroll having been pastor of that circuit for five years.

Mr. Millaway preached Sunday morning and Dr. Johnson filled the pulpit in the afternoon, both of them delivered good sermons in a most forceful manner.

Mr. and Mrs. Millaway were visiting in the community during the meeting and they attended the services regularly. Other Methodist Protestant ministers attending one or more services were Revs. Curry, Lowdermilk, Faschall and Whitehead.

As Mr. Millaway was in the community Sunday, he kindly consented to preach to us while Dr. Johnson filled his appointment at Pleasant Union. Mr. Millaway used Isaiah 55:6-7 as his text, emphasizing the importance of seeking the Lord.

The third quarterly conference will be held at Mt. Pleasant Saturday, September 9, at 2:00 o'clock.

On Saturday night, September 2, the Woman's Auxiliary is sponsoring a community singing in connectiin with an ice cream supper. Come and bring your friends.

First Church, Charlotte. — Our members seem to like the Unified program in which it has been engaged this summer and voted to extend it through the month of September.

Rev. Hendry, our pastor, is in Pageland this week assisting in a series of meetings at our church there.

The Woman's Auxiliary will hold its regular monthly meeting Tuesday evening at 7:30. At 8:00 o'clock Circle No. 1 is giving a social and hat party in the Sunday school auditorium. Ice cream, cake and candy will be sold also.

The Willing Workers gave a most enjoyable and profitable party in the Sunday school auditorium last week. A clipping party which netted a nice sum for their treasury.

Last Wednesday evening the membership was entertained by the Men's Bible class with a watermelon feast.

It is refreshing and inspiring to visit the children's department; the children are so happy and attentive. Mrs. Love and Mrs. Gertie Harwood have charge of them. Mrs. Love has the Cradle Roll department.

A pleasing feature in our Sunday school last Sunday was a song by the children with Mildred Stegall at the piano. Mildred is nine years old.

For your next report there will be another reporter. It has been a joy to do our bit in the work here. May God bles sand prosper you all. REPORTER.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—On the third Sunday in July Brother Hunter held our special meeting being assisted by Brother Bethea. We were blessed with a wonderful outpouring of the Holy Spirit with quite a large number of additions to the church. Brother Bethea brought wonderful messages from the beginning of the services and it looked like every one got better. We will always remember Brother Bethea.

At the 11 o'clock hour Dr, Andrews, our president, was with us and brought the massage. Although he mentioned the fact that he always brought a distasteful message, since it concerned the raising of monies, or rather held a mirror before us and let us see ourselves in regards to chuch finances. I feel that every member feels the necessity of just such an act. I'm sure it is not nearly so hard to listen to Dr. Andrews as it is for him to preach, as it seems, to an irresponsive congregation.

Our Sunday school is hitting on all four now but it has plenty of room, though, to hit with much more vim.

The Junior Girls' class enjoyed a motor trip to Crystal Lake recently. Mrs. F. G. Fowler, their teacher, sponsored the outing and her husband, F. G. Fowler, acted as guide and chauffeur. They said that they had a wonderful time.

Everybody feels better now since rain has again visited us. Crops are "doing their stuff now," and a much larger yield is expected.

Union Grove Church, Mocksville Charge.—We are looking forward to the fourth Sunday in September. That's the date our revival meetings begins.

We were sorry to lose two of our home boys, who were killed in a wreck, Mr. Vance Parker and Mr. Tib Jurney. We lost one of our church members also, Mrs. Jane Ireland. She had been bedfast for quite awhile. She was 94 years, six months, and 15 days of age. The three mentioned above were buried in the same week here in Union Grove yard. During the following week a funeral service was held for Mr. Johnny Bowlin of Newton, North Carolina.

Our church work is coming on just fine.

Rev. Mr. Ferree filled his regular appointment last Sunday night. His text was I Peter 5:8, "Be sober; be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour."

South Winston.—We have been moving along nicely since we last reported. Our Sunday school attendance has been pretty good, and the preaching services have been well attended.

Our pastor, Brother Ridge, has filled his regular appointments and brought us many inspiring and helpful sermons. We were very glad to have Brother Whitaker with us last Sunday for Sunday school and also for the morning service. We are always delighted to have visitors.

We are getting along real well with our church building. Two of the Sunday school rooms and almost all of the main auditorium have been ceiled. Every one has been co-operating so well, that it just makes us feel like we are goig to complete it in a short while.

We have re-organized Christian Endeavor with Hoyle Case, President; Thelma Crews, vice-president, and Thurman Wyatt, secretary and treasurer. The young people certainly have been taking an interest in the meetings and our earnest prayer is that this organization will continue to grow, and we are sure that it will be a great help to our church.

On last Saturday evening the Sunday school gave a picnic at Nissen's Park. A delightful time was enjoyed by all.

Miss Ruth Gough, teacher of the Junior class of girls, left recently for Iowa, where she will spend some time with relatives and friends. We wish for her a happy vacation.

Next Sunday, August 27, our revival begins and will probably last ten days or longer. We are very glad to report that Rev. O. B. Williams will be with us. We wish to ask each and every one to pray for this revival that it may be a great success.

Bethesda.—Our revival meeting began the second Sunday with 208 present for Sunday school. Our pastor, Rev. H. W. Maier, did the preaching all the week. I will try to give the topic of each sermon so all that have ever heard Dr. Maier can have some idea as to what we heard. I think he was at his best on Sunday at 11 o'clock. His subject at this time was, "Does Somebody Care?" at 2:00 p. m., "The Day of Pentecost," when they were all filled with the Holy Ghost. Monday, 3 p .m, "Bringing Someone to Jesus," and at 8 p. m. "Walking With God." Tuesday at 3 p. m., "Ye Are the Light of the World.' At 8 p. m., "Love," "That God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him shall not perish but have everlasting life." On Wednesday at 3 p. m. his subject was, "Prayer and Fasting," and at 8 o'clock, "Thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting." Thursday, 3 p. m., "Where Is Zebedea?" Friday, 8 p. m., "What Does it Cost to be a Sinner?"

Saturday at 8 p. m., Mrs. Maier gave a beautiful talk to the young people on "Service,' just before the preaching hour. Dr. Maier preached from, "If you hear His voice harden not your heart." Sunday at 8 p. m., his subject was, "Why Sit We Here and Die?"

We did not see much results from this meeting, but we hope and believe that it was good seed sown on fertile ground, which will spring up and bring a bountiful harvest. Pray for us always.

Liberty, Davidson Charge.—The revival meeting began the third Sunday in August closing the following Friday night, having a good attendance. Our pastor, Rev. E. A. Bingham was in charge of the meeting with no pulpit help. There were only four sermons by visting ministers: Rev. Mr. Hoyt Wood of Handy, N. C.; Rev. Mr. Farland Cranford, Captain of the Salvation Army of Union, S. C.; and Father Rev. C. H. Cranford, a member of this church.

Rev. A. B. Free, of the M. E. Charge, Maryland, preached on Wednesday night. We feel quite sure all enjoyed every sermon. We were very glad to have them visit the church and glad to have Rev. Mr. Moody Smith and grateful for the assistance he gave us. We certainly appreciate the visitors and co-operation given us during the week. There were five conversions and the members were gratly revived. None joined the church at the present time; two will probably join at Chapel Hill.

It was very sad to close the meeting with so many out in the fields of sin; but, we hope that they, too, may be reached before all of the nearby revivals come to a close. Although we know that today is the day of salvation, we have no promise of tomorrow.

The third quarterly conference was held at this church on Saturday before the fourth Sunday; attendance was good. Mr. C. L. Surratt was elected delegate to attend the Annual Conference. We set the fourth Sunday in September as Joash Day.

Our pastor has agreed to take grain and produce on his salary; hope that we are truly grateful to have him as pastor; we appreciate his family and hope to have them back for another year.

There has been much improvement on the church: It has been covered and repainted a new flue and some work on the grove; also, we have good lights in the church.

There is much interest in the church work. We have Sunday school at 2:00 p. m., with a good attendance; prayer meeting the second and fourth Sunday nights, if no changes are made. We welcome one and all that attend church, and those who don't attend. I close with love and best wishes to one and all.

Rockingham.—We have just concluded a ten days' revival meeting at our church. Rev. J. M. Morgan assisted Pastor C. W. Saunders. A large congregation was present each night and all were greatly benefitted by his messages. There were 14 who joined the church and 21 reclaimed. New members will be received into the church the second Sunday in September. A wonderful pounding was given the pastor the last night of the meeting.

We are very proud of the way we were so succesful in getting up money for yard improvements. The Sunday school was divided into two teams. A captain was appointed for each team. One side was the gold the other the silver. It was a hundred-dollar drive, four weeks were set to raise it in. The side that came over first was to be set up to a supper by the defeated side. Both teams raised the required sum in two weeks. We are very proud of the efforts the captains put forth also the way the teams responded.

Our third quarterly conference was held August 22, at 11:00 o'clock with Rev. C. W. Sundaers in the chaim and Ruby Martin, secretary. The pastor reported: Ihave been in most of the homes of the members. I have conducted prayer service in most all homes visited. I have found a sweet welcome in all of the homes visited. I have paid several visits to homes where there was sickness. I have been in an attitude of prayer for the advancement of the church, and that God's Kingdom in the community might be established. I have received $39.52 on pastor's salary. I have received no monies on Annual Conference budget, college claims or Superannuate funds. I would like to recommend: That the church pay all assessments in full if possible. That the church yard be looked after at once, also that walls and steps be built as soon as possible. That the church members pray more and have a greater desire to see others saved in the community.

Our Superintendent reported: I am glad to say that I have tried to fill my place as Superintendent as best as I know how. Our church has prospered and our attendance has grown a lots this quarter. Our financial side is improving much.

Sunday School Secretary reported: Amount taken in this quarter, $35.33; Acount paid out, $29.22. Amount in treasury at present, $3.22. Average attendance of scholars, 67.

The Ladies' Auxiliary is moving along fine, but hope to do better in the near future than we have in the past. We have $11.02 in the treasury at this time. We are still receiving new members all along.

The Trustees reported that nothing had been done since last conference. But that they were making arrangements for improvements.

Stewards—I want to insist that we do our best the rest of this conference year to raise the finances of the church.

Classleader—We feel that the membership is falling short of its duty. The last two or three meetings we have had there were only a few members present. We hope the membrs will bgin to realize that it is their duty to be at every one of these meetings.

The Treasurer reported: Paid on pastor's salary, $39.52; for lights, $2.00; for piano, $13.72; for Foreign Missions, $2.41; Rev. Morgan, $18.96; received for improvements, $100.

Mr. W. M. Jenkins was elected as delegate to the Annual Conference.

First Church, High Point.—A wedding of keen interest to a large circle of friends was solemnized in Danville, Va., on February 11, 1933, when Mr. Kent K. Douglas of High Point and Miss Bessie Valley of Thomasville plighted their troth. Rev. A. G. Carter officiated using an impressive ring ceremony. The bride, a daughter of Mrs. J. K. Valley of Thomasville, is an attractive brunette and possesses a charming personality. Since finishing high school, she has held a secretarial position for the Thomasville city schools. The groom is the older son of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Douglas, of Montlieu Ave. this city, and attended the local high school and High Point College. He now holds a position with his father in the Greensboro-High Point Bottle Exchange company. Following a brief wedding trip the young couple are at home in a pretty new apartment in Thomasville. A host of friends extend hearty congratulations and sincere good wishes to these highly esteemed and worthy young people. Kent has been a members of First Church since young boyhood, and a large group of young friends in the Sabbath school and C. E. society are much interested in the announcement of his marriage, and their best wishes follow him and his bride to their new home.

O. R. York, Jr., son of Postmaster and Mrs. O. R. York, is recovering in a satisfactory manner at the Guilford General hospital, where he underwent an operation for the removal of his foot, following a serious accident a week ago. Friends of the family and the 16-year-old youth are pleased to learn that his recovery seems reasonably assured.

A large group of friends are much pleased to learn that Captain A. M. Rankin, prominent and highly esteemed layman, is able to be in his office again after a second operation on his eye.

Wyatt A. Pickens left Sunday morning for Baton Rouge, La. after spending the greater part of the summer here with relatives. He will resume his work as associate professor of Spanish in Louisiana State university in September.

Mr .and Mrs. J. E. Wagner, 606 Broad St., have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Matthews of New York City, the latter being their daughter, who is pleasantly remembered here as the former Miss Blanche Wagner, a popular teacher in Emma Blair graded school.

Dr. and Mrs. P. S. Kennett and children went to Lenoir, N. C. last Friday to visit Mrs. Kennett's aunt, Mrs. Harriett Guire, who lived here many years. She is the oldest member of First Church, having passed her 91st milestone last April, and is remarkably active and well-preserved for her years. She has lived for several years in Lenoir with her sons, Virgil D., and Jeter C. Guire.

Miss Grace Powell of Red Springs is visiting her sister, Mrs. Emmett Pritchard, 702 Montlieu Ave., and expects to be here several days longer.

Mrs. George L. Reynolds has returned home from a visit to relatives in Albemarle and Misenheimer Springs.

Mrs. A. C. Cecil and little daughter, Mary Lou, are guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bowman, in Randleman.

Miss Claire Douglas will leave next Tuesday, September 5, for Banner Elk, N. C., where she will assume her new position as Dean of Women in Lees-MacRae Junior college. She taught Spanish last year in Davenport college, Lenoir.

Friendship Station. — Our reporter, Mrs. Gladys Harkey, is in the Yadkin hospital in Albemarle recovering from an operation. We have had many helpful services since our last report. Our Home Coming Day was a good day. At the morning service one of the most loved former pastors, Brother T. F. McCulloch preached a fine sermon. We hope that he can come this way again soon. There were many short talks in the afternoon, and the closing address was made by Rev. J. M. Morgan of Concord.

The first Sunday in August we began our annual revival services, at the morning service, Rev. T. A. Plyler of the M. E. church preached for us. It will be recalled that he is a former member of our conference and his father was a former pastor of Rriendship church. In the evening service, Rev. A. D. Shelton of Fallston arrived in time to preach, and for ten days Brother Shelton preached. He seemed to be at his best; the attendance was good at every service and the church seems to be revived and we have received three new members; we believe that there will be others. Brother Shelton is well-liked here, and we are pleased to have him as a guest at the parsonage during the meeting, that is at night, we went into many homes for meals during the meetings which was greatly enjoyed by the pastor and family as well as by Brother Shelton.

Our Ladies' Aid society, and our Christian Endeavor society are active forces in our church. Last Sunday our C. E. elected new officers: President, Miss Doris Marie Hatley; vice-president, Dean Ellsworth; secretary and treasurer, Miss Faye Lowder.

We have held our third quarterly conference and finances are badly behind. It is going to take real hard effort on the part of our stewards and every members for the remainder of the conference year if we have the usual good report for old Friendship church. We are hoping and trusting that everyone will be loyal. The ballots were counted and Brother Royal Hatley was declared as our delegate to the Annual Conference.

O. B. WILLIAMS, Pastor.

Democrat Charge.—We did not intend to stay away so long, but we have been engaged in revival work for almost two months and have not taken the time to write. All of our revivals have been conducted but one. Results have been fair with the exceptions of one which was unusually good.

Our third quartely conference was held at Pensacola about 30 days ago. Mr. David Carter, of Pleasant Gap, was declared delegate and Mr. Lindsay McMahan, of Pensacola, as alternate.

The writer and family were away from home, in revival work in another part of the state, and while we were away Brother N. G. and Sister Bethea and some friends from Gibsonville kept house for us while we were away. The household and kitchen furniture were turned over to them for about three weeks. We greatly trust they enjoyed themselves. Brother Bethea filled our appointment at Pleasant Gap Sunday, August 13, and Brother Cowen, of Weaverville, filled our appiontment at Mt. Valley Sunday, August 20, at 3:00 p. m. We are greatly indebted to these brethren for their great help.

One of the government forestry camps, F. C. 8, is located just a few hundred yards from one of our chureshces, Mt. Valley, we have learned that the larger per cent of the boys in this camp are from in and around Winston-Salem, High Point, and locality. A large number of the boys attend the services at our church, while others go elsewhere, and, of course, some go nowhere. We would be glad to have all the boys worship with us although we do not have room for them all, as there are more than 200 of them.

EARL A. COOK, Pastor.

Rehoboth, Creswell Charge.—A long time has passed since you have heard from this work, but I have been under treatment for my eyes since December 9. I was operated on in Rocky Mount, since then I have been going every two weeks for the treatment till last month. I went in for four weeks and still have to go some more in September.

Our kind pastor, Rev. J. C. Russell, has carried me every time but once, this has meant a great deal to me; otherwise I would have had to go on the train and return the next day on the train or by bus, and then I would have been in Plymouth 14 miles from home; so I am grateful for this kindness. Mrs. Russell and children have really enjoyed the trip with us. Each time we carried a genrous lunch. Last time I was through so enjoyed the lunch even more as we ate together in the park at Rocky Mount.

Our third quarterly conference was held at Rehoboth in the afternoon. The fourth quarterly conference will convene at Woodley's Chapel in October.

We had a five day special meeting, beginning Wednesday night and closed Sunday.

While we did not have the co-operation of the community, we would like to have had, yet it was a season of refreshing to our church people. The sermons were soul-inspiring and the singing was very good.

Enoch Ludford Estate, Plymouth, N. C.	298.02

The above is our report for two weeks, and we are glad to be able to make as good a report as this. We thank all who contributed. The last payment on the Enoch Ludford Estate came at a mighty good time. Those preachers who used to serve in and around Plymouth will remember Mr. Ludford was a strong Baptist and Mrs. Ludford was just as strong a Methodist Protestant. She preceded him to the heavenly home, and he might have willed his property to one or more Baptist institutions, but he willed the same amount to this home that he did to the Mills Home in Thomasville. This home has been greatly benefitted from time to time by bequests. Remember this home with its orphan children in making your wills.

Baraca Class and Young Men's Baraca Class, First Church, Thomasville, a watermelon feast. Mr. D. T. Smith, Tabernacle, a watermelon feast. Mr. Berrier, Canaan, N. Davidson, 12 watermelons. Mr. Pittard, Hawkin's Chapel, Littleton, three suits for little boys, two aprons, two watermelons and 13 dresses.

Hauser and Moser, one dozen fruit jars, Roy Hauser, one dozen fruit jars and the Maple Springs Auxiliary, a dozen fruit jars. These are to be filled by the Maple Springs Auxilary.

Ladies' Aid society, Flat Rock Church, Flat rock, four towels and six pair pillow slips. Mrs. Davis, First Church, High Point, five pair slippers, one air bedroom slippers, one coat, vest and three pairs pants, one pair pajamas, three pieces of underwear, 6 dresses one cap and two belts. The Willing Workers Circle of Girls, Mebane, two bed sheets. The Ladies' Aid society, Lebanon, High Point, 11 pieces of dress goods.

This makes a splendid report in gifts other than money. The women of the various auxilaries and aid societies are chiming in beautifully in getting our girls properly clothed for the fall. Our boys must have two pair of overalls each, and one suit of clothes, besides shoes and stockings. These we can get at wholesale prices. Please help to buy them.

Do You Read the Herald?

Many of you answer "Yes." Well, when you read what Dr. Andrews said last week about the income and the conditions of our Children's Home. We thank him, and wish to add: What we have been trying to do, and what we are still hoping to do is to get EVERY SUNDAY SCHOOL IN THE CONFERENCE TO MAKE A MONTHLY OFFERING. Many Sunday schools do, and just why all other Sunday schools do not we cannot understand. A regular monthly offering from every Sunday school in the Conference would soon solve our problems here. Just two more monthly offerings before conference and the conference year closes. We are depending on you. Thank you and God bless you. Yours in His blessed service,

A. G. DIXON, Supt.

NOTE—Please send your coupons along. They help more than you know. Every package counts. Mark them, and all gifts, carefully, so proper credit may be given.

LETTER FROM REV. J. W. HULIN

I wish to thank each and every one for the visits and the letters which I received while in the hospital at Durham. I have been home four weeks and am recovering slowly.

Our camp meeting will begin the second Sunday in this month. Brother Taylor will be our help. I had hoped to visit around this fall in your meetings but I do not think I will be able.

Pray for me that I may recover soon and be out again. I'd be glad to see any who might be passing by and can drop in.

J. W. HULIN.

AN ENJOYABLE VACATION

My folks where I have worked have given me a number of vacations, but in all these years the time has been given to revival work, or taking in something that would enable me to replenish my stock of information which has always been far less than I wished it to be.

This year, through the kindnes of Brother Cook, Mrs. Bethea and I had access to the parsonage at Democrat while he and family were away on their vacation. It was a risky thing for him to do, but a magnanimous act that enabled us to enjoy the mountains for nearly three weeks. And my, how we did enjoy them. But that is not all. The folks up there enabled us to get a lot that we would never have seen had it not been for their kindness. Brothers Cowan and Casto did their part to make this experience one that we shall never forget. Brother Casto came in for his share also in making the fellowship fine and the trips enjoyable.

Get any rest? Not the kind that the lazy man usually enjoys. Brother Cowan kept us on the move quite a good deal. But those nights! How one can sleep up there! The folks around there tried to outdo each other in their kindness to us. We were doing our own cooking, or rather the "Better Half" was doing that, and they gave us fruit and milk and lots of things that was fine for the physcal. The fact is many that we had never seen before treated us so kindly that we will never forget it.

The first week we spent in sight-seeing. The next was taken up with study and visiting old friends. We kindly got uneasy about ourselves one week-end. We ran down to Cleveland county to enjoy Mrs. Bethea's family reunion, Saturday before the third Sunday in August—and such a spread. All who have ever eaten in "Warlick Town" know what that means. Our stay here was short because of another one coming off at Clark's Chapel, near Weaverville, the next day. Ordinarily I do not approve of reunions held on Sunday. But this Eller reunion is always directed by a minister, Rev. Ben Eller, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Statesville, and he sees to it that it is held at some church in that section, Buncombe county, and that it be an occasion when the clan shall renew their allegiance to the God of their fathers. I had been invited to preach on this occasion, so we hurried back to Democrat Saturday to be ready for service Sunday morning.

Well, it was a good day. A house full of attentive and appreciative listeners, and a spread in the grove that did not indicate depression. I wonder if any of our tables do? Not much anywhere, except, in the church collections. That is where the excuses are made for not being honest with God. But I started to say that Uncle Lucius Eller, an old friend of mine, seemed to be the one to look after everybody in and out of the church. Nobody went away hungry, unless it was some one on a diet and could not eat enough. But there was plenty and to spare. An offering was taken for the Children's Home at High Point. They always give the offering to the orphanage of the church where the meeting is held. A fine plan.

Dr. Eller called for a re-dedication of all

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Luther

Mary D. Sykes Luther was born May 22, 1862, and departed this life June 26, 1933. She was married to Henry Luther in 1887. To this union was born one child, Clayton Sykes Luther.

She leaves to mourn their loss, one son and six grandchildren.

Mrs. Luther joined Sandy Ridge church at the age of 16 years, and was a consistent member for 55 years.

Funeral services were conducted at Sandy Ridge church by the writer, assisted by Rev. T. L. Hill of Colfax, and Rev. R. S. Nickelson of Kannapolis. The body was placed in the Sandy Ridge cemetery to await the Resurrection morning. C. L. GRANT.

Thompson

Mrs. Kate Bowland Thompson, the wife of the late John F. Thompson, was called to her reward on June 29, 1933. Mrs. Tompson's death came unexpectedly and as a shock to her loved ones and friends.

Mrs. Thompson was a good woman and a real Christian. Her husband was in ill health for a long period prior to his death and she proved herself a most devoted wife. She did what she could for his comfort and happiness. She was one of those rare characters who always asked the minister to read from God's Word and have prayer. She loved the Bible; she loved fellowship with God. From these sources she found unfailing comfort and victorious strength.

May the loved ones find that peace that passeth all understanding and a comfort which surpasses their sorrow, for these they may find in Him, the God of all comfort and peace. FRED. W. PASCHALL.

Royal

Eli Curren Royal who died April 25, 1933, was the son of the late Jno. A. and Mary Jane Kirkman Royal and was born in Guilford county January 30, 1875.

On February 23, 1898 he was married to Martha McMasters, who died April 17, 1924, leaving the surviving husband and eight children, one child having died some years before. On October 27, 1924, he was married to Mrs. Grettie Welker Royal. To this union one daughter was born. The wife and nine children survive.

As a young man Bro. Royal accepted Christ as his Savior and joined Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church where he remained a member until his death. On being asked by his pastor on different times during his sickness if he were trusting his Lord and if he felt ready to go if his Lord should call him, he always answered in the affirmative. For a number of years he served on the official board of his church.

He was a good neighbor and was greatly appreciated by those who knew him. For a number of years he was chairman of the board of trustees of the school district of which he was a part. When he was not able to continue the work in which he was engaged for a number of years, his pay was continued, showing the appreciation of his employers.

The funeral, which was largely attended, was conducted on April 26, in Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church by his pastor, Rev. Geo. L. Curry, being assisted by Rev. J. M. Millard of the Presbyterian church, who is a close friend of the Royal family.

Since the service of Bro. Royal as steward made him for a number of years a member of the official board of his church, we, the members of the official board, feel greatly bereaved because of the going of our brother and we extend our most heartfelt sympathies to the wife and other bereaved members of the family.

Therefore, be it Resolved, that a copy of this tribute bearing our sympathies, be sent to the family and be spread on the minutes of the Third Quarterly Conference now assembled. And that a copy be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication.

Samuel Bowman

Samuel Bowman, the son of the late Roddy and Martha Bowman, was born in Guilford County May 30, 1865, and died March 30, 1933.

On May 19, 1889, he was married to Miss Sallie Monett. These became the parents of nine children, five daughters and four sons. The wife, four daughters and four sons survive.

About 35 years ago Bro. Bowman became a Christian and joined Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church, where he remained a faithful and consistent member until he was called to join the Church Triumphant. Bro. Bowman loved his church and his God. He had a strong conviction as to that which he believed to be right or wrong. He cherished and loved that which he believed to be right and he had a strong dislike for that which he thought to be wrong. He had a great interest and love for his home and family, and he was a good and obliging neighbor. His going was a great loss to the home, the church and community in which he lived so long.

In the presence of a great audience of sad and mourning friends and relatives the funeral was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Geo. L. Curry, and a former pastor, Rev. H. L. Isley. The body was then laid to rest in the church cemetery, the care of which had been a work in which he had taken so much interest.

For a number of years Bro. Bowman was a member of the Tabernacle Charge quarterly conference, and we, the members of this conference, will ever miss him in the work in which he had a great interest. We give him up with sadness, but we bow with humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.

Therefore, Be it Resolved, that we extend our most heart-felt sympathies to his bereaved companion and to the other members of the family and that we commend them to God, who is ever ready to sustain in the times of great sorrow. And be it Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be recorded in the minutes of this conference and that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased, and that a copy be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication.

STAND PORTER

Stand porter at the door of thought,
Let not base evil in;
Guard well the sacred citadel,
Cast off intrusive sin.

Stand porter at the door of thought,
Shut fear and failure out;
Disease and dread are impotent
When swiftly put to rout.

Stand porter at the door of thought,
Choose well your mental guests;
Bid every form of strife depart,
Obey Love's true behests.
—Grenville Kleiser.

GOD THE ONLY POWER

God is the only power,
All else is merely seeming;
We shall better know the Truth
When we cease our dreaming.

God is the only power,
We are in His keeping;
He holds vigil over us,
Awake or gently sleeping.

God is the only power,
In our hearts abiding,
We are now forever safe,
In His love confiding.

God is the only power,
This is well worth knowing;
It will help us in our work,
Reaping what we're sowing.
—Grenville Kleiser.

FORESTRY ARMY

Beginning September 1 a system of non-coms similar to that in the regular army will be put into effect in all forestry camps. Those being promoted from $1-a-day men to sort of assistant leader jobs will get paid from $36 to $45 a month. These men will be expected to assume some of the leadership in the camps, thus relieving the regular officers.

Forest fire prevention work trucks carrying motion picture equipment are providing the boys of the Civilian Conservation Corps camps with movie entertainment this summer.

Lightning strikes recreation tent of the Conservation Corps camp at Lewiston, Me., killing four workers and injuring others.

The forestry army is conserving other things besides forests. The camp near Gillette, Wyo., has the task of conserving Uncle Sam's vast coal fields by putting out underground fires, some of which have been burning for years.

Like soldiers of the regular Army members of the Civilian Conservation Corps are to receive medals for outstanding acts. They will be gold medals suspended by a gold clasp in the shape of an American eagle. The face of the medals will show an oak tree with stars above and leaves beneath.—Exchange.

* Subsidy paid in full.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

HRA

We Do Our Part

(With apologies, if any are needed, to the NRA)

HRA stands for HERALD RECOVERY ACTION. It will take action if it recovers, for it is desperately sick—has been for the past five or six years, but more especially during the past two years. But if the success of the NRA depends upon the individual citizen doing his part, if that alone will make for a return of prosperity, as those leading the movement assure us is the fact, does not the same thing apply to the HERALD? Some have done their part—they have subscribed, or paid toward the Subsidy, or helped raise their quota. But the thing lags because so many haven't done their part. I sent out 35 letters with self-addressed reply cards. I have heard from fifteen. "Herald Helpers." Will you help? And whether you received a letter or not, you can do your part. Send in your subscription for the HERALD, help raise your Subsidy Fund, get busy with the Subscription Quota. Come on, folks, let's get behind and push.

An Enjoyable Vacation

to the ideals religious that had made them what they are, and I am sure that at least four-fifths of the house full of people responded. I am glad that I was there. It was a good day. I thank "Uncle Lucius" for the invitation.

That same Sunday afternoon I had the privilege of going to Mountain Valley church and hearing Brother Cowan. A splendid sermon, though he had a very small crowd to speak as there was a baseball game at one of the Conservation camps nearby and I learned that some of our people up there have just as little regard for God's laws as they do down here. I am sorry. We must pay the penalty sometime, for no nation has ever forgotten its Sabbaths but what it has suffered for it, and we become Sabbath breakers by the individual who goes and thus encourages such.

During our stay in the mountains we had the privilege of enjoying a picnic supper at Bethel Home with a bunch of our preachers and their families, including all the nearbys and Brother J. S. Wiliams and his good wife. We had a fine time. We also were helped by hearing Brother Carroll preach several times in a meeting he was conducting for Brother Cowan in the Weaverville church. And by the way, he was one preacher at the Bethel Home picnic that did not bring his family. Might not have been convenient to bring them.

It is always a joy to me when I go to Bethel Home to spend a while with my good friend, "Sunshine" Altman. He has been a patient there for a number of years and he is one of those kind that you always feel that you have been helped rather than helping him to make the visit. All the patients there are interesting characters.

When rewards are meted out, if I understand the teaching of the Master, no one from among our number will receive a greater one than that remarkable man of faith and consecration, Homer Casto, the superintendent, who for 12 years has gone on in his quiet unassuming way in such a successful way doing this great work of administering to the souls and bodies of these sufferers. Thank God for the inspiration received from men of this type.

Well, we are back at home refreshed in body and spirit, planning as best we know how to make the remaining two months before conference count for the most for the Kingdom. We need help. Divine help above all. Then if we could count on those who are capable both mentally and financially for the spiritual values that make men great in the little things of life, we would be assured of such a glorious wind-up of the year that would count for much in the Master's vineyard.

To all who helped to make our vacation such a pleasure and profit, those who gave to us and those who made it so pleasant while in the "Land of the Sky," and to the bountiful Heavenly Father who brought us safely on our way, we say thank you from the depths of our hearts.

N. G. BETHEA.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER EVEN CHRIST AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XXXIX GREENSBORO, N. C., SEPTEMBER 7, 1933 NUMBER 41

No Place Like Church

There is no place like church:
Go search the world around;
See all the haunts of men
To earth's remotest bound.

Some meet for earnest work,
Some meet for merry play:
You'll find no place like that
Where men can meet to pray.

A meeting-place with God,
How holy is the place!
The Father comes to bless
The contrite of our race!

What Shall We Do About It?

When it comes to the matter of discussing church finances in a time when it appears a good deal needs to be said, we preachers find ourselves in a good deal of difficulty. We face congregations from Sunday to Sunday whose minds are somewhat divided on the subject. Some are opposed to any mention of money matters from the pulpit. If the preacher says anything at all about finances, even though he may not mention the arrears in his own salary, he is accused of "talking about money." And there are those of the faithful—God save the mark—who stay away from the services if he mentions money matters more than once a month. Then there are those who, while they are not opposed particularly to the preacher's financial exhortations, are at least indifferent. When the preacher makes some remarks anent the matter, they immediately concern themselvs with the hymn-book, or they are simply bored. No, not resentfully, just passively, indifferent. There are a few who are interested, who really want to know about the state of the church, who find in the preacher's presentation of the financial problems, a possible opportunity for service.

So the question is, Shall the preacher, for the sake of the few who want to hear, arouse the enmity of those who are opposed to the financial program, or bore those who are indifferent while he tells them of the needs of the church and of the Kingdom?

And then there is another consideration. It takes a good deal of time to present the finances, whether it be the finances of the local church or the program of the Conference or the needs of our denominational activity. What is the preacher to do—take the time, use a mimeograph, or let it slide, and trust that in some way the folks will respond without being appealed to publicly? I wish somebody wiser than I would tell me how it can be done most effectively, so that the money needed to carry on the work of the church can be raised most easily and most gladly. We cannot force the money out of the folks if they are unwilling to give it. And until we can in some way educate them to give it cheerfully they will give it grudgingly and of necessity if they give it at all.

But the fact that faces us is, we must get the money that is needed to carry on the work of the church—and that means from the local church through the Annual and General Conference—or we shall be forced to suspend operations. We are almost there now. Much of our activity is simply marking time. We are not advancing. And not to advance is to begin to go backward.

There isn't any way, I suppose, to declare an Annual Conference or a denomination bankrupt. It would be about as difficult to appoint a receiver for the church as it would be for the state. But if obligations due and unpaid are greater than income that's what it amounts to whether we call it bankruptcy or not. It isn't a nice name. Do we want the church to bear the stigma? Well, apparently, a great many church members are perfectly willing for receivers to be appointed.

I wonder how many of you who may be reading this read the statement of Dr. Geo. R. Brown, the Conference Treasurer, relative to the financial situation that the Conference is in? (If you did not, see page 2, HERALD for August 24.) What are we going to do about it? And he didn't tell half the story as I happen to know. Well, what are we going to do about it? We must do something, and a good deal more than something, if we meet these and other obligations that press upon us not simply with the force of legal obligations but with the much greater weight of moral obligations. And we will give the answer to that question some time between now and the meeting of the Annual Conference.

PUT YOUR BEST IDEAS INTO USE

Calm expression of opinion is more convincing than anrgy argument. Your rights end where your neighbor's begin. It is well always to do your biggest half-day's work in the morning. Smile in the face of adversity and you will surely conquer. One good idea put into execution is better than a thousand schemes locked up in the brain. If you are careless in little things you will probably be careless in big things. It is better to be in doubt than in debt. If you would be considered clever, be silent and let your friends talk. Where there are high motives and growing interests, there can be no dark and dreary days. Spend a few minutes frequently in quiet meditation. Deliberate, but don't procrastinate.—Grenville Kleiser.

THE CRITIC GOES TO CHURCH

The average person goes to church for various reasons. He wants to join in the worship, to have fellowship with other Christians, to be informed, to have his conduct called to account, to be lifted up, to receive comfort. Often he goes in a listless, passive spirit, submissively yielding himself to be worked upon—without much personal concern as to what the minister and the service may do to him.

Sometimes he is awake before entering the church. He is mentally alert, his critical faculties are active. He looks the preacher over, watches his movements, and listens to his sermon. He is not antagonistic. He joins heartily in the service of worship. But he is specifically concerned with the preacher and his message. He wants to know what it is all about, and whether it is worth while.

It was in that spirit that this humble critic attended the Sunday morning services in the First Congregational Church, Washington, D. C., during the six weeks of the pastor's vacation. The six guest preachers came from large churches—from Boston on the east to as far west as Denver. They are all men of ability, education and character, and, on the whole, they gave satisfaction.

Here are some things always to be taken into consideration when one attempts to estimate a preacher and his sermon. There are other factors that may be thought of in forming a judgment—and the reader may be more interested in them than in these of which I speak. But these will suffice for my purpose:

1. The preacher's physical presence. The preacher's body counts for much. He may be an acceptable minister of the Word and do splendid service in spite of a frail, or ungainly, or unimpressive body. But these defects are handicaps and are to be struggled against and, as far as possible, overcome. A much stronger impression would have been made on the congregations had the fine bodies of these six men been adequately trained and used to re-inforce their sermons. The state of one's health, the condition and appropriateness of one's clothing, the state of one's mind—whether exuberant or depressed, whether confident or doubtful and shrinking—all these have much to do with detracting from or adding to the good impression made by the speaker's personal appearance and his message.

2. The preacher's voice. John the Baptist is described as ''the voice of one crying in the wilderness: Prepare ye the way of the Lord.'' There are many sorts of voices—the pleading voice, the warning voice, the persuasive voice, the commanding voice, the ranting voice, the convincing voice, the conversational voice, and others. Every voice from the pulpit should be audible. People come to hear. If they are required to make much effort, and then hear but indifferently, they are not likely to continue coming.

These six preachers had rather good voices. But, generally, they did not show adequate training, and lacked care in using them. I have heard one of the men over the radio, and every word came through clearly and pleasantly. He probably subjects himself to special discipline for broadcasting. One or two others enunciated carefully. But, for the most part, they frequently dropped the voice near the end of a sentence, or slighted an essential word, and left the hearer uncertain as to what was said. The preacher does not need to yell. But his utterance should be sustained, clear, and varied. It is well if the speaker is able to make the people feel that he is talking with them, making only such changes in his voice and manner as may be necessary because of the size of the auditorium and the distance of some of his hearers.

3. The preacher's manner. The proper style for a minister is difficult to define or describe. But it is important. Briefly, the style is the man. It includes his personality, his attitude, his bearing.

Some minister may say: ''What has that to do with preaching? Our business is to present Christ, not ourselves.'' Yes. But the preacher's attitude, his bearing, and his personality have much to do with his presentation of Jesus.

I should say that these six men have good personalities. They were approachable, they could meet and reach people, they were human. But there was a lack. I should judge that, with their powers and training and the messages they brought, they should generally have come into closer grips with their audiences. The church building is large, and open windows let in street noises. But it is decidedly the business of the preacher to ''get'' his hearers and to work on them and in them—with God's help—to the end that they shall go out from the service more intelligent, lifted-up in spirit, in love with truth and righteousness, and determined, in the spirit of Jesus, to live the good life. One of the important evidences of thus ''getting'' the audience is that when the ministers attend their Monday morning meeting they will be saying to each other: ''I had fine 'freedom' yesterday; I enjoyed great 'liberty' in delivering my sermon.'' They had met their hearers mind to mind and heart to heart—as well as face to face—and they had transacted the Lord's business with them.

4. The preacher and the times. Times change. Situations shift. Problems are not always the same. Truth is eternal. But the New Testament differs fro mthe Old. Matthew and John do not write the Gospel from the same standpoint. Jesus and Paul spoke to their own times so deeply and so discerningly that many of their sayings belong to all times.

There are many questions and problems demanding attention today, and efforts are being made to improve national and world conditions. The church, the minister, the sermon, and the service should have an intelligent attitude toward these matters. There should be in the preacher a good measure of wisdom, and a hungering for more. He should be well enough grounded in religion to speak always a word of hope and comfort to the discouraged and perplexed at the present time.

In the main, these six men were conscious of the troublous times through which we are now passing. They emphasized the application of Christian principles to the solution of today's vexing problems, and they bore testimony to the power of God in human lives and the value of Christian character in improving human relations.

Two of the sermons were noteworthy as being up-to-the-times. The subject of one was: "A Creed For Our Day," and that of the other, "The Patriotism of a Christian." There was no ranting. The presentation was constructive, rather than controversial. Both preachers had been in the World War. Incidentally, it should be remarked that they were the most distinctly heard of the six, got the best hold on the audience, and left the strongest impression. This critic is glad he went to church. BETH-SHAN SOCIETY

Organization of a Beth-Shan Society, designed to broaden the educational value of the archaeological investigations which the University of Pennsylvania Museum has been carrying on at Beth-Shan in Palestine since 1921, was announced lately by Horace H. F. Jayne, director of the University Museum.

Membership in the society, which is believed to be the first of its kind ever organized in connection with the archaeological work of an American museum, will be open to those who are particularly interested in the history of Palestine in Biblical times or who have a general interest in scientific investigation in the field of archaeology.

Dr. Josiah H. Penniman, provost of the University of Pennsylvania and an authority on Biblical literature, will serve as chairman of the society's executive committee, which will include also John Story Jenks, president of the University Museum; Dr. Roland S. Morris, former ambassador to Japan; Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, distinguished writer, bibliographer and collector, and Dr. George A. Barton, emeritus professor of Semitic Languages at the University.

In keeping with the educational objective of the new society, which will be affiilated with the University Museum and the University of Pennsylvania, its members will be accorded a number of privileges heretofore reserved exclusively for those who have a close connection with the scientific work of museums, according to Mr. Jayne.

Illustrated monthly reports on the progress of the Beth-Shan expedition and copies of all special reports will be sent to members, and at the close of the season they will receive sets of photographs showing the results achieved and the more important objects uncovered, as well as one or more authentic reproductions of original objects from among the outstanding finds.

In addition, members of the society will be privileged to use the Beth-Shan study rooms, the library and the members' room of the University Museum; to call upon the Museum staff for aid in planning trips to Palestine and the Far East, and to visit the site of the Beth-Shan excavations during the progress of work there.

To assist them in acquainting the general public with the work at Beth-Shan members of the new society will have the privilege of borrowing each year a set of specially prepared lantern slides with accompanying text for a lecture on Beth-Shan and its place in Biblical history.

When the size of the membership warrants, it is planned to appoint from among the members of the society one or more "Traveling Fellows" who will make a comprehensive tour of the Holy Land and visit the scene of the excavations.

Lying between the River Jordan and Mount Gilboa on the edgs of the Plains of Israeldom, the stronghold of Beth-Shan has been from time immemorial a place of outstanding importance in Palestine, and the great mound of Beth-Shan, 900 feet long and over 200 feet high, has yielded richly in buildings and relics of bygone epochs since archaeological work was begun there.

A remarkable round church of the Byzantine era, mosaic pavements laid during Rome's influence over Beth-Shan, four Canaanite temples and the great memorial stones of the pharoahs, Set I and Rameses the Great, with their invaluable records in hierglyphs, and the greatest extant examples of Palestinian art, have been uncovered at Beth-Shan.

The site has yielded also many unusual pottery cult objects, fine jewelry in gold, silver and precious stones, bronze weapons and implements, cups and jars of iridescent glass, seals and scarabs, carved columns of variegated marble, and numerous other objects, many of which have come to the University Museum for permanent exhibition.

Despite the great variety and importance of the finds already uncovered at Beth-Shan, however, there is every reason to believe that continuance of archaelogical work there will produc equally fruitful results, according to Mr. Jayne.

"Of the ten levels so far discovered only about one-fourth of each level has been completely cleared, while below these ten levels there lies at least an equal number of unsounded strata awaiting investigation by the scientist," he stated.

"Even before the Bronze Age the site of Beth-Shan was chosen by man for a habitation, and from the day of its first settlement it was a spot of strategic importance, an indispensable key to the control of the great highway leading from the Mediterranean to the lands beyond the Jordan.

"It was at Beth-Shan that the early Israelites struggled with their Canaanite neighbors for possession of the citadel and the fertile valleys. Here many successive Egyptian pharoahs built great fortresses and massive temples when they held sway over Palestine; and here the Philistines, after the defeat of Saul in the battle of Mount Gilboa 'put his armor in the house of their gods and fastened his head in the temple of Dagon.'

"When the power of Rome swept over the Near East, Beth-Shan became known as Scythopolis, and it was the capital of the League of Ten Cities often mentioned in the Gospels. As Christianity gained strength it became a modern See and the resort of pilgrims who came to visit the miraculous reservoir where, it was said, Christ and His Disciples had bathed and St. John continued to perform miracles.

"In subsequent centuries it was conquered and destroyed and rebuilt many times until finally the British occupied the territory at the conclusion of the World War.

"Because of Beth-Shan's close association with Biblical history there are many laymen who are intensely interested in even the most minute details of the archaeological investigations there and it is in recognition of this fact that the Beth-Shan Society has been organized.

"As a general rule only a relatively few individuals directly connected with museums have been enabled to maintain a close contact with archaeological work, but with the formation of the Beth-Shan Society this opportunity can be extended to a much larger group and a desirable medium is established through which the educational value of the discoveries at Beth-Shan can be broadened considerably.''

The University Museum's expedition at Beth-Shan will begin its annual season of field work on September 20. Gerald M. Fitzgerald is field director of the expedition, while others on the staff are A. J. Tobler and Philippus Miller, assistant archaeologists; John Richmond, architect, and Boulos Effendi, surveyor.

CAN COLLEGE TEACHING BE IMPROVED?

By Thomas C. Amick

A great deal of complaint is made about the poor success of college work. Parents feel that their sons and their daughters do not receive proper care and attention while they are in college. These complaints come to the ears of college administrators time and again. The young men especially, while in college, have little if any guidance and direction, they are thrown on their own responsibilities with all possible freedom which they know not how to use. Confronted by these conditions, it is very little wonder that these college students do not do their best. With so many things distracting attention from the main things that should be done during student life and with as little guidance and direction and help as college students receive, it is really remarkable that they accomplish anything worth while in their work.

Is the fault wholly with the student, or should some of the blame be laid at the door of the college professor? And should a part of the blame be laid at the door of the college executives?

In the high school as well as in the elementary school the teacher must have certain special training before he is certified to teach. This special training must lead directly to his teaching work and it must consist of training in the History of Education, Psychology, and especially of Methods of Teaching. This is not true in the case of the college teacher. If the college teacher has slid through certain educational grooves, no matter whether he can teach or not, he is adjudged to be worthy of a professor's chair in a college.

We have books and manuals on methods for the grade and the high school teacher. The teachers here have an abundance of literature on their work; but the college teacher searches the field in vain for books of guidance in his work. It is true that Paul Klapper in 1920 published a book on college teaching, but very few college teachers have learned that this book is in print, and fewer still have read it. The writr has asked numerous college professors, deans, and the life, if they have read this work and they have replied in astonishment that they had never heard of the book before. Also in 1930 Clarence Cook Little issued a work on The Awakening College and E. E. Lindsay and E. O. Holland published a work on College and University Administration, but only the widest awake college executives have read these volumes. Some universities have suggested offering training courses for prospective college professors, but it has gone no further than the discussion stage . And so college teaching goes on in the same old ruts in which it has been going since the Middle Ages, each professor teaching as his professor taught. The improvement in college teaching for the past eight hundred years has been very slight. The same is true with a great many college courses—they are practically the same as they were in the days of the Renaissance, especially the courses in the languages. College teachers have been slow in blazing out new trails; they are supposed to be trained to think, but they are not takin gnew paths of thought, neither are they improving the old. One professor of psychology said that thinking is a painful act, and probably the college professor does not care to bear this pain. A few choice souls do think and lay new plans and these are they who are leading in the forward march of college training and education.

When a freshman enters college he comes with untrained mind and he knows very little of how to study and do college work. He is assigned to take certain work by some college official and is asked to buy his books. The next day he attends his class and he, just as is the college professor, is unprepared for any work. The profesor enrolls the names of the students and suggests that the first assignment is so many pages in the text used in his special course and then he excuses the class. Amid their new surroundings and with no definite instruction the students are at sea. They know not what to do. With a great deal of time on their hands they make acquaintances during this preliminary period and they form associations that are not always the best. For several days they meet their classes but they have little or no work prepared. The reason is obvious. Their teachers have not taken the time and pains to show them what to do, they have not interested the pupils in the work in hand, they have not taught the students how to determine the relatively important and the unimportant, and with a long assignment of several pages and knowing little about how to study, these young people find themselves swamped in a maze of difficulties that, for the present, at least, seem to be insurmountable. They try to plod on through the darkness. Finally the brighter and more ambitious pupils, through toil and pain and steady application and through a long grinding process learn how to study for themselves, they forge ahead, and finally succeed with their work. The others become discouraged, they lag along, and, through the kindness of the professors who have not done their duty by their students, the students are finally passed on their work although they know very little about it, although the professor, in order to maintain his reputation for being strict in his requirements, marks some of the poorest as failures.

This writer, some years ago, attended one of our great southern universities. Above the door of the mathematics room he saw written in crayon the following lines from Dante's immortal work, ''All ye lose hope who enter here.'' Having inquired the cause of the writing above the door, the writer learned that the previous year the professor of Mathematics taught in this room a class in the Differential and Integral Calculus. Of the 40 members composing the class, one passed the work and the remaining 39 failed. The professor who taught the class in question was very learned in his subject; he was the author of text books; he had won fame and distinction as a mathematician, but he had no sympathy with students; he took no pains with them; he did not care to be bothered with taking time to show his students how to work, and so he was a failure as a teacher.

This writer has indicated that college teaching needs a thorough revision. He here charges college professors with being in a rut that is deep and narrow. The professors are resting on their oars instead of bestirring themselves in order to better their work. They are here charged with having a deadening influence on young and immature minds; they fail to make progress and to study methods of presenting the truth and to help their pupils to understand. Like the one talented man, the professors bury their talent and their students go on their way groping in the darkness when their minds might be and ought to be flooded with light. Were there no remedy, and if there were not some great souls in the faculties of the colleges who do know how to teach, who do have sympathy with growing youth, and who do, like Goldsmith's village preacher, ''allure to brighter worlds and lead the way,'' then college education and college training would soon die and we would know it no more.

What changes then can be made that will better college teaching? In the first place, the college professor needs to realize that he does not know it all. He must be an humble student himself. He must undergo a serious self-examination and find out how weak he really is . Then he must go through a period of reconstruction and thorough study. He must study the best methods of presenting truth. He should study the lives and works of the great teachers—Jesus, Plato, Pestalozzi, and the other rare souls of all ages. He must study and come into sympathy with youth and learn how the young mind works. A study of psychology ,especially of adolescent psychology, will help him here. The college professor must learn how to find out the content of his pupils' minds and how to build on that foundation a great super-structure of knowledge and character. He must learn his pupils, their hopes, aims, ambitions, and aspirations, and he must learn how to guide and motivate these pupils so that they may finally reach their highest and truest ambitions in life.

Then the professor spends too little time with his pupils. The accrediting agencies have said that 15 to 16 hours a week constitute the professor's load. These accrediting agencies are looking after the welfare of the professor and not that of the students, who are ones who really need care and attention. Fifteen hours a week is only three hours a day on the five days a week basis. The NRA says that eight hours a day constitutes a day's work.

Now this writer is of the opinion that the student and teacher should be together in the class room from two to three times the amount of time now spent there. Take a class in freshman English, for instance. Suppose the professor has made the necessary preparation for his class work and he is in deep sympathy with his class. He realizes their ignorance, their backwardness, and their lack of the knowledge of how to study. Suppose he and the class study the assignment together. Let reference and all other needed books be at hand and let the professor guide the class and study with the class, teaching the students the importance of the reference books and how to use them. Let these books actually be used during this class period. Suppose the professor points out how to discover the important facts of the assignment, and how to discover the unimportant. And let the teacher actually show the students how to attack the lesson assigned and how to prepare it thoroughly and well. Let him teach them the best methods of taking notes, when to take notes and when not to take them. Also let the pupils be taught how to make summaries, outlines, and the like, and when these should be made and when they need not be made. If the professor has learned his art, he will realize that the lecture or the lecture method will make about as much impression on the pupil's mind as water makes on the duck when it falls on his back, and he will rather than give them lectures, make his work a laboratory course in which professor and pupils work and study together for two or two and a half hours during each class period. If he should use such a method as this we would find such an uplift in college teaching as we have not seen in many a day. Let this or some like method be used by each of the college professors in any college and that college will soon stand out head and shoulders above all the other colleges in the land.

But you say that the professors and students do not have the time for this type of work. Yes, they do have the time and plenty of it. There is no reason why college class work should close at the time when the working day is only half gone. If professor and students have 15 recitations each week, the plan marked out would give for the professor and the student only six hours a day in the class or laboratory room on the five days a week schedule. Each has nothing but time, and this is not too much time to spend in educational work. The class periods should run from eight o'clock in the morning until six o'clock in the evening, with one hour off for lunch. Both professors and pupils will have four hours off during this time each day for recreation and lunch, and this is the greatest sufficiency for each.

What would be the results of such a plan? With matters running as they now are in the colleges, with three hours at most for class work, eight hours for sleep, one and one-half hours for meals, and eleven and one-half hours for recreation, and then Saturday added to this, and with a little study thrown in, the student feels that study and work are only sidelines of the college course and that recreation is the main consideration of the four years of residence on the college campus. As matters stand, is not the cart before the horse? Change things around, put proper ideals first, place teacher and pupil in closer contact with each other, and most of the criticisms of the college courses will die like the morning vapor.

The writer hereby challenges any college to equip itself with a group of professors who will carry out the spirit of the ideals here set forth and to carry out the plan suggested, especially with freshmen and sophomores; and he is sure that the college that does so will soon be one of the outstanding colleges of the land.

BROTHER PRITCHARD WRITES AGAIN

Several weeks ago I sent to the Hrald for publication quotations from brief histories of our preachers as published in Our Church Record (now M. P. Herald) of February 28, 1901. At that time space would not permit my using all the material, or rather giving a quotation about each of our preachers, and I promised more later. So, after many weeks here I am at it again.

"William Fillmore Kennett is a native of Randolph County, but grew up in Guilford. He attended the public schools and Oak Ridge Institute. He is a nephew of Rev. W. C. Kennett, whom he somewhat resembles. As a preacher he presents simple gospel truth in such a way as to reach the feelings. He knows the power of the Spirit to apply truth in his own life, and tells men of it, not as one acting a part, but as one who has something to say that it would help men to know. He is now pastor of Flat Rock and Oak Ridge circuits, formed from Flat Rock by the last Annual Con."

"Elliott Guyer Lowdermilk is from Randolph County where he matured slowly but solidly. His schooling included eight or nine months at Yadkin College and about the same period at Oak Ridge Institute. He is an elder brother of Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk, who preceded him in entering the ministry. Slowly matured, he may be expected to endure the longer. His ministry has been brief but is promising. He is now pastor of Winston Station."

"Talton Manesseh Johnson was born in Alamance County. After leaving the public school he spent two years at Oak Ridge Institute, three years in Western Maryland College whence he was graduated and one year in the Westminster Theological Seminary. He was one of those quiet, thoughtful boys whom people think of as preachers long before they come to think thus of themselves. As a preacher he is natural in manner, careful, yet bold in his attacks upon sin in high places as well as in low, and aims especially to save the young from an evil life by showing them a more excellent way. As a pastor he is attentive to all classes, especially the sick and the suffering. He was secretary of the General Conference 1896-1900. He is now pastor in Greensoro."

"James Robert Hutton is a native of Guilford County. After he had passed through his course in the primary schools he spent five years in Rutherford College. He entered upon a business career and had good business prospects, as the world would say, when the call came to him to enter upon a preacher's life. He quickly responded, and upon the death of Rev. J. R. Ball, pastor of Liberty circuit, he was chosen as pastor of that charge. He has a style of speech that is at once clear and forcible. His thoughts are as clear and distinct as bullets, and he hurls them out with telling effect. He is now pastor of Tabernacle circuit and lives in Greensboro, where he has an elegant home."

"Robert M. Andrews is a son of Orange County. He attended the Thompson school two years and the Yadkinville Normal two years. He taught school for several terms. His people are Baptists, but he is a thorough Methodist Protestant. He has been but a short time in the ministry, but gives promise of great usefulness. He is now pastor of Granville circuit."

"Cary Hamilton Whitaker was born in Halifax County. He is a brother of Rev. C. L. Whitaker. After leaving the public schools he spent nearly two years in Western Maryland College. He is of a genial, affable disposition and yet is ready to stand up for convictions of right and duty. He shows special sympathy with young people. He presented an address at the last state Christian Endeavor Convention in Raleigh that was among the best of the convention. He is now pastor of Halifax Circuit."

"Charles E. Forlines is, we believe, an Alamance County boy. He attended school at Yadkin College and Western Maryland College and is now completing his last year in the Seminary. He has had one pastorate—that of LaGrange circuit, lasting for more than two years . He is thoughtful and earnest and studious and will come to the work from good advantages. Albemarle is eargerly looking for his coming in June."

"Rev. A. G. Dixon will also complete college and seminary courses at Westminster in a few months, and is expected to return to his native state for work. He is a son of Bro. J. F. Dixon, of Haw River Circuit. He has done pastoral work in Maryland and West Virginia during his vacations. We are looking forward to his work in the church with bright hope."

"Rev. George W. Holmes is a native of Orange County. He is best known for the years of service rendered at Yadkin College where he made a reputation as a good teacher. Later he taught in Burlington. He has just entered the ministry as the pastor of Roanoke Circuit, and is making a good impression."

"J. Samuel Williams is a native of Rockingham County. He completed his education so far as schools are concerned at Westminster, Maryland. Out of college, he was at once called to Grace church in Greensboro where he served with great zeal for more than three years. He is extraordinarily attentive to people in their homes, especially the sick. He is devoted to the church and church work and finds it hard to understand the case of the indifferent church member. He is now pastor at Henderson."

And so, there they are! God's Noble men. As I have read these brief histories I have been impressed at the accuracy with which our Editor forecasted the careers of these men. He must be somewhat of a prophet. I was also impressed by the large number whose histories and pictures were given who have passed on.

Now there is just one disappointing thing to me, namely, that we do not have anything from which to quote about the Editor that is in this special issue.

Let me remind you also that in that day there were no men by the name of Taylor, Curry, Bates, Gerringer, Farmer, Paschal, Stubbins, Brown, etc. J. E. Pritchard.

"Pleasure makes our youth inglorious, our age shameful." —Steele.

"No wickedness has any ground of reason."—Livy.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

The month of September to be when special effort shall be made to raise the Annual Conference Budget. In stations, the third Sunday of that month is the time set, while in the rural churches, the month is set apart for this purpose.

October, Pay-up month

Second Sunday in October, Rally Day, Promotion in Sunday school, etc.

November 8, Annual Conference meets at Thomasville Community church.

I am away from the home base this week, so my letter will be briefer than usual. I sincerely hope that all pastors will remember that September is A. C. B. month and urge all our people to share in this part of our Conference work.

Halifax Charge, Rev. H. F. Fogleman, Pastor

I visted three churches on this charge, Eden, Union, and Hollister. Eden was the first appointment; I was there at the morning hour. The congregation was not large, but the membership of this church is possibly the largest on the charge, and some of the most faithful of our people anywhere are found here. We took subscriptions for the A.C.B., more than half of the desired amount was secured and a solicitor was appointed to secure the balance. We expect the total amount to be raised at Eden.

The congregation at Union was also small, but they responded readily to the appeal for the A. C. B. and the pastor expects Union to raise the total amount assessed for this cause.

At Hollister the house was well filled and they also appeared interested in the work of the church. The A. C. B. was presented and several people responded promptly. We are hoping that Hollister will also pay the total amount asked for the budgets.

Halifax, being one among the original charges of our church in the state, has produced some of our leaders in the Conference life, yet the membership is not large at any of the churches and considering some conditions under which they have labored they have really done well to hold their own. This is no reflection upon the pastors or the membership so much as it is a statement of tenant life which has been so large a part of the population, and often it has been colored. The benefits of the NRA have not yet filtered down to our people, so that it could be seen they were not so optimistic about the final outcome of the budgets, yet they are hopeful of coming out with a clean sheet.

Chase City

I visited this church Monday night in company with Rev. C. L. Spencer. The appointment had been announced and although it was raining at the hour for the service and had rained for some time before, we had as many as 25 present and they evidenced quite a bit of interest in the work for next year. This church has had many backsets since its organization. These have kept the church from the growth which would have naturally been theirs under more favorable surroundings. I hope that even yet this growth may come and thus make it possible for the church to be served at less sacrifice than it has entailed upon the pastors in the past.

Plan of Appointments

September 10—Orange Charge.

September 17—West Forsyth Charge.

September 24—Gray's Chapel, 11 a. m.; New Salem, 3 p. m.; Worthville, 7:30 p. m.

October 1—Littleton Charge.

R. M. ANDREWS.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE DAY

Following up Dr. Brown's appeal for the Annual Conference Budget of two weeks ago, let me say that on most of its obligations the Board of Church Extension is almost two whole years behind with interest payments. This money was borrowed in good faith by authority of the Annual Conference to help some of our struggling churches. At that time nobody ever thought of a depression ever coming along. And if times had remained normal there would not have been any great difficulty in repaying the loans. The most of this money was furnished by loyal Methodist Protestants in amounts ranging from three to five hundred dollars. Many of these people need the money badly with which to carry on, but the Board simply cannot pay them. The only income the Board has is from the Annual Conference Budget. Therefore, I do most heartily endorse Dr. Andrews' suggestion of having Annual Conference Day on the THIRD Sunday in September. While my own church is far behind with salary I am willing for every dollar that can be raised that day to be sent to the Treasurer of the Annual Conference.

Brethren, we must do something to save our Conference from SERIOUS EMBARRASSMENT. At the next session of the Conference I shall be ready to vote for any measure that seems to be best for the Conference, but until them let us do something for this year's budget. I know money is hard to get hold of, but a little from each charge will help.

J. E. PRITCHARD,
Chairman, Board Church Extension.

OUR STORY PAGE

DID GOD FAIL?

I remember a day one winter that stands out like a boulder in my life. The weather was unusually cold, our salary had not been regularly paid, and it did not meet our needs when it was.

My husband was away much of the time, traveling from one district to another. Our boys were well, but my little Ruth was ailing, and at best none of us were decently clothed. I patched and re-patched, with spirits sinking to the lowest ebb. The water gave out in the well, and the wind blew through cracks in the floor.

The people in the parish were kind, and generous, too; but the settlement was new, and each family was struggling for itself. Little by little, at the time I needed it most, my faith began to waver.

Early in life I was taught to take God at His word, and I thought my lesson was well learned. I had lived upon the promises in dark times, until I knew as David did, "who was my Fortress and Deliverer." Now a daily prayer for forgiveness was all that I could offer.

My husband's overcoat was hardly thick enough for October, and he was often obliged to ride miles to attend some meeting or funeral. Many times our breakfast was Indian cake, and a cup of tea without sugar.

Christmas was coming; the children always expected their presents. I remember the ice was thick and smooth, and the boys were each craving a pair of skates. Ruth, in some unaccountable way, had taken a fancy that the dolls I had made were no longer suitable; she wanted a nice large one, and insisted on praying for it.

I knew it seemed impossible; but, oh! I wanted to give each child its present. It seemed as if God had deserted us, but I did not tell my husband all this. He worked so earnestly and heartily. I supposed him to be as hopeful as ever. I kept the sitting room cheerful with an open fire, and I tried to serve our scanty meals as invitingly as I could.

The morning before Christmas, James was called to see a sick man. I put up a piece of bread for his lunch—it was the best I could do—wrapped my plaid shawl around his neck and then tried to whisper a promise as I often had, but the words died away upon my lips. I let him go without it.

That was a dark, hopeless day. I coaxed the children to bed early, for I could not bear their talk. When Ruth went to bed, I listened to her prayer. She asked for the last time most explicitly for her doll, and for skates for her brothers. Her bright face looked so lovely when she whispered to me: "You know I think they'll be here early tomorrow morning, mamma," that I thought I could move heaven and earth to save her from disappointment. I sat down alone, and gave way to the most bitter tears.

Before long James returned, chilled and exhausted. He drew off his boots; the thin stockings slipped off with them, and his feet were red with cold. "I wouldn't treat a dog that way; let alone a faithful servant," I said. Then as I glanced up and saw the hard lines in his face and the look of despair, it flashed across me, James had let go, too.

I brought him a cup of tea, feeling sick and dizzy at the very thought. He took my hand and we sat for an hour without a word. I wanted to die and meet God, and tell Him His promise wasn't true; my soul was so full of rebellious despair.

There came a sound of bells, a quick stop, and a loud knock at the door. James sprang up to open it. There stood Deacon White. "A box came by express just before dark. I brought it around as soon as I could get away. Reckon it might be for Christmas. 'At any rate,' I said, 'they shall have it tonight.' Here is a turkey my wife asked me to fetch along, and these other things I believe belong to you."

There was a basket of potatoes and a bag of flour. Talking all the time, he hurried in the box, and then, with a hearty good-night he rode away.

Still, without speaking, James found a chisel and opened the box. He drew out first a thick red blanket, and we saw that beneath was full of clothing. It seemed at that moment as if Christ fastened upon me a look of reproach. James sat down and covered his face with his hands. "I can't touch them," he exclaimed; "I haven't been true, just when God was trying me to see if I could hold out. Do you think I could not see you were suffering? And I had no word of comfort to offer. I know now how to preach the awfulness of turning away from God."

"James," I said, clinging to him, "don't take it to heart like this; I am to blame, I ought to have helped you. We will ask Him together to forgive us." "Wait a moment, dear, I cannot talk now," he said, then he went into another room. I knelt down, and my heart broke; in an instant all the darkness, all the stubbornness rolled away. Jesus came again and stood before me, but with the loving word: "Daughter!"

Sweet promises of tenderness and joy flooded my soul. I was so lost in praise and gratitude that I forgot everything else. I don't know how long it was before James came back, but I knew he, too, had found peace.

"Now, my dear wife," he said, "let us thank God together;" and he then poured out words of praise; Bible words, for nothing else could express our thanksgiving.

It was 11 o'clock, the fire was low, and there was the great box, and nothing touched but the warm blanket we needed. We piled on some fresh logs, lighted two candles, and began to examine our treasures.

We drew out an overcoat; I made James try it on; just the right size, and I danced around him; for all my lightheartedness had returned. Then there was a cloak, and he insisted in seeing me in it. My spirits always infected him, and we both laughed like foolish children.

There was a warm suit of clothes also, and three pairs of woolen hose. There was a dress for me, and yards of flannel, a pair of arctic overshoes for each of us, and in mine was a slip of paper. I have it now, and mean to hand it down to my children. It was Jacob's blessing to Asher: "Thy shoes shall be iron and brass, and as thy days so shall thy strength be.'' In the gloves, evidently for James, the same dear hand had written: ''I, the Lord thy God, will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee: Fear not, I will help thee.''

It was a wonderful box, and packed with thoughtful care. There was a suit of clothes for each of the boys, and a little red gown for Ruth. There were mittens, scarfs, and hoods; and down in the center, a box; we opened it and there was a great wax doll. I burst into tears again; James wept with me for joy. It was too much; and then we both exclaimed again, for close behind it came two pair of skates. There were some books for us to read; some of them I had wished to see; stories for the children to read, aprons and underclothing, knots of ribbon, a gay little tidy; a lovely photograph, needles, buttons and thread; actually a muff, and an envelope containing a ten-dollar gold piece.

At last we cried over everything we took up. It was past midnight, and we were faint and exhausted even with happiness. I made a cup of tea, cut a fresh loaf of bread and James boiled some eggs. We drew up the table before the fire; how we enjoyed our supper! And then we sat talking over our life, and how sure a help God always proved.

You should have seen the children the next morning; the boys raised a shout at the sight of their skates. Ruth caught up her doll, and hugged it tightly without a word; then she went into her room and knelt by her bed.

When she came back she whispered to me: ''I knew it would be there, mamma, but I wanted to thank God just the same, you know.'' ''Look here, wife, see the difference.'' We went to the window and there were the boys out of the house already, and skating on the ice with all their might.

My husband and I both tried to return thanks to the church in the East that sent us the box and have tried to return thanks unto God every day since.

Hard times have come again and again, but we have trusted in Him; dreading nothing so much as a doubt of His protecting care. Over and over again we have proved that, ''They that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing.''—Selected.

JUST A TEST OF FAITH

''Oh, mother, please don't make me go alone! Please, mother, I'm so afraid.''

''Doris,'' replied Mrs. Hillman, ''I'm truly ashamed of you. A great big girl, in the seventh grade, and afraid of the dark. Nothing is going to hurt you. Run right along and get the milk.''

When mother talked like this argument was useless. Sighing, Doris started for the farm-house, a mile or more distant, for the milk they all enjoyed so much. Rebelliously she banged the bucket against the fence and thought fearfully of the homeward journey in the dark. Twilight, even now, was rapidly giving place to night.

Turning homeward, Doris gazed down the Swamp Road, so named because of the stretch of marshy woodand on one side of it. A high bluff ran along the opposite side of the highway and lent an even darker appearance to the road.

Now and then Doris glanced apprehensively into the swamp and her imagination peopled it with all sorts of weird beings, and she went faster. Darker grew the way, and more still. Her heart pounded right up in her throat and its thunder was in her ears.

Vague shadows flitted to and fro in the marshy depths and at intervals an owl hooted far away. Frogs croaked and night birds called and stark terror took possession of the frightened little girl.

Doris suddenly remembered that she wasn't altogether alone. She halted and turned her face to the distant stars. It took all her courage, but she closed her eyes and prayed:

''Dearest Heavenly Father, I'm afraid on the lonesome road. Please help me overcome my awful fear. Amen.''

When she open her eyes it seemed much lighter. The swamp appeared much less formidable and her shaky nerves stadied themselves in a moment. The ''all-alone'' feeling vanished and it seemer as if a friendly, warm hand had laid hold of her shoulder and propelled her gently forward toward the lights of home that glimmered at the top of the long hill.

''Mamma,'' said Doris, ''I'm home, and here's the milk.''

''Well,' replied her mother, with twinkling eyes, ''I'll warrant you ran most of the way and the milk is churned to butter.''

''No, mamma,'' said the little girl. ''I'm ashamed I was ever afraid. I'll never be afraid again. I know now I don't go all alone. I think I understand partly what my Sunday school teacher meant when she said that we walk by faith.''

''Dear little daughter,'' thought Mrs. Hillman tenderly. ''Growing in grace and learning to walk by faith.''—The Junior King's Business.

WITH FIRM FEET

Faith is not a mere intellectual opinion. It is a heart transaction, by which you lay hold on Jesus, and Jesus saves. His sacrifice for sin avails for you; His strength becomes yours; His example teaches you how to live your own daily life; His Spirit comes to dwell within you; His armor protects you; and His service becomes the inspiration of your whole being.

When you ascend into Christ you reach a loftier, purer atmosphere. Security is gained up there as in a stronghold on a cliff. Put your feet firmly on the path that leads straight toward God. When you reach Him in this world you have reached heaven in the next world.—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

MAKE USE OF EVERY OPPORTUNITY

There is an eminent place for you to fill in the world. You can not, however, rise higher than your thoughts and aspirations. In order to reach the distinguished place which assuredly is possible, you must outline it definitely in your thought, dwell upon it frequently and intensely, and bend your best energies toward its realization. The cardinal requirements for achieving any great enterprise are alert intelligence, untiring industry, and steadfastness of purpose. Your progress largely depends upon having a receptive mind. Be eager to receive intelligent advice and suggestions for your personal advancement. Listen patiently to advice or criticism, and try to apply it practically. Make use of every opportunity for self-improvement.—Grenville Kleiser.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Clark's Chapel, Weaverville.—On the third Sunday, August 20, was held the Ninth Annual Eller Reunion.

Sunday school was at the usual time. Special music. And Brother N. G. Bethea preached a most wonderful sermon at the 11 o'clock hour. Using as his subject, "Appreciation of the Past." An abundant dinner was spread at 12:30 o'clock.

Every one present was invited to dinner.

Business meeting was held immediately after lunch.

We had special singing by different quartettes from several places. Reading of Obituaries of deceased relatives. A talk by Rev. J. Ben Eller, pastor of the First Baptist church, Statesville.

The offering was turned over to Brother Cowan for the benefit of the Children's Home.

Brother Cowan has changed the fourth Sunday morning appointment to an evening service at 8 p. m.

And we hope this will be better.

He preached a good sermon last Sunday evening. On the second Sunday morning he will hold Communion Service.

Denton Charge. — Our meeting begun at Denton the third Sunday in July. Rev. G. H. Hendry of Charlotte was with us as pulpit help. The church and community was well pleased with his masterful sermons. His messages were chock-full of information, inspiration and good cheer. We have felt a deepening of our spiritual life, edified and strengthened for the battle against spiritual wickedness in high places. Mrs. Hendry and their handsome little daughter were with us for the closing services. And I have never seen any person make as many friends in so short a time as Mrs. Hendry did. We are looking forward to the time when we may have them with us again.

The fifth Sunday our meeting commenced at Mt. Ebal. This was a very good meeting, but very small visible results.

The third Sunday in August we began the meeting with Canaan church. This was a good meeting, well attended day and night. Here we had 25 professions and 15 accessions. We had to assist us here, Rev. J. T. Sisk, who did part of the preaching and conducted the singing. Both his preaching and singing was entirely satisfactory to pastor and people. I think Brother Sisk can come as near getting everybody to sing as any person I have ever seen. You ought to have heard the large congregations sing the old Gospel hymns, it was indeed food for our hungry hearts.

August 27 witnessed the beginning of the Piney Grove meeting. Brother Sisk continued with us also at this place. We were rained out some of the time, but we had a good meeting there. A goodly number of professions, and six joined the church. Here as at Canaan, Brother Sisk led the old hymns of the church until the hills and hollows echoed with the Gospel in song. He puts his whole soul, mind and strength into his work, and we were all lifted in the realms of the spirit.

We are now in our last meeting of the charge at Cid church. This meeting was started off in a very hopeful manner. Large attendance and marked interest. Pray that God may give us many souls that live in this community and are lost to the grandest, noblest and the best things of life, that only God can supply.

If this report seems a little long, you will know why,—this preacher and his family are "Fed up." The meeting at Denton was introduced by a pounding; the biggest I have ever had on this charge. Canaan closed their meeting with a pounding that couldn't be stored in my car; I had to load down the runningboards to get it home. Then Piney Grove filled another car and sent it to Denton, at near midnight, to surprise their pastor. And, believe me, they certainly got it over. Think of it,—three big poundings, one right after the other! Can you beat it? May God bless them every one is my humble prayer.

Orange Charge.—The revival meeting began at Chestnut Ridge, August 27 and closed September 1. Brother T. O. Pender was with us and led the singing for the entire meeting. Brother J. L. Trollinger came in time for the services Monday, and preached for us until the meeting closed. We thank both Brother Pender and Brother Trollinger for their faithful services.

The church was revived: several were reclaimed, ten converted and seven members added to the church.

Brother Trollinger's sermons were spoken of highly and were well received. We believe they will do good in days to come.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Spencer.—Our revival meeting began July 9. Rev. G. B. Ferree of Mocksville assisted our pastor, Rev. W. M. Howard, and gave us some inspiring sermons. I am sure that his messages helped. They not only revived our church, but the other churches in Spencer attended the services and co-operated with us more than at any meeting we have ever had.

Our pastor seems to improve with every sermon. We feel we are very fortunate to have such a good young minister for our pastor.

Sunday we received into our church five of our young people. Were glad to have them unite with us. We have lost by removal until we only had 24 members. And with our church mortgage and interest to pay the last two years have been very hard with our people out of work, but we have tried to be faithful. We earnestly request your prayers for our church.

MRS. A. L. MOORE.

West Forsyth.—Services on West Forsyth charge last Sunday were at Baltimore church at 11 a. m., and Stony Knoll church at 3 p. m. On account of rain Sunday morning the attendance at Baltimore was not as good as usual. At Stony Knoll the attendance was better than usual. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was administered by the pastor at each service. The pastor enjoyed a good dinner in the home of Brother Grover Griffin after the service at Baltimore. Saturday night was spent with Brother A. A. Doub, of Baltimore church, and was thoroughly enjoyed.

We are thankful for a real pounding received from the members of Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches last Sunday. Our car was almost filled with various donations of fruits, groceries and other gifts. These people are always kind to the pastor and family and are mindful of his needs. We are very appreciative of all that they have done for us.

Brother C. E. Sprinkle, member of Pleasant Hill church, is improving slowly from an operation at the Baptist hospital in Winston-Salem, August 20. We understand that he is to have another operation before he can return to his home. We trust his recovery will be as rapid as possible.

Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of the Annual Conference, will make his official visit to West Forsyth charge Sunday, September 17. He will preach at Pleasant Hill church at 11 a. m., and at Tabernacle church at 3 p. m. We are expecting large congregations at each church.

Our appointment for next Sunday will be at Union Hill church at 11 a. m.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Lebanon Church.—Sunday school attendance yesterday was 193. One week ago our attendance was 229. And the attendance at the 11 o'clock service was splendid. We were pleased to have Dr. Dixon and a number of the boys from our Children's Home worship with us that day.

Vacations are about over now with our folks. Beginning with yesterday all regular services will be held. With the feel of autumn in the air and the preparation for school in order, the children and, also, the grown up children are promptly falling in line for regular duties. We do trust that this will mean a pretty thorough consecration to all religious duties by everybody.

We enjoyed a good sermon of thought-producing quality yesterday morning by our pastor. His subject was "Consecration." Truly, if each servant of God would consecrate himself fully to the work of the Kingdom, our church life would be stimulated. It would render much credit to the church and more glory to God.

Dr. Taylor, in his brief sermon, urged Christians to consecrate themselves to Bible reading and prayer, and also, to consecrate their substance to Christian work.

Following the sermon, the Lord's Supper was observed. It was gratifying to note the large number of young people participating in the Holy Communion. Dr. Taylor expressed his pleasure at this and promised another sermon to children at some early date.

Mr. C. B. Welch, and family, accompanied by Miss Juanita Hayworth, have returned from a ten-day visit to the World's Fair in Chicago. Their daughter, Miss Iris Welch, who has been in the National Music Camp, at Interlochen, Mich., returned home with them. Miss Welch is a talented flutist. While at this national camp she studied under Mr. Edwin Lennig, of the Detroit Symphony. (Mr. Lennig, a musician of note, studied in Paris Conservatory.) She also took conducting under Vladimir Bakaleinikoff, (from the Cincinnati Symphony), who is recognized as one of the greatest conductors in the world.

Thirty-six states were represented in this high school orchestra and band of about 280 students. The orchestra and band gave two concerts daily for four days in the World's Fair at Chicago. They broadcast over station NBC, August 3rd and 10th.

The Ladies' Aid gave a lawn party last Wednesday evening on the church lawn. Had a very pleasant time and realized the sum of $15.00 to add to the treasury.

The Ladies' Aid is sponsoring the play, "Spooky Tavern," which is to be given Thursday night of this week at Oakveiw school and Friday night in the Junior hall (corner of N. Main street and West Lexington avenue). This promises to be very good entertainment for the young people composing the cast are some of our best talent. May they have a good audience.

Miss Iris Hammer, of Gibsonville, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Lena H. Thacker, on Route 2.

Spring Church Charge.—Our revival meeting began at Spring church the fourth Sunday in August with Dr. L. W. Gerringer as pulpit help, and closed the following Friday night. The attendance on Sunday was large, and fair throughout the week. Brother Gerringer's sermons were of a high order, and gratefully received. The church was revived. There were 14 professions, and five united with the church at the close. Mrs. J. J. Massey was received from Fountain Creek Baptist church. One of the new converts was received at Pleasant Hill last night. Two or more are to be received at Spring church next Sunday. Several gave their names for other churches.

The circuit auxiliary will meet with Rev. and Mrs. H. S. B. Thompson Wednesday of this week, near Halifax.

Wm. H. NEESE.

Bess' Chapel. — The special meeting here closed Sunday night, August 13. Our pastor had as his help, Rev. Hendry of the First M. P. church, Charlotte. Brother Hendry is a fluent speaker. Each and every sermon was an inspiration. We feel that the church and community were greatly blessed and helped by this meeting. Mrs. Hendry was with us part of the time. Rev. and Mrs. Hendry endeared themselves to all while here. We hope to have them back some time.

There were more than a dozen conversions. Sunday we received two new members into our church, Mrs. Kenneth Heavner and Miss Mozelle Boyles.

We were fortunate in having Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Penny of Charlotte with us Sunday afternoon and night. Mr. Penny made a lovely talk using as his subject, "The Face in the Mirror."

Our hearts were saddened by the sudden death July 21, of Mrs. Samuel T. Talent, mother of Mrs. B. L. Heavner of our church. The last rites were conducted by Rev. J. D. Morris, assisted by Rev. A. D. Shelton of Fallston charge, and Rev. David Wesson of Spartanburg, S. S. Interment was made in the cemetery at Knob Creek in Cleveland county.

Mr. Earl Beam of our church and community, died Sunday, August 13, at the Lincoln hospital. He had been in declining health for sometime, yet his death was unexpected.

Funeral services were held at the church Monday afternoon.

Services were in charge of our devoted and much loved pastor, assisted by Rev. Shelton. Our sincere sympathy is extended to the mother, wife and two children.

The August meeting of the Missionary Auxiliary was held at the church last Saturday. At this time we organized a Girl's Circle.

We have purchased two new chairs for the pulpit.

Mr. Z. M. Dellinger is very sick at this time. We are hoping he will soon be well. Litle Raeford, his son, who has been sick for several months suffering from a bone disease, is improving slowly. We miss Raeford and his mother so much at the church.

The third quarterly conference was held at our church Saturday afternoon. Caroleen and Shelby were represented and gave interesting reports of their work. Mr. J. Lee Beam was elected to represent us at Annual Conference. REPORTER.

Siler City Charge.—All three of the revival meetings have been held on this charge. Rev. C. L. Spencer was the pulpit help at Siler City, Rev. E. A. Bingham at Piney Grove and Rev. L. E. Mabry at Hope. These brethren brought soul-stirring Gospel messages at every service. We have had 13 accessions to the church this year. Others will join soon.

Extensive improvements have recently been made on Siler City and Piney Grove churches. Those passing through Siler City will hardly recognize our church. It is wearing a beautiful garment of paint, including the roof, windows and underpinning, and new steps have been built. On the inside the linoleum in the aisles has been painted, adding much to the appearance. A little later the yard will be graded and shrubbery planted. Piney Grove church has just been painted inside and out, circular concrete steps have been built, and the pews stained. Material is on the grounds for a new stove flue and a bell has been purchased to be placed in a new belfry. A beautiful new carpet was placed in the pulpit at New Hope church just before the revival meeting, costing $15.00. And the good part is the folks are paying for these improvements as they go. Perhaps some of the reporters will have more to say about it.

The folks have been making donations to the pastor all through the year. A suit of clothes from Piney Grove (a dandy suit, too) a set of beautiful lawn chairs from members of Siler City, also cash donations, some who gave not being members of the Methodist Protestant church.

Mrs. J. A. Cooper, our efficient reporter at Siler City, has been confined to her bed for about five weeks. Brother C. C. Routh, a leading members of Hope church, has been sick all summer. We hope they will soon be well.

Miss Kara Andrew will represent our charge in the next Annual Conference.

H. L. ISLEY.

Mebane.—On Wednesday night the second week in August, our third quarterly conference was held. Mr. A. C. Allen was elected as delegate to the Annual Conference.

Our church seems to be going along as well as usual. The Sunday school is progressing nicely, and we have very good attendance each Sunday. The Baraca class entertained the Sunday school with a watermelon slicing which was enjoyed by all, on the church lawn. Several of the classes have had picnics this month.

Miss Paulince Nicholson was hostess to the young ladies' circle last Friday night. Each one invited a boy friend and quite an enjoyable evening was spent.

A few weeks ago the C. E. society enjoyed a social in the form of a lawn party given by our pastor and his wife at the parsonage. The young people always enjoy Mr. and Mrs. Smith's hospitality. The Wiliam Nicholson Mission band had a picnic last week and the Willing Workers spent several days on a camping trip with Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Christopher and Miss Pauline Nicholson as chaperones.

Our pastor and family returned last Friday from a two weeks' vacation during which they visited with friends and relatives in High Point, Shelby, Charlotte, and other places. They reported a very pleasant trip.

Our revival began Sunday with Rev. Clyde Auman as our pulpit help. Mr. Auman is bringing us splendid messages, and we are praying that God will bless us in a special way also, that our church will be greatly revived during the series of services. We ask an interest in your prayers. We were very happy to have the Amicks from Graham to worship with us Sunday night as we are always glad to have visitors and old friends.

First Church, High Point. — The regular schedule of church services was resumed last Sunday. The Sunday school session with J. C. Whitesell, superintendent, directing, opened at 9:45 o'clock with classes for all ages meeting in the different department class rooms.

At the 11 o'clock worship service the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, used as the subject for Labor Day, "The Oldest NRA," from the text in Proverbs 22:2, "The rich and poor meet together: the Lord is the maker of them all." He said that Labor Day this year brings us face to face with new conditions. This new NRA will not avail much unless God, the Bible, and the Christian social order are given prominence. Perhaps the most difficult of all our temporal problems is that of allowing labor and capital, employer and employe to meet on a level. The oldest NRA declares that God is no respecter of persons, that all are on a level in origin and primary necessities. Then in the realm of the supreme needs of the soul all meet together. Salvation for all is found only in Jesus Christ. Without Him all are lost. We must meet together as rich and poor in Christian brotherhood or plunge into social revolt. This sermon was timely and thoughtful. The musical program was directed by Miss Beulah Moton who presided at the organ. Mrs. J. H. Allred sang a lovely solo, and the choir rendered the anthem, "My Song Shall Be of Mercy." There was no evening service.

Mr. Arnold J. Koonce, who has been seriously ill in Burrus Memorial hospital as the result of an operation for appendicitis with complications, is better today. This will be good news to his host of friends. However, he will not be able to be moved to his home for several days.

Professor C. R. Hinshaw, his son, Reginald, and daughter, Garnet, and Miss Margaret Walton left Tuesday morning for a motor trip through the valley of Virginia. They were accompanied by Prof. Hinshaw's sister, Mrs. W. C. Tucker of Greensboro, and two children.

Mrs. Tom Rosemond, and two children of Chapel Hill, are guests of her mother, Mrs.

B. F. Montgomery, and sisters, Misses Jewel and Frances Montgomery.

Rev. R. I. Farmer, his children, Miss Mary Elizabeth and Joseph, and niece, Miss Helen Johnston of Denison, Ohio, returned last Friday evening from a vacation of a month spent with relatives in different towns in Ohio. Mrs. Farmer is expected to be able to come home from Tucson, Arizona in October.

Professor and Mrs. L. R. Johnston and small daughter, Becky Holt, left Sunday morning for their new home in Hawthorne, New Jersey, where he will be principal of a new high school. Many friends here regret exceedingly to see him and his talented wife leave the city, where they have lived for 12 years. They are among the most popular and highly esteemed members of First Church.

Many friends of Mrs. C. J. Welch, Sr., will be pleased to hear that she is improving from her recent attack of illness and is able to be downstairs every day.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Gibson, who recently moved to Durham, are guests this week of the latter's parents, Mrs. and Mrs. J. G. Snipes on Steele St.

Misses Ruth Welch, Lucille and Annette Pickens spent Monday, the Labor Day holiday, in Charlotte.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Whitesell and small daughter, Anne, have returned from a visit to Mrs. Whitesell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Moffitt, in Ramseur.

Hawkin's Chapel, Littleton Charge.—Sunday night our regular service was postponed on account of our pastor's meeting beginning at Corinth. So we postponed our Sunday school until Sunday night. Miss Erma Hawkins gave some inspiring thoughts on how our Sunday school could grow larger and be made more attractive.

Our revival meeting began the second Sunday in August and closed the coming Friday night. Rev. Neese arrived in time for the Sunday afternoon service and preached at all the services. We had four to confess their sins and unite with the church. We hope that Brother Neese will soon visit us again, for we learned to think a lot of him while being in so many of our homes.

At this meeting we were glad to have one of our boys from High Point College, Mr. Leo Pittard, who went from our church to study ministerial work through the summer. He has been at work in the orphan home at High Point, and brought one little boy with him who had neither father nor mother. We were glad to have him with us. Some of the people wanted to hear Mr. Pittard make a speech, so the preachers gave him part of one service; he sure did bring out some splendid points of Christ's teaching.

We are planning for a Rally Day program next Sunday at 11 o'clock, September 10. The leader is Mrs. Baldy Green and her committee is composed of Miss Erma Hawkins, Mrs. Phillip Hawkins and the writer.

Our superintendent, Mr. Edward Hawkins was elected delegate to Annual Conference.

Misses Helen Fowler and Eunice Green were the guests of Misses Mary and Dorothy Green Monday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Hawkins spent Sunday with his mother, Mrs. C. M. Hawkins.

Misses Helen Fowler and Madeline Pittard spent the week-end in Raleigh.

Hubert Hawkins spent a week with his sister, Mrs. Claude Hawkins. He has suffered a great deal with his shoulder being dislocated through playing.

Mr. Lonnie Green is from the mountains spending a week with his mother, Mrs. Georgie Green.

Little Teddie Dickens has had an awfully bad case of appendicitis but we are glad to note that he is getting along nicely at the Roanoke Rapids hospital.

Mr. Tom Carpenter was in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tommie Hawkins' sister a day or two last week.

Sorry to note that Mrs. Robert Vincent's father is ill.

Graham.—During the writer's absence assisting Brother Hetheox in a meeting at Hobbs Chapel, his pulpit was filled by Dr. J. W. Woody of the Friends church. His message was deeply appreciated.

Everyone of our folks here are to be praised for having put over successfully the $800.00 drive to raise the balance due on the hut and the street assessment. We deeply appreciate the hearty co-operation on the part of every one. It just demonstrates what a membership with limited means can do when every one does his or her part.

The Graham church will co-operate with the the President of the Conference in making the third Sunday "Consecration Sunday."

Four of our young people will go away to school this year. John M. Anglin, Jr., and Miss Mary Lou Oakley will attend the Alamance Business College in Burlington; Miss Evelyn Williams will be a freshman at High Point College; and Junius Neese will enter the freshman class at Elon College. Our hearty good wishes go with these splendid young people in their special training for a life's vocation.

Next Sunday the worship service will be held in the interest of the young people who ordinarily do not stay for the worship service. This service will be held at the beginning of the Sunday school hour and every one is urged to come in time to share with the young people this service. There will be no regular 11 o'clock service.

The writer is assisting in a meeting at Mebane this week. J. CLYDE AUMAN.

First Church, Lexington.—Our pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley filled his regular appointment with the Mt. Carmel church Sunday at 11 o'clock and Mr. C. L. Hedrick preached at First Church. Mr. Hedrick used as a text Matt. 5:16, "Let your light shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your father who is in heaven."

On Sunday evening, Rev. Odis Lanning, a ministerial student, filled the pulpit. He chose as a text Mark 9:25-38. Both of these messages were very much enjoyed by all who were present.

Our Christian Endeavor is progressing nicely. On next Sunday evening we plan to begin a contest for new members. This contest will last for one month climaxed by a social given by the losing team.

On September 11, the third quarterly conference for First Church and Mt. Carmel church will be held at First Church.

Coming as a complete surprise to their many friends in Lexington and elsewhere, was the marriage of Miss Virginia Lena Clapp and Mr. Eugene Stanford Foard, both of Lexington. The ceremony took place at Chester, S. C., September 2, at 8 a. m., The Rev. J. H. Yarborough officiating. The couple were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Herman Lanning also of Lexington. The bride wore a traveling costume of brown with accessories to match.

Mrs. Foard is the attractive daughter of Mrs. Ed Clapp and the late Mr. Clapp. She was educated in the city school and for the past two years has held a responsible position in High Point. She has been a member of First church for some time and has made many friends among the membership of this church.

Mr. Foard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Foard. He received his education in the public schools of Lexington and is at present connected with a local manufacturing concern.

A host of friends and relatives extend to them congratulations and best wishes for a long and prosperous married life.

Mr. Roy Brown, another member of First church, and Miss Louise Misenheimer were also married recently.

Bethel, Alamance Charge. — On the third Sunday in September the sixth annual meeting of the Bethel Memorial association will be held. The memorial sermon will be delivered by Dr. P. E. Lindley of High Point College. The worship program in the morning will be conducted by Mr. Tyree Lindley and in the afternoon by Miss Lillie Mae Braxton. Every one is cordially invited to attend. This has been an exceptional year in the history of the association in that no member has been lost by death.

Our revival meeting began August 17 and closed August 25 with Rev. H. Freo Surratt doing all the preaching. He brought us most excellent sermons and the church was revived. We appreciate the faithful work of Brother Surratt and hope that he may be with us again.

Our church recently held a very successful two week's Daily Vacation church school under the leadership of Miss Effie Keck. Many thanks are due to the faithful teachers who so willingly gave their services in this good work.

We were pleased to have Dr. R. M. Andrews with us the fourth Sunday in July. He brought us a helpful message.

The Woman's Auxiliary met last month with Mrs. E. P. Dixon and had a good meeting. The next meeting will be the second Sunday afternoon in September with Mrs R. W. Lindley. The program will be in charge of Miss Bessie Holmes.

Bellemont, Mount Hermon Charge.—Our revival services came to a very successful close Sunday evening, September 3. Much interest was shown in the revival, and a large number of people were converted. We were fortunate in having Rev. Clarice Isley help in the revival. Rev. Isley preached some fine sermons. As his closing message he preached a very touching sermon on, "Crucifying Christ in Our Own Community," taking as his text Hebrews 6:6. Rev. Isley told us that human nature is the same today as it was years ago. We ignore Christ and turn a deaf ear to Him for popularity and the pleasures of the world. People did the same thing centuries ago. Nineteen centuries ago the people shouted, "Away With Jesus." We hear the same cry today in actions if not in words. Rev. Isley entreated us to choose now whom we will serve. We must serve God whole-heartedly. We can not go too far in trusting Him. We cannot serve God and Satan. We must either be for Christ or against Him. Too many of us try to carry Satan on one shoulder and God on the other. We want to be a Christian and still hold on to the things of the world. The Gospel is the only thing that will save our life. It has saved souls in the past and it will still save souls. Christ will save us if we but give Him a chance. Christ came to this world to pay the price to set us free. Will we crucify Him anew? Rev. Isley told us that when we turn a deaf ear to Christ and refuse to come to the altar we are crucifying Him anew.

A Self-Dedication Service will be held at this church on the fourth Sunday morning in September.

St. Paul, Greensboro.—Our pastor is back after being away two weeks helping in meetings. Rev. Millaway preached for him while he was gone.

Last Sunday was Membership Day at our church all members who could were requested to be present and after a good sermon by our pastor and special music by Miss Thelma Oakes and Mrs. Mooney, the roll was called. Each member presente answered to his name called by going up and giving an offering.

Our Sunday school held its annual picnic last Saturday at Kimesville Lake. It was said to be one of the best picnics we have had in a long time.

Plans are being made to have a Cradle Roll as we have so many babies in our Sunday school. Mrs. Fred Jones will be in charge. We are expecting little Fred, Jr., to be the first to join.

We were glad to have Mrs. Andrews and Mrs. Stewart, both sisters of Brother Millaway, with us last Sunday at the 11 o'clock service and also visitors from Julian church. And Mr. and Mrs. Willard Wade of Covington, Kentucky, were visitors two weeks ago Sunday. Mr. Wade taught the young men's class for Mr. Yates. He was one time the teacher of this class before going to Kentucky.

The Ladies' Aid society will meet next Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. J. H. May. All members are urged to be present.

MRS. J. S. WADE, Reporter.

Roberta Charge. — Rev. R. S. Troxler of Lexington assisted our pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams in our revival which was held for two weeks, beginning July 23 and closing August 1. Rev. R. S. Troxler preached with power and conviction. Twenty persons were converted. We appreciate very much the good work Rev. Troxler did while he was with us. And we invite him to come to our church any time he can.

The Young Men's Sunday school class fostered a supper on the parsonage lawn. Every one present had a nice time and $14.15 was made. This money was disposed of in the following manner, $8.10 was paid on pastor's salary and $6.05 on church indebtedness.

The Christian Endeavor society is progressing nicely with Miss Lillian Blackwelder as president, Clara Linker, vice-president; Betty Love as secretary-treasurer; and Mrs. Omey Penninger as sponsor. A very interesting progam was rendered Sunday night, September 3, with Fred Furr in charge. The topic was "Public Opinion and How It Is Formed." The society will have a social gathering on Saturday night, September 9.

The Lord's Supper was observed at our church last Sunday and our pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams delivered an appropriate sermon.

MRS. OMEY PENNINGER, Reporter.

Baltimore, West Forsyth.—Our pastor, Rev. C. B. Way, at 11:00 o'clock this morning preached an interesting and inspiring sermon using as a Scripture lesson Ps. 37:1-19, and as a text Ps. 17:15.

We are not satisfied without completeness and there is no completeness except in Christ, were some of the thoughts brought out.

The Sunday school is doing very well perhaps a little better than usual at this time of the year.

The Ladies' Auxiliary met August 19 with Mrs. Lula Jennings, they are doing good work.

The C. E. society is having regular meetings each Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. We have good meeting and hope to do much good.

Rev. John W. Doub who has been a life-long Sunday school worker and for 50 years superintendent of the Sunday school at Baltimore, is seriously ill at this time, we are sorry to note.

May the blessings of God be with us all.

JOHN H. BLACKBURN.

Kannapolis.—It is impossible for us to express in words the thanks and appreciation to Rev. Bowman for the interest he shown and the work that was accomplished in the ten-day Daily Vacation Bible school which came to a close Friday, September 1. At which time a splendid program was given each class putting on a short lesson and showing their daily work. We feel this to be a great help to our children and we trust that we might long be remembered in Rev. Bowman's prayers and he was indeed a blessing to us in starting in to our revival. We are indeed thankful to our Master for sending him our way. We also appreciate the interest and help of all the teachers and their helpers for the things in which the children will be able to accomplish through them will be long remembered. Mrs. C. B. McCommons was teacher of the Beginners, with Mrs. M. E. Marlow assistant. The control they had over the 27 little ones was remarkable.

Mrs. Kiser was teacher of the Primary class with Miss Katherine Hampton assistant, and they did some fine work. Rev. W. M. Howard of Spencer, N. C. M. P. church and Rev. Clarence P. Morris, our own pastor, were teachers of the Junior class, with Miss Nellie Reidling and Miss Beatrice Cartner as assistants. They did some splendid chart work and made an inspiring sand table besides helping the Intermediates to complete 47 pillow cases which were for the Children's Home in High Point. The Intermediates were taught by Rev. Bowman with Miss Zula as assistant they did some beautiful work making the pillow cases; also 15 towels and six wash cloths for the Children's Home. They made some pin and ash trays, match trays and moldings of plaster of Paris of Abraham Lincoln and other favorites. It came to a close with 96 on roll and 76 receiving certificates. We are really proud of our boys and girls.

We are in a series of revival services at this writing. We are indeed fortunate in securing Rev. G. W. Vick of Calvary M. E. church, Charlotte, N. C., to do the preaching. We are really having a revival. There are people coming from far and near to the realization that the country needs God and need Him now. There is the deepest conviction on the people of this town now that has been in years. The meeting has run for the past 18 days and there has been nearly one hundred converted and approximately 30 have given their names for membership in our church. Help us to pray for these that they might hold on to God and others might be won for the Master ere the meeting comes to a close. We are having the pleasure of welcoming visitors from every direction to the services. We were happy to have with us last week our former pastor, Rev. C. I. Smith and Mrs. Smith of Mebane, N. C. Trust they received a great blessing by worshiping with us. We also had Rev. Jim Green of Greensboro and splendid quartette from his school to sing for us on last week. We are just glad to have you all come and feel free. We feel the Spirit is working in Kannapolis people are being saved all hours of the night and day; not alone at the church but in the homes and on the street. The spirit works in mysterious ways. If you will only let the Spirit guide, you will straighten those neighbor misunderstandings, for it is really happening here. Those of you that miss the meetings are missing some great spiritual food. We have a little theme song. We sing, "And I believe every Christian prays it hourly" each night.

"Send a great revival in my soul,
Send a great revival in my soul;
Let the Holy Spirit come and take control,
And send a great revival in my soul."

People, please pray for us for we need your prayers. There are more; yes, more, out of the ark of safety. Pray for us and we will remember you.

We are glad to welcome you at any time. Come one, come all, and come praying for your presence and prayers will help us to tear down the walls of Satan and build our foundation on solid ground and help the Master to rejoice in the efforts put forth for the advancement of His kingdom.

Pray for us people, we need you.

MRS. X. E. G., Reporter.

Lexington, State Street.—Since the last report from State Street church many things have been achieved. Some goals have been reached and some hopes realized. There are many other goals and hopes still to be attained, however, and we are still striving.

The circles of the Woman's Auxiliary met Monday afternoon and Monday evening in interesting and enthusiastic sessions. During the business period of the meetings ways and means for earning money and for broader service in various ways were discussed and some plans made to be tried out in the future.

The August dinner was served in the church dining room on the second Saturday evening in August.

A very creditable sum was cleared at this dinner and we have made quite a bit of money selling hosiery and articles of interest and use to home-makers.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Harris

A wide circle of friends of the family of Dr. F. R. Harris of Henderson, N. C., will be grieved to learn that he is no longer in the flesh. He passed to his eternal reward on Sunday, August 27, after more than three years of declining health and three weeks of critical illness.

Dr. Harris is survived by his wife, who before her marriage was Miss Carey Page; three daughters, Miss Agnes Reese Harris Mrs. W. H. Boyd, and Mrs. R. M. Owen; one son, W. Page Harris; two older brothers, George B., and S. R. Harris; and a large circle of other relatives and friends.

The funeral service was conducted from the Henderson Methodist Protestant church Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock by the pastor, assisted by Rev. D. E. Earnhardt, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church South. Interment was in the Elmwood cemetery.

Dr. Harris was born in Granville county September 25, 1859, but had spent most of his long and useful life in Vance county, residing in the city of Henderson. Had he lived until the 25th of this month he would have been 74 years of age, and yet, he was so active in his church and interested in the affairs of everyday life that we did not think of him as an old man.

Dr. Harris had lived in Henderson for 50 years or more since he began the practice of medicine. He received his medical training at the University of Virginia and the University of Pennsylvania. In addition to his private practice he served a number of years as health officer of his county, and for many years was a member of the state board of health. He gave special study to eugenics and his lectures on that subject gave him national contacts.

He was a prominent member of a number of fraternal organizations including membership in and was high priest of the Henderson Chapter 74 Royal Arch Masons. He had been a director of the Citizens Bank and Trust company for 28 years, besides taking an active interest in other civic and business affairs of the community.

The members of the Methodist Protestant church are perhaps more interested in Dr. Harris' relationship to the church and his activities in her behalf. Fifty years ago, under the pastorate of Rev. J. P. Simpson and during the presidency of Rev. J. R. Ball, Dr. Harris united with the Henderson Methodist Protestant church. During all these years he has taken an active interest in the work of the local church, giving generously of his talent, time and money. Only a month before his death, although physically weak, he occupied his place in the choir at the morning service.

His interest in the church of course extended beyond the local church. For a numbers of years and until his death he was a member of the Board of Governors of the Westminster Theological Seminary, a member of the North Carolina Denominational Board of Education, serving for some years as chairman, a member of the conference Board of Managers of the Superannuated Fund Society, and a member of the Board of Trustees of the Children's Home, was at least once a member of the General Conference. He was ever a sane and wise adviser and strong supporter of his pastor.

One who has known him for a long time said that he had lived a long life of usefulness to rich and poor alike, and that, as a physician, he was never too tired to answer the call of distress, nor was his going contingent upon his likes and dislikes or the prospect of reward.

The description that Saint Paul gave of his own career would apply in many particulars to Dr. Harris. Truly he fought a good fight, finished his course, and kept the faith, and doubt not, has received the crown of righteousness.

His loved ones are comforted in the knowledge that he lived his life well and has now gone to a well merited reward. May the Christian faith sustain them in their bereavement.

DR. FLETCHER R. HARRIS

A man of thought,
A man of deed,
He waited not
For others' lead.

When duty called
He heard her voice.
To help the weak
Was e'er his choice.

Quite full of care
His busy life
Had little place
For scenes of strife.

He was esteemed
By many friends—
All those he helped
To nobler ends.

Keep Your Mind Flexible

To learn to bend with the storm and let it pass safely over your head may require long study and application, but it is worthwhile. To bend readily is as difficult as to acknowledge frankly when you are in the wrong. Flexibility means to hold not too rigidly to your own opinions, but to give others a chance to express their views. A flexible disposition keeps the mind healthy and receptive, wins friends, placates enemies, and saves one from many of the shocks and jars of daily life. Do not fret yourself unduly if your friend fails to meet his obligations to you promptly. Do not quickly condemn another because he does you an injustice. Waste no time in anger or in tears because you have been misunderstood or maligned. Cultivate flexibility. —Grenville Kleiser.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

In view of circumstances as they exist we feel that almost miraculous accomplishments have in a measure repaid Dr. and Mrs. Maier for their untiring and efficient leadership among us.

The September dinner will be served Saturday night of this week in the church dining room. Luncheon will also be served to all who desire. Since the change of working hours, some find it convenient to eat the noonday meal with us but cannot come for the evening meal, so both meals are served.

Last Tuesday afternoon a Sunday school picnic was to have been held on Shiloh church grounds but owing to rainy weather it was held in the basement of the church here at home.

All present enjoyed a period of fun and fellowship and a bountiful spread of good things to eat.

In a recent report from our church an error made the amount raised by the auxiliary during the month of July read $389.00. We wish this were true, but it is $300.00 too much in fact. Eighty-nine dollars really was raised which we feel like was an encouraging amount for an extremely hot month.

* Subsidy paid in full.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

In the article last week, "An Enjoyable Vacation," I inended saying "Brother Bates came in for his share in making the fellowship fine and the trips enjoyable," instead of Brother Casto. You will notice that the latter name had just been used in connection with it. If I did the thing, I apologize, if the printer, please make the correction. Thank you!

HRA

We Do Our Part

(With apologies, if any are needed, to the NRA)

HRA stands for HERALD RECOVERY ACTION. It will take action if it recovers, for it is desperately sick—has been for the past five or six years, but more especially during the past two years. But if the success of the NRA depends upon the individual citizen doing his part, if that alone will make for a return of prosperity, as those leading the movement assure us is the fact, does not the same thing apply to the HERALD? Some have done their part—they have subscribed, or paid toward the Subsidy, or helped raise their quota. But the thing lags because so many haven't done their part. I sent out 35 letters with self-addressed reply cards. I have heard from fifteen. "Herald Helpers." Will you help? And whether you received a letter or not, you can do your part. Send in your subscription for the HERALD, help raise your Subsidy Fund, get busy with the Subscription Quota. Come on, folks, let's get behind and push.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION THANK-OFFERING PROGRAM

The program for the fall thank-offering will appear in the September issue of the Missionary Record. We are not only anxious that all North Carolina Auxiliaries will observe the Fall Thank-Offering, but we are eager to have the specially prepared program presented in all our churches. The play prepared for this program has for its theme Christian Education in its many aspects. The message of Christian Education is portrayed vividly through the four scenes, three interludes and one postlude of the play. "All in a Day's Work," is the title; the leading character is Dr. George Bernard Paton, a clergyman in an average church. In the four scenes and postlude we follow a typical minister through the routine of a busy day. The play opens with a breakfast room scene and closes at the end of the same day in the Paton living room. During the day, we see the minister in his family worship; he receives a visitor from the country church; his wife, his son and two laymen visit him in his study. In the afternoon we follow him in his calling program when he calls in the home of Mrs. Lancaster who enjoys being sick. Mrs. Shoemaker, the talkative preceded Dr. Paton in the Lancaster home. That night, we see the minister in a church official board meeting. Mrs. Harry Adams Walker, the woman who wants the others to do it, helps to tell the story. Mr. Latham, the financier and Mr. Howe who lives in the objective case are real problems in the church. Mrs. Shoemaker, the talkative provides a bit of humor. Mr. Morgan, the salt of the earth, contributes much to the climax as does also Mrs. Mather, the President of the Woman's Auxiliary. Mrs. Paton and her three children assist greatly in proclaiming the cause of Christian Education. Everyone will love Mr. Jackson from the country appointment.

The time is the present and few indeed will be the ministers who do not see in the play many of their own church problems. We believe it will not only help us in our thank-offering observance, but that it will help to purify many of our churches.

I trust that the play may be given as a unit in all of our churches, but those who feel that a program of an hour and fifteen minutes will be too long, a part of the play may be presented. The second scene may be presented as a one-act play or it may may be combined with the last scene and postlude. The third and fourth scenes may be given together with the postlude. The first and second scenes may be combined for one program. Churches may or may not use the interludes.

The major character is Dr. Paton. If there is not a layman to take this part, we suggest that the minister on the charge memorize this part and take it each time the play is presented in any of his churches.

Of course, we are eager that all of our churches will enter into the spirti of the thank-offering. No extra material will be needed for your program. The family worship of the Paton family will provide for the worship element of your program. The interludes; being music, will make it unnecessary for additional songs; the thank-offering idea is carried forward in the first scene.

I trust all of our churches may enjoy the program, and that it may meet a real need in many of our churches.

Improving the Services of Worship

If worship is to be vital in the future, there are some improvements which must be made. In making an evaluation of the content and procedure of public worship one finds there are many things which are needed.

First, the people and ministers need to be trained to understand the content and procedure of worship. There needs to be a closer connection between the church and the church school. In the church school the students need to learn how to worship. They need to come to a new appreciation of the worship experience. The church school may meet this need by taking seriously its opportunity to put on worship programs. These services should be real. It may help also by training the pupils to understand the better type of materials which are used in the worship services. In the church school an appreciation for stillness and silence should be cultivated.

Ministers need to come to a better understanding of the art of worship. They should come to a clear understanding of the people in their parish. From these needs and wishes they should start building their worship services.

Second, our churches must be arranged in such a way that they will be conducive to worship. We have become too practical-minded in planning our church buildings. Two things usually determine what kind of building will be erected—the building which will hold as large a crowd as possible and at the same time be as cheap as possible. There is something of more importance which should be taken into consideration as buildings are erected in the future. As Lindley suggests, "'every visible object of the sanctuary should point to religious values. The elements of the church interior are to make one feel that God rather than man is to be glorified." (Human Nature and the Church, p. 69).

Third, in Methodist churches there is a need for better form in the order of service. However, I do not suggest that we use form to the neglect of religious experience. The sermon should not be stressed less, but the other elements of service need to be stressed more. They also need to be selected and placed in the place where they fit best. Our people need to be led into the habit of following these services with more freedom and ease. They need to see that through the dignity of the service their worship experience will be deepened.

Fourth, I believe with Ross "that the worship of the future will be effective only as the hearts of the people are turned once again to the cross of our Lord and Saviour Jsus Christ.

"The thinness and inadequacy of public worship which all of us have felt is not unconnected with the chilling influences of rationalistic ways of thought, with a verbalist neo-literalist emphasis on Jesus' teaching and example, with sociological and psychological interpretations that obscure the vital center of the Christian faith. That vital center—alike as ground of salvation and of ethical stimulus—from the first has been Christ's death and resurrection, and the church's sense of infinite obligation to the Son of God in death and glory." (Christian Worship and Its Future, p. 109).

"Lord, Teach Us To Pray"

Before we can really pray we must feel the need of prayer, and our needs will drive us to our knees. Jude said, "Praying in the Holy Ghost" so the Holy Spirit reveals our needs, then the natural thing will follow. "Lord, teach us to pray."' The disciples had been with Christ, and seen Him pray. They had learned to understand something of the connection between His wondrous life in public and His secret life in prayer. They had learned to believe in Him as a master in the art of prayer. None could pray like Him. That's why they came to Christ one day after He had led a prayer and it was so wonderful they said, "Lord, teach us to pray."' The hour is left out. They wanted to pray, not say words, for they felt the need of prayer.

What is more essential to a Christian than to know how to pray and get these prayers answered? Jesus had much to say about prayer, and taught His disciples to pray, but as far as I know Jesus did not gather His disciples to teach them to preach, as important as that was, but Jesus knew if a person could pray and God would honor him, preaching would take care of itself. So we grow in the Christian life in proportion to our prayer life, and as we grow in the Christian life, the thought and the faith of the beloved Master, in his never failing intercession, becomes ever more precious, and the hope of being like Christ in His intercession gains an attractiveness before unknown. And as we see Him pray, and remember that there is none who can pray like Him and none who can teach like Him, we feel the petition of the disciples, "Lord, teach us to pray," is just what we need. And as we think how all He is and has, how He Himself is our very own, how He is Himself our life, we feel assured that we have but to ask and He will be delighted to take us up into closer fellowship with Himself and teach us to pray even as He prays.

DON'T GIVE UP!

By Grenville Kleiser

However hard the task, or rough the road, or dark the outlook, don't give up. To the man of courage, difficulties serve to stimulate and enlist the highest efforts of which he is capable. Your physical and mental powers grow best in the exercise of useful work.

If discouragement assails you, don't give up. Direct your mind to uplifting and constructive thoughts. Soon your depression will dissolve into nothingness. The best time to annihilate worry is when it first appears. Strike quickly and the victory is yours. Health and happiness are primarily mental. Repeated right thoughts will produce right conditions in your life.

If debt threatens you, don't give up. Make a definite plan to discharge it even by small degrees. Look at it courageously and determine to rid yourself of it and hereafter to keep free from debt. Economize in every possible way. Keep a stout heart, work diligently, have a clear goal before you, and bend every energy towards the desired achievement. Courage kills despair.

If failure stares you in the face, don't give up. Work on with greater zeal. The valiant man recognizes no such thing as failure. He regards mistakes and misfortunes as practical lessons in self-discipline. Successful men have often used seeming failures as stepping stones to better things. Remember that right effort, industry and earnestness ultimately bring sure reward.

If friends forsake you, don't give up. Fill well your part and let your good work speak for itself. Excuse is weakness. Do not blame others for your mistakes. Cultivate a fine sense of independence that will sustain you in the midst of disaster. Be greater to yourself than you are to other men. Let your first aim be to merit your own respect.

If loss confronts you, don't give up. Others have lost before, and have turned the experience to profitable account. Prove the greatness of the qualities within you by new and enthusiastic effort. Right where you are at this moment is the place to begin again and to translate your good desires into actual deeds. Never before have you had so many fine opportunities and incentives for really great achievement.

If sickness smites you, don't give up. Take all available means to get well and have faith that you will be well. A beneficent power co-operates with you when you think constructively and optimistically. Gratitude is a healing power. Cheerfulness and right living are vital elements of good health. Right thinking is a great creative force with which to build a sane and healthy life.

If sorrow overtakes you, don't give up. Rise above it. Patience and self-sacrifice are often necessary to meet the responsibilities and difficulties that beset the daily path. Properly developed patience and perseverance will help you to meet the emergencies of life. The practical value of your beliefs and principles may be suddenly put to the test. Be ready for such occasions by developing nobility and sturdiness of character.

If life seems hard and all the world set against you, don't give up. If you lose your money, your job, your friends, your material possessions, don't give up . Start in again, with head erect, clear vision, and bulldog determination. Rouse yourself—take a new hold on life. No matter what happens, DON'T GIVE UP!

ARE THEY FOOLS, OR CRIMINALS?

It is not an easy matter to decide why a person does the things he does. The same thing is true of a group of persons. Nor is it easy to estimate the moral or the intellectual value of these actions.

It is easy to say of a certain man:: He acts like a fool. Or of a group of men: They act like a bunch of idiots. Or of a group of office-holders: Their conduct of affairs is nothing short of criminal. Insanity, the mob spirit, the psychology of the herd, the desire for gain, the itch for office, resentment against hardships and misfortunes—these are some of the things that greatly influence the conduct of various sorts of people.

I.

The armament industry. The League of Nations, after adequate investigation, has reported concerning armament firms in various countries, that:

1. They have fomented war scares.
2. They have attempted to bribe government officials.
3. They have spread false reports concerning military and naval programs of foreign countries in order to stimulate armament expenditures.
4. They have sought to influence public opinion through control of the press.

Beverly Nichols, in the magazine section of the Washington Sunday Star, tells of a visit to munition plants in England. One of those plants sells munitions to fourteen governments, two of which were at the time engaged in war with each other. Arms are sold that are used against the British government. An overseer told Mr. Nichols: "We don't care who's having a whack at whom, providing we get the order!" He found the same things going on in the armament factories in France. Such acts of citizens certainly look like the acts of criminals. And permitting such business, by the government, has all the appearance of the procedure of fools.

II.

The scarlet army. George H. Dern, secretary of war, recently gave an address before the United States Flag Association. He expressed much concern because of the prevalence of many sorts of crime in this country—murder, kidnaping, racketeering, robbing banks, and other deeds of violence. He characterizes this large group of lawless people as "a scarlet army of crime in the United States invading the domestic tranquillity of our people, invading the security of our homes, and confiscating our property." He calls for the creation of "a strong public sentiment for the enforcement of law, a public sentiment that will give our law enforcement officers the support they need but are not now getting.'' No one can doubt that this scarlet army—estimated at 400,000 persons, three times the standing army of the government—is a serious menace.

President Roosevelt admits to a personal concern over the crime situation, and has made appointments looking toward fighting the evil.

Now, it is notable that neither Secretary Dern, nor any other person having part on the Flag Association program, had a word to say concerning the traffic in intoxicants as a means of breeding criminals and increasing crime. You would think, from what proceeds from the White House, that neither the president nor his official advisers realizes that booze is a chief source of police and official corruption and disregard of law.

On the contrary, there go out from the White House and the president's chief spokesman on these matters, Post-Master-General Farley, repeated urgings for repeal action in the south. Revenues from beer are gloated over. And administration hands are held out graspingly for the increased amounts of revenue to come in when the eighteenth amendment is definitely out of the Constitution. The budget will be balanced, taxes on large incomes will be lightened, and prosperity will be advanced. So they say!

III.

The Wisdom of Abraham Lincoln. What attitude is the sensible, reasonable, everyday person to take toward these matters? We are probably scheduled for a considerable period of depression and discouragement before coming out onto a comfortable stretch of level going in this war against criminals, in procuring adequate law observance, and in securing effective temperance legislation.

It will do us no good to complain against the usual knocking and sneering at ''dry'' operations and failures. Doubtless we deserve much of it. We shall be wise if we re-examine our foundations, our principles, our spirit, our methods. It will be well if, at the same time, we examine and readjust our leadership. It may make us feel badly—but it will be to our advantage—to admit that in the days of triumph when prohibition went over, some of our folks used ''ballyhoo'' and ''baloney'' with much the same gusto as the opposition are doing now. (Will the south make a better showing later on than have the states that have already expressed themselves on repeal?)

That sort of self-discipline should prepare us for a better and a more permanently successful advance.

Abraham Lincoln's mind was steady and wise in its methods of procedure. He said: ''You may fool some of the people all of the time, and all of the people some of the time; but you can't fool all the people all the time.'' Hard study, straight thinking, discriminating choosing, and persistence in following the right should guard us against being either fools or criminals.

LUTHER K. LONG.

Mark the perfect man and behold the upright. For the end of that man is peace.''—Ps. 37:15.

WHERE DID HE GET THAT LAW?

A lawyer of eminence and talents, but who was notoriously profane, had a servant at whom his neighbors used to hear him swear with awful violence. One day this gentleman met a Christian, who was also a lawyer, and he said to him, ''I wish, sir, to examine the Christian religion. What books would you advise me to read on the evidences of Christianity?''

His friend, surprised at the inquiry, replied, ''That is a question, sir, which you ought to have settled long ago. You ought not to have put off a subject so important to this late period in life.''

''It is too late,'' said the inquirer; ''I never knew much about it, but I always supposed that Christianity was rejected by the great majority of learned men. I intend, however, now to examine the subject thoroughly myself. I have upon me, as my physician says, a mortal disease, under which I may live a year and a half or two years, but probably not longer. What books, sir, would you advise me to read?''

''The Bible.''

''I believe you don't understand me,'' resumed the unbeliever, surprised in his turn; ''I wish to investigate the truth of the Bible.''

''I would advise you, sir,'' repeated the Christian, ''to read the Bible, and I will give you my reasons. Most infidels are very ignorant of the Scriptures. Now, to reason on any subject with correctness we must undehstand the matter about which we reason. In the next place, I consider the internal evidence of the truth of the Scriptures stronger than external.''

''And where shall I begin?'' inquired the unbeliever. ''At the New Testament?'' ''No,'' replied the Christian, ''at the beginning, Genesis.''

The man went home and began the serious study of the Scriptures. He applied all his strong and well-disciplined powers of mind to the Bible, to try rigidly, but impartially, its truth.

One evening the Christian called, found the unbeliever walking the room with a dejected look, his mind apparently absorbed in thought. He continued, not noticing that anyone had come in, busily to trace and retrace his steps. The Christian at length spoke:

''You seem, sir,'' said he, ''to be in deep study. Of what are you thinking?''

''I have been reading,'' replied the infidel, ''the moral law.''

''Well, what do you think of it?''

''I will tell you what I used to think,'' said the infidel. ''I supposed that Moses was a leader of a horde of banditti; that, having a strong mind, he had acquired great influence over a superstitious people, and that on Mt. Sinai he played off some sort of fireworks, to the amazement of his ignorant followers, who imagined, in their mingled fear and superstition, that the exhibition was supernatural.''

''But what do you think now?'' interposed the Christian.

''I have been looking,'' said the infidel, ''into the nature of that law. I have been trying to see whether I can add anything to it, or take anything away from it, so as to make it better. "Sir, I cannot. It is perfect."

"The first commandment," continued he, "directs us to make the Creator the object of our supreme love and reverence. That is right. If He be our Creator, Preserver, and great Benefactor, we ought to treat Him, and none other, as such. The third forbids profanity. The fourth fixes a time for religious worship; and if there be a God. He ought surely to be worshiped. It is proper that some time should be set apart for that purpose, when all may worship Him harmoniously and without interruption. One day in seven is certainly not too much, and I do not know that it is too little. The fifth defines the peculiar duties arising from family relations. Injuries to our neighbors are then classified by the moral law. They are divided as offences against life, chastity, property and character. And," said he, applying a legal idea with legal acuteness, "I notice that the greatest offence in each class is strictly forbidden. Thus the greatest injury to life is murder; to chastity, adultery; to property, theft; to character, perjury. Now, the greater offence must include the less of the same kind. Murder must include every injury to life; adultery, every injury to purity; and so of the rest. And the moral code is closed and perfected by a command forbidding every improper desire in regard to our neighbors."

"I have been thinking," he proceeded, "where did Moses get that law? I have read history: the Egyptians and the adjacent nations were idolaters; so were the Greeks and the Romans; and the wisest and best Greeks or Romans never gave a code of morals like this. Where did Moses get this law which surpasses the wisdom and philosophy of the most enlightened ages? He lived at a period comparatively barbarous, but he has given a law in which the learning and sagacity of all subsequent time cannot detect a flaw. Where did he get it? He could not have soared so high above his age as to have devised it himself. I am satisfied where he obtained it. It came down from heaven. I am convinced of the truth of the Bible."—From Full Gospel Advocate.

HOW LITTLE IT COSTS

How little it costs if we give it thought
  To make happy some hearts each day,
Just one kind word or tender smile,
  As we go on our daily way;
Perchance a look will suffice to clear
  The gloom from a neighbor's face,
And the press of a hand in sympathy
  A sorrowful tear efface.

One walks in sunlight, another goes
  All weary in the shade;
One treads a path that is fair and smooth,
  Another must pay for aid.
It costs so little! I wonder why
  We give it so little thought,
A smile, kind words, a glance, a touch—
  What magic with them is wrought.

COME ON, BRETHREN!

Twenty-three pastors have sent in the names of their delegates up to this writing. That's about a third of the charges. And my first notice was put in THE HERALD three weeks ago. At that rate it will be some time after conference before we know who all the delegates are. Won't you please help us by sending in the information NOW. The charge, the delegates and his address on a postal—that's all and enough.

Please bear in mind the recommendation of Brother Taylor in his report as president concerning the sale of Journals. (See 1932 Conference Journal, page 29, recommendation 13.)

Please, oh, please, send in the money received from the sale of this year's Journals. I still owe almost $400 to the printers. They need the money.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

The month of September to be when special effort shall be made to raise the Annual Conference Budget. In stations, the third Sunday of that month is the time set, while in the rural churches, the month is set apart for this purpose.

October, Pay-up month

Second Sunday in October, Rally Day, Promotion in Sunday school, etc.

November 8, Annual Conference meets at Thomasville Community church.

Honor Roll of Churches

I am setting up an honor roll of those churches which pay their assessment for the A. C. B. by the middle of October. Then I shall revert to the standard fixed by the last annual conference. In the order reported to me, the churches are as follows: Shiloh church, Connelly Springs charge, L. S. Helms, pastor; Haw River church, Glen Raven charge, Rev. J. P. Pegg, pastor.

Last year there were fifty churches which reported the pastors' salaries paid in full. Of these 39 paid the assessment for superannuates, special; 33 paid their quotas for delegates' expenses to General Conference; 25 paid the assessment for HERALD deficit; 17 paid their assessment for A. C. B.; 13 paid their their assessment for W. S., and 13 paid their High Point College special. Surely we shall beat this record. Let us arm ourselves now for the victory.

It was in 1927 when the pastors' salaries reached the highest peak; the average for that year was $1,235—the average for last year was $1,042, a decrease of about 15 per cent. The amount contributed to A. C. B. that year was $10,706; the amount contributed last year was $3,755, a decrease of about 66 per cent; the amount contributed to W. S. that year was $19,891; there was contributed last year just $7,669, a decrease of about 60 per cent. If the knowledge of these facts does not disturb the poise of those who are at ease in Zion, then a dose of T.N.T.—the wrath of Jehovah—may arouse them.

No Time for Discouragement

These times call for heroism; the problems call for the efforts of heroic souls. The Lord's command to Gideon, "Let those who are fearful and afraid return to their homes," certainly applies now. Gideon had a bigger task than we have before us, but it hardly called for more heroism than the solution of the problems before the church people of today requires. The minister should not, must not surrender to discouragement. He is the leader, and if he admits defeat the battle is lost. Some of our pastors are facing most difficult situations, situations which try their souls day and night, and yet it can hardly be said that they are impossible of solution. A careful survey would likely reveal the fact that there were still some grounds for hope; therefore he should not despair.

It May Be Time to Change Our Methods

If our present methods in handling the finances of the church do not bring the desired returns, why not change a bit and try other methods. If the present appeal does not get the people out to hear the message, why not try a new method in appeal. I am not calling for a new message, if the old one is true—it may not be. We may have been ringing the changes on the non-essentials, emphasizing the obvious. That may be the reason the people weary of us. It is a time for self-examination of both pastor and people. It is hardly possible that most of us preachers are without serious faults which may account for our own failures. This is no accusation, it is only a statement, that even a preacher is not fallible either in judgment or conduct. And even the most gifted preacher might improve his appeal after prayerful consideration of his methods of work.

Orange Charge, Rev. B. M. Williams, Pastor

I visited Chestnut Ridge and Hebron churches on this charge, having visited the other churches earlier in the year. We had the usual congregations at the "Ridge" and they kindly heard my message. Afterward a start was made on the A. C. B. Pastor felt that the total amount assessed here might be raised by Conference. The responses were ready and liberal.

This is one of our numerically strong rural churches; a church which, if developed, would be a joy to its members, a delight to the Annual Conference. I understood from some of the stewards that only a small number of the members have any part in the activities of the church. This is doubtless true of many of our churches in both country and town. It is a challenge to us to find a way to enlist all such church folks in the work of the Kingdom.

I was at Hebron in the afternoon. Here is a fine group of young people. When I served the church, my recollection is that there were but few young people in the congregation, but all that has changed; the work of the church is largely in hands of youth here and they appear to be making a good job of it. When the A. C. B. was presented, those present subscribed liberally about two-thirds of the amount, and then a majority of the members stood as pledging to see that the entire amount is paid. That was fine. It was indeed a delight to see them in action. It as a joy to visit this church and to speak to them about the work of the conference.

I was pastor of this group of churches for a few months many years ago and shall ever remember most pleasantly the work of those months. And I was glad to renew many of the acquaintances of those years.

SPIRITUAL AXIOMS

A child of God has the nature of his Father, because he is born again.

He loves everything that his Father loves.

He hates everything that his Father hates.

He will make no excuse for sin, for it is hostile to his Father.

He will make no argument to have sin remain in him.

He wants to be like Jesus, his Elder Brother.

He will never oppose being holy.

He will wish he could be holy even if he cannot believe it his privilege.

He will never take the same side of the sin question that Satan takes.

It is as natural for him to desire holiness as it is for a babe to want milk.—Publisher Unknown.

REVERENCE AND ENCOURAGEMENT

No man can realize the presence of God, or read aright of the disclosure of His will concerning the course of the world, without realizing his own littleness and without being inspired to reverence. To such an attitude God ever responds by coming closer and speaking yet more plainly.

The assurance He gave to the Prophet that from the beginning his prayer had been heard, and that he had been chosen as a messenger to His people, is full of encouragement alike to him and to us. It declares that although God's ways may sometimes seem to be slow and His methods circuitous, in reality they are entirely direct.—Dr. Stuart Holden.

PERRY'S OBEDIENCE

Someone had given Perry a big box of candy, and because it was his birthday mother had allowed him to eat several pieces one after another, which was more than he had ever eaten at one time before. When he had had quite enough, mother bade him close the box and put it aside.

"Oh, just one more, mother!" pleaded Perry, who did not feel at all as if he had had enough. "Just one more!"

"Very well, son," mother replied; but she looked grave.

The small son paused. "Will it be disobeying you, mother, if I take it now?" he asked.

Mother did not answer.

For a moment Perry studied his mother's face closely. Then he resolutely replaced the marshmallow, closed the box, and soberly laid it in her lap. "I don't want to disobey you, mother," he said, and ran away to his play.

Perry believed in obeying mother's wishes even though her words gave consent when he coaxed. Don't you think he was right?—Our Little Ones.

THE DAILY CROSS

(Luke 9:18-26)

Our Lord never bribes His disciples by promising them ways of sunny ease. He does not buy them with illicit gold. He does not put the glittering crown upon the entrance-gate, and hide the cross behind the wall. No. On the very first stage of the sacredpilgrimage there falls "the shadow of the Cross." "Let him take up his cross daily, and follow me."

And yet, the Lord's blessing is hidden in the apparent course. When we bear the cross we increase our strength. That is the heartening paradox of grace. Virtuous energies pass from our very burdens into our spirits, and thus "out of the eater comes forth meat." We bravely shoulder our load, and lo; a mystic breath visits the heart, and a strange facility attends our goings! The dead cross becomes a tree of life, and a secret vitality renews our souls.

How foolish, then, O heart of mine, to avoid and evade thy cross! Refuse the burden, and thou declinest the strength! Ignore the duty, and thou shalt feel no inspiration! Carefully husband thy blood, and thou shalt remain forever anæmic! But lose thy life, and thou shalt find it.!—J. H. Jowett.

MY NEED SUPPLIED

I dare not go the way alone
O'er rugged road and lonely vale
Through desert drear and stony steeps
For fear some evil may assail—
I need my Lord.

I dare not meet the many foes
That may beset me on life's way,
I cannot trust to my own strength,
I need One greater for my stay—
I need my Lord.

I dare not take upon myself
The task of steering o'er life's sea,
Perchance the storm, the boisterous wave
May by its force endanger me—
I need my Lord.

Yet when there comes a call for me
To pass across the treacherous tide
I will not fear the swelling stream,
For there'll be One close to my side—
'Twill be my Lord.

And when I reach that city fair
Where sin and suff'ring are unknown,
Where bright-robed angels sing the praise
Of Him who sits upon the throne,
I'll see my Lord.

THE ONLY THING HE WANTED

A little boy used always to come to his father with everything. It happened one day that the father was engaged in his study when the little boy came to him. When he heard the well known tap at the study door, his father said, "Come in," and the child entered. "Well, my little man, what do you want now?" "Nothing, Papa; I only want to be with you," and he made his way to the corner of the room, and remained quietly alone with his father. Do we go to God our Father when we don't want anything, just to be near Him? "That they should be with him." (Mark 3:14).—"One Thousand Tales Worth Telling," by Hy Pickering.

A MODERN VERSION OF AN ANCIENT PSALM

The wet politician is my boss: I shall not deny it. He maketh me to vote with drunkards and criminals. He leadeth me in the way of beer and whiskey for his party's sake. Yea though I walk with drunkards and criminals I will be in fear: for their company adds to my troubles.

He prepares crime and poverty for me before all people; my cup of anxiety and suffering runneth over.

Surly his dictations shall follow me as long as I vote for him, and if I continue to support him poverty and sorrow shall be my lot forever. E. S.

THE FATAL SLEEP

Some time ago a vessel had been off on a whaling voyage, and had been gone about three years. The father of one of the sailors had charge of the lighthouse, and he was expecting his boy to come home. It was time for the vessel to return.

One night there came up a terrible gale. The father fell asleep, and while he slept his light went out. When he awoke he looked towards the shore and saw a vessel had been wrecked. He at once went to see if he could not save some one who might still be alive. The first body that came floating towards the shore was to his great grief and surprise, the body of his own boy! He had been watching for that boy for many days. Now the boy had at last come in sight of home, and had perished because his father had let his light go out!

I thought, what an illustration of fathers and mothers today who have let their lights go out! You are not training your children for God and eternity. You do not live as though there were anything beyond this life at all. You keep your affections set upon things of the earth, instead of an on things above and the result is that children do not believe there is anything in Christianity. Perhaps the next day they may die without God and without hope.—D. L. Moody.

A WORKMAN'S PRAYER

Lord, give me strength
To do my work today;
Be Thou my constant guide
Along the rugged way.

Lord, give me faith
To conquer doubt and fear;
Help me to clearly know
That Thou art always near.

Lord, give me rest
When evening shadows fall;
And as I kneel in prayer
May I know Thee as All.

THEY LOVED HER BECAUSE—

She lived a clean, wholesome life. She turned her sorrows, troubles and disappointments into smiles that brightened the way for others.

She did not gossip.

She held the confidence of a friend a sacred trust.

She gave her inmost confidence to a very few.

She was not trying to make an impression, or to appear what she was not.

She was jolly and unpretentious.

She was conscientious in tasks entrusted to her.

She enjoyed the companionship of clean associates.

She considered religion the most practical and beautiful thing in life.

SEEING GOD IN EVERYTHING

We see God in the feathery tribe,
As they flit from tree to tree;
Remembering us our utmost pride
Should in His service be.

We see God in the roaring sea,
As from the shore we view the sight;
'Tis joy to know His servants—we
Can trust Him day and night.

We see God in beautiful trees,
As we wander through the wood;
And hear Him whisper in the breeze,
Saying to us, "Seek ye good."

We see God in the rain and snow,
As it so silently falls;
Teaching us His goodness to know,
It is God through nature calls.

We see God in the raging storm,
When the heavens seem to frown;
But through this great phenomena,
His people doth He richly crown.

We see God in the sunset cloud,
As it grows golden in the west;
A token of that glorious shroud
Which is promised to the blest.

WHAT CIGARETTES CAUSE

The evil of cigarette-smoking upon youth was again illustrated in the case of a Massachusetts schoolboy, who, although fourteen years and eight months old, is going backward in his mental developmnt and who can hardly write his own name.

The boy's case was called to the attention of the school board by his application for a certificate to enable him to go to work. He stayed away from school two weeks. Now the boy is back in the third grade of the Emerson primary school, where the average age of the other pupils is between eight and nine years.

The boy is declared by the superindent of Malden schools to be a ruined youth, a mental and physical wreck. He has a tobacco heart. His ambition is gone. He has smoked cigarettes since he was about eight years of age. He has not advanced beyond the lower grades since his entrance to school, nearly ten year ago.

"How many cigarettes do you smoke a day?" he was asked.

"Oh, sometimes a dozen," he replied, "sometimes about forty, I guess."

"Why do you smoke?"

"Can't help it; tried to stop it and can't."

"Do you know it hurts you?"

"Sure. Get a pain in my side when I run, and have to sit down and rest. Get out of breath.'

"Where do you buy them?"

"I can buy them lots of places."

"What is your teacher's name?"

Daniel thought a minute, then announced that he knew, but couldn't remember.

The boy's pulse was 100. According to his teachers he has not the slightest ambition to learn. He was given the numbers of 4, 3, 1, and 5 to add; he made the total 76.

The principal of the Emerson school said that she had taken an interest in the boy and had tried to help him, but her efforts seemed to meet with no success.—New York World.

LOVEST THOU ME?

Lovest thou Me? Ah, yes, I've heard thy boasting
Thou wouldst be strong, and truer than they all.
But I have seen thee in the hour of testing,
Have seen, alas, thy weakness and thy fall;
And, oh, how sorely I had need of thee!
Lovest thou Me?

Lovest thou Me? There is a world to conquer,
And there is need of men to dare and do;
But while the fields are ready for the harvest,
The faithful laborers are all too few.
The need of workers, is it aught to thee?
Lovest thou Me?

Lovest thou Me? Thine eyes, O Blessed Master,
Into my heart's profoundest depths can see;
See thou my weakness and my every failure,
But also see my burning love for Thee.
Help me a living sacrifice to be
Of love to Thee.

WHICH WAY?

A young girl went home from church one Sunday, full of what she had seen and heard. A day or two afterwards, when talking with her father, who was not a Godly man, she suddenly exclaimed: "Father, do you ever pray?" He did not like the question, and in a very angry manner asked her:

"Is it your mother or your aunt who has put you up to this?"

"No, Father," said the child; "the preacher said that all good people pray, and those that don't pray can't be saved. Father, do you pray?"

This was more than the father could stand, and in a rough way he said:

"Well, you and your mother and your aunt go your way and I will go mine.'

"Father," said the young creature with great simplicity, "which way are you going?"

The question pierced his heart. It flashed upon him that he was in the way of death. He started from his chair, burst into tears, and began to pray for mercy.

Which way are you going?—Unknown.

A GOOD NAME

In the school of Dr. Woods, none were allowed to enter the conservatory without permission; but a boy's handkerchief, with his name upon it, had been found there. Just at the close of school, the doctor called the name of James Howard. The whole school became silent with suspense.

"James Howard, what has he done? such a noble boy; such a good boy!" all thought. Dr. Woods himself believed he must have been sent into the conservatory by the teacher of botany; so he asked:

"James Howard, have you been in the conservatory today?"

"I have not, sir," repied James, in a clear, calm voice.

"I believe you, James," said Dr. Jones, although your handkerchief has been found there. You are not the boy to tell an untruth."

So James sat in his seat unmoved. Every boy in the school believed him, and almost envied his good name.

Dr. Woods said no more on the subject, except these word: "Let every boy learn from this incident the worth of a good name, especially when appearances are against him."

How came James' handkerchief in the conservatory? For, as I have said, it was contrary to the rules of the school for a boy to enter there unbidden. James had lent it to a boy named John Rand to tie up some nuts the day before, when they had a little ramble together. The boy forgot to return it. He also forgot the rule of the school against entering the conservatory, but seeing the door open, rushed in to look at some rare flowers. The handkerchief, being partly out of his pocket, dropped upon the floor.

See the evils of needless forgetfulness. The boy had exposed a schoolmate to censure; and, had it not been for James Howard's good name, his teacher would surely have thought him to be the offender. At least, so thought John Rand.

How ashamed he felt when Dr. Woods said those words about a good name. The words kept ringing in his ears. He had broken a rule of the school, and was afraid to own it. He thought the doctor would despise him if he knew it, and so would the boys. All the day, all that night, he had no peace. At length he went to see James. He was not afraid to tell him all about it.

"I did forget it, James, truly—honestly I did," said the boy; "but I'm afraid the doctor won't believe me, as he does you."

"Yes, he will," replied James. "You have been so short a time in school, there's some excuse for you. Go at once and own up; for the longer you put it off the harder it will be. Always own a fault at once. Don't be afraid; the doctor will forgive you."

Thus encouraged, the boy went to Dr. Woods, confessed his fault, and was forgiven; and he learned a lesson about forgetfulness which he always remembered.—Unknown.

"THE GIRL WHO LIKED TO BE COAXED"

Mary Ann liked to be coaxed. Every time mother asked her to go to the store, Mary Ann pouted and protested, and sometimes cried. Yet she really liked to go to the store, for mother nearly always gave her a nickel for her trouble.

Mary Ann loved to go riding with Uncle Bill, who had a big automobile with nice soft seats that you sank right into. Every time he asked Mary Ann to go, she pouted her lips, and pretended shy. One evening he came to Mary Ann's house and said, "I'm going into the country to see grandma tomorrow, Mary Ann. Want to come?"

Down went the head of the foolish girlie. "Please do," whispered Uncle Bill.

"Is mother coming? I don't think I want to come if mother isn't coming."

Uncle Bill looked disappointed. "No, mother isn't coming. But you're not afraid of me, are you?"

Mary Ann looked up out o fthe corner of her eye to see if Uncle Bill was going to keep on coaxing. She wanted to go out and see grandma more than anything else in the world just then, but he didn't know, so she kept on being silly, and finally Uncle Bill said, "Well, think about it tonight, and I'll be over in the morning on my way to grandma's."

He came around the next day; without leaving his car, he honked the horn. Mary Ann peeped out of the door. She had her hat and coat on. "Coming?" called Uncle Bill. Down went her head again. "I don't know."

"All right," called Uncle Bill, gaily, "good-by!" And before Mary Ann could say another word he was away down the road.

Mother found her little daughter weeping, and asked in surprise, "Why, Mary Ann, what's the matter?"

"He went away without me," sobbed the child.

"But you told him you didn't want to go," said mother, "and I won't have you crying for nothing, Mary Ann. You must stop."

Mary Ann couldn't explain that she really wanted to go, but had pretended not to, but she made up her mind that the very next time any one asked her to do something, she would say, "Yes," right away.—Pentecostal Herald.

THE PSALM OF THE ANTI-REPEALIST.

Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the preachers, nor standeth in the way of the church, nor sitteth in the seat of the righteous.

But his delight is in the counsel of the wet politician; and in his counsel doth he meditate day and night.

And he shall be like the dram drinker who stays close to the beer and whiskey joints; his thirst shall increase, and he shall finally become a drunkard.

The preachers and Christians are not so, but are like the sober, decent people of every generation who have made this country a fit place for man to live in.

Therefore, preachers and Christians shall not stand with nor vote with the wet crowd, for every one knows the way of the Christian; but the way of the wet voter is uncertain and shall finally end in the ditch.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

WHY THE EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT SHOULD NOT BE REPEALED

[This essay, submitted by Mrs. Cicero H. Jones, of Hillsboro, is given honorable mention in the North Carolina Branch contest held in the interest of retaining the Eighteenth Amendment.]

* * *

The Eighteenth Amendment should not be repealed, but enforced more and more perfectly. In the following pages I shall endeavor to give reasons justified from the different phases of human activities as to why this amendment should not be repealed.

The Eighteenth Amendment was a noble social experiment, and though it hasn't brought in every instance commendable results, the fault has not been with the law but the lack of enforcement. And these same factors are wishing for more freedom in carrying on their business by even doing away with the law of restriction.

Many of the forces favoring repeal represent purely selfish interest. Selfishness is one of the most far-reaching in its influences of any fault of human nature. It reveals itself no only in the ordinary affairs of life, but also often manifests itself in the most sacred matters and solemn moments.

Here are some of the selfish motives back of the effort to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment and bring back the liquor traffic. The brewers and distillers want the amendment repealed bacuse they can make money by manufacturing liquor. The dealers want it repealed because they can make money by selling it. Those who drink want the amendment repealed because it will enable them to gratify their appetite for drink under the protection of the law. The purveyors of vice want the amendment repealed because it will stimulate their "business."

All these motives are essentially selfish. They most assuredly are not the motives that lie back of the movement for the good of humanity.

We cannot suffer the cause of right severed for the sake of money. When times are better we can make money in an honest and honorable way. We do not as a state or nation have to stoop to low standards that would be detrimental to humanity to make money. Some may argue that we need more revenue and to legalize liquor is a good way to get it. Listen! The North Carolina revenue office has attained the honor of collecting more taxes for the government than any other one district. Do we need the revenue from the sale of liquor? No!

The Eighteenth Amendment is one of the wisest enactments ever made by any nation. With it have come good schools, good homes, and good churches.

The wet crook uses the Smiling Layman and the Cheap Lawyer to help put things over, not thinking what the results might be. Think with me a moment: suppose in 25 years we should reap a citizenship of drunkards, with the lowered physical efficiency that alcohol brings; with the increased tendency to crime, and low morals. No reasonable thinking person likes to even think of these results that always come with the habitual use of alcohol.

Let's look into the past at some authentic statistics as to the cause and effects of alcohol.

A study, made just before the Eighteenth Amendment was passed, of more than 2500 habitual users of alcohol, showed that over 66 per cent had committed crime. Of 23,581 criminals questioned, 20,070 said that alcohol had led them to commit crime.

Studies of certain families which have long been a heavy burden on the state show that alcohol is at least partly responsible for their condition. Alcohol weakens efficiency and moral courage, and thus leads to begging, pauperism, petty stealing or worse, and ultimately to life in some public institution. In Massachusetts, of 3,230 inmates of such institutions, 66 per cent were alcoholics.

Perhaps the gravest side of the alcohol question is in its relation to heredity. If each one of us had only himself to think of, the question of alcohol might not be so serious. But drinkers may hand down to their unfortunate children tendencies toward drink, as well as nervous diseases of various sorts; an alcoholic parent may beget children who are epileptic, neurotic or even insane.

In the state of New York there were in 1925 about 45,000 insane persons in public and private hospitals. It is believed that about one-fifth of them, or more than 8,000 patients, owed their insanity to alcohol used either by themselves or by their parents. In the asylums of the United States there were then nearly 240,000 insane people. Taking the same proportion as before, there were 48,000 persons in this country whom alcohol had made or had helped to make insane. (New Civic Biology, pages 216-217.)

Aside from the above evil effects of alcohol, we see in the papers almost every day accounts of the most fatal accidents of which liquor has played an important part in causing the trouble. Any person under the influence of alcohol loses physical control, therefore any one driving a car while under the influence of liquor not only endangers himself but the careful driver too. Should the eighteenth amendment be repealed we fear there would be many more drivers under the influence of alcohol.

Every one knows the effect of large doses of whiskey to people's health; it causes the person to first lose control of his judgment, then of his muscles and finaly of his senses. Then, of course, the person is not fit for any place of responsibility. There are some corporations that realize how alcohol unfits a person for responsibility and therefore will not emloy any one addicted to drink.

These with many other of the evil effects of alcohol are sufficient to show us that every well-thinking citizen should spare no effort to make this an age of temperance at any cost.

The Work Here

Our men and boys are working overtime these days getting in the hay, cutting corn, and filling the silos. The crop is much more abundant than we expected. College is opening this week and the public school next week. So a week from now nearly all our children will be in school.

Harvest Home Offering

The gathering in here reminds us that it will soon be time for the regular fall harvest home offering by the churches and the charges. Lots of canned goods will be coming, and we are asking our people to send along with the canned goods, grain of any kind, chickens, potatoes and any other produce such as is needed in any home.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Hollister.—Our revival meeting began on the fourth Sunday morning in August and closed the following Friday night. Rev. H. F. Fogleman did all the preaching during the revival with the exception of one sermon delivered by Mr. Crowell Shearin. All of Mr. Fogleman's sermons were good and inspiring. The attendance and interest was good at all of the services. There were two girls to unite with the church by conversion and several re-dedicated their lives to God.

We were very glad to have Miss Sue House to play the piano for us and to assist in the singing during the revival. Mr. Crowell Sheaerin, as director of the singing, sang a number of effective solos and helped to sing several duets and quartets in addition to directing the congregational singing. Mr. Shearin is a ministerial student in Campbell College.

We were pleased to have Rev. R. M. Andrews with us on the first Sunday evening in September. He brought to us a very interesting message on 'The Causes and Failures of Discouragements." After the sermon he presented to us the different phases of the work of the Methodist Protestant Church. As September is the month to raise the Annual Conference budget, several pledges were made at this time for this purpose.

The Woman's Auxiliary will meet on Tuesday afternoon of this week in the home of Mrs. Mae Alston. The writer will conduct the devotional service.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Creswell Charge.—Our revival season is now in the past and we can look back and evaluate the benefits derived, although, of course, time will be the test of its permanence. Additions have been greater this year than last, despite the fact that for some reason revivals have not been as successful as usual this summer in this section. Some of the larger churches around here that have been accustomed to having 50 or 60 additions had only five or six, and several had none at all. Our revival at Mt. Hermon was about the best I have heard of around here this summer. And, after all, the primary purpose of a revival is the reviving of the church. In this respect the meetings have been very satisfactory. The almost 100 per cent increase in the collection last Sunday is evidence of increated interest in the Kingdom of God. The writer remarked to one of the stewards that the people must have more money or more religion one, and he replied that there is certainly not more money around here. It was undoubtedly due to the revival in which the visiting preacher spoke plainly and emphatically of the sin of robbing God in tithes and offerings. We are hopeful that the revival may be felt throughout all of our church and individual life for many months to come.

The count of votes at the third quarterly conference disclosed that Bro. Will Blount is the people's choice for delegate to Annual Conference this year at Thomasville. Bro. Blount has represented the charge in previous years. For the past three or four years he has lived away and been unable to attend sevices often, as was his wont in years gone by. Several Sundays ago, however, he was so anxious to attend his old church that he walked nine miles down the highway, going without breakfast in order to be on time, on one of the hottest days of the summer.

We wish to give public expression of our appreciation of a geenrous pounding by the good people of Mt. Hermon church and a "canning party" put on by members of a Union Bible class which the pastor conducts on Thursday night, when they recently came together and put in a day canning 60 quarts of fruit for us, furnishing the fruit, sugar, jars and work.

Thus our gracious Heavenly Father continues to meet all of our needs according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus, and to honor and magnify His word in our midst.

J. C. RUSSELL, Pastor.

Midland.—Much has been done since our last report. Meetings have been held at all our churches with good results. Bro. Cranford did splendil work at Pine Bluff, Bro. Garner at Love's Grove, Bro. Suits at Midland. Their preaching was of a high order and the people like them. Since it was necessary for us to hold two meetings at the same time, by the consent of our loyal band at Pageland we were able to secure Bro. Hendry, of Charlotte, to hold the meeting while we were holding at another place. We have not heard the results.

We held our third quarterly conference Saturday. Bro. J. A. Jenkins, of Stanfield, was elected delegate to Annual Conference. Our quarterly conference was a pleasant as well as a profitable one. September is being made A. C. B. and other claims month. Finances are far enough behind to keep stewards fairly busy until Conference. The NRA has not helped our farmers much yet, but they are hopeful of a better day when their cotton is ready for market.

Hope, Siler City Charge.—Our pastor, Bro. Isley, filled his regular appointment for us Sunday at 11 o'clock and in his usual pleasing manner brought us a very helpful message. The Lord's Supper was administered, an unusually large number participating.

At the close of our revival four children united with the church. We are always glad to see children come into the church. We cannot foretell the possibilities of these, for, as someone has said, "When a child is saved, a life is saved." We were glad to have Rev. L. E. Mabry as pulpit help. Everyone enjoyed his sermons so much. We also enjoyed his visits in our homes. Mrs. Mabry and small son were with us for a few services. We hope these fine people will come our way again soon.

Joash Day will be observed the second Sunday in October. Every member will be given an opportunity to contribute something on the budget and will also have the privilege of designating where it shall be applied.

School has opened at Bonlee and we are pleased to have several of the teachers join our Sunday school. We certainly welcome them into our services.

Miss Blanche Routh is enteriny High Point College. She has been a faithful and efficient teacher in our Sunday school for the past year, and we shall miss her in church and Sunday school, but am gled that she can go to High Point and prepare herself for a wider and even more useful service. We also miss Mr. Raymond Johnson, who has worked so faithfully with us for the past year. He, too, has gone off to school.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held with the Siler City church on Wednesday evening following the second Sunday. This will be an important meeting and a large attendance is desired.

KARA ANDREW.

Liberty, Liberty Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. Fred R. Love, filled his appointment on the second Sunday evening. His sermon was edifying. Brother Love is so earnest, prayerful and conscientious that it makes his messages very inspiring indeed.

Our beloved Sabbath school superintendent is still so very faithful, he reminds us of the promise: "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee the crown of life."

Miss Edna Amick was leader of the Christian Endeavor Sunday evening, using as her subject, "Difference of Opinion." A talk was given by Dr. A. D. Gregg.

Now since the beautiful atumn weather is just around the corner, we are hoping to attend every mid-week prayer service.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Oliver, of Grensboro, were the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Holt on last Wednesday.

Miss Mary Bowman Shepard left Monday for High Point College. She is the youngest daughter of Mrs. F. A. Shepard and the late Dr. F. A. Shepard. Their oldest daughter, Miss Margaret Shepard, will teach home economics and biology in Liberty High School.

Miss Alta Hudson left Saturday for Salisbury to teach this winter.

Miss Nettie Stuart will teach again in the Gray's Chapel School.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Shepard and daughter, Bertine, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Holt on Tuesday.

Mrs. Wade Hardin was hostess to the Book Club Thursday afternoon. A profusion of beautiful autumn flowers lent charm to the home. Interesting papers were read on the subject of beautifying the home, after which a salad course was served by the hostess, assisted by her sister, Bertine Shepard.

The Junior Baraca Class will entertain the Junior Philathea class at the Mineral Springs Wednesday evening.

Welch Memorial Church.—I feel that I owe an apology to our pastor and the people of Welch Memorial for being so negligent in reporting what is being done in our church.

There has been some improvement done on the church this summer. The woodwork of the church and the Sunday schol rooms have been painted on the outside and work is being done on the inside of some of the rooms. Painting was done mostly by members who were not employed and cost the church a small amount, but helped the looks of the building a great deal.

Our Christian Endeavor is "still on the job." They have improved their room with new light fixtures and curtains and re-arranged it. They gave a play, "The Mystery of the Third Gable" at Helen Jay school two weeks ago and made a nice sum. They are giving it again Friday night of this week at the Industrial Workers hall. The money they raise is to help on the building fund. The membership is growing steadily.

Our Sunday school is growing too. The enrollment has passed three hundred. Especially do we want to mention the Young Men's class which has grown from twenty or twenty-five in the spring to the present enrollment of one hundred and twenty-one. They outgrew their classroom and now meet in the auditorium. L. R. Meddlin has been teacher during the summers months but leaves this week for Bellemont where he teaches in the high school. His successor has not been definitely decidede upon.

Our revival begins Sunday. Prayer meetings in the home are being held each evening of this week except Wednesday when we are to all meet at the church. We are expecting a great success from this meeting. Rev. R. S. Troxler is to be the pulpit help.

Dr. Williams has been bringing us such messages at each service that we feel the people are stirred and ready for a great revival.

Orange Charge.—President Andrews visited Chestnut Ridge and Hebron churches September 10th.

We are well pleased at the favorable response to his messages.

Hebron will pay A. C. B. in full. Chestnut Ridge paid about one-fourth of hers before we left the church. More will be paid later.

We think Union Grove and Efland will make a favorable showing on A. C. B. at their next appointments.

First Church, Lexington, and Mt. Carmel.—Although some time has elapsed since I have sent in a report, the church reporters have been keeping the Herald readers informed concerning the work on this charge.

Both the Sunday schools are making satisfactory progress, and the interest and attendance at the regular services has been kept up throughout the summer.

The revival at Mt. Carmel began the first Sunday in August with the Annual Home Coming. Judge Hoyle Sink was the speaker at the morning service, while Squire H. H. Koonts of Lexington spoke in the afternoon. Both speakers are originally from the Mt. Carmel community. The attendance was the largest known at a similar service, and the good attendance continued throughout the revival services. Special singing for the morning service was furnished by the choir of the First Church, Lexington; and in the afternoon the Canaan Men's chorus and the Male quartet of the Lexington Presbyterian church furnished special numbers.

The splendid sermons of Rev. C. L. Grant of Kernersville, the pulpit help in the meeting, were greatly enjoyed by the hearers. There were thirteen conversoins and nine accessions to the church as a result of the prayers offered and the labors put forth.

At the close of the meeting, on going to my car, I discovered that it was loaded with appropriate supplies for the pantry which were greatly appreciated by my mother and myself. These good people never fail to keep in mind the needs of the pastor.

The third quarterly conference was held Monday evening, September 11, at First church. Reports were good. First church has paid pastor's salary to date. We hope to pay all claims in full for the charge. At present there is the best prospect for meeting all financial obligations that I have seen during the time I have been on the work. The delegate to Annual Conference is Mr. G. A. Barber of Lexington First church.

We are planning to begin a revival at First church the first Sunday morning in October.

It is our hope to conclude a successful year in every phase of the work.

C. G. ISLEY, Pastor.

Dulin's, Mocksville Charge. — Our Sunday school has been well attended during the summer months. We have purchased an organ, also had the lights fixed since our last report.

The revival meeting began the third of September with Rev. J. R. Hutton of Greensboro as the pulpit help. He came Sunday night to our pastor's aid. He had already begun the meeting with two splendid sermons.

Brother J. R. Hutton preached gospel sermons throughout the week in ways we had never heard before. There was not any visible good done, although we feel as if the church was greatly warmed. We don't think that Brother Hutton's preaching was in vain. Hope he comes this way again.

We were glad to have our pastor's father-in-law, Mr. Henley, from Asheboro. Also visitors from the other church.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Kannapolis.—Our revival just came to a close on Friday, September 8. We had a wonderful meeting. Rev. G. W. Vick of Calvary M. E. church of Charlotte, assisted our pastor with the meeting. We were happy to have him; he was a former pastor of Kannapolis M. E. church, and he did some wonderful preaching. It seems that the Spirit fell in all parts of town during this revival. We realize that God can be everywhere at the same time and save souls at home or anywhere just as sincerely as He can in the church.

There were approximately 125 conversions some being reclaimed.

On Sunday morning, September 3, Rev. Morris, our pastor, assisted by Rev. R. L. Sides, exhorter, and the church had the pleasure to welcome 35 new members. The service was indeed beautiful and inspiring. The following were received on confession of faith to be baptized:

Edward Oscar Henderson, G. F. Coble, Jr., Charles Curtis Tutterow, Clyde Marshall Henedrson, Cecil McKinley Marlow, Virginia Ruth Marlow, Luna Belle Tutterow, Margie Olive Coble, Mary Ella Coble, Ollie Lucille Tilley, Lois Belle Tilley, Eunice Mae Carter, Dorothy Lorine Clampit, Macie Radis Whitter, Mrs. J. M. Tarlton, Mary Honneycutt, Ruby Mae Lee, Mrs. Clara Tilley, Mr. D. W. Tilley, Hoyle Whitley, Mr. J. L. Whitley, and Helen Cartner.

The following were received on confession of faith already baptized:

Mary Willie Donnahue, Mrs. C. T. Lentz, Mrs. D. F. Abernathy, Mr. D. F. Abernathy, Mr. R. A. Weaver, Mr. J. M. Tarlton, Hazel Acbrnathy, Billie Ross Kiser, W. T. Kiser, Jr., Hoyle Westley Dwiggins, received by letter; Mrs. J. L. Whitley, Mr. C. E. Gabriel, Mrs. C. E. Gabriel.

Infants baptized: Erma Jean Abernathy, Bobbie Eugene Steele, Martha Jean Carter, Cecil Gabriel, Jr., Doris Faynell Grayson, Dyral Hoyt Grayson, Dorothy Illene Grayson, Boyce Jean Grayson, and Phyllis Grayson.

We trust these new as well as old, members will be a blessing to the church and great workers of the building of God's Kingdom and for the tearing down of Satan's dwellings.

The Ladies' Aid Circle No. 1 met on Monday evening, September 11 at the home of Mrs. Emma Williams with ten members and one visitor. After the business was transacted refreshments weer enjoyed. They were then favored by special music by Mrs. W. T. Kiser, Mrs. C. B. Price and Mrs. Frankie Widenhouse.

Circle No. 2 met n Mnday evening, September 11 ,at the home of Mrs. L. C. Carter with 12 members present. After the business hour refreshments were served and enjoyed by all.

We are happy to have Miss Glady Morris, sister of the pastor, spend her vacation with us. Hope she enjoys her stay in our community.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Sides are singing a new lullaby. It's a daughter arrived on September 9. The little one has the title of Zelia Elizabeth.

Randolph Charge.—We have held our revival services at Mt. Zion, Mt. Pleasant, Bethel and Betahany churches on this charge. At Mt. Zion, Mt. Pleasant, and Bethel the pastor had no pulpit help. Rev. B. M. Williams was our help at Bethany. He did splendid work and all who heard him were greatly benefitted. His preaching was of a high order. This meeting resulted in ten conversions and reclamations. Four united with the church. This church is taking on new life and we feel safe in saying you will hear some encouraging news from here. The meeting named above resulted in about 50 conversions and reclamations. The pastor received many tokens of kindness during these services. At Bethel and Mt. Zion the spirit of appreciation developed into a real pounding at the close of the meetings. The pastor's car was well loaded with a variety of good things. We appreciate these gifts very much. We have one more meeting to hold. This meeting will be at Gray's Chapel the week following the fourth Sunday in September.

Liberty Hill, Andersn Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. J. L. Love, filled his regular appointment here Sunday. He preached two splendid sermons. Sunday morning Miss Elaine Harrison was received into the church and baptized. Mrs. Cecil McCimon was also received into the church by letter. we are glad indeed to have these new members.

The Ladies' Aid held its last monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. W. R. Harrison. They had a grand program on "Giving." The meeting was elsed with prayer led by Mrs. B. A. McClimon. Afterwards a tea was enjoyed. The next monthly meeting will be held with Mrs. J. K. Poole and they will use as their subject for discussion, "Concentration."

We are glad to report those from here who recently had their tonsils removed are able to be back at church. They are: Kate Poole, and Esther Compton, little Doris and Mary Alice Poole and Miles Compton.

Next Sunday night the Juniors will have charge of the Christian Endeavor. We are looking forward to an interesting program—they never fail us. Their subject will be "What the Bible Teaches Us."

We ask the prayers of all praying people that we may continue doing good for Jesus.

Bellemont Church, Mt. Hermon Charge. — Our revival meeting began the fourth Sunday in August and closed the first Sunday night in September. Our pastor, Rev. L. E. Mabry, was assisted by Rev. C. G. Isley, pastor of First Church, Lexington. We wish to report one of the greatest meetings we have ever known of in this church. There were 72 professions and a number have already united with the church. We were indeed happy to have Rev. Mr. Isley with us. Mr. Isley is formerly of this community and we have not yet discharged him. His messages were with force. The people were attentive to hear. The church moved in co-operation. Some of the largest crowds we've had in years attended these services. Mr. Isley's mother was with him and helped much in the meeting. We hope that both Mr. and Mrs. Isley will come our way again.

Orange Chapel, Saxapahaw Charge.—Our revival meeting began the third Sunday in August with a large congregation on Sunday and fair congregations throughout the week. The meeting closed the following Friday night.

The pastor did all the preaching. Brother Loy seemed at his best in his preaching and his sermons were interesting and uplifting.

While the results of the meeting were not what we had hoped for, there were several professions and four joined the church. We were very glad to have Rev. H. L. Isley, who is an ex-pastor of our church, with us for a few services.

Our Sunday school is doing the best it can with the faithful few who attend. We are hoping since the meetings and vacations are over and the visitings are over, we will now have a better Sunday school.

First Church, High Point.—The sad news of the death of Mrs. J. C. Welch this morning at 10:30 o'clock at her home, 639 N. Main St., has just been announced, and although it was not unexpected, since she had been critically ill for five weeks with a heart attack, her large circle of relatives and friends are grief-stricken. She and her late husband, Jonathan C. Welch, a prominent pioneer citizen of High Point, were charter members of First church, and were true and loyal to her every interest to the end.

Born Miss Mary Johnson on July 30, 1853 in what at present is the corporate limits of the city, she passed her 80th milestone last July 30, and the day was appropriately observed with a delightful dinner to which eight of her close friends were invited: Mesdames W. P. Pickett, H. A. Moffitt, L. J. Diffee, H. U. Oakes, J. G. Snipes, J. B. Spencer, and R. T. Pickens. Mrs. Welch had lived in High Point her entire life, and had seen the straggling village with a muddy main street grow into the up-to-date, modern city of today. Her late husband was a large owner of real estate, in the 90's he operated the largest livery stable in town, and was prominent in the upbuilding of this city, having served several terms on the Board of Aldermen. Mrs. Welch was keenly interested in the civic and religious affairs of the town since early girlhood. She was universally loved by all classes, and possessed of an unusually sweet and amiable personality.

On December 30, 1884, she and Mr. Jonathan C. Welch were united in marriage, and the following daughters were born to them: Mrs. George T. Penny, Mrs. Allie M. Foister, Misses Ruth and Elizabeth Welch, and a son, J. C. Welch, Jr. Mr. Welch died July 19, 1920.

Funeral services will be held on Thursday afternoon at the First Methodist Protestant church at 3 o'clock and will be conducted by her pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, assisted by Dr. George R. Brown of Reidsville, Dr. A. G. Dixon, two former pastors, and Dr. S. W. Taylor. Burial will be made in the family plot in Oakwood cemetery. The love and sympathy of very many friends go out to the sorrowing family.

West Forsyth.—Last Sunday was a very busy day for the writer. We were with the Union Hill church for the regular preaching service at 11 a. m. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was administered to the usual number who participated. One new member was received, Miss May Johnson, daughter of Mrs. Myrtie Johnson. Immediately after the service the pastor and family went to the home of Brother E. H. George, of Tabernacle church, spread on a long table erected on the lawn of the home, was the feature of the occasion, and was enjoyed by about 150 people. Among the persons present were members of Tabernacle, Pleasant Hill and Baltimore churches.

At three o'clock Sunday afternoon the writer conducted a baptismal service at the Yadkin river near the home of Brother Turner Norman, at which time the ordinance of baptism by immersion was administered to four young girls who had united with Union Hill church. Those baptized were: Blanche Ring, Martha Poindexter, May Johnson and Edith Ring.

Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of the Annual Conference, will be on West Forsyth charge next Sunday. He will preach at Pleasant Hill at 11 a. m., and Tabernacle at 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper will be administered at each church. We hope to have unusually large congregations at each place.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

L. T. S. CLUBS

If we folks are going to really take seriously our High Point College Leadership Training School, now is the time to begin to plan for the 1934 enrollment. Until we in the Old North State can boast an enrollment of 200 we have not begun yet to solve our problem of leadership training. L. T. S. clubs will greatly help to boost the enrollment. Did you know that out of the 109 enrolled at the last school at the college that 22 of these came from two churches where they had L. T. S. clubs? Organize now and begin to boost the spirit of leadership training. I stand ready at any time to give you any help that I can.

MARRIED

Grubb-Hedrick

On Sunday morning, September 3, at the parsonage of the First Methodist Protestant Church, Lexington, Miss Racie Pearline Hedrick and Mr. Irvin Frederick Grubb were united in marriage, the writer officiating. A few close friends witnessed the ceremony.

The bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Hedrick of Route 5, Lexington. She was educated at Reeds high school and is very popular in her community. Mrs. Grubb is also interested in religious work being a faithful member of Mt. Carmel Methodist Protestant church.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Grubb also of Lexington, Route 5, and is a prosperous and popular young farmer. He received his education at Churchland high school.

We wish for Mr. and Mrs. Grubb a long, prosperous and happy married life.

WHAT TO DO

If you're feeling tired and blue
And you don't know what to do,
Do nothin'.
If your appetite's not right,
And your waistband's getting tight,
Stop stuffin'.

If your plans are all awry,
And you think you're goin' to cry,
Go fishin'.
If you can't see far ahead,
And wish that you were dead,
Stop wishin'.

If you know you talk too much,
And your neighbor's feelin's touch,
Stop talkin'.
If your nerves are all askew,
There is one good thing to do,
Go walkin'.

If you want to win life's race,
With a smile upon your face,
Stop shirkin'.
If you have a task to do,
And would like to get it through,
Keep workin'.

If you're runnin' into debt,
And your bills not promptly met,
Stop buyin'.
If you long to reach the top,
But are just about to stop,
Keep tryin'.

The united dry campaign for Guilford county will definitely begin Friday night, September 15, at 7:30 o'clock, in the county courthouse in Greensboro. A dry leader of statewide prominence will explain the aims of the movement. We will also determine a definite plan of campaign for our county. During the following week the dry forces of each precinct will organize for themselves in their community. Dr. J. Clyde Turner will speak on the part the churches can play in their temperance movement. We believe theirs is a very important part. Will you come and bring your Sunday school superintendents and any other citizens who will be of service?

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Koonts

Mrs. Alpha Ruth McCann Koonts died August 22 at the Davidson hospital, aged 20 years, seven months, and 28 days. She had been in ill health for twelve weeks and had been a patient at the hospital for five weeks.

The deceased was the wife of Henry L. Koonts of Lexington, a member of the First Methodist Protestant church, to whom she was married on April 1, 1932. Prior to her marriage she had made her home in Lexington for some time, but last September she and her husband moved to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McCann, where they resided till she entered the hospital on July 16.

Mrs. Koonts joined the Holloways Baptist church at the age of nine years and remained a faithful member until death. For a time she was a member of the Sunshine Quartette of the First Methodist Protestant church.

She is survived by an infant daughter, Doris Ruth, her husband, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McCann; three sisters, Mrs. J. Cliff Smith, Miss Dot McCann, and Miss Nelle McCann, and one niece, little June Smith, of Lexington.

Funeral services were conducted at Holloways Baptist church by Rev. H. T. Penry, the pastor, and the writer.

C. G. ISLEY.

Myers

Felix A. Myers, widely known and popular Lexington man, died July 8, at the home of his brother, Lee Myers, on Bullock avenue, after an illness of seven months.

The deceased was born in Lexington, a son of the late Alexander Myers and Mrs. Kate Turner Myers, and had lived here virtually all his life. He was unmarried, and had lived in recent years with his brother at whose home he passed away. Besides the brother mentioned, his mother and one sister, Mrs. J. M. Bangle of Greensboro, survive.

Brothers Myers was a faithful member of the First Methodist Protestant church. Shortly before his death he expressed himself as being ready to go.

The funeral was conducted from the First Methodist Protestant church at 2 o'clock Monday, July 10, by the pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, assisted by Rev. C. B. Way. Interment was in the city cemetery.

May God bless and comfort the sorrowing hearts. C. G. ISLEY.

Crawford

The oldest member of Orange Chapel church passed to her reward when Mrs. Emmaline Crawford died June 30. She joined the church in early life and remained a faithful member until death. She leaves to mourn their loss, four children; but to rejoice in her triumphant release.

Funeral services were held at the grave in Orange Chapel cemetery by the pastor. A fine tribute was paid to her, not only by relatives and friends attending the funeral, but by the abundance of beautiful flowers that were placed on the grave.

Live Up to a High Standard

You resolve to live up to a high standard of personal conduct. You resolve to be kind, dignified, confident, and worthy. But at the close of the day you are conscious of not having fulfilled the terms of your resolution. Upon careful examination you find that you have omitted the special act of kindness, have been timid, possibly undignified, have talked much of self, and have done little to elevate yourself in the esteem of your fellow men. Hence the importance of your daily self-examination to discover your special needs and shortcomings. To live up to a high standard requires persistent effort and vigilance. When you make a new resolution, fortify it with a still greater resolve to fulfill it. Only fulfilled resolutions are valuable. — Grenville Kleiser.

Obey the Best Impulses Within You

Keep the door of your mind resolutely closed against every undesirable, destructive, depressing thought. Rise to the majesty of your personal power. There is a great place for you which you should claim by the sovereign right of your innate worth and ability. Remember there is no altitude too high for your aim and aspiration. The great producers of the world have invariably been men of great vision, and greatness always looks upward. As you daily develop increased power you will be the better ready for increased service. True greatness is expressed in love, reverence, honor, and nobility. Obey the best impulses within you seeking expression. Resolve to act promptly and energetically. * Subsidy paid in full.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

HRA

We Do Our Part

(With apologies, if any are needed, to the NRA)

HRA stands for HERALD RECOVERY ACTION. It will take action if it recovers, for it is desperately sick—has been for the past five or six years, but more especially during the past two years. But if the success of the NRA depends upon the individual citizen doing his part, if that alone will make for a return of prosperity, as those leading the movement assure us is the fact, does not the same thing apply to the HERALD? Some have done their part they have subscribed, or paid toward the Subsidy, or helped raise their quota. But the thing lags because so many haven't done their part. I sent out 35 letters with self-addressed reply cards. I have heard from fifteen. "Herald Helpers." Will you help? And whether you received a letter or not, you can do your part. Send in your subscription for the HERALD, help raise your Subsidy Fund, get busy with the Subscription Quota. Come on, folks, let's get behind and push.

AN APPEAL FOR HELP

On November 7 North Carolina must roll up an overwhelming majority against the legalized liquor traffic. Sentiment for keeping North Carolina dry is rising like a resistless tide. However, Cale K. Burgess, campaign director of the United Dry Forces, states that his chief handicap is lack of money to conduct an effective campaign, money to pay office expenses, printing, stamps, literature, and to have workers to perfect organizations in every county and every precinct in North Carolina. Burgess is working day and night, without pay; he is confident that this fight for temperance in North Carolina can be won decisively if we will help raise sufficient cash to finance the campaign.

We must raise and forward the necessary money to campaign headquarters immediately. The cause is worthy of our support, even our sacrifice. Those of us who cannot give large amounts should contribute immediately what we can. The churches and other temperance people in North Carolina must not permit this cause to be defeated by their failure to help finance an effective campaign.

Deliver or send your money to this newspaper or direct to W. F. Marshall, treasurer, United Dry Forces, Box 1270, Raleigh.

If you can make a cash contibution now and monthly payments later, forward the cash and state what can be paid during September, October and November.

READ FOR KNOWLEDGE AND CULTURE

Be selective in your reading of daily news. You do not want a constant mental picture of the world's crime, disaster and distress. Direct your attention to the beautiful, encouraging, and ennobling. Read editorials that are constructive, informing and inspiring. Read for useful knowledge and mental culture. Do not read anything simply because you have to read something. Better sit in quiet communion with your own thoughts, with your eyes closed, than to gorge your mind with evil, calamity, tragedy, and human depravity. There are great projects, vital problems, new discoveries, and world questions which make interesting and profitable reading. Be selective in your choice of subjects.—Grenville Kleiser.

COUNCIL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

We are rapidly approaching the end of another conference year and what we do within this year must be done quickly. Let me beg the hearty co-operation of the pastors, Sunday school superintendents and Christian Endeavor secretaries in raising the apportionments of the North Carolina Council of Religious Education. Two weeks hence we hope to give a complete list of those who have paid. I trust that your society or Sunday school, as it may be, will appear in this list.

J. CLYDE AUMAN, Treasurer.

MENTAL SUNSHINE

Get your enjoyment out of life now! Liberate your joy-thoughts every day; extract constant pleasure from your work; live in mental sunshine; look for the bright aspects of life; interpret everything for the best; be an intelligent optimist; cultivate a sunny, hopeful, buoyant attitude of mind; read and commit to memory poems that encourage and inspire; cultivate good cheer and sunshine of the mind; and you will surely have "GOOD LUCK."

Our Moral Firmament

I. Storm of Wrath

A dreadful storm makes dark the east
And terrors seize both man and beast;
The thunders roll, the lightnings flash,
Destruction comes with fearful crash!

II. Sun of Righteousness

A calmer scene makes bright the sky
As Sun of Truth goes grandly by;
He drives the darkness far away,
He makes all things as bright as day.

III. Stars of Hope

The daytime passes into night,
The heavens show a beauteous sight;
For those who turned the wrong to right
Will ever shine in brilliant light!

What Women Can Do Through Organized Effort

Summer-time is over and with the beginning of fall there are many important plans to be undertaken. For our auxiliaries new plans for the work at home and abroad are to be started. First comes the observance of thank offering, this month, and the pageant written by Mrs. H. W. Maier, which appears in the September Missionary Record, is considered one of the best we have ever had. All churches are urged to use the pageant. (Additional copies may be secured from Mrs. J. W. Boyls, Thomasville, N. C.) The proceeds from the thank offering service should be sent to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, treasurer, High Point, who will send it to Mr. H. C. Staley, who will apportion it to the board of missions and Christian education according to the percentage ordered by the General Conference.

The campaign is on for the repeal of the 18th amendment. It has been said that the preachers alone will enter into the fight for the dry forces. But those who have lived through the days of the saloons and distilleries, mothers of children around whom every pressure is brought to bear to induce them to yield to the temptations of the day, cannot and will not sit idly by and let North Carolina repeal the law. May the Christian manhood and womanhood of our church give this question prayerful consideration before casting their vote November 7. Judges Johnson Hayes and E. Yates Webb, who have had more experience than any other North Carolinians in the trial of liquor cases, are not only dry but are using their spare time in working and speaking for the 18th amendment, believing its defeat would mean destruction to the young manhood and womanhood of the state.

Two of our missionaries, Miss Hodges and Dr. Lacy, have returned to Japan and India to resume the work which they left approximately two years ago on furloughs. They need our prayers and our service. Rev. and Mrs. Minnis, our North Carolina missionaries in India, have joined our other missionaries there in a most urgent appeal for more money with which to carry on. Mrs. C. W. Bates, Greensboro, is in charge of the Minnis fund in the North Carolina branch. She is recovering from an operation and needs your earnest co-operation. Our mission board asks that North Carolina support our missionaries in India.

As we begin the fall and winter programs, let us join in giving our best to the church and to the cause of Christ.

Mrs. W. C. Hammer,
President, N. C. Branch.

The Ministers in the Homes

We seem to have gotten away from the visiting preacher. The minister today calls on his members, doesn't stay long and never goes for a meal unless invited.

Well, it seems that is just what the people want and what the times demand. I have no suggestion as to how to improve on this. Both pastor and people are losing so much, but the people more especially.

The minister represents the best in life. The home, where the minister is a frequent and welcome visitor, receives far more than can be reckoned. He helps you to create a Christian atmosphere in which to train your children. He will help to enlighten you and your family concerning the church and its program.

The men and women today, who came from homes where the minister was friend as well as spiritual leader, stand out in both industrial and religious life. It is a great pity to cheat our children of the wholesome influence of our ministry. The twig grows and matures a healthy and strong-looking tree. The storms come. Some fall while the storm is not so bad and others as it increases. On examination we find some were bruised or broken when but twigs. Some were not well-grounded. Just as the tree, so the little lives that are given you.

Your minister with his spiritual life will shed into your home and into the lives of the little ones the things that will help them to grow into useful Christian men and women and be able to stand the storms of this world. The testing time is sure to come. We should be careful not to bruise or break the twigs, but rather enrich the ground that they may grow strong in the faith and be able to stand the test.

One way to do this is to throw open our doors to the real minister of God.

Mrs. N.

POINTS AND POINTERS FOR THE WRITER

The good cook is no slave to rules and recipes—at least not after she has become a good cook. In the process of learning she has much to do with recipes and regulations. Having become mistress of her trade, she proceeds, with freedom, to do as a good cook should—mixing her various ingredients with brains, as any skillful artist does.

It is even so with the accomplished writer. He learns to read understandingly, to look out upon the world with interest; then he looks into his own heart and mind and records their actions and reactions. Years of constant practice will be necessary as he studies and sets down words and expressions and constructions, sentences and paragraphs. He will seem for long to be a slave to forms and methods, but, if he persists, he will at length send forth "stuff" that will seem "not so bad" to the reader, and quite acceptable to some editors. Then he may begin to write with less slavish regard for rules, giving greater freedom to the urge that is within himself. At last he may leave a few pages worthy to be read many years hence.

The French writer, Jules Renard, has been called "the most passionate stylist since Flaubert." Here are a few terse maxims from him that should serve as lights along the way for some ambitious young writer:

Style: Style is the habit and second nature of thought. Bad style is imperfect thought. Style is knowledge that does not let itself be known. Good style should not be seen. Style is the single right word; nothing else matters.

Clearness: Clearness is the politeness of a man of letters. You owe nothing but clearness to the reader; you do owe him clearness.

Brevity, Conciseness: It is stupid to think that mere abundance of words is a virtue. It is a great pleasure to me to sum up long scenes in two or three lines. What a lot of paper we would save if there were a law compelling writers to use the right word! The noun, the verb, the attribute; more is too much. That which is exact cannot help being fine. I should like to be one of those great men who have only a few things to say, and who say them in few words.

In addition to what Jules Renard has said above, let me say something on practice writing:

Make all your writing practice writing. Private correspondence furnishes a fine field. In your letters you use words, sentences, paragraphs. You tell incidents, describe events, speak of persons, express sentiments, make appeals, give information, use diplomacy, and do a thousand and one other things that a writer will need to do in the course of his work. Do all these as well as possible—criticizing your work, rewriting, rearranging, laying it aside for a while, and then going over it again.

Perhaps you are secretary of some organization. You record the business transacted at the meetings. There is in this an opportunity to practice clearness. You may be a reporter for your church or Sunday school, writing up the doings for the local paper or the state publication of your denomination. Not how much space you can fill should be your ambition, but how informing, and readable, and helpful can you make your communications.

It is not a long step from this sort of writing to the reporting of incidents, accidents, and so forth, for city papers. From this one may go on to more serious and continuous newspaper work, and then to the magazines—who knows where one may stop? LUTHER K. LONG.

WATCHING THE NRA AT WORK

Smoke is once again pouring in black volumes from the steel mills of my West Virginia home. It rises in dark clouds and sweeps out over the beautiful Ohio rive rand the scarred and treeless hills of my native state. For three summers now I have gone visiting to find the mills closed down, the coal mines empty of laborers, and the railroads running only one or two freight trains a day. It has been a desolate picture for people who depend almost entirely on the mills and coal in those West Virginia hills. ut, thanks to the new spirit developed by the NRA, I saw a marked difference on my visit home this summer in August.

One evening I stood on the back porch of the house in Moundsville where I was born, and noticed a great white glare against the skies to the north of us. It looked like Northern Lights and I called my father to see. He laughed and said: "That light is from the steel mills in Benwood. The blast furnaces are going again full time. We like to see that light. It heartens us. Those blast furnaces have not been flaming out against our night skies for three or four years. That light is a symbol of the new light of confidence that the NRA is giving the people."

The first night that I was at home I was constantly awakened by the long, shrill whistles of trains echoing and re-echoing through our hills. We live only a half mile from the winding Ohio, alongside which run the Baltimore & Ohio tracks. This railroad is the outlet to the seacoast for most of the coal mined in our state. The next morning I complained to my mother about being kept awake by the ceaseless whistling of trains.

My mother replied to my complaint: "We're glad to be kept awake by the whistling of trains because for three years it has been woefully quiet nights. But recently they have been sending great freight trains loaded with coal through our town bound for New York and the east. That means that the mines are working again and orders are coming in for coal. We do not object to hearing the trains whistle once more in this town!"

One of my college chums, Will Dalzelle, is the manager of the Fostoria Glass Factory, our chief industry. I talked with him regarding the NRA and found him hopeful and optimistic about the "code" and the general tone of business. I have visited him every summer for many years. During the depression, this otherwise optimistic friend was pretty much in the dumps, but this summer I found him hopeful and smiling.

I am particularly interested in the NRA because I am a preacher and I am interested in anything that affects the general destiny of people. I am also interested in the NRA because I believe it to be the first great nation-wide expression of the Christian principles for which the social-minded preachers of the church have been battilng for years. When I saw that the NRA, overnight, had absolutely abolished child labor—a thing that the church has been trying to do for three-quarters of a century—I was for it. When I saw that President Roosevelt and his helpers were standing for the general principle of "collective bargaining," for which the social creed of the churches has stood for years, I was for it. When I saw, in the beginning, that the NRA had actually abolished prison labor as a competitor of free labor, I was for it. When I heard President Roosevelt saying that we were headed away from the era that talked in terms of "rugged individualism" into an era that talked about a "socialized industry and democracy," I heard him talking language that I have heard for years from such social prophets as Bishop Francis J. McConnell, Harry F. Ward, Sherwood Eddy and Kirby Page. That was my language. That was the language of the advance scouts of the kingdom of God. It was the language, too, that I had been listening to for years from the lips of the great social prophet and poet, Edwin Markham.

Because of all of this I have been taking advantage of my traveling opportunities this summer to inquire first-hand, from as great a variety of people and business institutions as possible, just what is happening because of the NRA.

One may be sure that there will be many selfish persons who will criticize the movement. I ate dinner one evening at the home of a woman I had known since her girlhood. It had been thirty years since we had seen each other. She is no wthe wife of a wealthy manufacturer.

During the early part of the meal we talked of the NRA and, much to my surprise, I found that I was in a hotbed of its critics. I also soon saw that that dinner was not going to be a very pleasant occasion if we continued our argument along that line—I defending, and my friend's husband bitterly condemning. Therefore I turned the subject of conversation to reminiscences of old days and old friends. At length, under the kindly atmosphere of the meal, the husband of my friend became well fed and expansive. He began to boast, with evident pride, of the fact that his nation-wide business had prospered greatly even during the years of depression. I said to him, "How do you account for that, Jim?"

He replied: "God helped us by giving the nation the finest crop of peaches and fruit that it has had in years—three good crops in three successive summers of the depression. The poor were urged to can fruit. The unemployed had to can fruit to exist. I happen to make glass fruit jars. We have paid big dividends and we have built a big skyscraper to house our executive offices. We are one of the few industries of America that have made big money during the depression. We are proud of our record."

Then, being a mean-spirited fellow, I said to him: "And still, when we discussed the NRA at the beginning of this meal, you seemed to be bitterly opposed to it. You objected to it because it insists upon your cutting your hours of work, because it compels you to pay a higher wage scale, because it obliges you to deal collectively with your workmen. Now, honestly, does not your objection to the NRA spring from a rather selfish surce, in the light of the fact that you have just told me that your company is one of the few industries in the nation making big dividends the last three years? Doesn't it really mean that you are unwilling to give your laborers a more adequate and fairer share of what they—with the help of God in good crops—have created?"

I must give him credit for frankness, at least. He rather reluctantly but honestly admitted that there might be something in that challenge.

In Moundsville, where I spent my boyhood and youth, we have a state penitentiary. We have always had a few families who profited greatly by prison labor. The richest people in the town have been people who got their money in this way. They have always had the big houses, the big automobiles. They have been the aristocracy of wealth in our little city. I do not know the wage rate for this prison labor, but I do know that it has run as low as a few cents a day and never more than 80 cents.

This summer I found that, without exception, these wealthy families were bitter opponents and critics of the NRA. I do not say this with any ill will toward them, for I like these people, personally. I cite them simply in illustration of a principle—and also a terrible social crime—which the NRA has abolished overnight. No longer will free labor have to compete with prison labor. That is another specific thing the NRA has done, in addition to the abolition of child labor. These are two great social advances.

One of my personal friends, a coal operator who has become wealthy in the last quarter of a century, objects to the NRA. I asked him why and he said: "I am afraid of the use of force—the use of the boycott, which is a form of force. A public opinion is being created by propaganda methods which says that unless we sign up we shall be boycotted. I am a good patriotic American and I am afraid of that development in American life."

I almost laughed in his friendly face. I like him. He is a fine fellow personally, but he has no conception of social justice. I said to him: "You object to the use of what you call force in peace times. You say that we have no right to create a public opinion that will boycott people who do not subscribe to the NRA. Yet during the World War, as I remember it, you actually helped to create a public opinion that sent Eugene Debs to jail because he would not subscribe to the war; you sent so-called pacifist preachers into exile; you and your kind crushed the professional career of many a harmless professor of German even in our church colleges. I know one such, a fine old man whose life was tragically crushed in mid-years because he happened to have been born in Germany and because he happened to be teaching that language. He was absolutely loyal to America. But his chair was abolished and his life ruined by a terrific propaganda of public opinion created to advance the war and to compel people to buy Liberty Bonds. There never was such an organized or general use of the spirit of the boycott, and of force to compel people to do what the will of the majority wanted—or thought it wanted. Now that President Roosevelt and General Johnson are creating a spirit of co-operation, and in a mild way using the boycott—although they do not emphasize that feature of the NRA—you piously object to it.

''If you were a leader in the use of what you call force, public opinion, or the boycott to compel everybody to promote the war, have you any right to object to its use in a good cause, the cause of prosperity to the common people? Besides, it seems to me that I have vivid memories of the coal industry with which you are associated resorting to force in a hundred ways in strikes and lockouts.''

My good friend did not have a leg to stand on in his objections to this phase of the NRA and he admitted it before our conversation was finished—although a bit reluctantly. Finally he said: ''On the whole I'm for the NRA. I believe it will do our industry a great deal of good. God knows we have not been able to evolve anything to help ourselves!''

It may be a sort of anti-climax to my article, but it does get down close to where we everyday human beings live, when I say that I have talked to at least ten barbers in small barber shops this summer, wherever I happened to be. One of them, in Newtonville, said: ''We like it. First, we have employed an extra man. Second, we have shorter hours. We used to work twelve hours a day and now we work only eight. That gives us more time with our families. As far as the public is concerned, they get in on time now that they know that we close at a certain hour.''

I said: ''What about the volume of business you do? What about the boss?''

''He's satisfied,'' replied my friend. ''We do just as much business as we did before the NRA came in, and the boss makes just as much money. So it's good all around for all of us.''

I got the same report in Washington, Pennsylvania, in Moundsville, West Virginia, in New Jersey, and in New York state when I happened in to barber shops and asked questions.

While visiting in Stamford, Conn., I dropped in to a chain store, saw the NRA sign, and asked the manager what he thought of the new movement.

He said: ''All I can tell you is that it has meant the employment of 400 additional men in this business in this town and vicinity. For instance, we have had to take on two new men in this small store to meet the requirements. Multiply that by the thousands in chain stores alone throughout the country and you can see for yourself what it means.''

In our corner drug store very shortly after they displayed the Blue Eagle, I found that three new clerks had been put on. I asked the reason for this and one of them smiling said: ''NRA. Now some of the rest of us will have a chance to get acquainted with our wives and children. It's certainly a blessing to drug clerks. Now we have a little time to ourselves, and better wages.''

I talked with the man who sells me gas and he informed me that in his station alone it meant the employment of four extra full-time men with families.

In the garage where I take my car I talked with the manager and he said: ''It is a blessing to an honest garage man, even though it does mean that we have to employ more men. It helps us to compete with the dishonest garages where they employ men twelve and fifteen hours a day and pay them starvation wages. That cannot happen again as long as the NRA is in the saddle.''

I talked finally with my friend, Edwin Markham, the social poet, who has been following the career of President Roosevelt for years, and who has been particularly interested in the social possibilities of the NRA, and his reply was, ''The kingdom is coming, my son!''—WILLIAM L. STIDGER, in Zion's Herald.

THE FAITH-LADDER

(Note: In an essay on ''Faith and the Right to Believe'' the late Professor William James has some excellent things to say as to the way one may get up and on in sensible and reasonable believing. I believe there is a God, but I can't prove it. I believe there is a moral order in the world, but I can't prove that. I believe in the final triumph of truth and righteousness, but that also is beyond proof. I believe in a good life to come after the fleeting scenes of this earthly life are gone, but I am not able to remove all the doubts and questions from the mind of an unbeliever. What right, then, have I to continue to believe in God, in a moral order, in the final triumph of truth and righteousness, and in immortality? Professor James helps me, and every other believer, to reach the top of this ''faith-ladder''—climbing the seven steps one by one—and to rest there in confidence. His words follow. —Luther K. Long.)

It may be true all the while (even though the evidence be imperfect) that, as Paulsen says, ''the natural order is at bottom a moral order.'' It may be true that work is still doing in the world-process, and that in that work we are called to do our share. The character of the world's results may in part depend on our acts. Our acts may depend on our religion—on not resisting our faith-tendencies, or on our sustaining the min spite of evidence'' being incomplete. These ''faith-tendencies'' in turn are but expressions of our goodwill towards certain forms of result.

Such faith-tendencies are extremely active psychological forces, constantly outstripping evidence. The following steps may be called the ''faith-ladder'':

1. There is nothing absurd in a certain view of the world being true, nothing self-contradictory;
2. It might have been true under certain conditions;
3. It may be true, even now;
4. It is fit to be true;
5. It ought to be true;
6. It must be true;
7. It shall be true, at any rate for me.

Faith thus remains as one of the inalienable birthrights of our mind. Of course it must remain a practica5l and not a dogmatic attitude. It must go with toleration of other faiths, with the search for the most probable, and with the full consciousness of responsibility and risks.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

The month of September to be when special effort shall be made to raise the Annual Conference Budget. In stations, the third Sunday of that month is the time set, while in the rural churches, the month is set apart for this purpose.

October, Pay-up month

Second Sunday in October, Rally Day, Promotion in Sunday school, etc.

November 8, Annual Conference meets at Thomasville Community church.

A. C. B. Honor of Churches

These have paid A. C. B. in full:

Shiloh church, Connelly Springs Ct., Rev. L. S. Helms, pastor.

Haw River church, Glen Raven Ct., Rev. J. P. Pegg, pastor.

Bethel church, Randolph Ct., Rev. Edward Suits, pastor.

Cedar Cliff church, Mt. Hermon charge, Rev. L. E. Mabry, pastor.

The A. C. B.

We must double the amount raised last year to take care of our accrued indebtedness. Now is the time when we can do this; it will be too late to start on it in a few weeks and several causes will suffer besides the good name of the Annual Conference. For unless our conference pays its debts it will suffer the loss of its greatest asset—its good name. Come on, folks, let's have some whole-hearted co-operation on this cause.

"It is just as reasonable to attempt to run a farm without horses, mules or plows as it would be to try to carry on the work of the conference without the support of the individual church."—From report of Committee on Financing the Church.

Shall We Turn Pagan?

The pagan was great in some things. He was strong on fighting, great in debaucheries and sensual enjoyment. He rose from his feasts to fight and returned from his victories to feasts. He excelled in these things. But he was devoid of a due conception of the worth and dignity of human life. He was a stranger to all forms of benevolences. He was as unmoved by idealism as by the appeals of mercy from his victims. He looked upon others either as victims or victors. As victims he despised them, as victors he cringed before them. The impulses which played upon his mind most were vanity, rivalries, greed, hatred, snobbishness, cupidity, lust.

Shall we take him for our model? Shall we allow the impulses that controlled him to become our masters? Shall the finer emotions that moved our forefathers to patriotic endeavor, to personal sacrifice, to self-denial and loyal devotion to the highest they knew fade out of our lives?

When England was at war, Lloyd George said, "We are fighting three foes, Germany, Austria and drink; but drink is the greatest of them all."

When America entered the war, General Pershing said, "Close every saloon, every brewery, suppress drinking by severe punishment to the drinker, and, if necessary, by death to the seller and maker. Both are traitors."

We wonder what has changed the nature of liquor that it must now be taken into co-partnership and help balance the budget. The foe that was greater than millions of armed soldiers, with machine guns, poison gas, bomb planes, torpedo boats and destructive mines. When did the saloonkeeper, the brewer, the liquor seller cease to be a traitor? It would be well for our rulers at Washington to tell the public when and how this transformation came about.

This liquor business which in 1912 boldly stated in its journal that the line of drinkers must be kept coming to their counters; therefore, give the boys a drink now and then. Soon they will take the places of their elders and thus keep the business going. We repeat the question, Shall we turn pagan? All we need to do is to adopt the pagan's manner of life, allow the motives and impulses which controlled him to control us and the job will be completed.

The Annual Conference Budget

Have you done your part for the A. C. B. yet? In the churches where I have been when it was presented I have found a willingness on the part of those present which greatly encouraged me, and in some cases the pastor was surprised at the readiness with which the people gave. Still there are churches to report; some of them could with but little effort pay the entire amount. I plead with you, pastors and people, to do your part and do it now.

W. Forsyth Charge, Rev. C. B. Way, Pastor

I visited two churches on this charge, Pleasant Hill at 11 a. m. and Tabernacle in the afternoon. We had the usual attendance and good interest. An attempt was made at both churches to raise the A. C. B. More than half the assessment was secured at Pleasant Hill and nearly half at Tabernacle. At both churches the matter was left in the hands of a special committee or person to secure the rest.

Both these churches were in good repair. At Pleasant Hill the interior had been tastefully painted, a new carpet on the floor, and other evidences of care for the house of the Lord. It is a joy to visit such churches; especially is it true when one goes from a house poorly kept, out of repair, a leaky roof, no paint, the grounds unkept, to a church such as this one. We compliment these good people for evidencing this loyalty to their church.

The grounds at Tabernacle had been beautified by Mrs. Anderson, of Mocksville, whose mother still attends this church, although she was 88 last Sunday. We were pleased that she had not allowed her relatives and friends to have a birthday spread to keep the people away from church that afternoon.

Brother Way does not expect the people to pay less on pastor's salary than was received last year. He reports about the same amount as received at same date last year, and as conditions are improving, he most likely will receive total amount due him for salary, and we are looking to West Forsyth charge to furnish us some churches for the A. C. B. honor roll before conference meets. I brought home a can of "River Joy," a gift of Mrs. J. F. Hunter, who as a parting gift handed one to Pastor Way and the writer after we enjoyed a bountiful dinner. We have already sampled it and find it all that could be desired. If any of our readers are in doubt as to its quality they might communicate with Brother Way.

CULTIVATE A LIBERAL VIEWPOINT

There are many hundreds of thousands of different opinions and temperaments in the world, hence you must not be surprised if the world is often in disagreement with you. It is not desirable that all men should think precisely alike, since it is sometimes the very conflict of opposing ideas that most clearly brings the truth into view. When you recognize the necessarily wide diversity of opinion, you will not be too insistent in your wish to have other sthink as you do, but you will see the desirability of each person thinking out things for himself, and presenting his own views in his own way. Thus all may contribute something which may help to a final solution of a subject and a clearer apprehension of the truth.—Grenville Kleiser.
